These vesels will take lend-lease goods to the British Empire and thirty-two other nations which cover two-thirds of the earth and contain almost two-thirds of the people of the world. Some of these countries have not yet eceived assistance.

$595,000,000 In Exports

Of the $1,202,000,000 in total aid, the report showed that transfers of aticles to foreign countries accounted for $723,000,000, but that exports aggregated only $595,000,000. It was explained that ships were not classified as exports, that some supplies were used in this country, as in pilot-training programs, and that it was necessary to maintain some inventories at export points.

Also going to make up the $1,202,000,000 total were $140,000,000 in finished articles ready for transfer, $92,000,000 spent on articles in process of manufacture, $79,000,000 in servicing and repairing combat and merchant ships, $92,000,000 in ship rental and charter, $75,000,000 in production facilities erected in the United States to make lease-lend goods and $1,000,000 for administrative and other expenses.

The original $7,000,000,000 was completely allocated by November 13 and more than $2,000,000,000 of the second fund has been earmarked.

Not all of the thirty-three countries, including the entire British Empire, made eligible for lease-lend assistance on grounds their defense is vital to that of the United States have yet received help, however.

The lease-lend countries cover two-thirds of the earth's surface and contain nearly two-thirds of its population.

"The task of lease-lend," the report said, "is to supply the millions of men who are resisting or stand ready to resist Axis aggression with the tools to make that resistance effective.

"The task is gigantic; only in America are there the raw material resources, the productive capacity and the man power to complete the job. There must be guns, and tanks, and planes, in quantities beyond any production we have yet accomplished or planned.

"Although a vastly increased program of aid is required, lease-lend activities have already contributed substantial support to the fight in the air, on sea, and on land."

Ship Service Strained.

Declaring that American shipping services were being strained to the utmost by the ever-increasing flow of lease-lend shipments, the report said the effectiveness of the entire program may well depend "upon the ability of American shipbuilders to expedite and expand their construction of ships."

But, the report added that America now is launching two ships every week and will be launching two every day by the middle of 1942.

Britain, Russia and China have received the bulk of lease-lend assistance. Those and the twenty Latin-American republics, Egypt, Free Belgium, Free France, Greece, Iceland, the Netherlands, Norway, Poland, Turkey and Yugoslavia were listed as the eligible nations.

The defense of the British Isles and the effectiveness of Britain's Libyan forces have been strengthened by materials of all kinds, the report said. For Britain's home defenses, it mentioned supplying of guns, ammunition, planes, tanks, fire control instruments, scout cars, supply trucks, communications equipment, gasoline and oil, fire fighting equipment and medical supplies. In addition, tractors, earth moving equipment and paving materials have been provided to strengthen air bases and military supply lines.

Iron, steel and other metals have gone to British tank and gun factories. The United States has turned over chemicals for explosives, lumber, materials, machine tools and construction equipment for war production.

A similar list of supplies and equipment has gone to Russia, while aid to China has centered largely around the transport problems of the vital Burma Road, across which thousands of American trucks now move.

On the food front packages marked "produce of the U. S. A.," are appearing in sizable quantities in the groceries and kitchens of Britain, the report said. Food and farm produce totaling 2,796,000,000 pounds and valued at $292,000,000 have been shipped to the British, and the report said that Britain now is better off than a year ago with respect to food.

Text Of President's Speech

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 15—The text of President Roosevelt's Bill of Rights Day address follows:

No date in the long history of freedom means more to liberty-loving men in all liberty-loving countries than the fifteenth day of December, 1791. On that day, one hundred and fifty years ago, a new nation, through an elected Congress, adopted a declaration of human rights which has influenced the thinking of all mankind from one end of the world to the other.

There is not a single republic of this hemisphere which has not adopted in its fundamental law the basic principles of freedom of man and freedom of mind enacted in the American Bill of Rights.

Influence of Document

There is not a country, large or small, on this continent which has not felt the influence of that document, directly or indirectly.

Indeed, prior to the year 1933, the essential validity of the American Bill of Rights was accepted at least in principle. Even today, with the exception of Germany, Italy and Japan, the peoples of the world—in all probability four fifths of them—support its principles, its teachings and its glorious results.

But, in the year 1933, there came to power in Germany a political clique which did not accept the declarations of the American bill of human rights as valid: a small clique of ambitious and unscrupulous politicians whose announced and admitted platform was precisely the destruction of the rights that instrument declared. Indeed the entire program and goal of these political and moral tigers was nothing more than the overthrow, throughout the earth, of the great revolution of human liberty of which our American Bill of Rights is the mother charter.

Hateful Truth To Them

The truths which were self-evident to Thomas Jefferson—which have been self-evident to the six generations of Americans who followed him—were to these men hateful. The rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness which seemed to Jefferson, and which seem to us, inalienable, were, to Hitler and his fellows, empty words which they proposed to cancel forever.

The propositions they advanced to take the place of Jefferson's inalienable rights were these:

That the individual human being has no rights whatever in himself and by virtue of his humanity;

That the individual human being has no right to a soul of his own, or a mind of his own, or a tongue of his own, or a trade of his own; or even to live where he pleases or to marry the woman he loves.

That his only duty is the duty of obedience, not to his God, and not to his conscience, but to Adolf Hitler; and that his only value is his value, not as a man, but as a unit of the Nazi state.

To Hitler, the ideal of the people, as we conceive it—the free, self-governing and responsible people—is incomprehensible. The people, to Hitler, are "the masses" and the highest human idealism is, in his own words, that a man should wish to become "a dust particle" of the order "of force" which is to shape the universe.

Government Master

To Hitler, the Government, as we conceive it, is an impossible conception. The Government to him is not the servant and the instrument of the people but their absolute master and the dictator of their every act.

To Hitler the church, as we conceive it, is a monstrosity to be destroyed by every means at his command. The Nazi church is to be the "national church," "absolutely and exclusively in the service of but one doctrine, race and nation."

To Hitler, the freedom of men to think as they please and speak as they please and worship as they please is, of all things imaginable, most hateful and most desperately to be feared.

The issue of our time, the issue of the war in which we are engaged, is the issue forced upon the decent, self-respecting peoples of the earth by the aggressive dogmas of this attempted revival of barbarism; this proposed return to tyranny; this effort to impose again upon the peoples of the world doctrines of absolute obedience, and of dictatorial rule, and of the suppression of truth, and of the oppression of conscience, which the free nations of the earth have long ago rejected.

Putting Clocks Back

What we face is nothing more nor less than an attempt to overthrow and to cancel out the great upsurge of human liberty of which the American Bill of Rights is the fundamental document: to force the peoples of the earth, and among them the peoples of this continent, to accept again the absolute authority and despotic rule from which the courage and the resolution and the sacrifices of their ancestors liberated them many, many years ago.

It is an attempt which could succeed only if those who have inherited the gift of liberty had lost the manhood to preserve it. But we Americans know that the determination of this generation of our people to preserve liberty is as fixed and certain as the determination of that earlier generation of Americans to win it.

No Surrender

We will not, under any threat, or in the face of any danger, surrender the guarantee of liberty our forefathers framed for us in our Bill of Rights.

We hold with all the passion of our hearts and minds to those commitments of the human spirit.

We are solemnly determined that no power or combination of powers of this ear shall shake our hold upon them.

We covenant with each other before all the world, that having taken up arms in the defense of liberty, we will not lay them down before liberty is once again secure in the world we live in. For that security we pray; for that security we act—now and evermore.

BILL FOR ARMY OF 2,000,000 IS APPROVED

Congress Completes Action on 10-Billion Fund for Equipment, Planes, and Materiel

Plans to Expand Draft Law And Fleet Given House; Lend-Lease Help Totaled $1,202,000,000 Nov. 30

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15—Congress quickly completed action today on a $10,077,077,005 defense bill, then cleared the decks for speedy action on other wartime measures which would expand the draft act, authorize expansion of the navy and give President Roosevelt broad emergency powers.

The Senate approved the huge money measure shortly after the House had accepted a compromise between original bills passed by the two chambers.

It carried funds for equipment for an army of 2,000,000 men and supplies for another 1,200,000 soldiers; authorized a new, $500,000,000 naval plane construction program; and permitted the War Department to go ahead with production of additional guns, tanks, army planes and ammunition.

Registration Bill Reported

Just before the appropriation bill emerged from Congress, the House Military Committee sent to the House legislation calling for the registration of all men from 18 to 64, inclusive, and making those from 21 to 44, inclusive, liable for military training and service.

The War Department had asked that men from 19 to 44, inclusive, be subject to induction, but Chairman May (D-Ky) said the committee believed that an army of more than 6,000,000 could be obtained from men in the 21 to 45 age brackets.

The House rules committee opened the way for floor debate, probably tomorrow, on an omnibus bill which would reenact the World War "trading with the enemy" act, give the Chief Executive authority to redistribute the work of government agencies and provide short cuts in letting war contracts.

No Domestic Censorship

Atty.-Gen. Francis Biddle was reported to have told a Senate committee behind closed doors that a comparable bill would establish a censorship over outgoing but not incoming foreign communications. He said that no domestic censorship was contemplated under that legislation.

The House naval committee sent to the floor a bill authorizing a 150,000-ton expansion in the fleet. The navy last week asked for a 900,000-ton increase but Chairman Vinson (D-Ga) of the committee said officials had decided that facilities were available only for construction of the smaller tonnage.

President Roosevelt would have full discretion to use the tonnage as he saw fit—for battleships, cruisers, destroyers, airplane carriers or auxiliary ships.

The House passed and sent to the Senate a bill which would provide a discretionary death penalty in sabotage cases which result in death or serious injury during the war. Under existing law, the maximum penalty is thirty years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Japanese Financial Restrictions Lifted

Washington, Dec. 15 (AP)—Having virtually completed the seizure of assets of Japanese considered dangerous, the Treasury today relaxed restrictions on Japanese financial transactions almost to a pre-war basis.

Subject to requirements for reports, the Treasury removed all restrictions from financial transactions by Japanese nationals who have lived in this country continuously since June 17, 1940. The only exception to this ruling was in the case of those assets for Japanese businesses which have been seized since war broke out.

Japanese who have come to this country since that date still must get special licenses from the Treasury to use any bank funds or any other assets, except for the minimum $100 a month permitted them for living expenses.

The Treasury said that in the case of Japanese businesses, which are owned and operated by Japanese who have been in this country since June 17, 1940, the businesses may reopen unless Treasury agents have been placed in them to keep them shut. The treasury added that in the case of other Japanese enterprises, some will be permitted to operate "under Government surveillance."

At the outbreak of war the Treasury had blocked all Japanese financial transactions regardless of the length of residence.

HULL SEES FRENCH TAKING NEW STAND

DEC 16 1941

Secretary Confident People Of France Will Rise To New Situation in World

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15 (AP)—Secretary of State Hull voiced confidence today that the French people would rise to the new situation which challenged them.

His remarks were interpreted as bearing on the new situation created by the United States' formal entry into the war against Germany, the severe German reverses on the Russian front, increased French resentment against German repressive measures in occupied France, and the active efforts of United States armed forces to nullify Japan's conquests in the Orient, including her occupation of French Indo-China.

Hull was asked at his press conference whether he could say anything to clarify this country's attitude toward developments in France.

His reply significantly avoided mention of the Vichy government but assured "the French peoples everywhere they could count on the United States as a friend of their traditional aspiration for full enjoyment of liberty and independence."

His emphasis and deliberate repetition of the word "everywhere" was taken as a reference to the French in Dakar, in French Indo-China, in Martinique and other colonies.

To give further weight to his word on France and French aspirations, Hull authorized reporters to quote him directly. He said:

"The policy of this government now, as in the past, contemplates the hope that all the free institutions, the liberties and the independence which the people of France have enjoyed in the past, may be preserved for the full enjoyment in the future of French peoples everywhere.

"The French peoples everywhere understand this basic traditional policy and attitude of the American people, which they have reciprocated. I firmly believe that they will know now, as they have in the past, how to meet their responsibilities in this present situation."

TO SEIZE BILLION IN ENEMY ASSETS

DEC 16 1941

U. S. Prepared Action Like That of Last War.

Washington, Dec. 15 (A. P.).—The Government prepared today to seize a billion dollars of enemy alien assets as collateral for any American claims against the hostile governments, and a special force of Federal agents was ready to impound the enemy-owned property.

Title to the property to be taken over is vested in enemy aliens living outside the United States, and Axis nationals who are in custody.

Officials emphasized that the Government does not intend to disturb the property of law-abiding aliens. For that reason, Germans, Italians and Japanese need not worry about their homes and their bank accounts unless they are in the small minority which has been arrested by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Attorney-General Biddle has established an Alien Property Division in the Department of Justice to administer the seizure of enemy assets. It will be headed by Leo T. Crowley, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation, whose duties will be similar to those of the Alien Property Custodian in the first world war, who handled $669,000,000 worth of foreign assets.

Most of the enemy property seized in 1917-18 has been disposed of, except a relatively small amount which cannot be handled until new legislation is enacted.

Administration of enemy alien wealth costs this Government nothing, as under the law the expense will be paid from funds seized.

Arnold Named To Lieutenant General's Rank

DEC 16 1941

President Promotes Army Air Chief; Col. Roosevelt Made Brigadier General

WASHINGTON, Dec. 15 (AP).—President Roosevelt nominated Major General Henry H. Arnold, Chief of the Army Air Force, today for temporary promotion to the rank of lieutenant general.

General Arnold's name topped a list of fifteen Army officers whose names were sent to the Senate for approval of advancement as general officers.

Included was Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, former Governor General of the Philippines and son of the former President, who was approved for promotion to bragadier general. A reserve officer and World War veteran, Colonel Roosevelt now commands the 26th Infantry, 1st Division, the unit in which he served in 1917-1918.

Officials said the promotions were due to the war emergency. Nominated to be temporary major generals were:

Brigadier General Horace H. Fuller, commander of the 41st Infantry Division, Fort Lewis, Wash.

Brigadier General Harry K. Rutherford, of Waddington, N. Y., on duty in the office of Robert P. Patterson, Under Secretary of War.

Those nominated for advancement to the temporary rank of brigadier general included:

Colonel William R. Arnold, chief of chaplains. His home is Cleveland.

Colonel Charles C. Curtis, Coast Artillery Corps, National Guard, commander of the 33d Anti-Aircraft Brigade, Camp Hulen, Tex.

Colonel Robert W. Crawford, Engineers, now serving with the general staff war planes division. His home is Warsaw, N. Y.

Colonel Benjamin C. Lockwood jr., of Detroit, commanding the 69th Infantry Brigade, Camp Joseph T. Robinson, Ark.

Colonel Frederick Gilbreath, commanding the San Francisco Port of Embarkation, Fort Mason, Calif. His home is Dayton, Wash.

Colonel Walter M. Robertson, commanding the 9th Infantry at Fort Sam Houston, Tex. Colonel Robertson was born in Nelson County, Va.

Colonel Roy C. Heflebower, of Washington, now at the Medical Corps Replacement Training Center at Camp Barkeley, Tex.

Colonel John Mather, of Dallas, Tex., now at Watertown Arsenal, Watertown, Mass.

Lieutenant Colonel William S. Rumbough, of the Signal Corps Replacement Training Center at Camp Crowder, Mo. Colonel Rumbough's home is at Lynchburg, Va.

Colonel Carl A. Baehr, of Minneapolis, commanding the 71st Field Artillery Brigade at Fort Ethan Allen, Vt.

Lieutenant Colonel Edward H. Brooks, of Concord, N. H., assigned to headquarters of the Armored Force at Fort Knox, Ky.

The President also nominated Lieutenant Colonel Henry J. Reilly, of Winnetka, Ill., and Forest Hills, Queens, New York, to be a brigadier general in the reserves.

Italian Prince On Visit Is Ordered Released

Alessandro Torlonia Had Been Taken To Ellis Island While On Visit To Ill Mother

New York, Dec. 15 (AP)—Prince Alessandro Torlonia of Italy was taken to Ellis Island yesterday by Federal agents and released last night, Ellis Island officials said today.

No details were given, except that the State Department ordered his release.

The Prince is the son of the late Don Marino Torlonia, Duke of Poli and Prince di Civitella Cesi, and Mrs. Elsie Moore Torlonia, of New York city, the former Elsie Moore, of Brooklyn, who divorced the young Prince's father in 1928 and regained American citizenship.

Prince Torlonia was permitted to fly to this country three weeks ago to visit his mother, seriously ill at her Park avenue apartment. Warring powers cut red tape to permit his entry and Britain assured his safe passage.

Congressional Medal Asked For Captain Kelly

Florida Representatives Introduce Legislation For Posthumous Honor For Army Flyer

Washington, Dec. 15 (AP)—Legislation was introduced in Congress today to award the Congressional Medal of Honor posthumously to Capt. Colin P. Kelly, Florida-born hero of last week's Army Air Corps operations in the Pacific.

Kelly lost his life in a successful bombing attack on the Japanese battleship Haruna.

Congressional recognition of his feat was sought in measures proposed by Senators Andrews and Pepper and Representative Green, Florida Democrats.

200 ENEMY ALIENS ARE SENT TO CAMP

DEC 16 1941

California C.C.C. Quarters Used for Detention.

Los Angeles, Dec. 15 (A. P.).—The FBI arranged today to transfer 200 enemy aliens, arrested in last week's roundup, to a barbed-wire-fenced former CCC camp.

Meanwhile, another Japanese prisoner committed suicide. Federal officers said Dr. Rikita Honda, 48 years old, former Japanese army captain and head of the local unit of the Japanese Imperial Reservists Association slashed his wrists and bled to death at the Terminal Island immigration station yesterday.

The police said Nao Hamano, 45, rice cake factory worker, strangled herself with her silk stockings in jail last Friday, the day after her arrest.

Takematzu Izumi, 61, died Saturday. The police said he told them he took poison because of shame over Japan's attack on on Honolulu.

The FBI said that 250 aliens eventually would be housed under guard at the Tuna Canyon forestry camp which had been regarded as a model CCC unit.

Army Admits Foe Was Over Calif.

DEC 6 1941

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 15 (AP).—A formal Army announcement that enemy planes apparently had flown over California put the entire state on an emergency basis today, by order of Gov. Olson.

"Enemy reconnaissance, if not bombing, planes are known to have passed along our coast and to have covered a part of the interior areas," the Governor said at Sacramento.

His proclamation followed by a few hours an Army communique which explained recent blackouts here with the words, "there was definite danger of air attack by planes in the immediate vicinity. Flares were seen in the sky, apparently dropped by enemy aircraft."

The Army said unidentified planes were near or over San Francisco Bay five times in the week.

CHANCE OF AIR RAID ANALYZED

Ratio of Cost to Possible Results Is a Factor.

By DEVON FRANCIS.

Washington, Dec. 15 (Wide World).—Air raid precautions on both seaboards of continental United States call for an examination of the possibilities of bomber attacks.

Sooner or later attempts to launch such attacks probably will occur. In that knowledge, the armed services and the national andss municipal governments are taking precautions.

However, Axis warplanes would encounter considerable difficulty in reaching American cities, industrial plants and military objectives. Those difficulties need not prove insurmountable, especially for token bombers bidding desperately to filter through our defenses.

First of all, it must be borne in mind that military men, like executives running large business houses, try to effect an economy of expenditures for a given result. That is to say, a naval commander would not dispatch a flotilla of warships to capture an island of no military value.

The chief of an air force would not employ 300 valuable bombers to destroy a bridge of secondary military value. The strenuous German air force attacks on England in August and September, 1940, were called off because they were too expensive in men and material for the results obtained.

Political Effect Weighed.

Here another consideration enters in—political expediency. While a bombing attack might have no military value, one might be ordered by a high command for its political effect, such as reducing civilian morale.

Broadly speaking, an attempt to bomb American shores would be difficult in the presence of adequate sea and air patrols. Those patrols have been established on both seaboards. Bulwarking such patrols are secret devices to detect the approach of enemy aircraft.

It would be well to point out that neither patrols nor devices to thwart surprise attacks are completely infallible. Surface raiders carrying aircraft and long-range planes from distant bases, flying at great altitude, can, and probably will, slip through if it is suits the purposes of the Axis to attempt such bombings.

Mitigating against the chance of raids on either coas aret: (1) he difficulty of approaching with standard aircraft carriers or seaplane tenders or seaplane carriers in the face of a determined opposition, and (2) the long distance which big bombers would have to travel, from bases now available, to continental United States.

New Outposts Valuable.

Simplifying the task of defense agains raids are the far-flung Atlantic outposts which have been established in the last fifteen months from Iceland through Newfoundland, Bermuda and the Caribbean Isles to Trinl dad and Dutch Guiana.

Heavy long-range bombers are not carried aboard ship in any surface craft known to the United States armed forces. The common equipmen of aircraft carriers having flight decks consists of reconnaissance planes carrying light bombs, fighter planes, torpedo bombers and dive bombers.

An exception is the catapult bomber of about twenty tons gromm weight known to be possessed by Germany. The range of such planes, however, is limited (possibly 2,500 miles, providing a radius of action of not more than 1,000 miles), their bomb loads are restricted, and each vessel could carry not more than three planes.

Of the types carried by surface ships with landing decks only bombers would be used against cities, factories and military strongholds. The flying range of such plants—a few hundred miles—would force the attacking carrier to approach so close to American shores that it would lay itself open to devastating attacks.

Japan has, to the knowledge of American aviation circles, no bombers capable of flying to the American mainland from any bases available at present. Japan, however, holds the world's record in distance flying with a single-engine non-military airplane in a closed course—7*160 miles, carrying only crew and fuel.

With the experience in construction of that type of plane, it is entirely feasible that as the war goes on, Japan can construct super-long-range bombers, capable perhaps of reaching Hawaii from Japan proper, striking at objectives and returning home.

Germany is not known to have the extra-long range bombers which would be necessary, with bases now available, to cross the Atlantic, bomb continental United States and return home.

Closer Bases Possible.

The Germans may seize two French carriers, the Joffre and the Painleve, of 18,000 tons each, with complements of forty planes. The French carrier Bearn, of 21,146 tons, is at Martinique and probably would be taken over by the United States if Germany acquired the remainder of the French fleet.

The French also possess a seaplane carrier of 10,000 tons, the Commandant Teste, which carries twenty-six planes and has four catapults.

Details of Japanese air power have been carefully guarded.

Always to be remembered is the chance that the Axis powers may obtain air bases within closer striking distance than they now possess. The Azores, 2,000 miles from the North Atlantic Coast, frequently have been mentioned as an objective of the Axis if it became embroiled in a war with the United States.

Also to be remembered is that new, spectacular weapons can be brought into play by both sides. In the case of Germany, it has been reported that submarine-borne planes—and even gliders—might be used against the United States.

The War Interpreted

DEC 7 1941

For a man with a dagger in his back our Uncle Sam has done right well to arrive at the second week of combat with the sons of the Shoguns without suffering further serious hurts.

The fact that we are holding our own—and better—under extremely trying conditions, pending the arrival of reinforcements in the Far East, is a matter of satisfaction from the military standpoint.

The enemy today continued to blast at Manila, heart of the Philippines, from the air, but bombing in itself won't give the Japanese possession of our great naval base in these strategic islands. They must land troops in sufficient numbers to overcome our defense, and the heavy toll of transports we have taken during the first week—at least four sunk and five badly damaged—is far from encouraging to the Nipponese. Much depends, of course, on our air strength in the Philippines in these early days.

FAILURE TO CAPITALIZE A SURPRISE

It really is surprising that the Japs haven't been able to capitalize the great advantage they gained by back-alley tactics at Hawaii. They started out as though they were going places, and it is a reproach to their efficiency that they haven't been able to do so thus far. It's perhaps their bad luck that while the Germans could execute the plans for Tokyo, the Japs had to do the fighting.

However, the war is young and my comment is on what has happened and isn't meant to suggest that we haven't a big job on our hands, for we have. A great deal must hinge on whether we are able to save the Philippines and the British can protect Singapore. As previously indicated in this column, the American-British team could work together from Singapore even if the Philippines went by the board, but the loss of both these bases would be a nasty blow, to employ a euphemistic expression. Singapore is threatened, but is in no immediate danger.

On at least one point the United States and Japan appear to be in accord—that this new conflict is likely to be a long one. President Roosevelt has said that "it will not only be a long war, it will be a hard war." A Japanese spokesman has warned his people that they must be prepared to carry on the conflict for ten years. Japanese Premier Tojo has capped that with a further warning of a long war. And the Russians, who know their Japs, think it will be protracted.

Whatever may be the length of time required to reach a decision of the world conflict, of which the battle of the Pacific is only a phase, all previous calculations have to be reviewed in the light of Japan's entrance. Still, the nature of the general upheaval hasn't been altered by Japanese participation—it remains a war of supplies and production.

Japan, like her chief colleagues of the Axis—Germany and Italy—belongs to the have-not nations. There lies the answer to the ultimate outcome of the war.

The Axis powers have only a fraction of the resources possessed by the Allies. The length of the struggle must depend on whether the Allies can keep the enemy from breaking through to fresh resources and on how fast we can develop military production.

The way things stand, the main burden of production must fall on the United States. Ipso Facto, the faster our factories work, the shorter the war.

ALLIES FAVORED IN EUROPE

Developments in the European theater generally have been favorable to the Allies. As you will see from the dispatches in your newspapers, the Russians have continued to pour disaster into the Nazis in one of the most amazing operations of this mad-hatter war. If the Hitlerites can't check the avalanche which is sweeping over them, the Bolshevists may succeed in their avowed determination to exterminate every German soldier on Red soil.

Because of this situation one would expect the Nazi Jove to unleash another bolt shortly. He has two rescue jobs on his hands—his vast army in Russia, and the hard-pressed Axis forces in Libya. The British think he may strike in Libya, which certainly is a possibility, but he has alternatives.

JAPANESE SHIPS SHELL TWO HAWAIIAN ISLANDS; NEW ATTACK AT WAKE; PERIL IN MALAYA GROWS; CONGRESS SPEEDS BILLS FOR HUGE WAR EFFORT

DEC 17 1941

Johnston Isle, To Southwest, Also Attacked

Defenders on Wake Drive Off Two Air Assaults

DEC 17 1941

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16 (AP)—To determine why United States armed forces were not on the alert when the Japanese attacked Pearl Harbor, President Roosevelt tonight appointed a five-man board, headed by Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts of the supreme court.

He announced his action soon after a navy disclosure that enemy warships had struck at the Hawaiian area again by shelling Johnston and Maui islands during the past 24 hours. The valiant little marine garrison at Wake island, said the navy, drove off two more enemy air attacks, and continued to hold out.

McCoy on Board

In addition to Roberts, Mr. Roosevelt named the following to the board of inquiry:

Maj.-Gen. Frank R. McCoy, retired.

Brig.-Gen. Joseph P. McNarney of the air corps.

Rear Admiral William H. Shandley, retired, former chief of naval operations.

Rear Admiral Joseph M. Reeves, former commander-in-chief of the United States fleet.

The group will meet tomorrow for organizational purposes, the White House said, and proceed to Hawaii for an on-the-spot investigation at an early date. Chief Justice Stone granted Roberts leave of absence from the supreme court to become chairman of the board.

FIRST SINCE START

The attack at Johnston, where an American naval base was "bombarded by ships of the enemy" and at Maui, where the shipping center of Kahului was shelled by a submarine, was the first assault in the Hawaiian area since the Japanese began the war with their raid on Pearl Harbor.

At both points, the navy said, damage was slight, and "naval operations are continuing against the enemy." Maui is situated about 100 miles southeast of Honolulu, and Johnston about 700 miles to the southwest.

Against the much-battered Wake island outpost, northwest of Johnston, the navy reported, the Japanese delivered two more attacks from the air, both of which were repelled. The first, in the afternoon, was light while the second, during the evening, was heavy.

BLOWS COUNTERED

"Wake and Midway are countering the blows of the enemy," said the navy's communique.

In the Philippine theater, war department's second communique of the day said there was "a marked lessening of enemy activity." There is nothing to report from other areas, it said.

These announcements came at the close of a day which found congress buckling down to the task of making ships and men available for the fighting fronts, heartened by word that the Japanese attack on Luzon in the Philippines was stalled, but mindful of Allied reverses elsewhere.

Quickly and unanimously, the house passed a bill to authorize the construction of 150,000 tons of warships for the navy. The bill goes to the senate.

With a minimum of debate, both branches of congress approved separate bills to give President Roosevelt extraordinary powers to push the national war effort. The legislation would empower him to censor outgoing communications, transfer governmental functions from one agency to another, control alien property and financial transactions and, with restrictions, change defense contracts. The legislation now goes to conference.

Late in the day, President Roosevelt announced that as soon as the legislation becomes law, a governmental censorship, partly voluntary and partly mandatory would be established. Byron Price has been granted leave of absence as executive news editor of The Associated Press to become director of censorship.

At the same time, much attention was centered on the progress of the fighting in the Far East. Word from Manila was that the Japanese attack had slowed down to a single air raid on the Olongapo naval base.

The army announced here that four Japanese planes were shot down, and that American airmen renewed their attacks on Japanese ships off the Luzon coast and seriously damaged one enemy troop transport.

HONGKONG MAY FALL

Otherwise, the far eastern news was not good. Hongkong, it appeared, might have to be evacuated.

During the day, the navy disclosed details of the two-man submarines which the Japanese used in their Pearl Harbor attack only to have one captured. This revealed that they are designed for use in suicide assaults, if need be.

"The ship carries a 300-pound charge of high explosive under the stern wired to the battery so it can be used as a demolition charge for the submarine itself in case of attack or against ships or harbor objectives," the navy said.

In addition, since the range of the midget submersibles is only some 200 miles, it was surmised that a mother-ship approached to within 100 miles of Honolulu in advance of the attack.

41 FEET LONG

The submarines, said the navy, are 41 feet in length, with a five-foot beam, and a hull constructed of one-quarter inch plate. They have five compartments, two of them occupied by electric batteries, and are manned by one officer and one enlisted man.

A conning tower projects four and one half feet above the deck and a periscope can be mounted five feet above that. They are equipped with gyro-compass, magnetic compass, radio apparatus, listening devices, and two eighteen-inch torpedoes. (21 inch torpedoes are standard).

Development of the seaplane base at Johnston has been carried forward with an appropriation of $1,230,000 made by Congress two years ago.

Earlier the island served as a bird reservation operated by the Agriculture Department, but has been under naval control since December 29, 1934.

Johnston is a tiny spot on the grea ocean, about a half mile long, on a coral reef eight miles long.

DEC 17 1941

The island was discovered December 14, 1807, by a British sea captain named Johnston, but in 1858 the captain of the American schooner Palestine claimed possession for the United States. Later that year the Hawaiian Kingdom claimed the island and still later it was reclaimed by the Palestine.

The island, however, was formally annexed by Hawaii and in 1909 was leased to one Max Schlemmer for fifteen years. Apparently as a result of the lease it passed into control of the United States.

Johnston Island, Discovered In 1807, Is Only A Tiny Spot

Naval Air Station, Costing $1,230,000, Was Commissioned There Only Four Months Ago

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 16 — Johnston Island, scene of Japanese naval action announced by the Navy Department today, lies 700 miles southwest of Honolulu, and is the site of a naval air station which was commissioned August 15, 1941.

Maui Island, one of the Hawaiian group, lies to the southeast of Molokai and to the northwest of the island of Hawaii itself. It is an important shipping center in the group.

U. S. Fleet Scours Pacific In Vengeance Hunt for Japs

Admiral Kimmel Commands American Battle Force Presumably in Area West of Hawaiian Base.

Washington, Dec. 16 (A. P.).—The United States battle fleet, wearing the scars of Pearl Harbor, but in formidable fighting strength despite its losses, hunted the vastness of the Pacific today for the Japanese fleet—and vengeance.

The orders, in traditional navy phrasing, were: "Seek out the enemy and destroy him."

The grievous story of Pearl Harbor had been told—a story that disclosed a fatal lack of vigilance, but a story, too, of epic drama, gallantry and plain fighting guts. And that official account gave some hint of the heavy score the navy was out to repay.

With two forces the navy sought to learn the enemy's whereabouts and dispositions. The main Pacific battle fleet, under command of Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, presumably was operating west of Hawaii. The smaller Asiatic fleet, which takes its orders from peppery Admiral Thomas C. Hart, ranged the South China Sea, looking for the Japanese squadron which got away once under cover of darkness.

The capital realized, however, that it might be days, weeks or even months before the electrifying words "Action joined," flashed from the fleet. The military situation was of more immediate concern, although it failed to displace the navy's official report on Pearl Harbor as the No. 1 discussion topic.

The stout-hearted defenders of Wake and Midway continued first in the hearts of their countrymen, and several Senators urged that some effort be made to relieve the marines who have been battling off repeated Japanese attacks on the two tiny island outposts.

The situation in the Philippines appeared substantially unchanged, with the Japanese landing forces still holding three widely separated beachheads on the main island of Luzon. Enemy raids were reported on the Olongapo naval base, near Manila, and on Nichols Field.

There was disquieting news, however, from the Malay peninsula where Japanese mechanized troops, teamed with dive bombers, had smashed forward more than fifty miles on the 400-mile road to Singapore, the mighty British bastion which Japan must take before she can proceed safely against the wealthy Dutch East Indies.

The tide was also running against the British at Hongkong. The defenders had been forced back onto Hongkong island from surrounding positions and Tokio claimed that the fall of that British base was only a matter of days away. This, however, seemed undue Japanese optimism.

The Japanese also announced a widening of the war theater, reporting that they had landed expeditionary forces on British North Borneo at dawn today despite a heavy gale. The same announcement said that occupation of the United States base on the island of Guam had been completed December 12. This indicated the American garrison had been able to hold out five days.

Ensigns Run Destroyer In Hawaii Battle

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 16—Secretary Knox revealed today that during the sudden Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor December 7 four naval reserve ensigns were the only surviving officers on board one destroyer, yet they took the ship to sea in pursuit of the enemy and, said Knox, met all emergencies, operating the vessel like veterans.

The young reserves had never had such responsibility before, Knox said in reporting their action under enemy fire.

He related the incident in giving further details of the battle of Pearl Harbor, which he first reported on yesterday, when he disclosed that the principal loss to the fleet was destruction of the battleship Arizona.

Just Before Church Call

Knox said that had the attack taken place a short time later it would have found hundreds of navy men at divine services. Actually it came a short time before "church call" and one chaplain was killed while preparing his compartment for services.

The Navy Secretary did not name the ensigns nor the chaplain. He reported these other incidents:

"One enlisted man who went to sea after the attack on his own ship said on leaving the harbor, 'after that stab in the back I hope I live to show them what an American can do.' Another said, 'I know what the big shots meant when they spoke of the treachery of the Axis.'

Tried To Leave Hospital

"Several men under treatment on the hospital ship tried to rejoin their regular vessels and get into the fight. They were held back by officers and nurses with difficulty, and a few did manage to escape the vessel and join fleet units.

"A number of women, many being wives of officers and men, and even in some cases women widowed by the attack, volunteered their services in the hospitals.

"Ship handling was excellent throughout the action and among destroyers working at high speed and in close quarters there were no collisions.

"A gun captain noticed a powder case had jammed in his gun. He quickly obtained a hacksaw and cut off a section so the breach could be closed. The gun continued in service throughout the action.

"On a destroyer tender some spare machine guns were broken out. These guns were speedily placed on top of deckhouses and welded into place by welders who carried on their work at the height of the attack and amid a storm of bullets and bombs. All of these guns were in the final action.

"Communications functioned perfectly throughout the action. Although many lines were cut by shrapnel, communication with the mainland was maintained throughout. Men remained at their posts in radio rooms of some ships until the last."

2-MAN SUBMARINES HAD MOTHER SHIP 100 MILES AWAY

Could be Carried and Launched from Deck of Jap Vessel

PREPARED FOR SUICIDE

By The Associated Press

Washington, Dec. 16.—The Navy Department indicated today, in making public details of the Japanese two-man submarine which participated in the raid on Pearl Harbor December 7, that a Japanese mother ship or ships had approached within about 100 miles of the island of Oahu to make the surprise attack.

The midget submarines, one of which was sunk during the Pearl Harbor raid, have a cruising radius of approximately 200 miles at low speed, the Navy said, and "there are indications that the submarine captured on the island of Oahu had made a run of 100 miles to join in the attack."

This would mean that a submarine mother ship was probably about 100 miles away from the great naval base at Pearl Harbor in order to let the underwater craft carry out its mission.

The fact that the men operating these tiny vessels are prepared for their own self-destructiton if necessary was stated by the Navy, which said:

"The ship carries a 300-pound charge of high explosive under the stern wired to the battery so it can be used as a demolition charge either for the submarine itself in case of attack, or against ships or harbor objectives.

"There are indications that the personnel operating the submarines will go to any extreme, however desperate, even to self-sacrifice to carry out their objective."

The submersibles are manned by one officer and one enlisted man, the Navy related, and they are hsomall they can be carried on the deck of larger vessels and launched overside by the same facilities used for handling the samml boats of a combatant ship.

The submarines are 41 feet long with a beam of five feet and a conning tower four and one-half feet above deck. The hull is constructed of one-quarter inch plate and is divided into five compartments, two of which are occupied by electric batteries.

These batteries operate an electrict motor designed to drive the streamlined, black-painted craft through the water at a speed of 24 knots.

The periscope projects five feet above the top of the conning tower, the Navy said. Equipment includes gyro-compass, magnetic compass, radio equipment, underwater sound and listening devices and two 18-inch torpedoes as compared with 21-inch torpedoes which are standarw for the U. S. Navy. The 41-foot length of the midget craft may be compared with the length of standard American submarines of about 300 feet.

Secretary Knox disclosed yesterday that Japanese losses in the attack on Hawaii included "one small submarine" sunk, and one captured as well as ons normal sized submarine sunk.

Army and Navy List Casualties At Pearl Harbor

Washington, Dec. 16 (AP).—Official Army and Navy accounts place casualties in the armed services from Japan's Dec. 7 attack on the Pearl Harbor base at 2,897 killed, 26 missing and 879 wounded. Unofficial estimates were that 49 civilians died, with no reports on civilian wounded or missing.

Warcraft losses were one battleship, three destroyers, one target ship and one mine layer. The battleship Oklahoma and an unstated number of smaller craft were damaged.

WARSHIP LOSS ABOUT EQUAL

Army and Navy Cutting Japs' Sneak Lead.

Washington, Dec. 16 (A. P.).—Despite Japan's head start in the battle of the Pacific the second week of the war found the United States Army and Navy moving up fast toward equality in number and tonnage of fleet losses inflicted.

The United States Navy concedes the sinking of the battleship Arizona, destroyers Cassin, Shaw and Downes, the target ship Utah and the mine layer Oglala, all in the sneak attack on Pearl Harbor, and the loss by capture of the gunboat Wake in Chinese water—a total of seven craft.

The United States Navy and Army between them claim in return the sniking of a Japanese battleship of the Kongo class, one light cruiser, one destroyer and two submarines and the capture of a third submarine—a total of six.

Torpedoed Army Transport.

Counting transports, of which the army claims to have sunk four, the asserted Nipponese ship toll is ten, and that of the United States nine. The Japanese torpedoed an army transport carrying lumber the first day of the war and seized the liner President Harrison, which had been sent to China to remove marine forces and American citizens.

Our navy admits in addition that the Pearl Harbor attack left the battleship Oklahoma severely damaged, but the army balances this with a claim of heavy damage by aerial attack to another battleship of the Kongo class.

DIES SAYS HIS DATA HINTED JAP RAID

Obtained Map from Tokio Diplomat Showing the Location of Ships

By The Associated Press

Washington, Dec. 16.—Representative Dies (D-Tex) said today that the House committee investigating un-American activities had information months ago "indicating the planned attack on Pearl Harbor and Manila" but had refrained from holding hearings on the matter at the Administration's request.

Dies told the House the committee had obtained a map from a former Japanese diplomatic official in Hawaii which, Dies said, showed the location of American ships then in Pearl Harbor, the range of the aerial patrols from the island and other military information.

The Texan said that his committee brought the information to the attention of the Justice Department and announced that unless there was official Administration objection, public hearings would be held on the matter.

Dies read a letter from the acting Attorney General at the time stating that both President Roosevelt and Secretary Hull had taken the view that such hearings would be "inadvisable." Whereupon, Dies related, the committee called off the hearings.

Although he said that now was "water over the dam," Dies declared the Administration had not been "alert in dealing with fifth column activities" and asserted that there still are many "100 per cent. pro-Nazi" persons at work in the Nation's defense industries.

Price, Editor Of AP, Named Chief Censor

Vast New Powers Voted President by Congress

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16. (AP)—Vast new powers for President Roosevelt to prosecute the war were voted unanimously by congress today and the chief executive announced he would promptly set up a censorship to prevent all information of value from reaching the enemy.

At the same time Postmaster-General Walker disclosed that censorship of foreign mail, both outgoing and incoming, already was under way. He added that no details of its operations would be made public for the present.

Both Houses Act

The president told a press conference that he had selected Byron Price, executive editor of The Associated Press, as director of censorship and that Price, on leave of absence from the news organization, would take over his duties here as soon as congress completes action.

Both senate and house passed separate bills almost simultaneously. They authorize the president not only to establish censorship but to redistribute government functions, revise defense contracts, and exercise complete control over alien financial transactions and an estimated $7,000,000,000 of alien property in the United States.

Since the senate added a few restrictions to its text, a move was on foot tonight to have the house substitute the senate measure for its own tomorrow so final enactment might be speeded. The house judiciary committee will meet tomorrow to study the parliamentary situation.

DOMESTIC NEWS TOO

Chairman Van Nuys, (D), Ind., of the senate judiciary committee, in charge of the senate bill, told Sen. Vandenberg, (R), Mich., that only censorship of outgoing foreign communications was involved but the president said the machinery to be created would cover domestic publication of certain information.

The censorship, he said, would be partly voluntary and partly mandatory and would apply to the press, radio, cables, mail and other mediums.

He added that the administrative setup would not be worked out until Price took over.

"While all Americans abhor censorship, just as they abhor war," the president said in a formal statement, "the experience of this and of all other nations has demonstrated that some degree of censorship is essential in war time, and we are at war.

"The important thing now is that such forms of censorship as are necessary shall be administered effectively and in harmony with the best interests of our free institutions.

NO AID TO ENEMY

"It is necessary to the national security that military information which might be of aid to the enemy be scrupulously withheld at the source.

"It is necessary that a watch be set upon our borders, so that no such information may reach the enemy, inadvertently or otherwise, thru the medium of the mails, radio or cable transmission or by any other means."

It was also necessary, he continued, to set up rigidly enforced bans against domestic publication of some types of information. Pointing out that the press and radio already had voluntarily agreed to abstain from mentioning troop and ship movements, the chief executive said the response to the government's request along that line had "indicated a universal desire to co-operate."

In order that the new powers may be carried forward under a uniform policy, he said, he had made Price responsible directly to him with headquarters in Washington.

AP HEAD SINCE 1937

Price, now stationed in New York, has been executive news editor of The Associated Press since 1937. He was chief of the Washington bureau before that.

Born in Topeka, Ind., 50 years ago, Price joined The Associated Press in 1912 after graduating from Wabash college with Phi Beta Kappa honors. He interrupted his newspaper career during world war 1, serving as an infantry captain overseas.

Debate in the senate on the war powers measure revolved almost entirely around provisions authorizing the president to let defense contracts without competitive bidding and without performance bonds, and to "amend or modify" such contracts and make "progressive payments" on them.

CHANGES TO BE PUBLIC

Saying that the president himself would not want such power in a "most fruitful field where waste and scandal can occur," Vandenberg won approval of an amendment requiring that all contract changes be made a "matter of public record" where the president deemed publicity not incompatible with the public interest.

Sen. Taft (R), O., gained approval of a provision that no existing profit limitations could be disturbed by contract modifications.

Senate Committee Heeds President's Plea for 19-44 Age Span in Draft Bill

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16. (AP)—President Roosevelt told congress today that he fully indorsed the war department request that men aged 19 thru 44 be made subject to compulsory military service but the house proceeded with plans to consider draft legislation retaining the present 21-year minimum age for active service.

The senate military committee, however, approved without a dissenting vote the 19-year age minimum and consideration of the bill probably will start in the senate tomorrow. The house also will consider tomorrow the bill of its military committee.

In other details the senate and house measures were alike and no opposition was apparent to their other provisions. They would raise the maximum age for compulsory military service from 35 to 44 years, inclusive, and require all men from 18 thru 64 to register with the government.

Officials estimated that the measure, together with the existing draft act, would bring about 40,000,000 persons under government registration.

Sen. Chandler (D), Ky., of the military committee said that an 8,000,000-man army was envisioned eventually. He quoted Brig.-Gen. Wade H. Haislip, assistant chief of staff, as telling the committee that a 1,000,000-man air force would be created as quickly as possible. Chandler said no estimate was given as to how many planes would be needed for such a force but he added:

"We can build an air force superior to any combination of air forces in the world. We can produce the planes and we can find the pilots to fly them."

Mr. Roosevelt wrote congressional leaders that this country should have "a sufficiently large pool of men available for service in our land and naval forces (including the air forces) adequate to meet all contingencies now foreseeable."

The president said, too, that registration of persons from 18 thru 64 was necessary "for the orderly planning of our national effort."

Along with other congressional leaders, Chairman May (D), Ky., of the house military committee received the letter from Mr. Roosevelt recommending the 19-year minimum but said that it came too late because his committee already had acted.

There were expressions of opposition in the house to reducing the present 21-year minimum but it was thought likely that an amendment would be offered in an effort to make the minimum 19.

FLYERS ATTACK NAVAL BASE AT OLONGAPO

"Situation On Ground Unchanged," Says U. S. Army Communique

Filipino Confesses Conspiracy To Aid Nipponese Invaders

By R. P. CRONIN

[By the Associated Press]

Manila, Dec. 16—The Japanese invaders, apparently fought to a standstill in the first phase of their thrust at the island of Luzon, returned to the attack today only by air—with a raid on the Olongapo naval base northwest of Manila Bay.

The headquarters of Lieut. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, the American commander in chief, reported no new Japanese efforts either to seize new beachheads or to strengthen their hard-won and costly positions about Vigan and Aparri, in the northwest and northeast of the island, and Legaspi in the extreme southeast.

"No change in the situation on the ground," said the afternoon communique.

New Attack Feared

The supposition in unofficial quarters was that the assailant was resting his aerial forces, preparing his planes and attempting to poise new forces off the coasts for another major attempt at a landing.

Word that the American Pacific fleet was searching for the Japanese fleet to engage it was received exultantly among the Filipino civilians. Almost simultaneously it developed that more than 5,000 Filipinos volunteering for service at the front might form the nucleus of the first volunteer division of the Philippine defense forces.

Filipinos crowded into Manila headquarters, one a 60-year-old veteran of the 1898 revolution whose age prohibited his acceptance. Many had resigned their jobs to try for service; others had been made unemployed by the war.

Volunteer Corps Planned

The able-bodied, said officials, will form the basis of a volunteer division which the Philippine authorities are planning to offer to the United States Army command.

Heretofore, Phillipine troops have all been conscripts save for the small and long-existent body, the Philippine Scouts, a volunteer unit of the United States Army.

The largest provincial cities near the areas of the Japanese footholds were reported being evacuated in two directions—the aged, women and children seeking refuge inland, and the young men hurrying to the nearest army headquarters to volunteer.

Batangas Evacuated

Provincial reports said that the city of Batangas had been substantially evacuated after Friday's Japanese air raid.

Meanwhile, in an anti-fifth-column drive the constabulary has taken into custody a total of eighty-six Filipinos. Three Filipinos were caught Monday atop a Manila building, accused of signalling with a mirror in the sunlight.

The Philippine secret service announced that Ramon Mantile, the arrested leader of the anti-American "Ganap" organization, had confessed that his organization had plotted to help the Japanese conquer the Philippines.

Ganaps Implicated

This confession, it was stated, implicated numerous Ganaps, of whom twenty-seven already have been arrested for illegal associations bordering on treason.

Police raiding Ganap headquarters announced they had seized evidence of its pro-Japanese activities—including documents and photographs of Japanese militarists. Mantile, a Manila laborer, was quoted as saying that at a meeting of the Ganaps on November 20 plans were completed for fifth-column work on the outbreak of war—which the organization was certain would come within a few days.

The Ganap leaders were identified as former Sakdalists, a radical organization pledged to direct action for immediate Philippine independence of the United States.

Bomb Explodes

During the day, a bomb dropped by Japanese planes in one of the five raids on Manila in the past eight days exploded without causing damage or casualties. Whether it was a time bomb, or merely defective, had not been determined.

President Quezon accepted a pledge of loyalty by the organized Communist party and instructed the provincial authorities to seek the cooperation of its members.

Quezon also directed the creation of a labor corps, principally to be made up of the unemployed, to be placed under the American military authorities, and also decided to put agriculture under strict control to insure adequate supplies of food against any blockade.

bombs and ammunition for powerful new attacks.

"No Change On The Ground"

Japan's concentration on the siege of Hongkong, it was said, may also have contributed to the Philippines' respite.

No new enemy attempt to strengthen the three beachheads gained on Luzon Island last week at heavy cost of men, ships and planes or to establish new ones has been reported. The briefest war bulletin yet issued by the United States Army headquarters said at 4 P. M. only: "No change in the situation on the ground."

Defense forces are using the lull to smooth out their organization and array their forces to meet the expected new onslaught.

DEC 17 1941

Time Bomb Explodes

Manila had its first experience with a time bomb tonight. A bomb dropped by a Japanese plane a few days ago exploded but caused no casualties or damage.

Secretary Knox's announcement that the United States fleet was seeking the enemy in the Pacific created an enthusiastic furore among Manila's civilians, but members of the armed forces took it calmly with the general reaction: "We knew they'd go into action in time."

Hundreds of civilians rushed to grab extras and news of the announcement in Washington spread swiftly by word of mouth.

Previous communiques had said that the army had things well in hand at Vigan and Aparri in northern Luzon, and at Legaspi, were dropping leaflets on the Philippines—well-printed but ungrammatical exhortations to American forces to surrender.]

Failure of the Japanese to attack Manila last night or during the day gave the city a respite of more than 28 hours from the intermittent alarms it has been undergoing for the past week.

It was the second successive day devoid of news concerning developments on the Luzon land front. Yesterday official reports said that Japanese activity was confined solely to the air, including another attack on Nichols Field near Manila.

Sunday, the Japanese apparently attempted to land more troops at Legaspi, but the Army said that its bombers, resisting the attempt, had heavily damaged two enemy transports.

[Aside from four Japanese transports sunk off Luzon, an aggregate of six now have been officially reported damaged.]

There was no mention of further U. S. air attacks on the Japanese landing forces, either at Legaspi or in the north.

Liaison Provided

An official announcement, meanwhile, said that Major Gerald H. Wilkinson, of the British army, had been assigned to Lieutenant General Douglas MacArthur's headquarters to provide liaison between the British and United States forces in the western Pacific.

The Army urged volunteers to report at Sternberg Hospital in Manila to donate blood so that "the supply for transfusion to members of the fighting forces may be maintained."

Ramos was accused of being the brains behind the Sakdal uprising in 1935 and for four years thereafter he was a refugee in Japan. Upon his return to Manila he was convicted of sedition in connection with the activities of his party, which since has been outlawed.

5TH COLUMN PLOT IS CONFESSED BY FILIPINO

DEC 17 1941

Anti-American Society Ganap Planned to Help Invaders

27 MEMBERS ARRESTED

By The Associated Press

Manila, Dec. 16.—The Philippines secret service announced tonight that the leader of the anti-American Ganap organization had confessed that Ganap had plotted to help the Japanese conquer the Philippines.

The announcement said the confession of Ramon Mantile had implicated many of his fellows. Twenty-seven members of Ganap, including Mantile, were arrested shortly after the Japanese attack began and were charged with illegal association bordering on treason.

Police who raided Ganap headquarters said they seized evidence of pro-Japanese activities, including documents and photographs of Japanese militarists.

Fifth Column Activity

The secret service quoted Mantile, who was employed as a laborer in Manila, as saying the final meeting of the Ganap was held November 20, when plans were completed for fifth column activity. Members were certain war would break out in a few days.

Among those arrested were Gaudencio Bautista, secretary to Benigno Ramos, leader of the former Sakdal party, now serving a prison term for sedition. Mantile said Ganap leaders were former Sakdalistas, members of a party which advocated direct action to obtain independence from the United States. The Sakdal party was broken up after an uprising was suppressed in 1935.

-dash-

The word "Ganap," Philippine sources in Washington said, is of the "Tagalog" dialect, the principal language spoken in the islands.

It means accomplishment and was translated to convey the idea that the anti-American Ganap organization was an action party opposing the U.S., these sources said.

Missing U. S. Airmen Return Safe To Units

Manila, Wednesday, Dec. 17 (AP)—Several American pilots previously believed lost during operations in north central Luzon have returned safely to their units, it was reported reliably today.

DEC 17 1941

Some were forced to bail out during combat with the Japanese and others made forced landings in sparsely settled areas where there were no communications.

Press reports said that United States Lieutenants Shepherd and Houseman had reached a northern Luzon city yesterday after a week's journey afoot and on horseback from a remote area.

Tells Of Air Battle

Shepherd reported fighting three Japanese bombers through thick clouds last week and said he saw only two of them emerge.

Their bullets, however, caused a leak in his radiator and he had to make a forced landing.

Houseman bailed out due to motor trouble, and the two met as they sought to hike out to civilization.

A civilian traveler from central Luzon said he watched a Japanese air raid Saturday in which Filipino soldiers shot down three low-flying planes with rifles.

When the Japanese swept over, the soldiers scattered in a field and, despite heavy strafing from the planes, knelt and banged away with heavy volleys, he said.

Creation of Labor Corps Ordered in Philippines

By the Associated Press.

DEC 17 1941

MANILA, Dec. 16.—President Manuel Quezon today directed creation of a labor corps, composed mostly of unemployed, to be placed under direction of American military authorities, and decided to subject agriculture to strict control.

These steps, in addition to the commandeering of food, were taken as part of a long-range program to insure an adequate supply of essential foodstuffs as protection against blockade.

While details of the farm program were not disclosed, it was assumed one aim would be increased production of rice, in which the Philippines never have been self-sufficient. Much of the farming area, now devoted to sugar cane, may be diverted to vegetables and other crops.

Several months ago the government began storing up canned goods.

Thirty Manila storekeepers, mostly Chinese, were arrested for refusing to continue business under government price regulations. They are subject to imprisonment or fine for closing their stores.

In response to a call from the army, 50 volunteer blood donors reported at Sternberg Hospital.

Doctors said blood storing had been in progress for six months.

TOKYO BOASTS OF EARLY PLAN TO ATTACK U. S.

Reveals Admiral Wrote Year Ago Of Intent To Dictate Peace

[By the Associated Press]

Tokyo, Wednesday, Dec. 17—(Official radio received by (AP))—Japan's Domei agency broadcast today a letter written almost a year ago in which Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto, commander-in-chief of the Japanese navy, said: "I am looking forward to dictating peace to the United States in the White House at Washington."

Somewhat earlier, Imperial headquarters announced that Japanese expeditionary forces had "bucked a gale" to effect a landing on the coast of British Borneo, strategically located on the sea route between Hongkong, Singapore and the Philippines.

Strategy Planned, Exclaims

The Domei broadcast said:

"The strategy of surprise which was carried out by Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto, commander in chief of the Japanese combined fleets, with such success was planned by him earlier, according to the Yomiuri (Tokyo newspaper).

"The Yomiuri published a letter which Yamamoto sent to a close friend, dated January 24 this year. Therein Yamamoto, who said that humiliation was felt by all the Japanese navy at the time the 1934 naval disarmament conference at London failed, made this statement:

" 'Any time war breaks out between Japan and the United States, I shall not be content merely to capture Guam and the Philippines and occupy Hawaii and San Francisco.

"Looking Forward"

" 'I am looking forward to dictating peace to the United States in the White House at Washington.' "

[On Monday President Roosevelt, in his "White Paper" to Congress, indicted Japan's war lords for formulating the real answer to America's peace proposals long before the attack on Pearl Harbor. Even during the long discussions in Washington, Secretary Hull had indicated constant apprehension that the negotiations were being used by Japan to cover widespread last-minute preparations for war. Now the Japanese, by broadcasting the Yamamoto letter, prove —consciously or unconsciously—what was in the minds of Japanese war lords at the beginning of 1941.

[Yamamoto personifies these warlords. He is credited with torpedoing the London naval conference with his insistence on Japanese [illegible]. Last week the Mikado congratulated him for the sinking, by naval air action, of the two great British capital ships off Malaya, the Prince of Wales and the Repulse.]

Other Jap Claims

Aside from the claim to a Japanese landing on Borneo (British forces are reported to have broken up a similar attempt a week ago), these official claims were broadcast:

Philippine Isles Get Respite From Raids

[By the Associated Press]

Manila, Dec. 16—Japan's [illegible] on the Philippine Islands slacked off today to an air attack at Olongapo naval base, northwest of Manila Bay, but defense regarded the respite as temporary.

Although there was no official explanation, most observers said the let-up probably meant that the Japanese were moving additional forces and supplies into position off the island coasts, resting pilots, overhauling planes and marshalling gasoline, on the extreme southeastern tip of the island, where the Japanese were reported to have landed limited numbers of troops last week.

The attack on the Olongapo naval base was carried out at dawn. Army Headquarters gave no details of the raid, but apparently it was light, for Manila had no alert.

Benigno Ramos, a Filipino radical leader who now is serving a penitentiary sentence for sedition, wrote President Manuel Quezon that all Filipinos should forget past differences and offer their loyalty to the United States and the Commonwealth. Ramos characterized Japanese air bombings as "the hideous murder of our civilian population" and declared that he himself was ready to take up arms in defense of the country.

Ramos was accused of being the brains behind the Sakdal uprising in 1935 and for four years thereafter he was a refugee in Japan.

Bulk of U. S. Fleet At Hawaii Crushed, Tojo Tells Diet

DEC 17 1941

'Encircling Front' Shattered at Various Places, Premier Says

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Dec. 16 (Official Radio).—Premier Gen. Hideki Tojo, recapitulating Japanese claims of successes in the first week of the war, told the Diet today that "the bulk of the American fleet which had been in Hawaii is destroyed and the main body of the British Far Eastern fleet is crushed."

(United States Navy Secretary Knox, back from a flying visit to Hawaii, acknowledged yesterday that the surprise Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor had sunk the Battleship Arizona, the old target ship Utah and three destroyers and had damaged the Battleship Oklahoma and several smaller vessels.

(He declared, however, that "the entire balance of the Pacific fleet," including battleships, aircraft carriers, heavy and light cruisers, destroyers and submarines, now is "at sea seeking contact with the enemy.")

Both houses of the Diet unanimously passed an extra war budget of 2,800,000,000 yen (about $644,000,000).

Warns of Overoptimism.

Declaring that "our fighting forces have speedily broken through enemy key positions within less than 10 days," Gen. Tojo said:

"The encircling front against Japan, the strength of which the enemy had exaggerated and given wide publicity in an attempt to intimidate us, has been shattered at various places. The anti-Japanese encircling front is on a fair way to collapse."

However, Gen. Tojo warned the Diet—which was summoned in special session to approve emergency war measures—of the dangers of overoptimism.

"A war remains waiting to be fought," he said.

The Premier reiterated assertions that Japan had declared war only after exhausting all possible mens of a peaceful settlement, and charged the United States and Britain with responsibility for the conflict.

Says No Other Course Was Left.

"Japan, though ardent in her desire for peace, had no course left her but to rise up with arms to safeguard her prestige," Gen. Tojo said.

Foreign Minister Shigenori Togo, who also blamed the United States and Britain for the war, said "all Asiatic peoples had come forward to co-operate closely with Japan, realizing our real objective is to secure the emancipation and prosperity of the Far East."

Referring to Japan's relations with Soviet Russia, Foreign Minister Togo said:

"There is no change in the imperial government's attitude for insuring security in the north. . . . As for the Soviet government, they repeatedly have enunciated their intention to abide by their neutrality pact with Japan."

Tells of Sinkings.

Telling of the sinking of the British battleship Prince of Wales and the battle cruiser Repulse, Navy Minister Admiral Shigetaro Shimada said the Japanese southwestern Pacific fleet learned of the British ships leaving Singapore on December 9, the day before the sinkings, but was unable to reach them for a surface battle.

A Japanese aircraft carrier went into action the following morning immediately on discovery of the British fleet off the Malayan coast, he said.

Later, in an address to more than 3,000 persons at a national defense meeting, the Premier told civilians to act calmly in case of air raids.

Finance Minister Okinobu Kaya told the Diet that the government had completed all preparations to meet any financial situation which may be brought by the war.

Yamamoto Planned Surprise Strategy Long Time Ago

Tokio, Dec. 16—(Official Radio Received by AP)—The following despatch was broadcast today by Domei:

DEC 17 1941

"The strategy of surprise, which was carried out with such success by Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto, commander-in-chief of the Japanese combined fleets, was planned by him earlier, according to the Yomiuri (Tokio newspaper).

"The Yomiuri published a letter which Yamamoto sent a close friend, dated January 24 this year. Therein Yamamoto, who said that humiliation was felt by all the Japanese Navy at the time the 1934 naval disarmament conference at London failed, made this statement:

"'Any time war breaks out between Japan and the United States I shall not be content merely to capture Guam and the Philippines and occupy Hawaii and San Francisco.

"'I am looking forward to dictating peace to the United States in the White House at Washington.'"

Yamamoto was congratulated by Emperor Hirohito for the sinking of the British battleship Prince of Wales and the battle cruiser Repulse by his naval planes off Malaya.

He was Japan's delegate to the 1934 London naval conference at which the United States and Britain rejected Japan's demands for naval parity.

Non-Japanese participants contended it was Yamamoto's insistence on the Japanese formula—at the behest of his superiors in Tokio—that torpedoed the conference and ended the naval truce in the Pacific.

Admiral Counts Losses.

NEW YORK—DEC 17 (AP)—The Berlin radio today broadcast a Tokio dispatch which said Japanese Navy Minister Admiral Shigetaro Shimada, speaking in the Imperial Diet, gave the following list of United States warships sunk by the Japanese:

Three battleships, one submarine, one minesweeper and one large troop transport.

He said one United States aircraft carrier probably was sunk.

The dispatch, still quoting Admiral Shimada, continued:

"Seriously damaged were eight (United States) warships, about four cruisers, one destroyer, one submarine as well as one further smaller vessel.

"The Japanese air force shot down or destroyed on the ground 198 United States aircraft in the Philippines and at Wake Island.

"The loss of aircraft of the Americans at Hawaii amounted to about 200.

"British losses amount to two battleships, one large destroyer, one patrol boat, one gunboat and one armed merchant vessel, Shimada continued.

"Up to now 471 American ships totaling 120,000 tons have been taken as prizes. Furthermore, 308 minor ships have been taken."

JAPANESE REPORT FORCE LANDED IN BORNEO

DEC 17 1941

Dutch Earlier had Told of British Breaking up Invading Party

AREA RICH IN RESOURCES

Tokio, Dec. 16—(Official Radio Received by AP)—Imperial Headquarters reported today that Japanese expeditionary forces succeeded in effecting a landing at dawn on the coast of British Borneo despite a gale.

London, Dec. 16—(AP)—British officials said today that they had no information substantiating reports that Japanese troops had landed in British Borneo.

While this is the first Japanese claim of a landing on Borneo, Aneta, Netherlands news agency reported last Tuesday that British forces had broken up a Japanese landing party in British North Borneo.

A British report later the same day said the Japanese had attempted a new landing and had been attacked heavily by British and Australian bombers. British troops, it said, were engaged in fierce fighting with the Japanese there.

Borneo is situated strategically on sea routes between Hongkong, Singapore and the Philippines.

It is 600 miles from North Borneo to Manila and 800 miles to Singapore. The island lies north of Java. At the closest point the southern or Netherlands East Indies part of the island is only 300 miles from Batavia.

Rich in Resources

DEC 17 1941

Moreover, Borneo is a fertile source of some essential war products, notably rubber.

Japanese announcement of the landing of troops on the coast of British Borneo might conceivably refer to any of three British-protected divisions of the island of Borneo, the largest and richest portion of which belongs to The Netherlands.

Borneo is divided into the state of North Borneo, generally known as British Borneo, the last territory in the British Empire administered by a chartered company; Brunei, a Malayan sultanate under British protection; Sarawak, ruled by the white rajah, Sir Charles Vyner Brooke, whose foreign relations are under British control, and Dutch Borneo.

British Borneo provides various tropical products, such as rubber, timber, tobacco, manila hemp, fish and rice, of which rubber is the most important war product.

Coal mines there were worked until 1930. There are deposits of gold, petroleum, copper, iron, manganese and tin which have not been worked commercially.

The country is chiefly mountainous and dominated by the 13,455-foot granite mountain, Kanabalu, venerated by natives as the home of the dead.

Japs Describe Guam Capture

Tokyo, Dec. 16 (Official Radio Received by A. P.)—The naval section of Japanese imperial headquarters today issued the following communique concerning Guam:

"Japanese forces landed at the port of Apra in western Guam at dawn of December 10 and, attacking a number of strategic points, took prisoner thirty naval officers and men, including a commander. They also seized a 3,000-ton tanker.

"On December 11 Japanese forces occupied Agana, the capital of Guam, and took prisoner 350 Americans, including Capt. George J. McMillin, governor and commandant of the naval station, the vice-governor and many officers.

DEC 17 1941

"Continuing their attack both from the air and on the ground, the Japanese forces completed the occupation of Guam December 12."

Tokyo, Dec. 16 (Official Radio Received by (AP)—A Japanese army communique today reported mass Japanese air raids on American air bases near Manila, and said military barracks were set on fire in an attack northeast of the city.

(At 4 P. M. today, Philippine time, a manila dispatch said there had been no raid against manila in twenty-eight hours.)

Claim 16 Planes

The Japanese communique said four fighter planes were set on fire and twelve others, including two bombers, destroyed on the ground.

Japanese planes operating over Malaya were said to have attacked the West Coast air bases of Ayertawar and Ipoh, shooting down one Blenheim plane in an air fight and destroying seven other Blenheims on the ground. Oil depots and other military facilities were "set on fire and blown up," the communique said.

The attacks cost the Japanese one plane, the bulletin said.

2,000 Homes Damaged in Worst Disaster Since '30

TOKIO, Dec. 17 (Wednesday) (Official radio received by AP).—The Domei news agency reported today that 354 persons were killed or injured in an earthquake in southern Formosa.

It said the earthquake, worst felt in that Japanese-owned island since 1930, damaged more than 2,000 homes and disrupted railway communication between the cities of Tainan and Kamio.

Water mains were reported broken in many places, and late dispatches said telephone communication was cut off at three points.

FANATIC JAPS PRESS ATTACKS UPON MALAYA

DEC 17 1941

Fate of Northwestern Section Hangs In Balance, British Admit

English Organize Counter-Attacks, With Strong Artillery Support

[By the Associated Press]

Singapore, Dec. 16—The fate of northwestern Malaya and its principal city, Penang, admittedly hung in the balance tonight as the British fought against what official quarters described as "Japanese attempts to press home attacks with fanatical determination."

The fighting was in the low country along the Muda river, which flows through the State of Kedah and enters the Indian Ocean along the northern boundary of Wellesley province fifteen miles northeast of Penang.

Defense of the mainland approaches of Penang is organized on the concentric perimeter plan.

Informed persons here said that while strengthening these prepared positions, the British were not waiting on the defensive, but organized counter-thrusts today, with motorized units in the lead and strong support by artillery.

Japanese Move Halted

Latest reports did not indicate the results of this attempt to stem the southward advance of the Japanese, but the British were declared to have maintained close contact with the enemy throughout the day on the Kelantan front in Northeast Malaya. No further Japanese attempts to advance were made there.

The British said the fanatical determination of the Japanese to press home their attacks caused the Japanese enormous casualties.

A communiqué issued today said there was little further news from South Kedah, on the west coast, where the situation still was confused, but that fighting was believed to be in progress in the vicinity of the River Muda, which forms the northern boundary of the province of Wellesley.

On the east coast, on the Kelantan front, "our troops maintained contact with the enemy, who have made no further attempt to advance," the communiqué said.

"Must Not Fall"

Gov. Shenton Thomas told the Straits Settlements legislative council the fate of the British base on Penang Island depends largely upon what happens in the battle in the Kedah area.

"The initial Japanese surprise attack and Thailand's decision to afford the Japanese every facility made things very difficult for us," he said.

The governor declared that all Japan's efforts are aimed at Singapore and that "to its defense all our plans must be directed, however hard they may appear; Singapore must not and shall not fall."

ADDED DANGER SEEN IN FORCE OF JAP DRIVE

DEC 17 1941

English Public Warned Also To Prepare For Hongkong's Fall

Latter Colony Reported Under Heavy Land And Air Bombardment

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 16—A powerful Japanese drive in northern Malaya and Britain's lack of naval superiority have created a serious threat to Singapore, an informed source said tonight, and commentators simultaneously warned the public to be prepared for the fall of besieged Hongkong.

British and Indian troops fought to stop a Japanese mechanized penetration into the lower part of Kedah state in northwestern Malaya, where the Japanese gained forty or fifty miles. On the eastern side of the peninsula the Japanese apparently were being held south of Kota Bharu.

Lack Of Naval Superiority

Although Singapore still is some 400 mile from the nearest Japanese spearhead, an informed source said:

"British lack of naval superiority has changed the entire situation in northern Malaya. The British land defense was planned on the basis of naval superiority, but both the British and United States fleets have suffered hard blows.

"Now the naval situation has allowed the Japanese to develop an offensive on a large scale. There definitely is danger—a real threat to Singapore by land."

Hongkong Bombarded

Far up the Chinese coast the Hongkong colony was reported under heavy Japanese air and artillery bombardment. Japanese guns poured shells into the colony from the mainland only a mile away, and the Hongkong garrison was said to lack supplies and munitions for a long siege.

[The German radio said Tokyo reported Japanese forces already had invaded some parts of Hongkong island.]

A dispatch from Manila said Hongkong officials declared three weeks ago that the island could be held indefinitely but for the task of trying to feed its 1,500,000 Chinese civilians.

Prepare For Bad News

At any rate British commentators here today apparently were preparing the public for bad news.

Lord Beaverbrook's Daily Express editorially declared Hongkong has no strategic value and "we must be prepared for its fall." G. Ward Price in the Daily Mail said Hongkong's ultimate loss had been "long foreseen in case of war with Japan. . . . Such a loss would be sad but not serious."

In Chungking, a communique reported that the Chinese, persisting in an attempt to relieve pressure on Hongkong, were harassing Japanese movements on the Canton-Hongkong railway

Criticism Developing

Some criticism of British Far Eastern tactics was developing. It began when the British lost their two big warships, the Prince of Wales and the Repulse, to Japanese bombers off the Malayan coast a week ago.

Some members of the House of Commons demanded an early debate on why the British ships went into action without fighter aircraft support, a fact acknowledged by Prime Minister Churchill.

Today Major Clement R. Attlee, Lord Privy Seal, told the House that "all necessary steps" were being taken to coordinate military plans of Britain, Russia and the United States, and that a secret debate on the war would be held before Christmas to discuss creation of an allied war council.

In Canberra, the Australian capital, Herbert Evatt, Minister of Foreign Affairs, said Britain and the United States "can reasonably look forward" to Russian aid against Japan "if and when the military situation becomes stabilized to Russia's advantage."

London Also Doubts Ability of Hongkong to Stand Heavy Attack.

OUTLOOK CHANGED BY SINKING

Defense Plans for Malaya Were Based on Control of Seas No Longer Held.

DEC 17 1941

London, Dec. 16 (A. P.)—An informed official said today that Hongkong might have to be evacuated and that a serious threat to Singapore had developed in land fighting on the Malay Peninsula.

"British lack of naval superiority has changed the entire situation in northern Malaya," the informant said. "The British land defense was planned on the basis of naval superiority, but both the British and United States fleets have suffered hard blows.

"Now the naval situation has allowed the Japanese to develop an offensive on a large scale. There definitely is danger—a real threat to Singapore by land."

[The British radio said today in Singapore the legislative council is discussing a bill giving the Governor power to conscript labor, both men and women, for the defense of the colony. The Columbia Broadcasting System recorded the news broadcast here.]

London heard the German radio quote Tokio reports tonight as saying that Japanese forces had invaded parts of Hongkong island.

Another German broadcast tonight said that Tokio had reported that Japanese artillery had silenced Hongkong fortress guns.

(A BBC broadcast heard by CBS said that on the Malay Peninsula the Japanese had developed their large-scale offensive through capture of airdromes at Victoria Point, southernmost tip of Burma, and the Malayan border airdrome at Kota Bharu.)

Chinese Blows Continue

Several British quarters expressed doubt that Hongkong could hold out indefinitely against the concentrated Japanese attack.

However, a communique, issued in Chungking and reported by Reuters, said Chinese forces had intensified a drive against the flank and rear of the Japanese forces in an attempt to relieve pressure on Hongkong.

Near Canton, some seventy-five miles northwest of Hongkong, the Chinese were reported harassing Japanese movements along the Canton-Hongkong railway.

The Chinese also were said in the communique to be attacking the Japanese in Hangchow Bay, some 700 miles north on the China coast, south of Shanghai, where they claimed to have recaptured several strategic points.

Food For Three Months

Continuous heavy gunfire was reported from both Hongkong and the Japanese-occupied mainland point of Kowloon, following the announcement that British forces had withdrawn to the island of Hongkong.

The mountainous island of Hongkong offers the British little opportunity for aerial defenses, but it was reported well furnished with anti-aircraft artillery and ammunition to cover the chiefly populated areas against Japanese air raids. The island is believed to have food supplies for three months.

Public Prepared

The British press seemingly prepared the public for news of Hongkongs' possible fall.

Ward Price, prominent commentator writing in The Daily Mail, said the ultimate loss of Hongkong has been "long foreseen in case of war with Japan."

He said it was "too near Japan to be maintained as a naval base. It was a trading base and naval station. Both of these functions now are suspended. Such a loss would be sad, but not serious."

The Daily Express said editorially that Hongkong "has neither the strategic value nor the fighting chance of Tobruk. We must be prepared for its fall."

A British military commentator said "very heavy fighting" between Japanese and British forces is continuing in Malaya and added:

"Owing to the very difficult nature of the country, it is not always possible for all the various bodies of troops we have there to weep in touch with tach other and consequently our supply of news is not good.

The commentator said that all residents of Victoria Point, in the most southern tip of Burma, had been removed.

[The Tokio official radio announced today that Japanese planes operating over Malaya attacked the west coast air bases of Ayertawar and Ipoh, shooting down one Blenheim plane in an air fight and destroying seven other Blenheims on the ground. Oil depots and other military facilities were "set on fire and blown up," an army communique said.

[The attacks cost the Japanese one plane, the Japanese said.

[Ipoh lies on the rail line from Singapore to Thailand, about 275 miles northwest of Singapore and just south of the province of Kedah, where the Japanese are reported advancing.]

The British announced earlier today that mechanized Japanese troops on the Malayan front, operating under cover of dive-bombers, had smashed their way into southern Kedah, the 100-mile-long northwestern Malaya State bordering Thailand (Siam). The British and Indian defenders withdrew, it was stated, after a five-days' Japanese offensive which had cost the attackers heavily.

The attack apparently carried the Japanese forty miles along the road to the great British naval base at Singapore, which was still, however, 400 miles away. The British were reported fighting desperately against better-equipped Japanese.

Where the British were now standing was not clear here, but those on the east coast were believed to be intrenched somewhere south of Kota Bharu, whose airdrome the Japanese have captured. British air raiders and Dutch submarines were believed checking further Japanese sea-borne re-enforcements.

Chinese Population Impedes Hongkong

By CLARK LEE
(Associated Press Correspondent)

Manila, Dec. 16.—Hongkong officials told me three weeks ago that the island could hold out indefinitely under a Japanese siege were it not for the problem of feeding 1,500,000 Chinese civilians.

They intimated that this eventually would determine the capitulation of the island because the inability to remove civilians made it impossible to conserve food stores for the fighting men who include a large contingent of Canadians.

Filipinos are following Hongkong developments keenly although the Philippines, too, are facing a Japanese invasion. Manila is only 631 miles from Hongkong.

DEC 17 1941

Victoria Island on which Hong Kong is situated is only a mile from the mainland port of Kowloon, where Japanese artillery is based for the shelling of the island. The city rises steeply from the water's edge on the north side of the island, and the civilians have been removed to open-air camps on the southern side, away from direct Japanese artillery fire.

The Japanese might attempt landings on the southern side of the island, but big British guns dominate the approaches there. The quantity of food reserves is not known.

MACASSAR IN CELEBES HAS AIR RAID ALARM

Widespread Japanese Activity Indicated in Dutch Indies

Batavia, Netherlands East Indies, Dec. 16—(AP)—An air raid alarm in Macassar, on the island of Celebes, today indicated widespread Japanese aerial operations over The Netherlands East Indies.

It followed one last night at the other end of the group in which, a communique said, "a number of not completely identified—presumably enemy aircraft" were sighted over northern Sumatra, just across the narrow Malacca strait from Malaya.

It said, however, that there was no enemy activity on Dutch soil in the past 24 hours and added that "our maritime operations are continuing."

HAWAII'S BIG GUNS TEST THEIR MIGHT

Practice Rounds Fired to Sea; Inhabitants Told to Build Shelters.

DEC 17 1941

By TOM YARBROUGH

(Associated Press Correspondent)

Honolulu, Dec. 16.—Window-rattling vibrations like those of a slight earthquake punctuated the sunny quiet of Honolulu yesterday as coast artillery at the west and south of Oahu island fired thunderous practice rounds for out into the sea.

It was the sharpest reminder of the war which struck these placid islands in a lighting thrust a week ago Sunday.

Army authorities meanwhile emphasized the need for making the populace secure against further attack in a public notice saying that "each male citizen will be required to construct a shelter for his protection and for the protection of his family with his own tools and materials."

A rush to food stores eased off as it became apparent that appetizing supplies of foodstuffs on hand would be ample for a considerable time.

Gasoline is being rationed at ten gallons monthly to commercial vehicles.

An official Army statement said "the entire garrison is disposed to meet any threats," and added that there had been no Japanese landings on any islands in the Hawaiian group.

Civilian morale was described as "tremendous—there has been no panic, and sabotage has been at a minimum."

Army men said they expected the toll of enemy planes shot down Sunday to mount with the eventual finding of wreckage in remote cane fields and valleys.

Roads Heavily Guarded

First arrivals from the island of Hawaii, largest of the Hawaiian group, said that each person there had been limited to 35 cents' worth of food daily, including perishables.

All roads are guarded heavily, they said, suspected fifth columnists are being rounded up and morale is "inspiring."

Jap Pilot Stoned To Death By Woman On Hawaiian Isle

Natives Fed Flyer For Days Until He Began Asking For His "War Papers"

By TOM YARBROUGH

(By the Associated Press)

DEC 17 1941

Honolulu, Dec. 16—A broadcast from near-by Kauai Island today related the story of a Japanese pilot who made a forced landing in the primative, westernmost islet of this group, December 7, and was stoned to death six days later by a native Hawaiian woman.

The pilot had enjoyed the hospitality of the islands for six days because the natives had not heard of the surprise attack on Pearl Harbor and the declarations of war.

The broadcaster told it this way:

The woman pounced on the pilot after he had fired three bullets into the body of her husband and after a Hawaiian-born Japanese, who had befriended the pilot, committed suicide with a shotgun. The husband survived and was taken to the Kauai hospital.

The episode occurred beside a stone wall in the woods of tiny Niihau—"Forbidden Isle"—which had been privately owned for years. Niihau is thinly populated and has been kept almost exclusively for Hawaiians living the plain life of shepherds and cowboys.

The Japanese pilot was thrown from his plane in a forced landing and for a time was unconscious.

The natives—cautious, but ignorant of the war and ready to help a stranger in distress—hid his guns and gave him food and drink for several days.

Eventually the pilot asked for his "war papers" and thereby aroused suspicion.

Lacking direct communication with the other islands, the natives sent some men in a boat twenty miles to Kauai island to report the arrival of a queer guest who spoke strangely of "war."

The pilot, meantime, bribed the Hawaiian-born Japanese with 200 yen to get his guns back and began asking about the men who had left in the boat.

The husband and wife lured the pilot to the woods. Then the Hawaiian-born Japanese came by and shots and stones began to fly.

The Hawaiian-born Japanese made the first move, firing the shotgun charge into his own stomach. The husband tried to interfere and the pilot shot him. Despite his wounds, the 6-foot-3 husband banged the pilot's head against the stone wall and his wife finished the job.

Flyer Who Bagged 4 Jap Planes Says Own Ship Was Hit 3 Times

By the Associated Press.

HONOLULU, Dec. 16.—Lt. Georg Welch, Army flyer from Wilmington Del., told today how he shot down four Japanese planes attacking Hawaii December 7 and landed with three bullet holes in his ship, one just behind the pilot's seat.

"All hell broke loose before I knew it," Lt. Welch recounted in an interview approved by the Army.

"The air was full of Jap planes. I picked out the nearest one and went after him. I blazed away, but nothing seemed to happen at first, but then I got a good bead on him and the next thing I knew he was going down in flames.

"I looked around for another plane, discovered I was over the pineapple fields of Wahiawa and nearly out of ammunition, so I went back to the field.

"About that time Lt. Kenneth Taylor of Hominy, Okla., came in. He'd shot down a bomber, too, and was low on ammunition.

"We loaded up with all the rounds we could carry and took off again. Taylor bagged one more but got shot through the arm and had to come down. I went over Barbers' Point and shot down three more bombers. When I came back to the field I had three bullet holes in my ship—one in the propeller, one in the motor and another just behind the pilot's seat."

Lt. Welch said he didn't know whether he was scared—"it was a funny feeling"—but he knew he was plenty mad "because they caught us on a Sunday morning.

"Maybe I could have got a dozen more if I hadn't got so excited."

Army Air Corps officials here said yesterday that Lt. Welch's feat of bagging the four Japanese planes in one day established a record exceeded in the first World War by only one American flyer—Second Lt. Frank Luke, jr., of Phoenix, Ariz.

Luke bagged three German planes and two balloons within 10 minutes on September 17, 1918. The officials said that during those days an airman was given additional credit for bringing down balloons because they were close to the ground behind enemy lines and always were strongly protected by air and ground forces.

Honolulu, Dec. 16 (AP)—The War Department said today the Distinguished Service Cross had been awarded to Second Lieutenant George S. Welch, of Wilmington, Del., and to Lieut. Kenneth M. Taylor, of Hominy, Okla., for outstanding heroism during the Japanese attack on Oahu Island. Welch shot down four Japanese planes and Taylor downed two.

Army Clamps Down On Aliens In Hawaii

They Now All Must Have Permits To Move About In Area

Honolulu, Dec. 16 (AP)—All aliens in the Hawaiian Islands must have permits for any sort of travel, even to and from work, the army announced today. Simultaneously, it imposed full censorship on all mail leaving the islands.

The army announced aliens, friendly or otherwise, must have permits to do the following things: Change their abode or occupation, visit friends or relatives, travel to and from their place of business or occupation, move from place to place on any island.

The public was notified that "at least for the present," the army would censor all outgoing mail, because of the "potential danger of interception of United States mails by enemy raiders between Hawaii and the mainland."

Marines Ask: 'More Japs'

DEC 17 1941

Honolulu, Dec. 16 (AP).—Take it for what it's worth, but this is the story that has been circulating in Honolulu:

When Navy officials established contact with the Marine garrison defending tiny Wake Island they asked: "Is there anything you want?"

"Yes," came the reply, "send us some more Japs."

Gifts to Send to Hawaii Suggested by Authorities

By The Associated Press.

HONOLULU, Dec. 16—Lending a helping hand to Santa Claus, Army authorities are urging people who send presents to friends and service personnel in Hawaii not to clutter up vital cargo space with non-essentials.

"Send keepable presents and unperishable foods," suggested Lieut. Col. William W. Jenna, Hawaiian department recreation and morale officer. For civilian and defense workers, and service families, he suggested canned chicken, canned hams and dried fruits. Music records are desirable for blackout nights. Card games are good, too.

For service men he suggested canned and hard candy. Celluloid playing cards, needles, threads, buttons and other clothing repair material and pocket-size magazines, cookies and toilet kits.

Jenna pointed out that Hawaii's mild climate does not require heavy socks, woolen sweaters and mufflers, but light, slip-on sleeveless garments. Among the best gifts are books of stamps, field stationery, and "for Pete's sake send them [redacted] black out flashlights."

Australian Believes Russia Will Help Fight on Japan

CANBERRA, Australia, Dec. 16 (AP).—The British Empire and the United States "can reasonably look forward" to Russian aid against Japan once the military situation has become stabilized to the advantage of the Soviet, Herbert Evatt, Australian Minister of Foreign Affairs, told the House of Representatives today.

He said Australia on two occasions before the outbreak of the war with Japan had suggested a "reciprocal agreement between Britain and Russia whereby, in the event of Japanese aggression against either, the other would be bound to declare war against the aggressor.

"It was considered, I suppose, that our suggestion was premature, but events have proved otherwise. If and when the military situation becomes stabilized to Russia's advantage we can reasonably look forward to aid against Japan.

"Japan's ultimate design against Russia can hardly be concealed, and in the long run it will be to Russia's advantage to dispose once and for all of the threat to Vladivostok and Eastern Siberia."

He said Australian policy toward the Soviet always had been "frank and direct."

The Australian government, he added, "is already taking steps to get an early establishment of political and military organizations to which it will be necessary to commit the supreme control of the Pacific war effort."

China Urges Joint Command

London, Dec. 16 (AP)—Wang Shih-chieh, Minister of Information at Chungking, announced today that the Chinese Government has sent notes to the United States, Britain and other allied powers proposing creation of a unified allied command, according to a Reuters dispatch.

"I am gratified that the London Press sees eye to eye with us in this vital matter," he was quoted as saying.

British military attache, had been appointed head of the British military mission at Chungking as part of the coordination of anti-Axis war plans. His post corresponds with that of Brig.-Gen. John Magruder, head of the U.S. mission to China.

Steps Taken by Allies For Co-ordination Of Military Plans

Creation of War Council To Be Discussed at Commons Session

DEC 17 1941

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—Maj. Clement R. Attlee, Lord Privy Seal, announced in the House of Commons today that "all necessary steps" were being taken to co-ordinate the military plans of Britain, Russia and the United States.

Maj. Attlee announced that a secret debate on the war would be held in Commons before Christmas to discuss creation of an Allied War Council and other war problems.

Some members had wanted a public debate to air thoroughly such questions as why the battleship Prince of Wales and the battle cruiser Repulse were allowed to proceed against the Japanese without fighter aircraft support, the reason given by Prime Minister Churchill for their destruction by Japanese planes.

Attlee said that a general statement on loss of the two ships might follow the debate and added that Prime Minister Churchill would make no further statement in the near future.

REDS RETAKE KALININ, ROUT 90,000 NAZIS

DEC 17 1941

Report Biggest Single Victory Since Start Of Counter-Offensive

"Fleeing Enemy Pursued And Annihilated," Moscow Says

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Wednesday, Dec. 17—Red army troops have routed six German divisions of 90,000 men and recaptured strategic Kalinin, ninety miles northwest of here, Russia announced officially today.

This most sensational single victory so far in the great Soviet counter-offensive now in progress followed by twenty-four hours the Russian army's recapture of Klin, fifty miles to the northwest, and the massacre of 13,000 Nazis.

"The fleeing enemy is being pursued and annihilated by our troops," the communique added.

6 Nazi Divisions Routed

At Kalinin the Russians in a special announcement said they dealt a heavy blow to the Ninth German Army under Colonel General Strauss, putting to flight the Eighty-sixth, Three Hundred and Tenth, One Hundred and Twenty-ninth, One Hundred and Sixty-first, One Hundred and Sixty-second, and Two Hundred and Fifty-first infantry divisions.

In addition the Russians were said to have occupied several points on the central front before Moscow and Volovo, a town southeast of Tula on the other end of the Moscow defense arc.

Special credit was given to Major General Fusklevich and General Maslenikov in the fierce fighting at Kalinin which the Germans first captured in mid-October.

"Great booty was taken and now is being counted," the communique said, "and remnants of the divisions of the enemy are withdrawing westward. . . . The fleeing enemy is being pursued and annihilated by our troops."

REDS REPORTED SMASHING THREE GERMAN DIVISIONS

London Hears Vast Nazi Armies Are Retreating Under Heavy Attack.

Moscow, Dec. 16 (A. P.).—A special Russian communique declared today that more than three German divisions were smashed, with more than 13,000 of their men killed or wounded, and that huge quantities of heavy equipment were seized by the Red Army in its recapture of Klin.

The special communique followed an earlier official announcement that Klin and three key points in the Tula zone had been retaken, indicating that the Nazi pincer around Moscow had been blunted.

Two of the three divisions declared to have been routed were motorized units.

[The Russians previously had declared that 23 German divisions were smashed since the second major German offensive against Moscow was launched November 16.]

[The Finnish High command announced that the Soviet forces have begun a general offensive in the Osta sector around the southern bend of Lake Onega.]

English Report Vast Retreat

[A British radio broadcast said 100 German divisions—about 1,500,000 troops—were in retreat and largely exposed to Russian attacks because of the inability of their rearguards to cover them. It said a major battle was being fought in the Kalinin sector, one of the anchors of Moscow's defenses 90 miles northwest of the capital.]

"According to preliminary and incomplete figures," said the special announcement, "during the occupation of the town of Klin troops of the western front captured from the Germans the following trophies:

"One hundred and twenty-two tanks; 18 armored cars; more than 1,000 trucks; 80 guns; 120 mine-throwers; 250 machine guns; 800 automatic rifles; over 10,000 shells; over 2,000,000 cartridges and a large quantity of other war material.

"Counting of the trophies is in progress.

"In the fighting area of Klin, the Germans lost over 13,000 men killed and wounded. The 14th Motorized Infantry Division of General Fuerst, the 36th Motorized Infantry Division of General von Werkstein, the 7th Division and the 900th Training Brigade of Colonel Krause were routed during the occupation of Klin."

Lake Ladoga Situation

[Reports reaching London from Stockholm said the Russians were exerting great pressure also on the Lake Ladoga front and threatening the Germans along the Neva River east of Leningrad. If this advance continues as appears probable, it was said, better communications between Moscow and the besieged northern city will have been restored.]

[Typhus was reported in Bern, Switzerland, to have been added to such German handicaps as sub-zero cold and supply difficulties. The Kaunas correspondent of the Stockholm newspaper Aftonbladet said some German troops were infected by an epidemic which had spread eastward from the Ostmark area of Poland.]

Red army blows upon the central front were pictured by the Soviet Information Bureau as part of a vast counter-offensive overrunning scores of German positions, bleeding an invasion force already declared to have suffered 6,000,000 casualties.

Battle in Kalinin Zone

The Germans were said to have lost 8,000 officers and soldiers killed and wounded in a seven-day fight in the Kalinin zone, 95 miles northwest of Moscow, and vast quantities of war equipment.

In the area of another town, identified only as "CH," the 44th German infantry division was smashed with 6,000 men killed or wounded, the Communist Party newspaper Pravda said in a despatch broadcast by the Moscow radio.

The communique credited one air unit with a month's bag of 26 German planes shot down, 54 tanks, more than 100 trucks loaded with arms and ammunition, 36 guns and 10 tank-trucks loaded with fuel destroyed and more than 1,300 officers and men killed.

"In a number of sectors of the western and southwestern fronts our troops engaged the enemy in violent combats and continued their advance," the Information Bureau said.

[The German radio said the Russians had been approached through the Turkish Government at Ankara with a proposal for an exchange of war prisoners, but that Moscow had not replied.

42 Towns Declared Taken.

Klin was officially claimed by the Russians within a few hours after Pravda reported 42 villages and 75 tanks captured from Germans in that area.

In the actions both at Klin and the Tula zone, 100 miles south of Moscow, the immediate Red Army purpose evidently was to clear Russian rail and highway supply lines.

Soviet troops were reported to have occupied Yasnaya Polyana, southwest of Tula, and Dedilova and Bogoroditsk, to the southeast.

"Our troops penetrated the enemy lines and blew up three blockhouses, destroyed three guns, six machine guns and annihilated about 200 German soldiers and officers," the communique said.]

Reds Claim Big Push North From Moscow

London, Dec. 16 (AP)—Reports from both sides of the Russian front tonight pictured a great Red army sweep on spread-out German and Finnish lines, developing with the power and scope of a major offensive from the Moscow front north into Karelia.

The Finns themselves acknowledged in a communique that the Russians have launched a "general offensive" around the southern bend of Lake Onega, 220 miles northeast of Leningrad, notwithstanding heavy blizzards.

It said Soviet forces also had attacked, apparently in lesser strength, in the southern part of the east Karelian front.

Nazis Menaced In North

Stockholm reports said the Red army was exerting great pressure also on the Lake Ladoga front, threatening the Germans along the Neva river east of Leningrad.

DEC 17 1941

A special Russian communique, supporting the picture of Red army blows growing into a full-scale drive, said crippling losses had been inflicted on a routed German force of more than three divisions in the recapture of Klin, an important rail point fifty miles northwest of Moscow.

13,000 Nazis Lost

The communique said the Germans suffered 13,000 men killed and injured from two motorized divisions, an infantry division and a training brigade "routed during the occupation of Klin."

Booty still being counted so far has included, it said: 122 tanks, 18 armored cars, more than 1,000 trucks, 80 guns, 120 mine-throwers, 250 machine guns, 800 automatic rifles, more than 10,000 shells, more than 2,000,000 cartridges and "a large quantity of other materials."

In the capture of the three outposts of Tula, one hundred miles south of Moscow — Yasnaya, Polyana, to the southwest, and Dedilova and Bogoroditsk, to the southeast—a communique said 200 Nazis were killed.

The Germans were said also to have lost 8,000 men killed and wounded in a week's fighting in the Kalinin area and 6,000 men of the smashed Forty-fourth Infantry Division in another embattled area identified only as near "CH."

Finns Reveal Russ Offensive

DEC 17 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Helsinki, Dec. 16—Soviet forces have begun a "general offensive" in the Osta sector around the southern bend of Lake Onega, the Finnish high command announced today.

The battle continues to rage over the ancient fishing and hunting grounds of Vespian Finns, about 200 miles northeast of Leningrad. The Finnish communique said Russians attacked under cover of artillery and trench mortars.

Blizzards Sweep Front

"Battles and counter-measures are now in progress," it added.

North of the Onega area, in the south sectors of the East Karelian front, the Russians also tried attacks, but were repulsed, the communique said.

Heavy blizzards have swept the front in the last few days and reports told of Finnish ski patrols operating behind Russian lines.

Nazi Bombers Attack Murmansk Railway

BERLIN, Dec. 16 (Official Radio) (AP)—The German high command claimed today that German troops had inflicted severe losses "in local operations" on the Russian front and said German dive-bombers had attacked the Murmansk Railway in the north.

Russian supplies being transported over the ice of Lake Ladoga, in the Leningrad area, were also bombed, the communique said.

The German radio said today that Russian troops tried several times yesterday to break out of the besieged Sevastopol area on the Crimean Peninsula. The attempts were said to have led to embittered fighting in which heavy losses were inflicted on the Russians. Soviet coastal batteries which supported the infantry were silenced by German artillery, the radio said.

Italian General Reported Killed.

New York, Dec. 16.—(AP.)—The Rome radio, heard here by NBC, reported tonight that General Hugo de Torelli, commander of the Fascist Torino Division in southern Russia, has been killed.

The report added that General von Kleist, leader of the retreating German forces in that area, has sent a message of condolence to the Italian High Command and voiced confidence of "ultimate victory."

German Radio Changes Tune From Boasts To Talk Of Army Woes

New York, Dec. 16 (AP)—The official Nazi radio spokesman who heretofore has boasted the exploits of "our victorious German army," changed his tune tonight and broadcast a plaintive speech about the "unbelievable difficulties" under which Germans are fighting in Russia.

"All the worries and all the work and all the hopes of the German people are centered on this German soldier . . . whether he is attacking or defending," said Commentator Hans Fritsche in a broadcast heard here by CBS.

"If it should be necessary, everything will be sacrificed for him. None of us forgets for a day or even for an hour the German soldier, who, under unbelievable difficulties, will save the Fatherland from the Bolshevist flood."

RUSSIA'S SHRINES RUINED IN COMBAT

DEC 17 1941

Houses of Chekhov, Tolstoy and Tschaikowsky Gone.

Moscow, Dec. 16 (A. P.).—Three of Russia's most famous cultural shrines—the home of Count Leo Nikolayevich Tolstoy, the cottage where Anton Pavlovich Chekhov lived, and a museum to the memory of Peter Ilich Tschaikovsky, have been laid waste by the German armies, according to a dispatch to the newspaper Pravda broadcast today by the Moscow radio.

In their retreat from Yasnaya Polyana, near Tula, the dispatch said, the Nazis left in ruins the estate of Count Tolstoy, author of "War and Peace" and "Anna Karenina." Count Tolstoy was born there in 1828. His grave—he died in 1910—was said to have been obliterated, and even the famous trees on the estate, which annually was visited by tens of thousands, were destroyed.

Chekhov, whose best-known plays included "Uncle Vanya," "The Cherry Orchard" and "The Three Sisters," was born in 1860 in Taganrog near the Sea of Azov. The cottage the Nazis were said to have destroyed was in Istra, not far from Moscow.

The Tschaikovsky museum was a cottage in which the composer lived north of Moscow, a key city which the Soviet armies reported last night that they had recaptured from the Germans.

Cruiser Sunk, Nazis Claim

Berlin, Dec. 16 (Official Radio Received by AP)—The German high command reported today that a British cruiser had been torpedoed and sunk by a German submarine in the eastern Mediterranean off Alexandria. The ship, which was part of a cruiser formation, "split in two after a terrific explosion and sank in a few minutes," the communique said.

LARRY ALLEN HURT COVERING SEA WAR

DEC 17 1941

Reported Many Clashes as AP Correspondent with British Fleet

By The Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, Dec. 16.—Larry Allen, Associated Press correspondent who has been aboard most of the warships in Britain's Mediterranean fleet and described virtually every one of its major actions since the start of the war, has been injured.

The manner in which the injury occurred has not been ascertained.

[The British have not announced any recent naval engagement in the Mediterranean, but the Germans disclosed today that they had torpedoed and sunk a British cruiser off Alexandria. The Germans said the vessel split in two and sank after a terrific explosion.]

Allen is in a hospital bed in Alexandria suffering from painful but not critical face and body bruises, having been rescued after 45 minutes in the water during which he swallowed much oil.

Allen, 33, is a native of Mount Savage, Md. He went to Egypt in midsummer 1940 when the Mediterranean loomed as an active war sector upon Italy's entrance into the war.

Since then he has ridden aboard Britain's men of war in encounters with the Italian fleet, their numerous sweeps of the Mediterranean, their raids on Axis transports and commerce and their several bombardments of Axis harbors in Africa and on the mainland.

He was a veteran of that seven-hour air bombardment of the aircraft carrier, Illustrious, last January, when sheets of flame swept the warship and an officer said "it seemed like all the fires of hell had been kindled." The bombing sent the Illustrious to an American shipyard for repair, but Allen was uninjured and told of the action in vivid despatches.

One of the few reporters ever actually to be present at a big sea battle, he also was able to give an eyewitness account of the British fleet's foray into the Adriatic a year ago when Valona in Albania was bombarded.

Allen was a correspondent at Barcelona in the Spanish Civil War, and had brief experience at Rome before he was assigned to Alexandria. Prior to that he had had five years' service with The Associated Press in West Virginia and Washington, and ten years of other newspaper experience which had taken him to Mexico, Cuba, Nova Scotia and many other places.

Lawrence Allen Finzel—he dropped the last name and became simply Larry Allen when he began writing—is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Finzel, of Frostburg.

He did his first news writing for the Cumberland Evening Times, reporting Frostburg items while at Beall High School. After graduation in 1925 he worked for a Charleston (W. Va.) newspaper and began service with the Associated Press there in 1933.

Allen's mother died about four years ago. However, he maintains his Allegany county ties through two brothers, Raymond Finzel, of Frostburg, and James Finzel, of Midlothian, and an uncle, Ira Finzel, of Frostburg. Miss Grace Finzel and Prof. Edward Finzel, Beall High School faculty member, are Allen's cousins.

His Story Of Battle Off Libya Sunday

(The following dispatch from Larry Allen, Associated Press correspondent with the British Mediterranean fleet, was received in New York after receipt of information that he had been injured. Apparently he was injured during this trip, after writing this dispatch.)

DEC 17 1941

BY LARRY ALLEN

Aboard a British Cruiser Off Libya, Dec. 14 (Delayed)—Loosing one of the heaviest barrages of the Mediterranean war, a squadron of British cruisers and destroyers beat off a seven-hour combined Nazi high-level, dive-bombing and torpedo assault off the Libyan coast today (Sunday).

Under almost incessant attack, the warships pumped hundreds of shells into the rain-laden clouds, turning the skies as far as I could see into bursts of flame, then big black mushroom puffs.

Bombs Scattered Wide

The Axis aircraft scattered bombs over a line of screening destroyers, spraying huge columns of water over the warships.

The enemy appeared to concert the heaviest attacks against this cruiser. Her heavy guns and pom-poms roared tremendously as the Nazis tried to sink her.

[The Germans announced Tuesday they had sunk a British cruiser off Alexandria, but no confirmation has been forthcoming from the British. Although Allen reported the Germans were beaten off, there were indications they might have returned to the attack later and sunk the cruiser he was on.]

One dive bomber machine-gunned the cruiser's boat deck. Another gave me the biggest thrill since the bombing of the aircraft Illustrious on January 10. Four big bombs came screaming toward the cruiser but they exploded a few yards to starboard.

Stukas Come In Waves

Then they began coming in waves of three to six planes, weaving in and out of the clouds.

Bristling like porcupine quills, the 5.25 and 4-inch guns of the cruisers and destroyers poured shell after shell into the sky.

When the attack started at 10.20 A. M. I watched from the bridge of this cruiser as great, jagged flames spurted from the snouts of the guns. Rusty smoke belched from the barrels, then the shells burst high in the sky with little yellow flashes all around the Germans.

That broke the formation, but a single plane droned into a dive and dropped two heavy bombs between two destroyers, giving their decks a bath but causing no damage.

Never A Dull Moment

From then until nightfall there was never a dull moment. The skies were full of diving, twisting Nazi craft.

Three torpedo bombers suddenly swept low over the destroyers at 12.50 P. M., dropped their projectiles and veered off under heavy fire. None of the torpedoes found their mark.

With bomb anti-flash gear pulled over my head and face and hands topped off by a tin helmet, I saw the planes—sometimes ten and twelve distant—hover about the warships, awaiting a chance to sweep in. Every time they got within range the squadron let go with everything it had.

More bombs came our way at 2.30 P. M. Cruisers and destroyers gave the single attacking plane a reception of exploding metal.

This German dropped several bombs near a destroyer and hurried off in a cloud of smoke. He began losing altitude, but disappeared in the distance before I could determine whether he could be counted definitely as a bag.

Sees Plane Approach

Through long-range glasses I saw another plane approaching this cruiser. Swiftly the plane roared head-on into the fire of four-inch guns and pom-poms, flinging hundreds of shells at him.

Then another single plane neared the squadron at 3.15 P. M. but turned away under the withering fire.

Destroyers, detecting a submarine, dropped depth charges while our cruiser and other warships made emergency turns to avoid any torpedoes.

Suddenly, at 4.20 P. M. a bomber whined into a steep dive directly in the fire from the destroyers. The pilot unloaded his bomb racks, but his "eggs" burst harmlessly in the sea.

By now every warship in the squadron was sending up a veritable hell of fire. The Nazi wobbled and veered off to the west.

The squadron, continuing its course, had a new alarm three hours after nightfall.

TANK FORCES CRACK ENEMY BELOW GAZALA

DEC 17 1941

Another Armored Column Strikes Foe's Reserves In Flank Maneuver

RAF Pilots Beat Off German Dive Bombers And Fighter Planes

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Dec. 16—The main body of the British imperial Eighth Army in Libya was reported officially tonight to have smashed the center of four stubborn German and Italian divisions concentrated fifteen miles southwest of Gazala. Another armored column struck at Axis reserves fifteen miles beyond in a successful outflanking maneuver.

There were three main battle areas. The key battle, the British said, was developing in the Alem Hamza area, fifteen miles southwest of Gazala, where the plateau begins to break as it dips to the sea.

Four Divisions Cracked

There Gen. Erwin Rommel, Axis commander, hurled all his remaining German tank strength and a "maximum available force of dive-bombers" into a desperate—and unsuccessful—attempt to stem the march of the British and Indian troops, the communique said.

Despite two determined Axis counter-thrusts, the British said their tank units cracked the better parts of one German and three Italian divisions while RAF pilots beat off German dive-bombers and fighter planes.

At the same time the British made a wide flanking movement which carried them to Halegh el Olebam, thirty miles west of Gazala, in a second major engagement.

Axis Supplies Destroyed

This was the onslaught against Axis reserves, and one of the first British successes was to destroy 300 tons of Axis ammunition at the enemy base 150 miles inside Libya.

The third battle area was Gazala itself where strong enemy forces still were entrenched along a narrow coastal strip between the sea and the escarpment, controlling the coastal road to Derna. The British continued to close in on this big nest of Axis troops by capturing numerous guns and 1,1000 prisoners.

[In London Lieut. Col. L. C. M. S. Amery, Secretary for India, declared the Libyan campaign "now seems definitely turning toward a great desive victory."]

In some quarters this out-flanking move was seen as an effort to sieze the major Axis airdromes in western Libya before the Nazis can bring in large-scale air reinforcements. Along these lines, there was conjecture that General Rommell might be throwing all his available tanks into the main battle in a gamble on slowing the British advance until air and seaborne help arrives.

Drive Far To West Reported

Official circles in London could not confirm a Vichy radio report that one British contingent, driving westward along the Gulf of Sirte into extreme western Libya, had reached the town of Sirte, 277 miles from the major Axis base of Tripoli.

London sources saw German reports of submarine attacks on the British Eastern Mediterranean fleet as a possible signal of an Axis effort to wipe out the sea power which has been sinking ships loaded with troops and supplies bound for North Africa.

BRITISH OUTFLANK ALL AXIS TANKS LEFT IN LIBYA

Smash to Heart of Main Position Despite Fierce Bombing Attacks

DEC 17 1941

By The Associated Press

Cairo, Dec. 16.—British armored forces have outflanked and brought to battle all remaining German tank forces in Libya and smashed to the heart of the main German and Italian position despite terrific bomber attacks, the British high command announced today.

The communique said a British column carried out a wide outflanking movement which swept 30 miles past Gazala to a point 150 miles deep in Libyan territory, where it attacked the Axis reserves and rear.

Back of this area, main British and Axis forces were joined in a battle that may decide the fate of the British North African campaign.

Decisive Victory Seen

[Lieutenant Colonel L. C. M. S. Avery, British Secretary for India, declared in London that the Libyan campaign "now seems definitely turning toward a great decisive victory."

[A London military commentator said the outflanking movement threatened to cut off Rommel's army entirely, but that the coastal road northwest from the Gazala area to Tmimi and Derna was still in Axis hands. The commentator said Rommel probably would attempt to withdraw very rapidly toward the road, which the British were theatening.]

British forces continuing their advance southwest of Gazala despite "resolute opposition and repeated counter-attacks" by German and Italian infantry yesterday reached Alem Hazma, some 15 miles southwest of Gazala, the communique related.

Defenses Attacked

There they attacked "a defensive position held by strong elements of one German and three Italian divisions supported by all the remaining German tank strength," it continued.

"After heavy fighting, during which the center of the enemy position was penetrated in spite of two determined counter-attacks by German motorized infantry and tanks, progress was made.

"The enemy supported their counterattacks with their maximum available force of dive bombers and with other forms of air attack, but our airforces effectively countered these activities."

The force which carried out the wide outflanking movement, it was stated, had reached Halegh el Olebam, some 30 miles west of Gazala, by yesterday evening. From there, the communique said, they were "continuing their thrust" against the Axis reserves and rear.

Inflict Many Casualties

DEC 17 1941

Besides inflicting many casualties yesterday the British destroyed 300 tons of Axis ammunition, the communique said. In the Gazala area itself British units were said to have made "satisfactory progress" against strong Axis forces entrenched near the coast.

New Zealand troops at Gazala were credited with capture of a number of 75 mm. guns, many heavy machine-guns and 1,100 prisoners. Polish troops striking west of Gazala took 200 additional prisoners, the communique said.

German and Italian detachments isolated at Bardia and Halfaya in the Egyptian frontier area were attacked by South African troops, who took one Axis strongpoint, the communique concluded.

Report General Taken.

Berlin, Dec. 16 (Official Radio Received by A. P.).—The German High Command said today that German forces in Africa were fighting heavy defensive battles west of Tobruk.

Italian and German troops "smashed strong sections of the enemy," took several hundred prisoners including a brigadier, and captured or destroyed a large number of tanks and guns, the communique claimed. It also asserted that German bombers set fire to Tobruk quays and attacked the railway center of Abu Schaidan in northern Egypt.

General Ritchie Promoted

London, Dec. 16 (AP)—The promotion of Maj. Gen. Neil Ritchie, newly appointed commander of Britain's Eighth Army in Libya, to the acting rank of lieutenant general was announced in the London Gazette tonight.

Libyan Victory Near, British Official Says

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 16—Lieut. Col. L. C. M. S. Amery, Secretary for India, said today that the Libyan campaign "now seems definitely turning toward a great decisive victory."

He spoke at a luncheon of the Overseas League.

Amery, discussing the Far East, said that "so long as we hold Singapore no really formidable attack can develop against countries lying within the Indian Ocean and sooner or later we can begin that further advance which will end only when Japan sues for peace."

Critical Battle Foreseen

He said the Royal Indian Navy was confronted with the prospect of a battle no less critical than the Battle of the Atlantic.

The main British and Axis forces in Libya have established contact on the desert battle front southwest of Gazala, but there is as yet "no decisive result" in the fighting, British sources reported today.

RAF Bombs Ports In Italy, Sicily And Libya

DEC 17 1941

Rome, Dec. 16 (Official Radio Received by the Associated Press)—The Italian high command today acknowledged RAF raids against the ports of Taranto, Italy; Bengasi, Libya; Augusta, Sicily, and areas around Brindisi, on the lower Adriatic.

Stiff Fighting Reported

The daily war bulletin said bitter fighting continued on the North African desert on the Gazala front and claimed the capture of a British commander.

The communique said that Italian motorized and armored divisions, supported by large German units, were fighting tenaciously and inflicting heavy losses.

British attacks on the Bardia garrison near the Egyptian border were declared repulsed.

The communique said German fliers shot down six British planes and three more were said to have been downed over Taranto. The Italians admitted the loss of two planes.

Rommel Visits British Station, Spurns Doctors

Wellington, N. Z., Dec. 16—(AP)—The story of how General Erwin Rommel, the Nazi North African commander, visited a British dressing station, then German-held, but ignored British surgeons working in it, reached the official archives today in a report from Major General B. C. Freyberg, New Zealand commander in the Middle East.

The story, first told early in December when the North African battle scene was confused and swiftly changing, was this:

New Zealanders were operating a dressing station near Gambut when the Germans captured it. The surgeons continued with their work and when Rommel visited it he did not speak a word to them. Later it was recaptured and the British found it occupied by German and British wounded on whom doctors of both sides were working.

NO A. E. F. FOR EGYPT NOW

Officer Declares War Shipments to Middle East won't be Slowed

Cairo, Dec. 16—(AP)—The United States entry into the war will not slow up the flow of American war supplies into the Middle East battle area, Brigadier General Russell Maxwell, chief of the U. S. mission here, said today.

He declared that schedules were planned well in advance and will be adhered to, and that they called for increases in coming months. While considerable U. S. Army personnel will come here in connection with the mission's establishment of big supply and assembly bases, Genera Maxwell said present plans do no call for sending combat troops here

BRITISH AND NAZIS SEND RAIDERS OVER

R. A. F. Bombing Is Heavier Than German.

London, Dec. 16 (A. P.).—The Germans attacked the Kent coast with airplanes and long-range guns tonight and R. A. F. bombers streamed over the Channel for widespread bombing.

The German raid on a Kent town lasted only about ten minutes and neither casualties nor extensive damage were reported. The Nazi cross-channel guns opened up afterwards with several salvoes.

Spacing of German anti-aircraft fire along the horizon indicated the British attacks extended over a considerable area.

British bombers attacked docks at Ostend and Brest last night and laid mines in German waters, the Air Ministry announced today. One bomber was missing from the operations, it added, and one fighter was missing from an attack on an airdrome across the channel from England.

On the other hand, slight enemy activity was reported over one or two coastal areas of this country early last night.

British Announce November Toll

London, Dec. 16 (AP)—The Ministry of Home Security announced today that eighty-nine civilians were killed, missing or believed killed in air raids on the United Kingdom during November. One hundred and fifty-five were injured.

Britain's War Costs So Far Placed at $33,200,000,000

Commons Unhesitatingly Votes $4,000,000,000 Additional Credit

DEC 17 1941

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 16.—Sir Kingsley Wood, Chancellor of the Exchequer, told the House of Commons today that Britain has spent £8,300,000,000 ($33,200,000,000) to fight the war so far.

At the same time Common unhesitatingly voted Britain's fourth £1,000,000,000 ($4,000,000,000) war credit for the current fiscal year. No questions were asked.

In requesting this new loan Sir Kingsley disclosed that only £225,000,000 ($900,000,000) was left of the £3,000,000,000 ($12,000,000,000) voted since March 31, and that Britain is spending at the rate of £12,000,000 ($48,000,000) a day.

Saying that expenditure was likely to be £200,000,000 above the estimates for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1942, Wood hinted that the costs of the war in the Far East might result in the need of new borrowing.

The new credit voted by Commons made a total of £4,000,000,000 ($16,000,000,000) for the fiscal year.

Wood disclosed that the government would issue "a new special security which can be taken up for such amounts and at such times as taxpayers find most convenient."

The securities will be issued in denominations of £25 (approximately $100, and multiples thereof, and may be tendered in payment of certain taxes.

The new credit disclosed that Britain recently has been spending at the rate of about £83,000,000 a week ($332,000,000).

Sir Kingsley indicated that the total of £4,000,000,000 in credits for the current year would include approximately £300,000,000 to be spent in the United States before March 31 for supplies not covered by the lease-lend program.

FRENCH SEA LOSSES LAID TO U-BOATS

Britain Charges Germans Seek to Put Blame on English

By The Associated Press

London, Dec. 16.—Great Britain

charged today that German submarines were sinking French and Spanish merchant ships indiscriminately and throwing the blame on Britain to stir up new trouble and gain "relief from the serious military situation" in Russia and Libya."

A British Admiralty statement denied a Vichy communique charging that a submarine "presumably British" had sunk the French merchantman, St. Denis, and said that for the past eight weeks German submarines had been operating in the western Mediterranean where the attack occurred.

The communique said German U-boats not only had sunk the St. Denis, but also had attacked the French naval oiler, Tarn, and had sunk the Spanish steamers, Castillo Oropesa and Badalona.

It said U-boats in the same Spanish territorial waters had sunk the British steamer Grelhead, and the Norwegian steamer, Fjord.

The French Admiralty's conclusion that a British submarine had sunk the St. Denis was "wholly unwarranted by the facts," the statement said.

"The Admiralty can state as a fact that on the date mentioned no British submarine was either operating in or passing through the area reported as the scene of the incident," the communique said.

"Moreover, some eight weeks ago German U-boats began to enter the Mediterranean and since then our patrols have frequently sighted and attacked U-boats in the Straits of Gibraltar and in the western end of the Mediterranean.

"The arrival of the U-boats was followed at once by violations of Spanish territorial waters by the enemy and heralded an end to all security for French and Spanish seamen."

Spanish Ship Seized Under Neutrality Act

New YPork, Dec. 16 (AP)—Federal agents tonight seized the Spanish freighter Isla de Tenerife, whose master and radio operator were arrested less than twenty-four hours earlier on charges of conspiring to violate a provision of the Neutrality Act against shipment of certain merchandise abroad without an export license.

Coast Guardsmen and customs officers, acting under authority of the Secretary of the Treasury, boarded the ship off Staten Island shortly before 6 P. M. (EST). The Treasury Department said the seizure was accomplished under provisions of the "Trading With the Enemy Act," invoked for the first time since the war began.

Silk And Oil Aboard

The ship had been moored at a Federal anchorage pending investigation of its cargo which authorities yesterday asserted contained quantities of radio parts, airplane silk and lubricating oil.

The ship's crew was detained aboard and will be taken off under Federal direction sometime tomorrow.

The Isla de Tenerife is operated by the Trans-Mediterranean Line and was first boarded Saturday when she was about to sail for an undisclosed Spanish port.

Radio Parts Found

Inspectors in their ship's stores (items of provision for a holiday passage) were $30,000 worth of silk and more than one hundred fifty-gallon drums of oil, together with a quantity of radio part and armored electrical copper wire, Federal agents said.

Capt. Jose Albert and the radio operator, Edouardo Ferrando, as well as the line's agents, Marcelino Garcia and Manual Diaz, and Jose Mayorga, a shipping broker, all were arrested.

The order coincided with disclosure in New York that the Spanish steamer Isla de Tenerife, her master, wireless operator and three other men had been detained by United States authorities after discovery that her cargo included radio supplies, lubricating oil and $36,000 worth of silk, all illegal for export.

The arrests were made yesterday at about the time of the Madrid announcement of postponement of the sailings. The Cuban Government, meanwhile, announced a prohibition on sending money to Spain, but there was no indication that any one of the three incidents was connected with the others.

The captain of the Isla de Tenerife, Jose Albert, and the wireless operator, Edouardo Ferrando, were held in $10,000 bail each on a charge of conspiracy to violate the Neutrality Act provision against shipment of certain merchandise aboard without a Treasury Department export license. The three other men arrested — Marceline Garcia, and Manuel Diaz, ship's agents, and Jose Mayorga, shipping broker — were held in $1,500 bail each.

Voyage Postponed, Spanish Liner May Sail Later for U. S.

Government Desired to Avoid Wartime Risk, One Source Asserts

By the Associated Press.

MADRID, Dec. 16.—Official sources said today the Spanish liner Marques de Comillas, whose scheduled voyage to New York has been postponed by official order, may sail later.

There was no immediate official explanation for delaying the vessel's departure and the postponement was not reported in Spanish newspapers.

One authoritative version, however, was that the government feared the risks involved in sending merchant vessels across the Atlantic in wartime and that it planned to investigate before sending ships into a belligerent port.

The Spanish Trans-Atlantic Co. announced yesterday that all sailings of Spanish merchantmen for the Americas had been suspended on government order.

TO CLOSE IN FRANCE

Factories Ordered to Halt From Dec. 21 to Jan. 4.

Vichy, Dec. 16 (A. P.).—All except the smallest French factories are to shut down from December 21 until January 4 because of a shortage of coal and raw materials a French announcement said today.

By order of the French Government the owners will be permitted to use their workers for several days on repair work. After that, they must pay the men for their enforced idleness.

Factories working on several orders for Germany were affected equally with the others, the Government's announcement said.

New York, Dec. 16 — Six persons, presumably Germans, were killed today when a bomb exploded in the Gestapo headquarters of a Paris suburb, the BBC said in a broadcast heard by NBC and CBS.

Exiled Government Declares War on all Foes of U. S.-Britain

London, Dec. 16—(AP)—A declaration that the Czechoslovak Republic is in a state of war "with all countries which are at war with Britain, Russia and the United States" was adopted unanimously today at an extraordinary cabinet meeting of the Czechoslovak Government in exile.

Thousands Reported Starving In Greece

Urgent Appeal To Mission Unit For Grain To Relieve Suffering Is Made

Boston, Dec. 16 (AP)—A report from a former Greek official that starvation was causing 5,000 deaths weekly in Athens and Piræus, coupled with an appeal that grain be sent to that Axis-occupied country, has been turned over to the Red Cross, the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions announced today.

The Congregational Church mission board announced receipt of a cable from its representative in Istanbul relaying an urgent plea from former Minister Navromikalis of Greece that grain be shipped to his country.

Mission board officials said the censored cable indicated that Navromikalis had left Athens December 2 and that he hoped the International Red Cross might take the initiative in bringing relief to Greece.

Free Norway Calls All Over 16

LONDON, Dec. 16 (AP).—The Norwegian government-in-exile issued regulations today making all Norwegian citizens over the age of sixteen and outside Norway liable to either military or civilian servce.

Argentina Decrees Siege Of 'Preventive Character'

Buenos Aires, Dec. 16 (AP)—The Argentine Cabinet today declared a state of siege "of a preventive character" for the purpose of carrying out "international promises contracted by the republic in recent Pan American conferences."

In the face of newspaper opposition which urged milder measures to solve the problem, the Ministers unanimously decreed the suspension of certain guarantees to avoi dany public disorder.

Minister of the Interior Culaciati was directed to instruct the police on means of carrying out the decree which was specifically aimed at "tendentious propaganda" and subversive public meetings.

Women's Meeting Banned

The police, acting immediately, banned a scheduled meeting of the women's committee of the pro-Democratic organization, Accion Argentina, which had been planned to demonstrate the solidarity of Argentine women with the American nation's at war.

It was recalled that the Government banned a meeting of that organization November 30 on the ground that it infringed upon the Government's foreign policy.

Press, Radio Affected.

The Interior Minister said he planned to inform newspapers and radio stations as to what comment they would be permitted to make concerning the war and its relation to internal policy.

Asked whether the decree would effect the scheduled pro-democratic meeting honoring President Roosevelt on December 20, Culaciati said that all such cases would have to be considered individually.

Another cabinet meeting was scheduled for next week.

Only yesterday Acting President Ramon Castillo said Argentina intended to stamp out Axis propaganda as part of her recognition of the United States as a non-belligerent.

Guarantees Suspended

The decree suspends all constitutional guarantees, giving Acting President Castillo the right to set aside habeas corpus, freedom of the press and of assembly and the inviolability of domicile and private papers and correspondence.

Political circles speculated as to the effect the decree would have on the pro-Nazi newspaper Pampero, and the German news Agency Trans-ocean.

A question also was raised as to whether the new policy fore-shadowed action toward the expulsion of the German Ambassador, Baron Edmund Von Thermann, a matter which has been pending nearly three months since it was virtual demanded by the Chamber of Deputies.

In view of the involvement of the Western Hemisphere in war, informed sources also said that Argentina was revising her plans for defense of southern coastal areas.

This undertaking, it was said, would necessitate the sending of soldiers and marines to the Patagonia region and the establishment of a naval patrol as far as Cape Horn.

The government recently announced willingness to consider a Chilean proposal for the joint fortification of the Strait of Magellan.

U. S. TROOP TRANSIT IN MEXICO SOUGHT

Avila Camacho Asks Approval Of Bill To Permit Passage Through Territory

Argentine Cabinet Declares State Of Siege 'Of Preventive Character'

[By the Associated Press]

Mexico City, Dec. 16—President Manuel Avila Camacho tonight asked Congressional approval of measures permitting the passage of foreign troops through Mexican territory and the stationing of foreign ships and naval planes in Mexican waters and ports.

The bill also provides that such ships and planes be permitted to take on supplies, fuel and repair parts in Mexican ports.

To Cooperate With U. S.

An official announcement said the President put forth these measures to fulfill his promise to cooperate in every possible way with the United States.

The United States already has granted Mexico permission to move troops across United States territory en route to the Mexican defenses of Lower California.

Avila Camacho's measures provide for movement of military forces, ships and planes of other American nations. They are for the duration of the war.

"Republics of Hemisphere"

Specifically, the requested authorization is "to permit, in cases of obvious urgency, the passage through national territory of military forces of other republics ofthe hemisphere."

Regarding ships and naval planes, the bill says:

"Ships and war hydroplanes and vessels with sea charters, of any classification whatsoever, belonging to any of the American republics will be permitted to enter and anchor freely in Mexican waters andports. This after the Government to which such vessels and planes belong has advised the Mexican Foreign Relations Department."

They would be permitted to take on fuel, food, repair parts and equipment.

Without waiting for the meeting of American foreign ministers in Rio de Janeiro next month, Mexico feels she should take practical steps to show the "spirit of close solidarity that guides the international relations of the American continent," the announcement said.

ITALIAN AIR LINE IS CURBED

Plane Leaves Buenos Aires For Europe—Trip Is Believed Last

Buenos Aires, Dec. 16 (AP)—A plane of the Italian air line Lati left for Europe, by way of Brazil, today in a flight believed to be the last for that line because of its inability to get further gasoline or oil in either Argentina or Brazil.

Sindicato Condor, Brazilian affiliate of the German Lufthansa Line, already has announced abandonment of service because it had been denied fuel.

El Salvador Takes Steps

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador, Dec. 16 (AP)—The government today ordered all maritime and airport officials to provide emergency fuel and facilities for Allied ships and planes.

MESSAGES TO MEXICO STOP

U. S. Customs Forbids Communication by Letter or Telegram

NOGALES, Ariz., Dec. 16 (AP)—Communication across the Mexican border by letter or telegram was prohibited today by Herbert Chatham, assistant United States collector of customs.

Chatham said the order was to enforce the law against trading with the enemy. Many Japanese inhabit the west coast of Mexico.

Distribution of American newspapers in Mexico by delivery boys was banned. Newspapers and magazines were taken from pedestrians crossing the international border.

Telephone communication between Nogales, Ariz., and Nogales, Sonora, was uninterrupted.

Chatham said he had been advised that the restriction on communications applied to the entire United States-Mexico border. He added that he expected modification of the order to permit legitimate business transactions between border cities.

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica, Dec. 16 (AP)—The Costa Rican Foreign Office today invited representatives of the Central-American Foreign Offices to meet at Guatemala City Dec. 20 in advance of the Rio de Janeiro conference of all the American republics.

The Central-American session would seek to work out a unified program for the nations of this region to facilitate the work at Rio de Janeiro.

AMERICAN REPUBLICS DRAFT PARLEY AGENDA

Costa Rica Calls Neighbors to a Preliminary Conference

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16 (AP)—Diplomats drafting a program for the meeting of American Foreign Ministers next month in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, predicted today the session would center attention on hemisphere defense and economic cooperation among the twenty-one republics.

The agenda committee ended its first meeting at the Pan American Union Building today. Their draft will be submitted for approval to the board of governors of the Pan American Union tomorrow, when the date and other final arrangements for the meeting will be made.

The Pan American Union, in a handbook published for the conference, listed these likely topics under the general heading of hemisphere defense:

Opposition to foreign intervention.

Defense against aggression.

Examination of machinery for transfer of European colonies and possessions in the Western Hemisphere.

Cooperation of police and judicial authorities of the republics for defense against unlawful activities affecting the institutions of the various States and defense against activities from abroad tending to "subvert domestic institutions, foment disorder in their political life, or modify the right of peoples to be governed by their existing domestic systems."

Protection of the democratic ideal.

Unified policy on handling of passports.

Prevention of political and propaganda activities by foreign diplomatic and consular agents.

United States

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16 (AP)—The Navy's 5:30 P. M. communiqué follows:

Two islands in the Hawaiian area have been shelled by Japanese war vessels within the last twenty-four hours. The naval outpost of Johnston Island figured for the first time in Pacific action. It was bombarded by ships of the enemy at dusk.

On the northeastern coast of the island of Maui the shipping center of Kahului was shelled by an enemy submarine at about the same time. Damage in both instances is believed to be slight. Naval operations are continuing against the enemy.

Wake Island has sustained two additional bombing attacks. The first occurred in the afternoon, the second in the evening. The first attack was light, the second heavy. Wake and Midway are countering the blows of the enemy.

The War Department this morning issued the following:

1. Philippine Theatre—Enemy air activity was of a minor character. Four Japanese fighting planes were shot down. American Army bombers renewed attacks on Japanese vessels off Legaspi, seriously damaging one enemy transport. No ground operations reported.

2. No change in the situation reported from other areas.

The Army communiqué covering operations up to 5 P. M. follows:

1. Philippine Theatre—The commanding general, Far East Command, reports that there was a marked lessening of enemy activity. There were no Japanese air attacks of any consequence and ground operations were of only a local character.

2. Hawaii—Reports that a disabled enemy airplane and a Japanese pilot were found on Niihau, a small island in the western portion of the Hawaiian group, are being investigated.

3. There is nothing to report from other areas.

MANILA, Dec. 16 (AP)—The Manila Army Headquarters' morning communiqué, issued at 11 o'clock today said:

There has been no major activity on any land fronts.

The afternoon Manila communiqué said:

No change in the situation on the ground.

DEC 17 1941 British

CAIRO, Egypt, Dec. 16 (AP)—The British General Headquarters communiqué follows:

General area southwest and west of El Gazala—Our troops yesterday continued their steady advance in the face of resolute opposition and repeated counter-attacks by German and Italian infantry, tanks and air forces.

About Alem Hamya, some fifteen miles southwest of El Gazala, British and Indian troops attacked a defensive position held by strong elements of one German and three Italian divisions, supported by all the remaining German tank strength.

After heavy fighting, during which the center of the enemy position was penetrated in spite of two determined counter-attacks by German motorized infantry and tanks, progress was made. The enemy supported their counter-attacks with their maximum available force of dive bombers and with other forms of air attack, but our air forces effectively countered these activities.

Further southwest and west, our armored forces simultaneously carried out a wide out-flanking movement. By yesterday evening they had reached Halegh el-Eleba, some thirty miles west of El Gazala, from which area they were continuing their thrust against enemy reserves and the rear.

During the day our armored forces not only inflicted many casualties on the enemy but they also destroyed 300 tons of enemy ammunition.

In the El Gazala area itself operations continued against strong forces of the enemy entrenched between the sea and the escarpment. Here also satisfactory progress at little cost to ourselves was made in the face of resistance.

Up to yesterday New Zealand troops engaged in this operation had captured a number of 75 mm. Breda guns, many heavy machine guns and ammunition and a total of 1,100 prisoners. They also shot down two enemy aircraft.

Meanwhile an enemy strong point southwest of El Gazala was attacked and captured by Polish troops. Some 200 additional prisoners were taken in this area.

In the frontier area South African troops continued offensive operations against German and Italian detachments now isolated at Bardia and Halfaya. During the day one more enemy strong point was captured in the latter area.

During yesterday's heavy fighting our air forces operating over the whole of the forward area rendered invaluable assistance in limiting the degree of the enemy air interference with our ground troops. Enemy motor transport columns on roads about Tmimi and Derna also were heavily attacked with good results. Further west our air forces destroyed and damaged many lorries in columns carrying troops.

The R. A. F. Middle East Command in Cairo issued this communiqué today:

Dust storms seriously curtailed air activity over the Libyan battle area yesterday. Our fighter aircraft, however, were active over the El Gazala, Tmimi and Gadd el-Ahmar zones and machine-gunning attacks were made on motor transport on the Ghemines el-Ghila road.

Sunday night bomber aircraft of the R. A. F. successfully attacked harbor installations at Bengazi. Direct hits were obtained on wharves and buildings near the quayside.

All our aircraft returned safely.

LONDON, Dec. 16 (AP)—An Air Ministry communiqué early today said:

Last night aircraft of the Bomber Command attacked docks at Ostend and at Brest and laid mines in enemy waters.

Fighter Command aircraft on offensive patrol attacked an enemy airdrome in occupied territory.

DEC 17 1941

From these operations one aircraft of the Bomber Command and one of the Fighter Command are missing.

The Air Ministry later issued this communiqué:

An enemy flak [anti-aircraft] ship was hit by a torpedo and probably sunk during an attack on shipping off the Dutch Coast this afternoon by aircraft of the Coastal Command escorted by fighters. None of our aircraft is missing.

The Ministries of Air and Home Security issued this communiqué today:

There was a little enemy activity over one or two coastal areas early last night.

Bombs dropped at two places in Southwest England caused slight damage and injured a small number of people.

The British Admiralty issued the following communiqué:

The French Admiralty have issued a communiqué that on Dec. 9 the S. S. St. Denis, carrying foodstuffs for France and flying the French flag, was torpedoed in the vicinity of the Balearic Islands. The communiqué goes on to say that the submarine surfaced, challenged the St. Denis, and asked for her papers then torpedoed her while she was stopped and preparing to comply with the order.

The French Admiralty finally make the wholly unwarranted assumption that the submarine was British and conclude by threatening to take measures to put an end to such outrages.

The Admiralty can state as a fact that on the date mentioned no British submarine was either operating in or passing through the area reported as the scene of the incident.

Moreover, some eight weeks ago German U-boats began to enter the Mediterranean and since then our patrols have frequently sighted and attacked U-boats in the Strait of Gibraltar and in the western end of the Mediterranean.

The arrival of the German U-boats was followed at once by violations of Spanish territorial waters by the enemy and heralded an end to all security for French and Spanish seamen.

It was perhaps hardly a matter of surprise that the British S. S. Grelhead and the Norwegian S. S. Fjord should be torpedoed without warning inside Spanish territorial waters, or that during the same period two British ships, the S. S. Sarastone and the Baron Newlands should have been attacked by a Focke-Wulf [German airplane] within Spanish territorial waters as they were leaving the Spanish port of Huelva, but the Germans do not hesitate to attack indiscriminately all shipping in accordance with their usual practice.

First the French naval oiler, Tarn, was attacked by a U-boat off Algiers by night, then the Spanish S. S. Castillo Oropesa was sunk off Melilla within Spanish territorial waters.

Next the S. S. St. Denis has been torpedoed by a U-boat south of the Balearics and finally, only yesterday, the Spanish S. S. Badalona was sunk at night by a U-boat east of Malaga. In none of these cases was any British submarine anywhere near the areas where these sinkings were reported to have occurred.

The French Admiralty, nevertheless, draw the conclusion, wholly unwarranted by the facts, that it was a British submarine that torpedoed the S. S. St. Denis, although the calculated brutality with which it was carried out stamps the attack as the work of a German U-boat.

There can be no doubt that the Germans are seeking deliberately to create trouble between the British and French navies and between Britain and Spain in order to obtain relief from the serious military situation in which they are beginning to find themselves in Russia and Libya.

The French Admiralty are, of course, very well aware that while German warfare at sea, both in this war and in the war of 1914, has been wholly indiscriminate, it is not the practice of the Royal Navy to sink merchant vessels without warning in areas not previously declared dangerous to shipping.

SINGAPORE, Dec. 16 (Reuter)—Tonight's communiqué follows:

There is little further news from South Kedah, where the situation is still confused, but fighting is believed to be taking place in the vicinity of Muda.

On the Kelantan front our troops remain in contact with the enemy, who has made no further attempts to advance.

No enemy air activity has been reported. The R. A. F. has made routine reconnaissance throughout the day.

A notable feature of the operations up to date has been the fanatical determination with which the Japanese attempt to press home their attacks. These tactics have caused them heavy casualties.

VALLETTA, Malta, Dec. 16 (Reuter)—A communiqué issued tonight said:

There were six alerts at Malta last night. A small number of enemy aircraft dropped some bombs causing some civilian damage and one serious casualty.

There were two alerts today. A single enemy aircraft crossed. No bombs were dropped.

DEC 17 1941 Russian

MOSCOW, Dec. 16 (From Russian broadcast recorded by The Associated Press)—A Soviet communiqué broadcast today said:

During the night of Dec. 15-16 our troops fought the enemy on all fronts.

Fliers of one unit in one month of operations brought down twenty-six German aircraft in air combats, destroyed fifty-four German tanks, over 100 lorries with arms and ammunition, thirty-six guns and ten tank lorries filled with fuel and killed over 1,300 officers and men.

MOSCOW, Wednesday, Dec. 17 (From Russian broadcast recorded by The Associated Press)—The Soviet Information Bureau today issued the following:

During Dec. 16 our troops fought the enemy on all fronts. On the Western Front our troops occupied several villages.

During Dec. 16 our air force destroyed forty-three German tanks, thirty armored cars, 640 trucks with troops and supplies, four field guns, seven anti-aircraft guns, many wagons with ammunition, two tank cars with fuel and annihilated about a regiment of infantry.

In the western, Kalinin and southwestern sectors of the front our troops engaged in fierce fighting, continued their advance and occupied several populated centers, including the towns of Kalinin, Vysokovsk [west of Klin], Petrovskoye [west of Istra] and Volovo [southeast of Tula].

Sixteen German planes were destroyed Dec. 15. Our losses were four planes.

A special Soviet communiqué today said:

After fierce fighting our troops occupied the town of Kalinin on Dec. 16.

In the fighting for Kalinin our troops inflicted a heavy blow on the Ninth German Army under the command of Col. Gen. Strauss. They routed the 86th, 310th, 129th, 161st, 162d and 251st divisions of this army.

Remnants of divisions of the enemy are withdrawing westward.

In fighting for the town of Kalinin troops of General Maslenikoff and of Major Gen. Fuskievich have distinguished themselves particularly.

Great booty was taken, which is now being counted.

The fleeing army is being pursued and annihilated by our troops.

Netherland

BATAVIA, Netherlands Indies, Dec. 16 (AP)—A military communiqué said today:

No activity took place within Netherland East Indies territory during the last twenty-four hours.

During the night of Dec. 15 a number of unidentified aircraft were observed over Northeast Sumatra.

Our maritime operations are continuing.

DEC 17 1941

BATAVIA, Netherlands Indies, Wednesday, Dec. 17 (U.P.)—The Netherland High Command issued this communiqué covering yesterday:

At 8:25 this morning Macassar had an air alarm. The alarm was given when it was reported the listening posts on the islands off the coast of South Celebes had detected unidentified aircraft.

Japanese

TOKYO, Dec. 16 (From Japanese broadcast recorded by The Associated Press)—The naval section of Japanese Imperial Headquarters today issued the following:

Japanese forces landed at the port of Apra in Western Guam at dawn of Dec. 10 and, attacking a number of strategic points, took prisoner thirty naval officers and men, including a commander. They also seized a 3,000-ton tanker.

On Dec. 11 Japanese forces occupied Agana, the capital of Guam, and took prisoner 350 Americans, including Captain George J. McMillin, Governor and Commandant of the naval station, the Vice Governor and many officers.

Continuing their attack both from the air and on the ground, the Japanese forces completed the occupation of Guam Dec. 12.

German

BERLIN, Dec. 16 (from German broadcast recorded by The Associated Press)—The German High Command issued the following today:

In local operations on several sectors of the eastern front enemy losses yesterday were again high.

The Luftwaffe bombed targets near Sevastopol and in the area around Voroshilovgrad and intervened in the land fighting with strong bomber and dive-bomber formations.

In the Volkhov area and on the route over the ice of Lake Ladoga enemy supplies were badly hit by the Luftwaffe.

In the far north dive-bombers attacked railway targets. Murmansk railway batteries and Soviet barracks were hit by bombs.

In North Africa heavy defensive battles developed in the area to the west of Tobruk.

In counter-attacks Italian-German troops smashed strong sections of the enemy. In this action several hundred prisoners were taken, including a brigade general, and a large number of tanks and guns also were captured or destroyed.

German bombers set fire to quay installations at Tobruk.

Other attacks were directed against the important railway center of Abu Sehaidan in Northern Egypt.

A U-boat commanded by Lieut. Captain Paulssen attacked a British cruiser formation in the Eastern Mediterranean off Alexandria and sank a cruiser by torpedoes. The ship split in two after a terrific explosion and sank in a few minutes.

In flights by minor British forces into the German Bight and occupied western territory the enemy lost one bomber.

Italian

ROME, Dec. 16 (from Italian broadcast recorded by The Associated Press)—The Italian High Command issued this communiqué today:

On the El Gazala front bitter and prolonged fighting took place yesterday. There were insistent and violent enemy infantry and tank attacks against our positions.

Italian motorized and armored divisions, with the support of large German units, fought with extreme tenacity and inflicted heavy losses on the enemy. Many armored units were set on fire and destroyed. Prisoners were numerous and included a brigade commander.

An enemy air raid on Bengazi caused two casualties and only negligible damage.

Enemy attempts to attack the stronghold of Bardia were repulsed.

The German air force yesterday shot down six enemy planes. Two Italian planes did not return.

Last night the British Air Force bombed Taranto and caused slight damage to several buildings. There were no casualties among the civilian population. Anti-aircraft defenses immediately went into action and shot down three planes.

Bombs dropped on Augusta and in the Province of Brindisi caused no damage.

Italian air formations bombed air and naval bases at Malta.

Finnish

HELSINI, Finland, Dec. 16 (from Finnish broadcast recorded by The Associated Press)—The Finnish High Command issued this communiqué today:

Karelian Isthmus—Both sides, mild harassing fire. Our artillery destroyed several enemy positions and log bunkers and caused the enemy to suspend work on the construction of certain sites.

Svir River Front—In the river mouth sector both sides scattered artillery and trench mortar fire. In the Lotin Anpelto sector lively artillery and trench mortar fire on both sides.

In the Osta sector the enemy launched a general offensive under cover of artillery and trench mortars. Battles and countermeasures are going on.

East Front—South sectors, enemy attempts at an attack were repulsed.

LINER NORMANDIE IS SEIZED BY U. S.

Government Says French Will Get Adequate Compensation For Craft

Taking Over Of Kungsholm In American Port Is Protested By Sweden

DEC 17 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 16—The United States Government today took over the big French luxury liner Normandie.

The State Department announced that the United States maritime commission would take the liner over under existing law and that fair and adequate compensation would be made to the owners.

The action was described in the announcement as similiar to that taken by the United States in the cases of the Swedish vessel Kungsholm, and other vessels of other friendly powers.

Deal Under Way

Disclosure was made that negotiations had been underway with the French Government for purchase of the Normandie and that the French expressed willingness to sell, but conditions for payment attached to the proposal were rendered impracticable by the entry of the United States into war.

The announcement made no mention of the use to which the Normandie would be put.

No mention was made of the status of other French vessels now in American ports.

One Of World's Big Ships

The $60,000,000 Normandie is one of the largest and finest ships afloat. The 83,423-ton lines has been at a Hudson river pier since the beginning of the war.

The crews on all French ships in United States ports were removed by the Coast Guard December 12 for what was described by a State Department official "as a measure of necessary protection to the crews and vessels."

Sweden protested today against the seizure of the Kungsholm, through Minister W. Bostrom. State Department officials made no comment except to confirm that the protest was being considered.

DEC 17 1941

Under Nazi Pressure

In diplomatic quarters, however, it was pointed out that Sweden's isolated position, cut off from the Western democracies and dependent almost entirely on Germany for vital imports, makes the Stockholm Government particularly susceptible to German pressure.

The protest therefore was regarded as a perfunctory gesture necessary to avoid friction with Berlin, rather than an expression of actual Swedish resentment.

Under international law a belligerent has the right to seize neutral property subject to just compensation, the amount of which usually is determined later by agreement or by a mixed commission.

WIDE PRESIDENTIAL POWERS ARE URGED

Hoover Asks Senators To Add To Controls Of Industry And Prices

He Questions Wisdom Of Enforcement Through License Of Business

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 16—Gravely testifying that the United States must "fight a desperate and long war," Herbert Hoover today urged Congress to grant broad and flexible powers over commodities, industry and prices to Franklin D. Roosevelt, the man who defeated him for the Presidency in 1932.

"All our people are united to prosecute the war," the 67-year-old former President told the Senate Banking Committee in one of his rare returns to the Capital.

Was Food Administrator

The only living former President, who served as Food Administrator during the last World War, testified that price controls were not enough because there must also be controls over supplies, production and rationing during a war.

Without mentioning President Roosevelt's name, he said these powers and duties must be entrusted to the President because "no one can see what form of organization is going to be required one year or other years hence as the war moves on. . . . The President should have the widest latitude in organization."

DEC 17 1941

Differs In Two Respects

In two respects, Hoover differed with Administration requests for price controls.

First, he suggested that a single broad control should operate over production, supply and priorities as well as prices. Second, he questioned the wisdom of trying to obtain enforcement through license of all business, a power he tried as Food Administrator.

Otherwise, he agreed with much of the testimony given before Senate and House committees by Leon Henderson, Defense Price Administrator.

Controls "Imperative"

"Price controls," Hoover said, "are absolutely imperative to win the war; to lessen suffering of our people during the war; to take profits out of war; they serve to protect the social and economic system as much as possible from destructive aftermaths of the war. But the problem now becomes much wider than price alone."

Then he presented a fourteen-point program which he later summarized as an effort "to secure supply, to stabilize prices, or secure distribution" through "stimulation, conservation, price (control), priorities, rationing, purchases etc."

In opposing use of licenses for business, Hoover said the declarations of war would assure the cooperation of the public, business and labor, adding that "almost anything can be asked of our people at this time and under this influence."

He said that ninety per cent. of the success of controls during the last war resulted from voluntary agreement and cooperation and the only force now needed "would be upon the small fringe that will not comply."

"We are naturally suspicious of all Governmental interference even in war." Hoover told the Senators. "Yet, on the other hand, ours are the most cooperative people in the world and the most willing to make sacrifice."

Suggests Single Heads

Hoover suggested that a single responsible administrator be named for each group of commodities, with appeals to an independent quasi-judicial board of review.

As for agricultural prices, he said farmers appeared to need "price floors more than price ceilings" because of abundant supplies. He added, however, that "we cannot know what the situation may be a year or five years hence."

Canal Zone Road Fund Authorized

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16. (AP)—The house completed congressional action today on a bill to authorize expenditure of $20,000,000 to help finish the proposed inter-American higway to link this country with the Panama Canal Zone.

Under the terms of the bill, the United States would pay two-thirds of the cost of the highway, the balance being provided by the individual Central American countries thru which it runs.

TREASURY SPENDS TEN BILLIONS

Defense Costs Equal 72 Per Cent of Total

Washington, Dec. 16 (A. P.).—Treasury expenditures this fiscal year passed $10,000,000,000 today with more than half the year yet to go.

The Treasury said that from July through December 13, it spent $10,056,519,075, of which $7,200,650,058 went for defense.

If the spending rate is maintained, as the budget bureau expected, the current fiscal year ending next June 30 will be the most costly in United States history. Spending already is within $2,700,000,000 of all that was spent in a full twelve months last year.

Defense costs, not only accounted for about 72 per cent of all the money that went out, but was slated to take an even larger share under the pressure of actual war conditions. Lately, defense spending was at the rate of $1,500,000,000 a month, and is expected to go to $2,000,000,000 per month soon.

In spite of the recent tax bill, which has not gone fully into effect, revenues lagged with a total of $3,407,662,957, leaving a deficit of $6,648,856,118 in the approximately five and a half months of the fiscal year.

That was the main reason that the Federal debt soared to a new record high of $55,353,198,137.

YARNELL SEES VICTORY

Says Japs Will Be Beaten When U. S. Rules Air.

Seattle, Dec. 16 (A. P.). Rear Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, former commander of the Asiatic fleet, says the United States will win the war of the Pacific through control of the air but it will take time.

"Whichever side has control of the air will be on top," he told interviewers.

He predicted the United States will take over that control in a desperate struggle. It "may take two years or it may take four, but make no mistake about the fact that we will win."

Capetown Clipper Back From Its Initial Flight

Lands in Miami From Africa With 21 Passengers

DEC 17 1941

Miami, Fla., Dec. 16 (AP).—The forty-two ton Capetown Clipper arrived unexpectedly in Miami tonight after making a 17,366-mile initial flight from Miami to Leopoldville in Central Africa and return. The return trip, bringing twenty-one passengers, including two women, and a crew of fourteen under Captain William M. Massland, was made in four days.

The newest Pan American Airways clipper plane, which normally is scheduled to stop at San Juan, Puerto Rico, came directly to Miami because of heavy traffic on regular lines between here and San Juan.

The women aboard were Mrs. John Durland, American-born wife of a Liberian government official, bound for a vacation in New York, and Miss Frances Jolly, Episcopal missionary at Fisherman's Lake, Monrovia.

Self-Styled Baron, 27, Taken As Impersonator

Ernest Frohlich De Meyer Charged With Wearing Army Uniform At Los Angeles

DEC 17 1941

Los Angeles, Dec. 16 (AP)—A self-styled Austrian baron, 27-year-old Ernest Frohlich deMeyer, was charged in a Federal complaint today with wearing United States Army uniform.

Arrested by police who said they confiscated short wave radio equipment and a stack of letters, de Meyer was questioned by FBI agents.

De Meyer, denying any questionable activity, said the letters taken from him were from friends in the naval forces and that he was engaged in the auto fender and painting business. He said he came to the United States in 1937.

Arraigned before the United States commissioner, de Meyer was ordered to appear December 24 for preliminary hearing.

Baroness Released From Ellis Island

Lisette de Kapri, Noted Woman Flyer, Was Rounded Up In Drive On Aliens

New York, Dec. 16 (AP)—The Baroness Lisette de Kapri, sometimes known as Lisette von Papri, widely-known woman flyer, who was taken into custody a week ago by Federal agents in the alien roundup has been released from Ellis Island on instructions from the State Department.

The Baroness is a native of Rumania and a citizen of Switzerland. Two years ago she was received by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt at the White House before starting an 11,000-mile plane tour of this country and Mexico.

Friends said her visitor's visa expired six months ago and that she had been attempting to get it extended under non-quota status. She came to the United States from Cuba, where she served as a secretary at the Italian legation, on her most recent entrance.

Information On Weather Is Curtailed

Map, Long Range Forecasts, Other Data Deemed of Value to Enemy Is Discontinued

Washington, Dec. 16.—(AP.)—The Weather Bureau today discontinued weather news, long-range forecasts, most wind, fog and cloud data, and some rain and other crop information which might be useful to enemies.

F. W. Reichelderfer, chief of the Weather Bureau, said that generally the only weather information to be given out publicly would be limited to temperature extremes expected in a 26-hour period.

However, he said, the bureau will try to warn the public of "serious weather conditions such as cold waves, hurricanes, floods, heavy snows and severe storms."

To Mail Maps.

Newspapers which formerly received weather maps were advised that these would no longer be available, except that the weather map made up in Washington will be mailed one week late to a restricted list of persons having real need of them.

Weather forecasts no longer will give the direction of winds or air pressures, but in fruit-growing areas warnings will be given when strong winds are expected.

Storm lights, formerly displayed for fishing and other small boats will be discontinued, but a system of flags will be used to give as much warning as possible. Warnings of weather which might cause forest fires will be restricted exclusively to agencies responsible for protecting forests. River and flood bulletins will no longer include rainfalls of less than one-tenth of an inch. Week-end forecasts for winter sports will be abolished, but some temperature and snow reports will be available for sports purposes.

Alter Crop Bulletins.

Monthly weather summaries will be issued a week late, and crop bulletins also will be altered.

"All four facilities are now geared to serve the war program to the fullest possible extent," Reichelderfer said, "and we are doubling that advantage to our own forces by withholding it completely from our enemies. In the meantime we will continue to do everything we can to reduce public inconvenience from these restrictions to a minimum and we will resume the full regular service as soon as that can be done without detriment to the national defense."

U. S. ATTORNEYS WARNED BY BIDDLE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 16 (AP)—Attorney-General Biddle today instructed United States attorneys that no arrests or prosecutions for alleged seditious utterances should be instituted hereafter without his specific authorization. The justice department said that during the past week several arrests in various parts of the country had been reported and that in each case it was without authority from the Attorney-General.

First U. S. Liner From Europe Since War Declaration Docks

DEC 17 1941

Developments During Voyage Darken Lights And Silence Radio Of Excalibur, With 191 Aboard

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 16—The American Export liner Excalibur, first American passenger ship to arrive from Europe since the United States entered the war, docked today with 191 passengers after an eleven-day voyage marked by a blackout and the excitement of hearing America's declaration of hostilities.

The news of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor was made known to passengers playing bingo in a salon at 9 P. M. on the day the attack was launched, Capt. S. N. Groves reported. He said most of them took it calmly.

Radio Is Silenced

Captain Groves said he continued the voyage after the United States had become a belligerent, by operating under naval orders previously prepared. The ship was blacked out and its radio was silenced.

Although only fifty-one of the passengers were Americans, they said nearly everyone aboard gathered around radios to hear President Roosevelt's speech to Congress. Afterward they sang "The Star-Spangled Banner" and many persons wept.

Alexander Fisch, 21, traveling on a Swiss passport, declared his intention to adopt American citizenship as soon as possible after he reached the United States, and informed ship's officers that he would enlist in the United States Army.

Heinzerling Returns

Among the other passengers were Lynn Heinzerling, Associated Press staff member formerly assigned to Berlin and later to Lisbon, and the former Princess Christina Bourbon, now Mrs. Antenor Patino, daughter-in-law of Simon Patino, Bolivian tin magnate.

William B. Ziff, publisher of the American magazine, Flying and Popular Aviation, who returned after a two-month visit to England and Ireland undertaken at the request of the British Government, said British authorities believed bombers could win the war.

Tells Of New Bomber

Ziff asserted the British had developed a new bomber capable of flying 400 miles an hour and carrying several tons of a new-type bomb with increased explosive power. The new plane was expected to be in production soon, he added.

He declared the British had dropped any idea of invading the German-held continent, at least for the time being, and were relying for victory on the attainment and maintenance of supremacy in the air.

NEWS BEHIND THE WAR NEWS

Written for The Jersey Journal
By DeWITT MacKENZIE
Foreign Correspondent and Editor

DEC 17 1941

Secretary Knox's report on the Pearl Harbor affair is bad enough news in all conscience, especially as regards the loss of life and the statement that our services weren't on the alert, but the material damage revealed isn't so bone-crushing as most people had anticipated from the rumors which circulated and grew until they reached gargantuan proportions.

The colonel is a direct actionist and has tackled his uncomfortable job after that fashion. His bluntly told story is calculated to remove fears and restore confidence not only at home but among our Allies who also have been living on bugbear rumors for the past week.

KNOX'S DIRECT APPROACH

The manner in which Knox has made his investigation and handled his report reminds me of one day in London some years ago. The colonel, with the London correspondent of his Chicago Daily News, Negley Farson, and I were faced with the necessity of getting across the city in a little open car which wouldn't hold more than two people no matter how much belts were tightened.

The colonel refused a seat, perched himself precariously on the side of the car, with his legs dangling over the side, and thus this distinguished gentleman was carried across one of the world's most conservative cities. That is a mild example of his methods of operation.

Once more the word from Manila is that there has been no change in the position, and that is all to the good, for time fights on our side. Meanwhile we have the assurance that the Pacific fleet is busy and one must assume that almost any hour now our defenders in the Far East will be getting assistance.

By the way, a British general here in New York telephoned me to say that his people were thrilled by the magnificent stand being made by our Marine at Wake and Midway Islands. He paid the boys a grand tribute, and wound up by expressing the earnest hope that they would be able to hang on until relief came.

BAD NEWS FROM BORNEO

There may be bad news for the Allies if there is confirmation of the Japanese claim that they have landed an expeditionary force on the coast of British Borneo. This is a highly strategic position, stuck right in the heart of the Philippine-Singapore-Dutch East Indies area.

Borneo would give the Japs a valuable naval and air base from which they could strike readily in all directions. This move is an indication that they may attack the Dutch East Indies in the rear of Singapore without waiting to try to knock the great British base out.

Another British spot which is in trouble is the big naval base and port of Hongkong. The London newspapers today appear to be preparing the public for the loss of this possession which is one of the particularly bright gems in the imperial crown.

However, it can be said that if Hongkong does fall, its loss will not be fatal to the Allied setup in the Far East. It would be a serious blow, of course, but Hongkong's importance is small as compared with Singapore. The Japanese capture of this historic place would mean this:

1. It would deprive the British of their strongest naval base, next to Singapore, in the South China Sea.
2. It would remove one prong of the Hongkong-Manila pincers which grip the South China Sea.
3. It would deprive the British of a bomber base to reach such places as the Japanese island of Formosa and the Jap-occupied island of Hainan, off the coast of South China.
4. It would give the Japanese an additional air base from which to reach Manila and the rest of the Philippines.

LAST DITCH FIGHT EXPECTED

So while the loss of Hongkong wouldn't be fatal, it would be a matter of grave concern. The British are bound to fight to the last ditch to hold this base, for the prestige alone of the position is very great in the eyes of the world. However, the defenders are on a tough spot.

30.24 + 13587 30.24 — 13587

what with the Japs holding Canton and the coast north of the island.

The Chinese are undertaking a heavy offensive against the Japs in Canton with the idea of relieving the pressure on Hongkong. This might lighten the burden of the British defense until Singapore can send help.

50,000 PLANE GOAL IN SIGHT

Output Expected to Reach That Total in 1942.

Washington, Dec. 16 (Wide World).—Whatever the outcome of the initial phases of America's war with the Axis Powers, the broad plan of Washington's strategy for air warfare has the advantage of a spectacularly accelerated aircraft production.

For two years and eight months before the United States came to grips with the enemy its plane factories were boosting their output.

France wanted planes, beginning in the spring of 1939. When the war began in Europe England wanted planes.

Today, in the words of John H. Jouett, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America, "we have every reason to believe that an annual production rate of 50,000 war planes will be reached some time in 1942.'

It would be folly to be sanguine about the future of American air power in relation to the needs at the war front, basing the prospects entirely on war-plane output.

Other Factors Involved.

Many other factors are involved: getting raw materials, training pilots, navigators, air gunners, radiomen, mechanics and bombardiers, and the intelligence with which the planes are used when they go into service.

But production, as a major problem, ceased being a bugaboo to the army and navy this year. By next year the armed services ought to be able to call up as many airplanes at any moment as they want.

Far more than half of those 50,000 airplanes a year will be combat aircraft. The others will be used for training, liaison and transport work. It would be extraordinary to encounter a rate of loss in battle running anywhere near 25,000 planes a year, at least as air warfare is now being waged.

The bright side of the air rearmament picture includes:

Construction of great new factories in the Middle West for warplane manufacture.

Expansion of older plants on both the Atlantic and the Pacific coasts.

Engine Output Accelerated.

Acceleration of airplane engine manufacture at both seaboard and inland cities. One of the newest engine plants is near Cincinnati. The Ford Motor Company is turning out some of the world's most powerful engines at Dearborn. Both the General Motors Corporation and the Packard Motor Car Company are producing airplane power plants.

Growth in training facilities for pilots, air crews and mechanics. The last objective announced by the War Department for pilots alone was 40,000 a year. That figure unquestionably will be raised. A recent goal was 5,000 navy pilots a year, trained at Corpus Christi, Tex., and Pensacola, Miami and Jacksonville, Fla. That, too, has been boosted to a figure which Secretary Knox has not announced.

Not so rosy-tinted is one aspect of pursuit plane production. The United States, as has been remarked before in these dispatches, still can stand improvement on its liquid-cooled engines with which most standard pursuits are equipped.

Offsetting that are two facts: Production in thos country of a proved liquid-cooled engine of British design, and development of the highest-powered engine of the air-cooled type ever fitted to pursuit planes.

Jap Power an Eyeopener.

In evaluating growing American air power, theer is no room for over-optimism. Germany remains the world's greatest military threat in the air. The war in the Pacific has been an eye-opener to critics of Japanese air power.

Most important of all from a standpoint of strategy, American airmen are faced with the problem(at present, of carrying the war to enemies over two great oceans. Except in case of cacastrophic reversals, the war will have to be continued in theaters far removed from American shores.

Bombers can be flown abroad but planes of lesser flying range must be delivered at the front through submarine and raider-infested waters.

The planes and the men to service and fight in them gradually are becoming available.

Four Big Battleships Sunk Recently by Planes Alone

U. S. Entry Into War Results in New Light Being Thrown on Old Question

By John A. Morsse III

NEW YORK, Dec. 15 (Wide World) — At least four big battleships have been sunk by air attack alone in the few days since the United States suddenly found itself at war.

Question Long Debated

There's an answer to that long-moot question which cropped up periodically in the 21 years elapsing between World Wars 1 and 2 and figured so spectacularly in the career of Billy Mitchell: can airplanes sink battleships?

I was surprised several months ago, in casually checking over my ship news files, to see that of 54 British destroyers lost since the start of the war in Europe, 25 had gone to the bottom through plane attacks.

From that date on, I interviewed scores of British naval officers and ratings who survived the Norwegian campaign, Dunkerque, the evacuation of Greece and Crete and Mediterranean battles off Libya.

Repeatedly, in that period, I heard laymen ask the question: Why aren't torpedo planes used more in the European war, and why couldn't dozens of torpedo planes, converging on a single battleship, destroy it?

In Narrow Waters

The answer, up to the start of the American-Japanese war, was: Torpedo planes are useful against battleships only when they are operating in narrow waters or lying at anchor. The British used torpedo planes effectively against ships at the Italian naval base, Taranto, in November, 1940.

Japanese torpedo planes savagely attacked American ships lying at anchor in Pearl Harbor.

But the narrow-waters theory was dispelled in an hour by the successful Japanese attack on the great British battle cruiser Repulse and the battleship Prince of Wales off Singapore. They were operating in the open sea —without protecting airplanes above them.

"What do you think of the argument on the value of planes in attacking naval vessels?" I asked the bronzed skipper of a British battlewagon which had been damaged by air torpedoes after escaping more than 200 air attacks.

"You can't send ships out to attack planes," was his prompt reply.

He was quick to point out that air power had not destroyed the value of naval power. Navies still rule the broad bosoms of the open oceans, protect convoys and establish blockades.

Feel They'll Get It

"We in the ships," he continued calmly, "all feel that some day we will get it from the planes. Our idea is to carry on as long as possible and do the utmost damage in the shortest time. Our best defense is keeping out of the range of land-based dive bombers and you can't always do that when there's a job to be done."

This seemed to be the concensus among the British tars who have met the enemy—men who zigzagged their fine ships while firing guns they knew had little chance of downing a screaming dive bomber.

Only two of the sailors I have talked with had ever seen a plane shot down by their guns.

One officer who went through six weeks of plane attacks said "We never saw one go down but we were told that some crashed 50 miles away after we had damaged them."

These men agreed that the only real protection against level and dive bombers is the fighter plane — which was what the British didn't have when Japanese planes slaughtered the mighty Prince of Wales and the Repulse.

Lack of Fighter Planes

It was this lack of fighter planes that allowed the Germans to sink more than 100 ships at Dunkerque and made possible the loss of so many British cruisers and destroyers off Crete.

"The evacuation of Crete and Greece could be done only at night because each dawn we knew the stukas would be at us," said a veteran.

"Our land-based planes—and we had damned few of them—were far away in Egypt—and the Nazis knew it."

Naval observers say the Japanese were successful against the Repulse and the Prince of Wales not because they had a new torpedo, but because of their suicidal fanaticism, because of their refusal to let shells put them off the target.

Failure of the Germans and Italians to achieve similar success was due to the luck and to their allowing barrages to get them off the target, they say.

"All we ever hoped for was to keep the enemy off the target with our guns," said a British gunnery officer. "We soon learned that the Italians had no stomach for dive bombing — they stuck to high level bombing and often they dropped their eggs long before they came near us."

Nazis Not Too Brave

The Germans were brave, he said, but not too brave.

As an example, he cited the British cruiser Dido which had escaped damage during three days of continuous attacks.

"Then," he said, "one morning nine stukas came over. They peeled off one by one, and eight missed with their 1100-pound bombs. The ninth was a persistent beggar—he came down to 400 feet before he let go and he just couldn't miss."

This is apparently what the Japs did to Prince of Wales and Repulse.

Another weakness of the battleship is that she carries no fighter planes. The average dreadnaught is equipped with three light scouting planes for observation purposes only. A sudden attack traps them on deck as it takes time to warm motors and get them away.

The Japanese successes also indicate that they have a fine bombsight. Their high level bombers scored many direct hits on the British ships after torpedoes had crippled them.

The only answer for all this seems to be more fighter-plane protection for ships. This means they must come from land bases or from carriers and there are far too few of these surface craft.

Possibly 20 Plane Carriers Play Big Role in Jap Strategy

BY LOGAN REAVIS

NEW YORK, Dec. 16. (Wide World)—Japan has loosed an apparently formidable fleet of aircraft carriers in the battle of the Pacific.

It was this long-range strategy, transferred to the design boards of the shipyards, which produced the broods of Rising Sun planes that struck with such fury at the Hawaiian island of Oahu, and vanished.

And in this move Tokio was both far-seeing and sly—far-seeing in that it recognized the need for a vast air armada capable of being transported to scenes of action, sly in that it effectively screened preparations for an expanded air war.

Placed at strategic points, Japan's carriers—both broad-decked surface craft to accommodate wheeled warplanes, and catapult ships for seaplanes—provided facilities for mobile landing, takeoff and service.

CONVEY PLANES

In their later development, these surface ships provide the means for conveying in "knock down" form hundreds of planes which can take off from widely-dispersed shore bases among Japan's mandated islands.

As the imperial navy studied the strategy of war in the Pacific and recognized the growing potentialities of the warplane, the problem of getting airplanes to or near the point of attack divided itself.

True, Japan needed the conventional carrier, common equipment in the French, Ameican and British navies. But it required something else, too. And this was the seaplane carrier which does not require a flight deck. It can eject its winged machines with catapults, and retrieve them with massive cranes.

On that pattern the Japanese built their air power for war with the United States in the Pacific.

LOOK AT CARRIERS

Let's look at these Japanese carriers:

The flight-deck craft on the Japanese design is a "flush-decker." Navigation, gunnery, signal and air control stations are subordinated in their space allocation on the flight deck to maneuverability of the planes.

Other nations have a big "island" on the flight deck for such functions. Whether the Japanese employ elevators to achieve visibility over the sea when desired is a moot question. In an early experiment on England's carrier Argus the control station could be lowered entirely.

Unlike the flight-deck carriers of other nations, those of Japan spout their engine smoke, from the turbines far below decks, out of the side of the ship. Possibly they use suction fans to keep the smoke from flooding the flight deck.

Japan favors smaller vessels than Britain or America. Two aging carriers, the Akagi and Kaga, displace 26,900 tons and carry from 50 to 60 planes. Their speed probably is 25 knots.

SMALLER CARRIERS

More modern and consistent with the Japanese practice are five known smaller carriers in service: The Hosyo with 26 planes; the Ryuzyo with 24, and the Soryu, Hiryu and Koryu bearing from 30 to 40 planes. Possibly completed by this time are the Syokaku and Zuikaku, probably carrying 45 planes each.

All the Japanese flight-deck carriers bear the usual single-seat fighters, dive bombers, torpedo bombers and reconnaissance planes.

Japan has 11 known seaplane carriers. The Notoro displaces 14,050 tons, but the average of the rest is lower. Most recent are the Miduho, Titose and Tiyoda, of 9,000 tons each. With their catapult seaplanes, these ships are formidable equipment for a far-ranging navy.

One American navy officer has stated that the Japanese are so impressed with the performance of these seaplane carriers, or tenders, that there is a disposition to abandon the deck aircraft carrier completely and concentrate on the production of the former.

The knocked-down, crated planes which can be landed on isolated beaches or in small inlets for reassembly to make raiding forays, are carried below decks. When a seaplane has completed a mission, it lands alongside the tender, shuts off its engine and is lifted aboard by the cranes.

The same system, on a much smaller scale, is used on aircraft-equipped battleships and cruisers.

Finds Much Wrecked War Material on Trip to Tobruk

Correspondent Says Besieged Port Is Picture of Unimaginable Destruction

By Preston Grover

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN LIBYA, Dec. 16 (Wide World) — Under the guiding hand of an RAF officer I alternately raced and bounced across 120 miles of the North African desert to advanced positions of the British 8th Army which has crowded the Germans and Italians far to the west of Tobruk.

Neck Still Stiff

My neck still is stiff from searching the skies for German pilots. None was seen, although previously they machine-gunned a supply column on the route we followed.

We passed through four battlefields where the terrain was scarred by tank tracks and the debris of both British and Axis tanks remained on the field.

It was a dismal picture to be found in the flat, stony desert but every battlefield represented a British gain, though some came at an obviously high price.

At one place we came within hearing of gunfire of British artillery smashing a German strong point. Tanks idled on the crest of a gully to go in for the cleanup.

Clouds of Dust

The wind blew all day, rolling clouds of dust off every battlefield and every road cut through the desert by tanks and supply trains.

Smashed planes were on all sides. The losses were about 50-50 until we reached an airport just outside Tobruk where a score of Italian planes were caught in a park. Some were burned and some blown onto their noses with the skeletons of their tails pointing skyward.

Tobruk itself was a picture of unimaginable destruction. Here the British and Polish garrison held out for nearly seven months against daily ground and air attack until the second desert campaign brought relief.

Our car came to the edge of a desert plateau where we could see the sandy point on which lies Tobruk. It is a tiny port, white buildings built by Mussolini to demonstrate his colonial prowess and also to provide a strong point for his ultimate attack upon Egypt.

Every Building Wrecked

Now every one of the fine buildings has been wrecked, either by his own artillery or by bombs from his own or German planes. Scarcely a building was occupied by the British during the Axis siege; they took to the earth like moles.

I have been writing in the quarters of an officer who went through the siege. It is a wooden shelter built in a hollowed-out sand bank where he has rigged up a telephone and lighting system. The equipment he used was abandoned by the Italians.

With the motor from a windshield wiper he devised a phonograph to play a score of records captured from the Italians.

Now the battle, instead of being all around Tobruk, has moved to the west.

The skies are full of British fliers, mostly manning American-made Curtiss Tomahawks.

But peace and quiet have come to Tobruk. And a half dozen soldiers and officers who went through siege are half sorry it's over. They had come to like the quaint like its sandbanks.

PRICE

NEW YORK,DEC.16-(AP)-AT THE CALL OF HIS GOVERNMENT, BYRON PRICE TODAY STEPPED TEMPORARILY OUT OF HIS POSITION AS EXECUTIVE NEWS EDITOR OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS TO BECOME UNITED STATES DIRECTOR OF CENSORSHIP --- ON THE 29TH ANNIVERSARY OF HIS EMPLOYMENT BY THE A.P.

"I FEEL SURE, FROM THE SPLENDID ATTITUDE SHOWN BY THE NEWSPAPERS AND RADIO, THAT EVERYONE IS ANXIOUS TO HELP WIN THIS WAR," PRICE SAID. "THAT SHOULD MAKE MY JOB A GOOD DEAL EASIER."

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT CLEARLY AND COMPLETELY DESCRIBED THE SCOPE OF HIS NEW JOB, PRICE DECLARED, AND HE ADDED THAT HE FELT HE COULDN'T DISCUSS HIS PLANS UNTIL HE GOT SETTLED IN HIS OFFICE IN WASHINGTON, WHERE HE WILL TAKE OVER HIS DUTIES FRIDAY MORNING.

THIS WAS THE SECOND LEAVE OF ABSENCE PRICE HAS BEEN GRANTED BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS TO GIVE HIS SERVICES TO THE GOVERNMENT. THE LAST TIME WAS IN 1917, WHEN HE ENTERED THE INFANTRY BRANCH OF THE ARMY TO FIGHT OVERSEAS IN FRANCE.

DEC 17 1941

HIS EXPERIENCE AS A CAPTAIN IN THE 52D PIONEER REGIMENT, HIS 22 YEARS AS A WASTINGTON NEWSPAPERMAN, AND HIS EXTENSIVE ACQUAINTANCE-SHIP WITH EDITORS AND PUBLISHERS ALL OVER THE COUNTRY WERE AMONG THE FACTORS IN HIS BACKGROUND CITED TODAY AS QUALIFYING HIM FOR THE CENSOR-SHIP POST.

WHILE HE WAS OVERSEAS, FROM SEPTEMBER, 1918 TO APRIL, 1919, HIS OUTFIT WAS ASSIGNED TO ALL TYPES OF MILITARY WORK. IT WAS ATTACHED TO THE FIFTH ARMY CORPS. PRICE OBTAINED A FIRST LIEUTENANCY AT AN OFFICERS' TRAINING CAMP AT FORT MYER,VA., AND WAS PROMOTED TO A CAPTAINCY IN FRANCE.

DEC 17 1941

HE LEFT THE WASHINGTON BUREAU OF THE AP TO JOIN THE A.E.F. HE RETURNED IN TIME TO COVER THE SENATE'S BITTER DEBATE OVER THE VERSAILLES TREATY AND THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS, AND WENT WITH WOODROW WILSON IN THE FALL OF 1919 WHEN THE LATE PRESIDENT MADE A FINAL SPEAK-ING TOUR OF THE NATION IN BEHALF OF THE LEAGUE.

ONE OF THE MOST ACTIVE MEMBERS OF THE WASHINGTON NEWSPAPER CORPS, PRICE BECAME KNOWN TO HUNDREDS OF OFFICIALS AND BUREAU HEADS

IN ALL THE GOVERNMENT DEPARTMENTS DURING THE CRITICAL POSTWAR YEARS. HE WAS ASSIGNED TO WARREN G.HARDING WHEN THE OHIO PUBLISHER WAS NOMINATED FOR THE PRESIDENCY IN 1920 ON THE REPUBLICAN TICKET, AND FOLLOWED HARDING'S CAREER UNTIL SEVERAL MONTHS AFTER HE WAS INAUGURATED PRESIDENT.

PRICE WAS IN CHARGE OF THE STAFF WHICH COVERED THE WASHINGTON NAVAL CONFERENCE IN 1921, THEN PUT IN A LONG PERIOD ON THE NEWS DESK, AND IN 1930 WENT TO LONDON WITH THE UNITED STATES DELEGATION TO THE NAVAL CONFERENCE THERE.

DEC 17 1941

THE NEWSPAPERMAN'S LIFE SEEMED TO PRICE FROM THE DAY HE ENTERED IT THE MOST INTERESTING OF CAREERS, ALTHOUGH HE HAD PLANNED AS A YOUNG MAN TO BECOME A LAWYER. TO EARN MONEY TO GO TO LAW SCHOOL HE EARNED AN INDIANA TEACHER'S CERTIFICATE, BUT NEVER USED IT.

HE TOOK A SUMMER NEWSPAPER JOB AFTER HE WAS GRADUATED FROM WABASH COLLEGE IN 1912, WITH PHI BETA KAPPA HONORS. HE WORKED FOR A SHORT TIME FOR THE UNITED PRESS IN OMAHA AND CHICAGO, AND SWITCHED OVER TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS IN ATLANTA, GA. FROM ATLANTA HE WENT TO NEW ORLEANS, BACK TO ATLANTA AND FINALLY TO WASHINGTON, WHERE HE WAS NEWS EDITOR OF THE BUREAU FROM 1922 TO 1927.

IN JANUARY, 1937, AFTER 10 YEARS AS CHIEF OF THE WASHINGTON BUREAU, HE WAS TRANSFERRED TO NEW YORK AND BECAME EXECUTIVE NEWS EDITOR OF THE ASSOCIATED PRESS. HE WAS 50 YEARS OLD LAST MARCH.

HIS EARLIEST EFFORT IN THE FIELD OF NEWS CAME WHEN HE WAS A BOY OF 10, ON THE FARM WHERE HE WAS BORN, NEAR TOPEKA, IND. HE WROTE A SERIES OF ITEMS ON WRAPPING PAPER AND DISTRIBUTED SHEETS OF THE PAPER AMONG THE NEIGHBORS -- UNTIL HIS FATHER DECIDED SUCH ACTIVITY WASN'T A VITAL FARM CHORE, AND STEPPED IN AS A CENSOR WITH AN ORDER FOR SUPPRESSION.

WHILE A STUDENT AT THE TOPEKA HIGH SCHOOL HE WAS EDITOR OF THE SCHOOL PAPER, AND AT WABASH COLLEGE HE EDITED THE PAPER DURING HIS LAST TWO YEARS ON THE CAMPUS.

DEC 17 1941

HIS COLLEGE DAYS WERE SOMETIMES MARKED BY LACK OF MONEY, AND HE WAS A SHORT ORDER COOK AND STOKED FURNACES TO EARN HIS WAY THROUGH. HE ALSO SERVED AS A CORRESPONDENT FOR THE CRAWFORDSVILLE (IND.) JOURNAL --- AND OFTEN DELIVERED PAPERS CONTAINING STORIES HE HAD WRITTEN, TO PICK UP EXTRA CHANGE.

JOURNALISM IS THE ABSORBING PASSION OF HIS LIFE, AND HE HAS FEW OUTSIDE INTERESTS. THE ONE WHICH APPEALS TO HIM MOST IS COLLECTING BOOKS "IN A SMALL WAY" --- MAINLY BOOKS OF AMERICAN AND INDIANA LITERATURE. HE HAS A SPECIAL KNOWLEDGE OF INDIANA WRITERS AND POETS.

IN CONNECTION WITH THE PRESIDENT'S ANNOUNCEMENT THAT PRICE HAD BEEN SUMMONED TO GOVERNMENTAL DUTY, KENT COOPER, A.P. GENERAL MANAGER, SAID:

"MR.PRICE'S ABSENCE AT THIS TIME MEANS A REAL SACRIFICE, BUT THE ASSOCIATED PRESS HAS CONSENTED TO IT GLADLY UNDER THE PRESENT CIRCUMSTANCES."

Shakeup Made Pending Probe

Congressmen Disregard President's Plea For 19-Year-Old Lower Limit For Army Selectees

DEC 18 1941

By RICHARD E. TURNER

Washington, Dec. 17 (AP).— The Army and Navy swept the ranking officers of the Hawaiian area from their commands tonight because the Japanese attack at Pearl Harbor caught United States defense forces by surprise.

Adm. Husband E. Kimmel, Commander-In-Chief of the Pacific Fleet, was ordered replaced by Rear Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, Chief of the Bureau of Navigation.

Lieut. Gen. Walter C. Short was relieved of command of the Hawaiian department by Lieut. Gen. Delos C. Emmons.

Maj. Gen. Frederick L. Martin, in command of the Hawaiian air forces, was ordered relieved by Brig. Gen. C. L. Tinker.

In making the announcements, the War and Navy Departments did not pass judgment on the replaced officers, or fix responsibility for alleged lack of alertness at Hawaii. That will be done by a presidential board.

War Department officials explained it was deemed best not to have the defenses of Hawaii under the command of officers involved in the board's investigation.

These announcements were made at the close of a day which saw the war, so tragically begun at Pearl Harbor, brilliantly continued by American forces in the Philippines. There, the Army said, aerial counter attacks upon small Japanese landing parties, and upon hostile ships off the coast had brought the Japanese invasion to a virtual standstill. The day was notable for a complete lack of enemy activity in American-held territories.

The shakeup in the Hawaiian command followed by two days the report of Secretary of the Navy Knox, that the forces in Pearl Harbor were not on the alert when the Japanese attacked on Dec. 7.

In the interim, President Roosevelt appointed a five-man board, headed by Associate Justice Owen J. Roberts of the United States Supreme Court to investigate. It held its first meeting today, and planned a second session for tomorrow. It is to proceed to Honolulu shortly.

Stimson's Explanation

The Navy's announcement made no mention of its unmistakeable reason for relieving Admiral Kimmel, but in making known the change in Army leadership, Secretary Stimson said:

"These changes were made in view of the preliminary report of the Secretary of the Navy, with those views as to the unpreparedness of the situation on Dec. 7 the Secretary of War concurs, and to expedite the reorganization of the air defenses in the islands.

"This action avoids a situation where the officials charged with responsibility for the future security of this vital naval base would otherwise at this critical hour also be involved in the searching investigation ordered yesterday by the President."

The Navy Department announced the change in command in this statement:

"Secretary of the Navy Knox announced tonight that Rear Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, U. S. Navy, has been ordered detached from his present duty as chief of the Bureau of Navigation, Navy Department, and assigned to duty as commander in chief, U. S. Pacific Fleet, relieving Admiral Husband E. Kimmel.

"Admiral Kimmel has been relieved of command of the Pacific Fleet by Vice Admiral William S. Pye, U. S. Navy, commander battle force and second in command of the Pacific fleet, pending arrival of Admiral Nimitz. Admiral Kimmel will report for temporary duty in the 14th Naval District (Pearl Harbor, Hawaii).

"Rear Admiral Randall Jacobs, U. S. Navy, has been ordered from sea duty with the Atlantic Fleet to succeed Rear Admiral Nimitz as chief of the Bureau of Navigation."

DEC 18 1941

Army Statement.

The text of the War Department announced:

"The Secretary of War, Henry L. Stimson, announced today that Lieutenant General Delos C. Emmons, Air Corps, has arrived at Honolulu with instructions to take over the command of the Hawaiian department, relieving Lieutenant General Walter C. Short. General C. L. Tinker, Air Corps, is proceeding to Hawaii to take command of the air forces relieving Major General Frederick L. Martin.

"These changes are made in view of the preliminary report of the Secretary of Navy, with whose views as to the unpreparedness of the situation on December 7 the Secretary of War concurs, and to expedite the reorganization of the air defenses in the islands.

"This action avoids a situation where the officials charged with responsibility for the future of this vital naval base would otherwise at this critical hour also be involved in the searching investigation ordered yesterday by the President."

During the day, while American forces in the Philippines got the "situation well in hand there," Congress continued its work on war-time legislation, but with the House disregarding the President's and the War Department's recommendations for the minimum age of draftees.

They had urged that all men between 19 and 44, inclusive, be made subject to military service, but the House voted to make the age limits 21 to 44, inclusive, with all between 18 and 64, inclusive, required to register. The Senate has yet to act on the bill.

Congressional action was completed meanwhile on legislation giving the President war-time authority greater, some said, than that conferred upon President Wilson in 1917. The authority includes the power of censorship.

26 Jap Planes Downed

The War Department's evening communique was preceded by official anouncements here or in Manila that Army bombers had destroyed 26 Japanese planes at Vigan, 25 of them on the ground, and that the Navy had been successful in two or three submarine attacks.

These exploits, combined with official statements that enemy operations in thePhilippines had come to a virtual standstill, gave an unmistakable picture of alert and effective action by the American air forces there.

Small Japanese landing parties continued to cling to beachheads in Luzon, it seemed, but were under a continuing bombardment. Meanwhile aerial attacks upon hostile ships off the coast indicated an effort to cut these forces off from supplies and reinforcement.

The communique said:

"I. Philippine theater.

"The American forces have the situation well in hand. Small enemy forces in the Aparri, Vigan and Legaspi areas are still under attack. Hostile vessels off the coast were attacked by Army air forces.

'2. Hawaii:

"No further enemy activity has been reported.

"3. No reports of hostile operations have been received from other areas."

DEC 18 1941

U. S. Subs Busy

Washingtonians smiled as they read a dispatch from Tokyo detailing the worried warning of a Japanese official that 20 Americans submarines were active in nearby waters. The Navy at Manila meanwhile said three submarine attacks had been undertaken, two of them successful.

It was the first announcement that America's under-water craft had entered the combat, and was taken to mean that the Navy had begun laying the blockade which is intended ultimately to deprive Japan of raw materials for her industries and food for her people.

There was, however, no tendency to minimize the possibility that Japan had slowed her attacks on the Philippines to concentrate on the battle for Singapore. Officials followed with concern the few available details of the fighting in the Malayan jungles a few hundred miles north of that great British naval base.

Nimitz Becomes Full Admiral And Will Command U. S. Fleet

Thus Hart And King Will Be Subordinate To Him, As They Were To Kimmel

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 17—The removal of Admiral Husband E. Kimmel today as commander in chief of the Pacific fleet automatically relieves him, navy officials explained, from duty as commander of the United States fleet.

Rear Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, who will become a full admiral upon taking command of the Pacific fleet, will administer the duties of commander of the United States fleet as well, officials said, until another commander is designated.

Thus Admiral Thomas C. Hart, chief of the Asiatic fleet, and Admiral Ernest J. King, chief of the Atlantic fleet, will be subordinate to Nimitz as they were to Kimmel.

The fleet commander prescribes standards and methods of training not only for all three fleets but also for all other seagoing forces of the navy. When two or more fleets are concentrated or when they operate in conjunction with each other, the commander of the United States fleet is responsible for joint operations.

Nimitz, a native of Fredericksburg, Texas, who now makes his home in Washington, is 56, three years younger than Kimmel, a native and resident of Henderson, Ky.

Served in World War

Nimitz saw active duty in the Atlantic during the World War as chief-of-staff and commander of the Atlantic fleet submarine force. That was followed by a brief period of service in the Office of Naval Operations after which he became executive officer of the Battleship South Carolina.

His most recent sea duty was as commander, battleship division 1, battle force, which he undertook in September, 1938, holding the position until he became chief of the Bureau of Navigation June 15, 1939.

As head of the Bureau of Navigation, Nimitz has been responsible for naval personnel in the recent years when the Navy was undergoing its expansion into a two-ocean force.

Kimmel became a rear admiral in November, 1937. In 1939, he assumed command of cruisers of the battle force with additional duty as commander of cruiser division 9.

Both Annapolis Graduates

On Feb. 1, 1941, he assumed duty as commander-in-chief of the Pacific fleet with additional duty as commander-in-chief of the United States fleet with the accompanying rank of admiral. He was 40th on the list of rear admirals at the time of his elevation.

Both Kimmel and Nimitz are graduates of the United States Naval Academy.

Nimitz was commisisoned an ensign in 1907, promoted to junior lieutenant and then to lieutenant in 1910, lieutenant commanedr in 1916, commander in 1921, captain in 1927, and real admiral June 23, 1938.

Sets Precedent

The designation today of Lieut.-Gen. Emmons as commander of the Hawaiian Department of the Army marks the first time an American air officer has been given full command of field operations, although the Germans often have made such appointments.

Emmons, 53 years old, commanded the 18th Composite Wing and was air officer of the Hawaiian Department until July, 1936. In March, 1939, he was brought from March Field, Calif., and appointed commanding general of the General Headquarters Air Force, which has since become known as the Combat Air Force to distinguish it from the Air Corps which is primarily interested in procurement and training.

Emmons was born at Huntington, W. Va., Jan. 17, 1888, and was graduated from the West Point Military Academy in 1909 and commissioned in the infantry. He was a brigadier general and wing commander as early as 1936. When he became commanding general of the GHQ Air Force he was a major general and was promoted to lieutenant-general Oct. 25, 1940.

His assignments have included a tour of duty as executive officer in the office of the chief of the air corps and as the executive officer for the Assistant Secretary of War for air. He has been a general officer since his first appointment as a wing commander in June, 1936.

Admiral William S. Pye Well Known In Baltimore

DEC 8 1941

Rear Admiral William S. Pye, who is now in temporary command of the Pacific fleet pending the arrival of Rear Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, is well known in Baltimore and is the brother-in-law of Philander P. Briscoe, a former member of the City Council.

Admiral Pye is the husband of the former Miss Annie E. Briscoe and both he and his wife frequently have visited Mr. Briscoe at his West Lanvale street home. Admiral Pye and Miss Briscoe were married at Prince Frederick, Md., shortly after he was graduated from the Naval Academy.

Son Went To School Here

The admiral's youngest son, Ensign John Briscoe Pye, who is now on active duty with the navy, lived in Baltimore for a number of years and attended Baltimore City College and the Gilman Country School.

Another son, the late Lieut. William S. Pye, Jr., who also was graduated from the Naval Academy, was killed three years ago while on maneuvers with the Pacific fleet.

Mr. Briscoe said last night that the last word he received from his sister, who is with her husband at Honolulu, was a cable last Friday saying: "All is well."

BRIG. GEN. TINKER

Brig. Gen. Clarence L. Tinker, new commander of the Hawaiian Air Force, entered the Philippine Constabulary as a second lieutenant in 1908. He was appointed a second lieutenant of infantry in the regular Army in 1912. A graduate of Wentworth Military Academy, Lexington, Mo., General Tinker was born at Edgin, Kan., on Nov. 21, 1887.

After serving with the infantry, he enrolled in the Flying School at March Field in 1920, completed several air courses and in 1926 went to London as assistant military attaché.

During a practice flight near Kenley Airdrome, London, he effected the rescue of an American naval officer from a crashed and burning airplane on Sept. 21, 1926. For this he received the Soldiers' Medal.

He served from Nov., 1939, to May, 1940, at Barksdale Field, La., as commanding officer of the 27th bombardment group, and then was transferred to MacGill Field, as base commander. On Oct. 1, 1940, he was designated an Air Corps Wing Commander and assigned on Jan. 10, 1941, to the 3d bombardment wing, MacGill Field. On Nov. 6, 1941, he was assigned to command the Third Interceptor Command, Third Air Force, Drew Field, to command the First Division, with headquarters at Fort Hamilton, N. Y. On Oct. 9, 1940, he was placed in command of the First Corps, with headquarters at Columbia. On Feb. 8, 1941, he became Commanding General of the Hawaiian Department.

REAR ADMIRAL JACOBS

Rear Admiral Randall Jacobs, who becomes chief of the Bureau of Navigation, was born at Danville, Pa., Dec. 12, 1885, and was appointed to the Naval Academy in 1903. He served on the Kentucky, Franklin, Indiana and South Carolina until 1913, when he became aide and flag secretary on the staff of the Commander in Chief of the Atlantic Reserve Fleet.

He commanded the Jouett in 1916, with additional duty as Commander of Division 4, Destroyer Force, Atlantic Fleet, and in 1918 was in command of the Henley and the anti-submarine detachment. He was on duty in the Bureau of Navigation from 1923 until 1926.

He served in the Asiatic Fleet in command of the Monocacy and was in charge of the evacuation of Americans in the Upper Yangtze Valley in 1927. In 1929 he returned to duty in the Bureau of Navigation. After two years as commanding officer of the Utah he served as Director Enlisted Personnel of the Bureau of Navigation.

He served as assistant Chief of the Bureau of Navigation from Sept. 1, 1929, until early in 1941, when he was ordered to sea with the Atlantic Fleet.

LIEUT. GEN. SHORT

Lieut. Gen. Walter Campbell Short, who has been relieved of command of the Hawaiian Department, was born at Filmore, Ill., on March 30, 1880. He entered the Army as a second lieutenant of infantry in March, 1902. His early service included duty at Malabang, Philippine Islands, in 1908 and in 1916 he was with the Sixteenth Infantry on the punitive expedition into Mexico.

In the first World War he served in various posts in France. He was a member of the Training Staff and of the General Staff, General Headquarters. He took part in the Aisne-Marne, St. Mihiel and Meuse-Argonne Battles.

On Oct. 13, 1939, he was ordered

Attacks Caused No Casualties On Johnston and Maui Isles

Washington Reports Damage as Trivial and Japanese Naval Action Weak—Hit-Run Forays Won't Divert U. S. Fleet.

DEC 18 1941

Washington, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—The Navy Department announced today that there were no injuries to personnel during the Japanese attack on Johnston Island, which was reported late yesterday.

The navy described the action by Japanese naval forces as "weak."

Earlier, the War Department said the shelling of Kahului, on the Island of Maui, by an enemy submarine yesterday caused only slight damage to a loading platform of a pineapple company and that there were no casualties.

In a brief midday communique, the navy said:

"It has been established that there were no injuries to personnel in the weak attack on Johnston Island reported yesterday. The naval situation in the Atlantic remains quiet."

Johnston, 717 miles southwest of Hawaii, was attacked by Japanese naval units at dusk of an unspecified day, possibly Monday, at about the same time that a Japanese submarine attacked the Hawaiian shipping center of Kahului, only about ninety-five miles from Pearl Harbor.

Ten Shells Hurled at Maui.

The navy reported that damage from the shell fire was light and today's report confirmed that there had been no injuries to personnel at Johnston.

About ten shells were fired in the Maui attack, the army said.

The communique, outlining the military situation as of 10:30 A. M., Eastern standard time, said there was no discernible enemy activity during the last twenty-four hours in the Philippine theater and nothing to report from other areas.

Japan, resorting to hit-and-run attacks near Hawaii, is risking valuable warships in an effort to divert some of the offensive strength of the United States Pacific Fleet, now at sea searching for the main enemy forces.

Attempt to Decoy Seen.

The tactics, evidenced by the shelling of Johnston and Maui islands for the first time in the war, tended to belie Tokio's bland claim that the bulk of the American Navy had been destroyed. They indicated that Japan was seeking to decoy as many United States ships as possible into a will-o'-the-wisp hunt for the nuisance raiders.

The Navy Department here, however, intimated that the fleet would not be distracted from its main mission and reported tersely that operations against the enemy are continuing.

The attacks on Johnston and Maui, and a renewed assault on Wake Island were disclosed in a communique last night, which stated that the actions had taken place in the preceding twenty-four hours. A recurrence of the hit-run forays appeared likely, but the belief here was that defense forces were adequate to meet the threat.

Elsewhere in the vast Pacific's theater, the situation appeared grave. Japanese attacks were seriously menacing Hongkong and Singapore, the British bases which are two of the big obstacles in the path of a Japanese drive against the Dutch East Indies.

The Philippines, the third and last stumbling block to Japan's southward thrust, were girding for a fresh enemy assault, although some sources believed that Japan was concentrating her main efforts against the British base. United States submarines operating from the Philippines were credited with two successful attacks, but details of their successes were not disclosed.

ARMY BOMBERS HIT JAP PLANES ON PHILIPPINES

Enemy Craft Destroyed, Fuel Supplies Fired Near Vigan

Navy Says Its Submarines Have Made Two Successful Attacks

[By the Associated Press]

Manila, Thursday, Dec. 18—United States Army headquarters issued a communique today saying "the situation remains unchanged" and that Manila had passed another night without an air-raid alarm.

[By the Associated Press]

Manila, Dec. 17—A smashing attack by American army bombers on Vigan—one of three hard-won and still apparently unextended Japanese beachheads on Luzon—in which at least twenty-six enemy planes were destroyed and enemy fuel supplies were set aflame was announced today concurrently with word that American submarines had twice struck hard againht the invader.

This latter action by units of the Asiatic fleet was announced by its commander, Admiral Thomas C. Hart, without detail. Three attacks had been loosed, he said—whether against Japanese naval forces or merchantment was not stated—and while one of them had not attained its objective, "the other two were successful."

Reports Not Required

He explained, perhaps thus indicating the reason why the whole story was not yet available, that submarine officers were not required to report before reaching port.

The assault upon Vigan—at a tremendous cost to the invader since his losses in planes were the largest officially reported in any single action save the initial Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor—was thus described by the headquarters of Lieut. Gen. Douglas MacArthur:

"The enemy at Vigan suffered heavily from an attack by our air force yesterday. One Japanese plane was shot down and at least twenty-five more were destroyed on the ground. Fuel supplies were set afire."

No Progress On Land

Two other communiques during the day made it plain that Japanese progress remained at zero. Both reported simply that there had been no change in the situation on the ground.

Recapitulating the situation at sea to date, Admiral Hart said the fleet had not been "entirely ready" for the initial and unprovoked Japanese attack, but since then had been going forward with only minor adjustments in its pre-arranged plan.

New evidence of Filipino civilian loyalty and of the will to conquer of Filipino fighting men came during the day.

Six Fight 54 Jap Planes

From Lingayen, where Japanese landing forces had been crushed last week, Assemblyman Narciso Ramos telephoned this message:

"Our people are aware of the danger of invasion, but they are going about their usual tasks bravely. . . . Our civilians are behind the army and are prepared to fight and die if necessary for our homes and liberties."

Capt. Jesus Villamor, the young leader of a small squadron—six Filipino pilots who engaged fifty-four Japanese air raiders last Friday over Bantangas—expressed it this way:

"When I saw the first flight of twenty-seven planes I felt frightened at first, but I went upstairs anyway.

"Then I saw a second flight of twenty-seven planes and thought they were Americans, and I said to myself: 'This is going to be a heck of a good fight.' But they were Japs.

"That made me so mad I went right for them, and the rest of the boys were with me. After that I didn't feel anything except a determination to get a few of them and break up the formation."

Manila

DEC 18 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Manila, Dec. 17—United States Army bombers destroyed twenty-six Japanese planes and fired fuel supplies in a heavy attack yesterday on the beach head which the Japanese established last week at Vigan, on the Luzon west coast, 200 miles from Manila, army headquarters announced today.

The announcement followed swiftly on an official disclosure that submarines of the United States Asiatic fleet had gone into action for the first time in the eleven-day-old war with Japan, scoring successes the details of which were not immediately divulged. The communique announcing the attack on Vigan, launched apparently to prevent the Japanese from establishing air bases necessary for conquest of the Philippines, said there had been "no change in the land situation today."

The bulletin was issued at 4 P. M.

Of the Japanese planes destroyed, one was shot down in aerial combat and the remainder were wrecked on the ground, the communique declared.

"Enemy Suffered Heavily"

The brief announcement said:

"The enemy at Vigan suffered heavily from an attack by our air force yesterday. One Japanese plane was shot down and at least twenty-five more were destroyed on the ground. Fuel supplies were set afire. There has been no change in the land situation today."

In a cryptic statement Admiral Thomas C. Hart, commander of the fleet, declared that United States submarines had "made two successful attacks" and a third, which failed to achieve its objective.

Whether the attacks to which he referred were against Japanese naval forces or against merchant shipping remained a matter of speculation pending a further announcement.

Pre-War Defensive Plans

Hart said the defensive plan drawn up for the Asiatic fleet before the war called for counter-blows in the event of Japanese aggression.

He said the fleet was not "entirely ready" for Japan's surprise attack but, nevertheless, had been following its pre-arranged defensive plan with minor adjustments.

Of the surrender of 200 United States marines who were stranded in North China by the sudden hostilities, he declared that instructions to withdraw them came "very late."

"Absolutely Cut Off"

"We were fast on our feet when the orders came," he said, but the marines were "absolutely cut off in three locations in North China and, of course, had to surrender."

(These places were Peiping and Tientsin, where the marines were posted, and Chinwangtao, the North China port where some were awaiting evacuation by sea. About 700 marines in Shanghai, the bulk of the China contingent, left in time.)

Believed To Be Reorganizing

The last sign of Japanese offensive perations against the stoutly defended island of Luzon was a dawn attack yesterday on Olongapo naval base, sixty miles northwest of Manila.

The supposition in unofficial quarters was that the Japanese were reorganizing their forces for an attem to reinforce the troops they landed last week at three places—Vigan and Aparri, in the north, and Legaspi, at the southern tip of the island.

Manila itself has not had an air-raid alarm since around noon Monday.

Natives Harvesting Rice

Advices from Lingayen, on the Luzon west coast, about 120 miles from Manila, where a Japanese landing force was reported crushed last week by a Filipino army division, indicated the native population there was quietly harvesting the rice crop.

In a message telephoned to Manila from Lingayen, Assemblyman Narciso Ramos declared:

"Our people are aware of the danger of invasion but they are going about their usual tasks bravely. . . . Our civilians are behind the army and are prepared to fight and die if necessary for our homes and liberties."

Three Airmen Captured

From Pampanga province, between Manila and Lingayen, came belated reports that three Japanese airmen who bailed out of a burning bomber had been captured by excited natives, armed with bolos and sharpened sticks.

In the Manila area, police reinforced their patrols in the Pasay and Paranaque districts near Nichols Field following a report that the anti-American "Ganap" organization was plotting to create trouble.

Arrest of Ramon Mantile, leader of the organization, was announced yesterday by Philippine secret police.

Autos, Trucks Searched

About 200 persons were reported taken into custody in an investigation into the "Ganap" activities, but most were released later.

Police also tightened a cordon on the Pasay and Paranaque districts to prevent a southward exodus of Axis nationals. All automobiles and trucks were halted and searched.

The two districts—the only civilian areas of Manila proper damaged by Japanese air raiders—have been largely evacuated. Reports that hastily abandoned houses had been looted caused police to take sharp preventive measures.

Fifth Column Precautions

Army headquarters also announced appointment of a board to consider applications by aliens for release from custody.

Meanwhile, civilians were urged to combat fifth columnists. Relatives and friends of soldiers were asked to keep secret where soldiers were on duty and soldiers themselves were warned that "public walls have ears."

Philippine Ship Sinks

(A small Philippine vessel, the steamship Corregidor, sank in a mine field today off Manila, injuring a number of passengers, NBC said in a broadcast from Manila and heard in New York. Lloyd's Register lists a 30-year-old 1,181-ton ship named Corregidor and owned by the Cia. Maritima, of Manila.)

Construction of Manila's first public air-raid shelter now is under way in one of the areas bombed recently by Japanese warplanes.

The shelter, of reinforced concrete, is designed to accommodate a hundred persons. Many individual shelters also are being built.

6 FILIPINO PILOTS TACKLED 54 JAPS

Squadron Leader Says They Were Mad, Not Scared.

Manila, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—The youthful leader of a daredevil squadron of six Filipino pilots in erstwhile training planes who took on fifty-four Japanese air raiders last Friday over Bantangas and shot down two said today he got so mad that he forgot to be scared.

"When I saw the first flight of twenty-seven planes, I felt frightened at first," said Capt. Jesus Villamor, "but went upstairs' anyway.

"Then I saw a second flight of twenty-seven planes and thought they were Americans and I said to myself: 'This is going to be a heck of a good fight.' But they were Japs.

"That made me so mad I went right for 'em and the rest of the boys were with me. After that, I didn't feel anything except a determination to get a few of them and break up the formation."

Of the Filipino pilots, one was wounded and parachuted to safety and another was killed, Capt. Villamor said, when seven Japanese planes "rode him down." Capt. Villamor is the son of a late Associate Justice of the Philippine Supreme Court and trained as a pilot at Randolph and Kelly fields.

Radio Greetings From Chiang

Manila, Dec. 17 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, army commander in the Philippines, announces today he had received this radiogram from Chinese Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek:

"I deeply appreciate your message and greeting as from a comrade-in-arms. In our fight for freedom during the past four and a half years, the moral and material support of the United States already has won our gratitude. Now we take pride in the new association between our two countries in fighting shoulder to shoulder against the common enemy

BABY GIRL HURT IN RAID MAY LIVE

Manila, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—The youngest person injured in Japanese air raids on Luzon Island—an unidentified six-months-old girl—was given an even chance to survive by doctors at Manila Hospital today. The child, suffering from shrapnel wounds, was found on a Cavite street after the first Japanese raid on the navy yard there. The authorities believe that her parents were killed in the attack.

TWO ARMY PILOTS WALK TO BASE

Manila, Dec. 17 (A. The two were identified as Lieuts. Sheperd and Houseman.

162 Reported Missing On Philippine Ship

Inter-Island Vessel Blown Up By Mine in Manila Bay—Officials On Board

DEC 18 1941

Manila, Thursday, Dec. 18 (AP)—One hundred and sixty-two persons, including several prominent Philippine political leaders, were reported missing today in the sinking of the Philippine inter-island steamer Corregidor, which was blown up yesterday by a mine near Manila Bay.

Two hundred and twenty-seven persons were known to have been saved, though many were injured. The list of missing was incomplete because many persons had boarded the 1,881-ton vessel without tickets, intending to pay cash fare in their haste to get home to the southern Philippines.

Among those missing were Assemblyman Juan M. Reyes and Prof. Jose Reyes, of Santo Tomas University, both brothers of Archibishop Gabriel Reyes, of Cebu.

Baker Island Attacked by Japs

Destruction of Defenses There and on Johnston Claimed by Tokio Navy.

DEC 18 1941

Tokio, Dec. 17 (Official Radio Received by A. P.).—The navy section of Imperial Headquarters reported today that Japanese naval units destroyed most enemy defense facilities in an attack yesterday on Johnston Island and on December 12 on Baker Island in the South Pacific.

The navy section also claimed that the Japanese Navy, cooperating with the army in operations against the British crown colony of Hongkong, had sunk one gunboat and six torpedo boats and heavily damaged one destroyer, two gunboats and another vessel.

It said Japanese naval units also shelled and heavily damaged Mount Davis fort and other fortifications.

The navy's attacks from the sea and air are continuing, it added.

Johnston and Baker islands, which the Japanese report they bombarded from the sea yesterday, are two of a long string of tiny Pacific islets developed by the United States as links in a far-flung naval defense line.

Baker Island was widely publicized after four American boys of Hawaiian descent were "planted" on it and two other Pacific islets, respectively, in 1936 to establish United States ownership, which Britain had disputed. It lies almost 2,000 miles southwest of Honolulu. Johnston Island, 750 miles southwest of Honolulu, was discovered and developed by the navy as a field base in 1935.

Both islands are little more than sandbars.

In the course of lining up these tiny defense outposts the United States entered into agreement with Britain for joint operation of some of them by the two Powers.

Naval Spokesman Says American Boats Are Of Superior Type

Formosa Quake Reported To Have Done Damage To Communications

Tokyo, Dec. 17 (Official Radio Received by A.P.)—Japanese seamen were warned today by Lieut. Kengo Tominaga, a naval press officer, that probably twenty United States submarines were lying in wait for them in waters near Japan.

[An official announcement in Manila said United States submarines had already made "two successful attacks" on the Japanese.]

Tominaga's warning in the newspaper Nichi Nichi followed an official one issued only two days ago. The officer said that the American boats were of a superior 2,000-ton type with a cruising radius of 5,200 miles.

Quake Damages Communications

Meanwhile the Overseas Affairs Ministry announced that an earthquake striking southern Formosa had killed 190 persons, injured 164, razed 612 houses, and damaged railways and other communications.

[Formosa apparently was the chief springboard for the Japanese invasion of the northern tip of Luzon, the main Philippine island some 200 miles to the south. Japanese acknowledgement of damage to communications in Formosa indicated Japan's military effort may be hampered on the island.]

Although the Japanese said most of the damage was expected to be repaired during "the day," the agency Domei in its first broadcast said that the quake was the biggest since 1930, when 354 persons were either killed or wounded and over 2,000 homes were damaged.

Imperial headquarters reported that Japanese naval units destroyed "most enemy defense facilities" in an attack yesterday on the American island outpost of Johnston, 750 miles southwest of Honolulu, and December 12 on Baker Island in the south Pacific, 2,000 miles southwest of Honolulu.

U. S. Has Another Version.

(In Washington the Navy Department termed the Johnston Island attack weak and said no casualties resulted.)

The navy section also claimed that, in continuing attacks on Hong Kong, the Japanese sank one gunboat and six torpedo boats and heavily damaged one destroyer, two gunboats and another vessel.

190 Killed By Formosa Quake

DEC 18 1941

Tokyo, Dec. 17 (Official Radio Received by (AP) — One hundred and ninety persons were killed and 164 injured this morning in an earthquake in southern Formosa, the Overseas Affairs Ministry announced today.

A total of 612 houses were razed, and there was some damage to railways and other communications, the Ministry added. It said the principal damage to communications was expected to be repaired during the day. Water mains also were reported damaged.

(The Japanese Island, off the southeast China coast and little more than 200 miles north of the northern Luzon coast, has several air bases from which attacks have been launched on the Philippine Islands. It is likely that these fields are in the southern part hit by the quake.

Military Damage Implied

(The fact that the Japanese acknowledged damage to railways and other communications indicated the possibility that military bases of Formosa might be temporarily cut off.)

(Formosa, along with the Chinese island of Hainan, off the south China coast, long has served warring Japan as a troop concentration and training point. Formosa is believed to have served the Japanese as a great proving ground for new weapons and warfare techniques, much as Poland was used by the Germans after the occupation.)

Hiroya Ino, Colonail Affairs Minister, was received by Emperor Hirohito in the imperial palace, and answered the Emperor's questions regarding the earthquake, Domei reported.

Rail Lines Disrupted

Domei, in its first report on the quake, said that southern Formosa was shaken "by its biggest earthquake since 1930, when 354 persons were either killed or wounded and more than 2,000 homes were damaged."

Railway communication between Kagi and the Port of Tainan was reported to have been disrupted and dispatches said telephone lines within Kagi were severed. Water mains also were said to have been affected.

The wording of the broadcast was vague as to the casualties, and the reference to 354 dead and injured might have concerned today's toll. Communications difficulties which develop from earthquakes, however, normally delay announcement of such a specific figure for several days.

(Another oddity of Domei's report was that reference files show only a minor earthquake in Formosa in 1930, a tremblor in which four persons were killed. The island suffered a disastrous quake in 1935 which killed 3,050 persons and injured 12,000.)

SPRINGBOARD FOR ATTACK

Formosa, one of the springboards for Japanese air attacks on the Philippine Islands, is little more than 200 miles north of the Northern Luzon coast.

The island has an area of 13,890 square miles — roughly that of Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut combined—and has a population of more than 5,000,000.

In addition to having air bases on the island, the Japanese have a naval station in the Pescadores Islands off Formosa.

The Japanese have had Formosa, which they call Taiwan, since 1895, when it was ceded to them by China.

Japan Warned of Submarines.

Tokio, Dec. 17 (Official Radio Received by A. P.).—Lieut. Com. Kengo Tominaga said in an interview published by Nichi Nichi today that probably twenty United States submarines were operating in waters in the vicinity of Japan. These submarines are in position to resort to guerrilla tactics against Japanese vessels, said Commander Tominaga, an officer of the naval press section of imperial headquarters.

Elaborating upon an official warning of December 15 concerning possible operations by hostile submarines and aircraft against Japan, he said that the submarines were of a superior 2,000-ton type with a cruising radius of 5,200 miles and urged that Japanese seamen be on the alert for them.

Bern, Dec. 17—Premier Tojo told the Japanese Diet that the "neutralization" of British Singapore would take a long time because of that base's equipment and the jungle land favoring British defenses in Malaya, a DNB Tokyo dispatch said tonight.

However, he claimed that Japanese troops were "breaking stubborn British resistance."

By C. YATES McDANIEL
Associated Press Correspondent

Singapore, Dec. 17—A Japanese expeditionary force has invaded the rich Miri oil country of Sarawak, British-protected kingdom of the white Rajahs on the northwest coast of Borneo, but has found the refinery and all oil-field equipment utterly destroyed by withdrawing British forces, it was announced officially today.

A Japanese destroyer was hit directly by a bomb from a Dutch plane while supporting the landing, the Netherlands East Indies command disclosed.

Completes Invasion Rectangle

The latest Japanese move completed a vast invasion rectangle in the South China Sea, its corners touching the British Crown colony of Hongkong, the Philippine island of Luzon, northern Malaya and Sarawak, the last a country of 50,000 square miles which has been ruled for ninety-nine years by Sir James Brooke and his descendants.

In this rectangle the Japanese were trying for quick knockouts of Allied strongholds, establishment of bases, seizure of important resources and control of the West Pacific sea communication lines to block Allied reinforcement and coordination.

"Enemy landings," said a communique of the British Far Eastern command, "have taken place at Miri, Lutgng State, in Sarawak, on the northwestern coast of Borneo, from which our detachments already have withdrawn, having completely destroyed the oil refinery as well as the installations of both the Miri and Seria oil fields.

Near British Borneo Line

Miri, near the British Borneo border at the upper end of Sarawak's 450 miles of coast, is the headquarters of Sarawak Oilfields, Inc., and is the center of a considerable oil development. In 1939 Sarawak, under the present white Rajah, Sir Charles Vyner Brooke, exported $6,524,000 in crude oil, mostly to Singapore.

In north Malaya, the heaviest fighting raged in south Kedah province along the line of the River Muda, which enters the Strait of Malacca about fifteen miles north of the west-coast island of Penang, about 400 miles above Singapore.

The east-coast fighting in the Kelantan area had lulled, but the British said "there is reason to believe that enemy reinforcements are arriving," presumably by sea.

It was considered unlikely that the Japanese had yet been able to join their forces across the jungle-clad peninsula, or that they yet were present in north Malaya in numbers great enough to constitute an imminent menace to Singapore.

Tonight's communique stressed the rather ominous lull in land action on the peninsula, saying:

"There is nothing further to report from Kedah and Kelantan since the issue of this morning's communique.

"No enemy air activity has been reported.

RAF Finds No Opposition

"The RAF carried out reconnaissances over a wide area without meeting any opposition.

"Since December 13 seven enemy aircraft have been shot down by our AA guns. A further five have been seen to have been hit and were probably unable to return to their bases."

Unofficial estimates place the Japaness forces operating from Thailand at two divisions, equipped with light tanks but having heavy air support. The chief danger at present was considered to be to Penang, important British supply base which has been bombed repeatedly and fiercely.

Hongkong's defenders, now under full siege in the island section of their colony, claimed continued ascendancy in the heavy artillery duel raging with the Japanese. Tuesday night's communique reported that two enemy gun positions had been silenced, without damage to the British batteries. There were many air raids Tuesday, but the Hongkong anti-aircraft batteries downed one plane and winged another.

The latest word from Hongkong, a dispatch at 11:00 a. m. local time today (10:10 p. m., Tuesday E.S.T.) quoted a communique as saying there had been some early morning shelling, with little damage reported, and added: "Americans reported safe."

Dispatches from the Chinese capital of Chungking added these heartening details.

That the Japanese paid dearly for the occupation of the Hongkong mainland, with much mechanized equipment destroyed by British gunfire; that Chinese troops were delivering more successful attacks against the Japanese 28 miles north of Hongkong, causing the Japanese to rush up reinforcements and impress 1,500 Chinese civilians for military duty in the Japanese-occupied city of Canton itself.

Singapore itself welcomed several hundred refugees from Shanghai and other Chinese reports who got here safely aboard a 6,000-ton vessel which was attacked by Japanese planes five minutes after the master had learned of the start of the war.

There were rather vague reports that the Japanese had captured the Portuguese Island Colony of Macao, south of Hongkong, but these were vigorously denied in Lisbon.

Singapore

[By the Associated Press]

Singapore, Dec. 17—Japanese forces have landed in Sarawak, a British area on the northwest coast of Borneo, it was announced today as the Japanese threw their land, sea and air forces into a spreading offensive around the South China Sea.

The Japanese evidently were aiming for a quick knockout of British and Dutch strongholds, seizure of vital resources and control of the sea lanes by which reinforcements could reach the Allies.

Scheme Partly Foiled

Their effort apparently was to strike heavy and scattered blows before resistance could be organized and coordinated, but this seemed to be at least partly frustrated.

The British Singapore command announced tonight that there was nothing new to report from Kedah and Kelantan States, Malayan fronts north of Singapore, indicating that the situation there was stabilized.

In the air, the R. A. F. carried out wide Malayan reconnaissance without meeting the foe, the communique said.

The Dutch disclosed that one of their planes, supporting British resistance to the enemy landing at Miri, Sarawak, had scored a direct hit on a Japanese destroyer.

Oil was an obvious objective at Miri, but the Batavia radio said "everything was destroyed before the Japanese could land. . . . Even oil plants at the port of Miri have disappeared."

The Japanese landed at Miri and nearby Lubong, both only a short distance from the Sarawak border with British North Borneo. A communique said British forces destroyed oil refineries, wells and other machinery and withdrew before the invaders landed.

Newest Jap Drive

This was the newest spread of Japan's tactics of scattered blows, all correlated with the chief drive against Singapore, the core of Britain's Far Eastern defenses.

The strategy of such diverse operations, apparently, is to develop the advantage of Japan's initial, surprise jump and keep the Allies from organizing a unified plan of resistance.

Dutch Finish Mobilizing

In Batavia, however, the Dutch announced that general mobilization has been completed and Dutch army forces may be sent abroad. General Sir Archibald P. Wavell, British commander in India, announced at New Delhi that discussions have been completed for coordination of Indian Far Eastern commands resisting Japan.

Dutch sea and air forces already have joined the British in the battle for Malaya, and the Aneta news agency pointed out that seven Japanese vessels now have been hit by Netherlands Indies naval units.

Besides the destroyer reported hit by a naval bomber today, it recalled, Dutch submarines within the past week were reported to have sunk four loaded Japanese transports and hit two other ships off the Thailand and Malaya coasts.

The extent of Japanese air operations against the Netherlands Archipelago was indicated by a Batavia communique today which said Terempa, in the tiny Anambas group off eastern Malaya, had been bombed on Saturday and machine gunned on Sunday.

(The Japanese, who have used midget submarines in attacking Hawaii, were reported today using one-man tanks in the Malay peninsular fighting. The tanks were so described by a Singapore correspondent of the BBC whose broadcast was heard in New York by CBS.)

The landings were effected, the bulletin said, at Miri and Lubong, which are situated close together a short distance south of the border between Sarawak and British North Borneo.

Sarawak is the domain of the famous "white rajahs." Sir Charles Vyner Brooke is the present ruler. Sarawak is under British protection.

(Because of its position, situated on sea routes between Hong Kong, Singapore and the Philippines, Borneo is strategically important.

(The island is about 300 miles north of Java, an equal distance east of Singapore and about 600 miles south of Manila. The entire lower half of this island is owned by the Dutch.)

Heavy Fighting In Malaya; Take Portugal Island

DEC 18 1941

Dec. 17

LONDON. (AP) — The Japanese, widening their attacks still further in the Western Pacific, menaced the British in three vital zones girdling the China Sea today—Hongkong, the Malayan Peninsula and the Island of Borneo.

Fighting like fanatics, they were hurling themselves into the teeth or British artillery and machine-gun fire in a battle which the British said might decide the fate of Northwestern Malaya and its principal city and island base, Penang.

This still appeared to be the core of the Japanese master plan so far, aimed ultimately at Singapore, Britain's Oriental citadel.

But Hongkong, second only to Singapore as a bastion of British strength, was under siege from its Japanese-captured mainland area and a military commentator said air and artillery assaults on Hongkong Island were increasing in severity.

Down the South China mainland coast 45 miles from Hongkong, reports here said, Japanese forces have taken the Portuguese Island of Macao.

British headquarters in Singapore announced that the Japanese had landed in Sarawak, on the northwestern coast of Borneo, probably the same operation as the Japanese reported without detail yesterday.

The big island is about 300 miles north of Java, in the Netherlands East Indies, and is important not only for its tin, rubber and other resources, but also for its position along sea lanes between Hongkong, Singapore and the Philippines.

There may thus be a link between this operation and the report that Dutch Colonial officials at Batavia have announced the completion of mobilization throughout the Indies and a decree by the islands' army commander opening the possibility that Dutch troops may be sent abroad.

BRITISH ON FIRING LINE

Chief fighting appeared from Singapore advices to be along the Muda River, which flows through the State of Kedah and enters the Strait of Malacca along the northern boundary of Wellesley Province 15 miles northeast of Penang.

British on the firing line were not waiting defensively for their attacks, however, but were counter attacking behind motorized units and under heavy artillery fire, informed Singapore sources reported. Behind them, as a last resort, lay the mainland defenses of Penang, arranged on a concentric perimeter plan.

Singapore, ultimate goal of the Japanese, is some 400 miles to the south on the tip of the Malaya Peninsula.

PERIL TO SINGAPORE

Confessed inability of the British Navy to dominate Malaya waters and Thailand's quick sell-out to Japan appeared to various well-informed British to have heightened Singapore's peril from the Japanese drive through Malaya.

The Japanese, pouring into the fight through Thailand, were admittedly well-equipped and operating with strong aerial support.

Six hundred refugees from Penang, including a 27-day-old baby and an octogenerian grandmother, were expected to be transported soon from Singapore to Batavia, N. E. I.

There was no important news from the east coast of Northern Malaya, where the British were last reported holding a line somewhere south of the Japanese-captured coastal air base of Kota Bharu.

Besieged Hongkong, second big British naval base in the Far East, was subject to Japanese air attacks and pounding by Japanese artillery planted on the mainland in Kowloon, a mile from the island.

[A Tokio communique said today the Japanese Navy had sunk one gunboat and six torpedo boats and heavily damaged destroyer, two gunboats and another vessel in Hongkong waters. Japanese warships were also shelling island fortifications, the communique added.]

From Hongkong itself belated dispatches, the last one dated last night, reported Americans on the island were all right and said the island was strong enough to resist all attempts at invasion. This latter statement, however, appeared superseded by British reports that the island could not hold out indefinitely.

The London News Chronicle's miltary critic attributed British setbacks to "failure of inter-service co-operation."

"We lack commanders," he said, "who can be trusted to recognize new factors in the organization of modern defense. Men without this perception should be ruthlessly deprived of their commands."

The Daily Mail said in an editorial: "It comes back to Poland, Norway, France, Greece, Crete —five devastating lessons—and still we have failed to profit. If any changes in the High Command are deemed necessary they should be made without delay."

Japanese Fifth Column Work In North Malaya Described

Associated Press Photographer Tells How Troops In Civilian Garb Entered Fighting Area From Thailand

The following story of Japanese fifth-column infiltration and jungle fighting in Malaya was written by a staff photographer of the Associated Press in the Far East who has just returned to Singapore after a tour of the battle lines.

DEC 18 1941

By FRANK NOEL

[By the Associated Press]

Singapore, Dec. 17—I have just returned from a week on the northwestern Mayala front, where I found the British defense forces combatting the menace of a Japanese fifth column and forming a line behind an artillery barrage along the river Muda.

O;cers told me that, prior to the Japanese attack, Japanese fifith-columnist troops armed with submachine guns and dressed in Mayalan and Chinese costumes invaded northern Mayala and disappeared among the native populace.

I wa stold that some Japanese troops who entered from Thailand were clad in the yellow robes of Buddhist priests or disguised as plantation laborers.

Deserted Villages

Immediately behind the front I found the British military transport moving up speedily and efficiently through deserted villages despite the confused nature of the fighting up ahead and the presence of Japanese planes. Some of these planes closely resemble Grman Junkers dive bombers, according to men who have seen the originals elsewhere.

The British line was placed on the River Muda, officers said, because this stream, entering the Indian Ocean northeast of Panang, forms the best natural barrier in south Kedah province.

If the Japanese attempt to cross it, they will find themselves forced into the open for the first time after more than a week of American-style "Indian fighting" in the jungles and across rubber plantations.

At the start of the invasion, the Japanese crossed from Thailand at many points in small units equipped with one-man whippet gun-carriers or tanks and automatic weapons. These pushed ahead of the main Japanese forces along the lanes which in peacetime were traveled by bullock carts.

At various points south of the lines I met European women and children bound toward Singapore. The women seemed more concerned about the silverware and household goods they had left behind than about the Japanese planes which often roared overhead. I brought back a bull terrier pup for one little girl who had come on to Singapore without him.

Natives Head South

Most of the natives near the war zone also were heading south by automobile, bullock cart, bicycle, rickshaw or afoot.

Others showed no signs of expecting to leave. In fact, I drove through some villages which looked like mid-Western American towns on Saturday afternoon.

Shops and houses were closed, but the entire populace lined the streets just to see what was going on.

At one place I was charged a nickel for a single egg, although chickens were to be seen everywhr.e

Although the defenders of Malaya

are having a tough time, they haven't lost a certain British sense of humor.

The boys at one air base are still laughing about one of their number who opene dthe cockpit of his plane early one morning and found a ten-foot python coiled in the seat.

It was sound asleep, having crawled in to get out of the cold rain.

HONGKONG DEFIES CALL TO SURRENDER

DEC 18 1941

Governor Notifies Japanese Chiefs He Will Not Receive Such A Proposal

Lord Moyne Sends Message Encouraging Defenders To "Hold On"

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 17—Lord Moyne, Colonial Minister, disclosed tonight that Hongkong had rejected a second Japanese overture for its surrender and that he had sent the crown colony's governor, Sir Mark Young, a message approving his decision and telling him to "hold on."

[Axis sources reported a first Japanese ultimatum to Hongkong last Saturday. They said that the Japanese sent a mission to the island under a white flag in the morning and that when it returned Saturday afternoon before expiration of the deadline it was told that Hongkong would not capitulate.]

Lord Moyne said he received this cable from Sir Mark:

"After some further bombardment I have today received another letter signed by the Japanese military and naval commanders-in-chief asking me to confer about surrender on considerations of humanity. The following is the text of my reply.

Refuse To Negotiate

"'The Governor and commander-in-chief of Hongkong declines most absolutely to enter into any negotiations for the surrender of Hongkong and he takes this opportunity of notifying Lieut. Gen. Takaishi Sakai and Vice-Admiral Masaichi Niimi that he is not prepared to receive any further communication from them on the subject.'"

This was Lord Moyne's reply:

"Your refusal to consider the Japanese commanders' request to negotiate terms of surrender of Hongkong commands respect and approval of His Majesty's Government.

"Watched With Admiration"

"Your resolute leadership and stirring conduct of all defenders of the fortress are being watched with admiration and confidence by the whole empire and by our allies throughout the world.

"Hold on!"

The official communique issued at 11:10 this morning said the city had spent a quiet night apart from some shelling in the early morning hours. Little damage was reported, all Americans in the British crown colony were reported to be safe.

London Reports Enemy Ten Miles From Penang

New York, Dec. 17 (AP)—The London radio reported today that the Japanese drive in northwest Malaya now was but ten miles from the northern tip of insular Penang, and gave the following details as to the tactics of the Japanese advance:

"Mechanized columns, including tanks, some of them one-man tanks, push their way down the road, supported by dive-bombers. The purpose of these low-flying aircraft is to blast our defenses out of the way wherever possible. Once an opening has been made, the enemy's mechanized troops push on for a few miles and dig themselves in.

"Meanwhile the infantry of trained jungle fighters, many of them equipped with machine guns, deploys on either side and cuts its way through the jungle. Its object is to consolidate its position after the breach made by the mechanized spearheads. If this succeeds, the maneuver is completed."

Hongkong Quiet.

Hongkong, Dec. 17 (A. P.)—The official communique today said that Japanese-besieged Hongkong had spent a quiet night apart from some shelling in the early morning hours. Little damage was reported, all Americans in the British crown colony were reported to be safe.

TOKYO, Thursday, Dec. 18 (Official Radio Received by (AP)—Domei reported today that Japanese bombers attacked Hongkong again this morning, setting ablaze numerous military facilities."

Hongkong Bombarded

Hongkong, Dec. 16.—Delayed)—(AP)—Hongkong underwent several Japanese air raids today and a communique tonight said British artillerymen had silenced three mainland gun positions in day-long dueling.

Air raid casualties were said to have been light.

One Japanese plane was shot down and another was believed mortally winged by Hongkong anti-aircraft batteries, the communique said. The Japanese pilot of the first plane saved himself by parachute and paddled ashore in a collapsible rubber boat, it was added.

Hongkong

[By the Associated Press]

Chungking, Dec. 17—Chinese forces were reported tonight to have delivered successful attacks north of besieged Hongkong, compelling the Japanese to shift reinforcements to cope with a Chinese threat to their rear in the Tamshui area.

Tamshui is about twenty eight miles north of the mainland border of Hongkong on Japanese-conquered Kowloon Peninsula and about the same distance east of the Canton-Kowloon Railroad.

Chinese dispatches said Japan's conquest of Kowloon was at a high cost of mechanical equipment which they said was destroyed by British gunfire.

Push Other Drives

These reports said the Chinese also had increased their pressure on other mainland Japanese position, particularly in Chekiang province, just south of Shanghai.

Mokanshan, the mountain resort near Shanghai once popular with Europeans, has been besieged for a week and a fierce battle is in progress there between the Japanese and Chinese forces which have pierced their defnses, it was reported.

The Chinese Central News said United States and British consular officials and all other Britihh and American nationals had been detained by the Japanese in the Port of Amoy. Other reports said Fukien Province officials ordered that Britons and Americans be given all possible protection.

Report Macao Occupied

LONDON, Dec. 17 (AP)—Reuters today quoted a Melbourne radio dispatch from Hong Kong as reporting that Japanese forces had occupied the Portuguese Island of Macao, 45 miles southwest of Hong Kong.

SARAWAK INVADED AT TWO POINTS, BRITISH STATE

English Destroy Oil Wells, Refineries, Machinery before Withdrawal

INDIES ARMY MOBILIZED

By The Associated Press

Batavia, Dutch East Indies, Dec. 17.—A direct hit was scored by a Dutch bomber on a Japanese destroyer covering enemy landing operations at Miri, Sarawak, a communique announced today.

Miri is on the north coast of the island of Borneo, close to the border between Sarawak, a British possession, and British North Borneo. The southern part of Borneo is Dutch.

The communique also said raiders bombed Terempa, on Anambas Island, causing some damage, Saturday and followed up with a machine-gun attack Sunday. Anambas is a pinpoint of land off the Malaya east coast in the outer fringe of the Dutch islands.

Follows 'Last Warnings'

Aneta, the official news agency, said that the attack on Terempa followed a series of "last warnings" to the Netherlands East Indies, broadcast by the Tokio radio. The broadcasts sought to incite the Indonesian (native) population to revolt against the Dutch administration.

Authoritative circles have received many indications, Aneta said, that the Japanese offensive in the Orient is aimed chiefly at conquering the N. E. I. for their vital supplies of rubber, tin, oil and other raw materials.

Official circles said the Department of Asiatic Affairs holds "very important material" on Japanese fifth column work in this territory which will be published shortly. Virtually all the Japahese here, who never numbered more than 7000, were interned immediately on the outbreak of the war.

Official circles said the Japanese had engaged in espionage in every field and propaganda among radical native groups to incite them against the Western population.

Jap Troops Attack Land of White Rajahs

Sarawak Is Absolute Autocracy Ruled by Venturous Brooke Clan for a Century

UNIRED SARAWAK

(By Associated Press)

Japanese troops have landed in Sarawak, the exotic land of the white rajahs in northwestern Borneo, where the national sport is cock fighting. It used to be head hunting.

To keep the invaders from grabbing the rich little country's oil, rubber, gold, silver, nickel and camphor and other drugs, its ruler, Sir Charles Vyner Brooke, has the aid of British, Dutch and native troops.

Sarawak, pronounced "Sah-rah'-wa," was an absolute autocracy under the venturous Brooke clan for nearly a century. Last September Sir Charles set up a constitutional regime in a ceremony at Kuching, the capital.

There Malay chieftains in brilliant sarongs, silk gowned Chinese gentry and painted tribal headmen clad in feather crowns and loincloths, pledged their loyalty to the descendant of James Brooke on a platform where Sarawak's colors were flanked by the stars and stripes, the British union jack, and the Kuomingtang emblems of China.

Kuching is more than 300 miles down the coast from Miri where the Japanese landed, and except for about 50 miles of highways near the capital there are few roads in the entire country, which approximates New York state in size.

The many streams and rivers threading the country carry the natives in their canoe past brown communal huts built on poles with weather-boarding of dried palm leaves.

James Brooke, first white ruler of the country of 500,000 Dayaks intermixed with Malay and Chinese, was a British soldier who sailed his yacht to the shores of the country in 1840, aided the Sultan of Brunei against an insurgent band and two years later was made rajah, or boss of the land, in his own right.

His fearless campaigns against the head hunters, Asiatic pirates and Chinese insurgents rapidly won the loyalties of the tribes. Organized government was introduced into the barbaric land, commerce was developed, and plagues were eliminated.

The United States in 1934 was the first to recognize Sarawak and although the British took over its protection in 1888 it remains an independent state except for British control of its foreign policy.

Sir Charles and the Ranee Sylvia have three children, all girls, and the monarch solved the problem of succession by creating the constitutional regime and deposing his heir apparent, the Rajah Mudah, or crown prince—a nephew named Anthony Walter Daybell Brooke.

The best known of the Brooke girls is the glamorous "Baba," one-time resident of Hollywood who risked her father's displeasure by marrying a British wrestler, Bob Gregory. They later were divorced.

Lisbon Hears Of Grave Events In Colony Of Timor: Cabinet Meets

Lisbon, Dec. 17 (AP)—The Government announced late tonight that the Cabinet had held a special meeting "to deal with grave events which may have occurred in the colony of Timor."

It did not say what these events were, but said clarification was being awaited before informing the country fully.

Timor is an island, half Portuguese and half Dutch, lying in the East Indies between Java and Australia, only 450 miles from Darwin, Australia.

Portugal Denies Tension.

Lisbon, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—The Portuguese press published prominently today DNB reports from Berlin quoting Foreign Office circles as denying rumors of tension in German-Portuguese relations. DNB said that the qualified spokesmen called the rumors unfounded, "started by those who want to jeopardize Salazar's new State policy."

Dr. Antonio de Oliveira Salazar is Premier, Foreign Minister and War Minister of Portugal.

Governmental quarters flatly denied reports from Hongkong, credited to the London Daily Express correspondent, that Japanese forces had occupied Macao, Portuguese colony on the south China coast, across the Canton River mouth from Hongkong. The governmental organ, Diario da Manha, in an editorial today, warned the public against "light-headed persons who invent stories and spread alarming rumors."

The editorial emphasized that the Government, with its policy of "internal and external order," had safeguarded national honor, dignity and independence. "We have not been taken by surprise and were not unprepared when the war started," the newspaper said.

It recalled Dr. Salazar's phrase: "Only those who conquer with honor—with justice and truth—really conquer." The editorial was headed, "Conquer With Honor."

Japs Flying Nazi Planes

London, Dec. 17 (AP)—The Air Ministry news service declared today that the Japanese are using both Messerschmitt 109's and 110's—German fighter planes—in the air battle of Malaya.

The ME-109 is a single-engined plane and the ME-110 is the twin-engined. Both can be used as bombers.

The Japanese previously had been reported manufacturing fighter planes based on Messerschmitt models, but there had been no indication before that they possessed planes made in Germany.

[These planes may have been shipped to Japan via Siberia before the German-Russian war. A more feasible arrangement, however, would have been to use German plans and engineers and Japanese workmen in Japan.]

The news service said an R. A. F. pilot first encountered four ME-110's but evaded them and his United States-built Brewster Buffalo fighter then outdistanced five Japanese naval aircraft. Later, it said, he was attacked by three ME-110's, but got away by diving into clouds. In a fourth encounter he eluded another group of ME-109's.

Shanghai Refugee Ship Arrives Safely After 2 Air Attacks

Singapore, Dec. 17 (AP).—Several hundred refugees from Shanghai and other Chinese ports reached Singapore safely today aboard a 6,000-ton vessel which weathered a Japanese air attack five minutes after her captain learned the war in the Far East had started.

The captain was on the point of summoning the ship's company to announce the news when Japanese planes dived low and spattered the decks with machine-gun fire.

Later the same day the Japanese made a second attack, but the vessel avoided hits by constantly changing course.

The officers said the women and children behaved splendidly.

1,035 Jap Boats Tied Up in B.C.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Dec. 17 (AP)—A total of 1,035 Japanese fishing boats have been tied up in British Columbia under federal defense regulations since the outbreak of war with Japan, Mayor Fred Hume of New Westminster announced today.

A black-robed priest blesses the ground with holy water and a Protestant chaplain recites the committal ceremony—then the living move back to their war jobs amid the blackout.

"Don't say we buried with sorrow," said the graying chaplain of the fleet, Capt. William A. Maguire. "Say we buried with conviction. Our men died manfully and we will wipe out that treachery, come what may. The spirit of these men lives on. I can feel it.

"Each grave is marked and each body carefully identified for shipment back to the mainland after the war is fought and won—back to home towns."

Garden Flowers Used.

Honolulu's gardens have been stripped of flaming poinsettias—Christmas flowers—golden asters and many-hued hibiscus flowers—each grave has a small bouquet—Honolulu's tribute.

The first bodies were taken to Nuuanu cemetery, overlooking the palm-fringed sea from which the treacherous attack was launched. When all the space there was taken, trenches were dug atop Red Hill, overlooking Pearl Harbor.

Navy Dead Buried at Honolulu

Services of Simple Dignity Befit Gallantry With Which Fleet's Men Fought.

By Eugene BURNS

Honolulu, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—Day after day, just before sunset, with simple dignity befitting the gallantry with which they died for their country, America's finest have been buried at Honolulu. They have been laid to rest on green hills overlooking the sea—there to remain until a peaceful time when the bodies might be returned to their native soil.

This has been going on since Monday, December 8, the day after Japanese bombings brought death to ninety-one officers and 2,638 enlisted men of the navy and 168 of the army. A tight-lipped group of six-foot marines raise their rifles and fire three volleys over the fresh earth as nightfall approaches fast. A bugle sounds taps.

Two Chaplains on Hand.

"I was in the thickest of the attack," said Chaplain Maguire. "Our 130,000,000 Americans would glow if they could have seen how our boys died. It was glorious. Nary a whimper! They manned their guns until the decks buckled with the heat."

The chaplain wiped his blue eyes.

"Ah, how game," he said. "At the Marine Barracks, where the wounded lay that Sunday, if a worse wounded man was brought in, a man with a leg missing or an arm missing would say 'for God's sake I'm all right, put him on the table. Take me out of here.'

"And while all this heroism was going on, those Japs still were machine gunning—do you get the picture I'm telling you, lad? Badly burned men without clothes carrying blankets begged me, 'I want to get back to my ship. I want to get back to my gun.'

"Ah, lad, if every American had seen how quietly, yes quietly, men suffered, how gallantly they died, how courageously they thought about the next man, they would glory. They would swear our front line will never give."

CHINA URGES POOL OF ALLIED POWER

Unified Command Advocated by Chungking.

Chungking, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—An official Chinese statement urged the A. B. C. D. Powers today to pool all their military, naval and air strength and material resources, and to establish a unified general staff and transport and supply service, for the fight with Japan. The statement was a review of President Roosevelt's own review of Japanese-American relations issued on Monday in a message to Congress.

"China will do her part," the statement said. "China's response already has been given.

"In the words of Chiang Kai-shek's message to President Roosevelt, 'we offer to this common front all we have and all we are.' China has full confidence in the American determination to see the war through to complete victory.

"Mr. Roosevelt's ringing confidence matches the iron determination of China's leader, Chiang Kai-shek. China has long recognized Mr. Roosevelt as a world leader. China believes her own determination and that of Americans must be linked together by full co-operation of defense and counter-attack."

REDS NOT ASKED BY BRITAIN FOR WAR ON JAPAN

Commons Told Declaration by Soviet Is Not Part of Joint Plan.

ALLIED EFFORT CO-ORDINATED

But What Has Been Done Toward Creating Single Council Is Not Disclosed

DEC 18 1941

London, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—Government spokesmen told the House of Commons today that all steps had been taken to co-ordinate British, American and Allied war plans in accord with President Roosevelt's call for world-scale strategy, but that Great Britain had not asked Russia to declare war on Japan.

These statements were made by Richard Law, Under-Secretary for Foreign Affairs, and Major Clement R. Attlee, Lord Privy Seal, in a session largely devoted to the question of co-operation among anti-Axis allies.

Mr. Law said that China had full legal status as a British ally.

Shortly afterward United States Ambassador John G. Winant, in a brief speech to a private meeting of about 200 members of Parliament, said that steps were being taken to insure Allied co-operation. Winant spoke in a parliamentary committee room.

Foreshadowing a querulous tone in a forthcoming secret debate on the war situation, members of the House bombarded the Government with questions about the creation of a unified Allied war council, the adequacy of the empire defense, strategy in the Far East and joint British-American efforts to obtain naval bases in Eire.

The Government, despite statements that Allied war plans were being co-ordinated, gave no clear indication of its stand on the idea of an over-all war council. President Roosevelt's concept was brought into the debate by Edgar Louis Granville.

Underestimate Charged.

Duncan Sandys, financial secretary of the War Office, rejected what he called the implications of a question by Russell Thomas on a gross underestimate by the High Command of the British position in Burma, but said that information was being received on the subject.

DEC 18 1941

Replying to alarm expressed by Reginald Purbrick over loss of airfields in Malaya, Mr. Sandys gave assurances that all officers were fully acquainted with instructions for defending airfields. This has been a subject of particular parliamentary concern since the British lost the Greek island of Crete to the Nazis' "vertical envelopment."

Hubert Beaumont, Labor, proposed an increase of £100,000,000 ($400,000,000) annually in the allowance for dependents of service men in an effort to correct what he called discrimination in favor of men earning large wages in reserved occupations.

One member, supporting the measure, declared "We are laying up an awful legacy of social unrest for the end of the war."

Lady Astor, Conservative, said: "I blame the Cabinet as a whole for pay discrimination which is creating bitterness and affecting troop morale. The unfairness of it is simply appalling. The Cabinet is entirely out of date and far behind the country."

Capt. Frederick J. Bellenger, Labor, commented: "We are now selecting our commissioned ranks in the R. A. F. very largely, or to a certain extent, on the size of their bank balances."

London, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, Britain's Commander-in-chief in India, has completed arrangements for co-ordination of the British Indian and Far Eastern commands to meet Japan's assaults on the empire, Reuters reported today in a new Delhid dispatch.

Foes Of U. S. Called Enemies Of Soviets

Question Of Aid To America Up To Moscow, Russian General Declares

New York, Dec. 18 (AP)—Maj. Gen. Alexander Reppin, head of the Russian military mission here, said today "all enemies of the United States now also are the enemies of the Soviet Union."

DEC 18 1941

He made the statement in reply to a question as to when Russia's armed forces might be able to help this country fight Japan.

"The decision must be made in Moscow, of course, when the moment arrives, in the opinion of our Government's leaders, for the Soviet Union to consider aiding her allies in their war with Japan," he said.

"We are fighting for a righteous cause and we will win," he asserted. "With the England and the United States, we shall beat our common foe, an dthe hubjugated peoples will once again win their freedom."

colonies, was reported in European press dispatches today.

French Colonial Secretary Rene Platon is planning to go to Occupied France, then to Berlin with an expert of the French African administration toward the end of the week, informed sources in Vichy said.

Vice Admiral Jean Darlan is expected to follow Platon to assist in the talks, the Swiss newspaper Neue Zuercher Zeitung further reported. Presumably these conferences were somehow connected with Admiral Darlan's recent visit to Italian Foreign Minister Count Ciano.

The Ankara, Turkey, correspondent of the Neue Zuercher Zeitung said airfields were being enlarged and increased in Bulgaria along with repair facilities for German planes.

The correspondent said Bulgaria's declaration of war against the United States had "caused much anxiety in Turkey."

"There are signs that part of the German soldiers withdrawn from Russia will be stationed in Bulgaria. Great activity is reported at Bulgarian airfields which are being increased in number and enlarged in size in all haste. Repair shops are being constructed for German planes."

German naval units are being concentrated at the Bulgarian Black Sea ports of Varna and Burgas, he reported, but added:

"Turkey doesn't believe Bulgaria will attack during the winter . . . She watches the approach of spring with anxiety."

Italy Frees French Prisoners.

Another Swiss newspaper, the Gazette of Lausanne, said the Darlan-Ciano conference may prove to be the turning point toward a French-Axis peace. It was noted here that the Italian Government had agreed to liberate the few French prisoners of war she had

Russians Throw German Troops Back 100 Miles

Plunge Through Hole In Nazi Lines Made By Rout At Kalinin

Some Run Without Fight

Moscow, Thursday, Dec. 18 (AP)—Red Army troops were reported officially early today to have thrown the Germans back almost 100 miles beyond this capital in their 16-day winter offensive to lift the sieges of Leningrad in the north and Sevastopol in the south.

A communique said that the Soviets reclaimed many more villages besides the hundreds already seized in the continuing two-week drive against the frost-bitten legions of Adolf Hitler. Specifically it cited the recapture of Aleksin, 85 miles south of Moscow between Serpukhov and Tula.

Plunging through the hole made in the German lines by the rout of six divisions from Kalinin, 95 miles northwest of the capital, the fast-moving Red offensive was said by the government to have taken Vysokoe, 40 miles to the west. Other reports said another town five miles farther on had been captured.

Here, what was left of these six German divisions apparently was too disorganized to offer effective resistance, while in the Tula region, 100 miles south of the capital, some Germans were said to be so dispirited that they were taking to their heels without putting up a fight.

(The British radio, heard by CBS, said the Germans had been driven back 90 miles in a week in the Orel sector 200 miles south of Moscow, and about 60 miles in the Tikhvin region southwest of Leningrad.

(The German communique admitted German troops were retreating, but said it was a part of a systematic shortening of the lines following abandonment of aggressive operations for stationary winter warfare.)

From north to south, the situation was thus presented by various sources:

Leningrad area: A swift Soviet advance in some sectors did not permit the Germans to pick up all their wounded. Some German groups were trapped, and the Red Army is heavily engaged in mopping them up, Tass announced.

(The Finnish communique said the Russians were attacking all along the Svir River front, between Lake Ladoga and Onega to the northeast of Leningrad, and also on the Eastern front north of Lake Onega. One thousand Russians were killed among the Svir River yesterday, it said, and several hundred more in the fighting to the north.

(The British radio said Chudovo, 66 miles southwest of Tikhvin and about 10 miles northeast of Volkhovo on the Leningrad-Moscow railway, had been captured.)

Moscow area: Pravda said 90 villages were in Russian hands again as a result of fighting on Monday.

(The British radio said Novopetrovsk, near Volokolamsk in the northwest sector, was in Russian hands again.)

Tula area, 100 miles south of Moscow: the 296th "Deer's Head" German division was being pursued, and nine undamaged tanks, fully fueled and munitioned, were found abandoned by their crews who fled without shooting, Pravda reported.

Orel area, 200 miles south of Moscow: The Soviet communique said 70 villages were recaptured yesterday, and 41 the day before. Volovo, 100 miles northeast of Orel and 50 miles southeast of Tula, again is in Russian hands.

(Kursk area, 280 miles south of Moscow: The Russians took 50 more villages and still farther south they are threatening the industrial center of Stalino, 65 miles northwest of Rostov, said the British radio, quoting Moscow reports.)

Pravda's correspondent said that the Germans lost 1,500 dead in five days of counter-attacks and Russian surprise night attacks in one sector, and that an SS German regiment was smashed in a fight for the town of "K" near Tula.

Sixty railway cars were smashed in a Soviet bombing of a station in Leningrad region, the Russian communique said.

Some Germans Run Away Without a Fight—Communications Re-established Between Leningrad and Moscow.

Moscow, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—On the whole Russian front, from far north of long-besieged Leningrad to the Black Sea, the Red Army was reported on the offensive today, taking hundreds of towns and villages in one sector after another in a mighty winter sweep against the Germans, who were said in some instances to have run without a fight.

Six divisions routed from Kalinin, on the upper Volga, ninety-five miles northwest of Moscow, were reported offering little effective opposition to a rapid Soviet advance which had reached two towns forty and forty-five miles west of that city, recaptured only yesterday. Vysokoe was one of the two points captured.

[The British Broadcasting Corporation said today that all communications between Leningrad and Moscow had been re-established as a result of the Soviet offensive. The broadcast was heard here by NBC.

[Another British broadcast, this one picked up by CBS, said that the Germans had been driven back more than ninety miles in the Orel sector and about sixty miles from Tikhvin which is south of Moscow.]

In the southwest, a suppliment to the official communique said that seventy villages were taken yesterday in addition to forty-one settlements reclaimed by the Soviet troops on Monday. Large booty was reported falling to the Russians.

An S. S. regiment of Germans was said to have been smashed, leaving 200 dead, in a battle for "K," in the region of Tula, south of the capital. In another sector, said Pravda, 1,500 Germans died in five days of fighting featured by German counter-attacks and sudden Soviet night onslaughts.

Far to the north, said a Finnish communique, the Russians were also attacking all along the Svir River front, between Lakes Ladoga and Onega, to the northeast of Leningrad, while farther north strong Soviet attacks also were being made.

Germans trapped in a rapid Soviet advance in one Leningrad sector were being mopped up, a Tass report said. Remnants of the six divisions driven from Kalinin, totaling 90,000 at full strength, were declared to be retreating westward under lethal Russian fire.

Col.-Gen. Adolf Strauss, 62-year-old star of Polish and French campaigns, who heads the Ninth German Field Army, was identified by the Soviet Information Bureau as the strategical victim in the battle ninety-five miles northwest of Moscow on the ice-bound upper Volga. Volovo, a railway junction 160 miles below the capital, was among several other populated centers reported regained.

In the north, Gen. Fedyuninsky's troops were reported by Tass to be wiping out trapped German groups on one Leningrad sector where the Germans retreated without taking time to gather up their wounded. Soviet aviation there was said to have destroyed sixty railway cars in an attack at one station.

Istra, just northwest of Moscow, was reported burned to the ground by the Germans, but the Russians said that their recapture of Klin was too rapid for the Germans to carry out similar destruction. Below Moscow, in the Tula sector, a Pravda dispatch said that pursuit of the 296th ("Deer's Head") German division was continuing. Nine tanks in complete working order and supplied with fuel and ammunition were reported captured in this area.

Volovo Recaptured

Volovo, a railway junction 160 miles below the capital, was among populated centers reported regained.

Soviet troops of Lieut. Gen. Ivan Maslenikov and Maj. Gen. Yushkenvich were said to have "distinguished themselves particularly" in driving the invaders yesterday from Kalinin.

Six Divisions Routed.

"They routed the 86th, 110th, 129th, 161st, 162d and 251st divisions which belonged to this (Ninth) army," said a special communique broadcast by the Moscow radio. "Great booty was taken which is now being counted. The fleeing enemy is being pursued and annihilated by our troops."

The recapture of Kalinin followed by a day the hoisting of the Soviet flag again above Klin, midway between that city and Moscow, after fighting in which Russians said that the Germans had lost 13,000 killed and wounded. The information bureau said that sixteen German planes were destroyed on Monday, against a Russian loss of four, and reported that Soviet airmen yesterday destroyed forty-three German tanks, thirty armored cars, 640 trucks and other supplies and "annihilated about a regiment of infantry."

Nazi Supplies Captured.

The Communist party newspaper Pravda declared that ninety villages were regained on Monday in Soviet operations along the central front. War supplies captured in the Klin area were said to include 152 tanks, six tankettes, twenty-eight armored cars, 182 guns, 356 machine-guns and 750 automatic rifles, a large increase over the preliminary figures announced officially yesterday.

Pravda also said that pursuit of the Germans continues southwest of Moscow in the sectors of Yelets, Livny and Yefremov. This area is about 100 miles east of Orel and about mid-way between Moscow and Kharkov. On December 15, the newspaper said, the Red army retook forty-one settlements.

REDS DRIVE ON, PUSH GERMANS BACK 40 MILES

Nazis Declared Offering Only Rear-Guard Resistance At Best

Success Of Counter-Attack Now Said To Mean Security For Moscow

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 17—Large-scale Red army maneuvers are in progress near the Japanese Manchoukuoan border in Siberia, the Chungking radio reported tonight in quoting a broadcast from the Soviet station at Khabarovsk.

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Correspondent

With the Red Army on the Moscow Front, Dec. 17—Crunching down on the rear of the retreating German army, the Russian steamroller has rumbled forward more than forty miles beyond the starting point on the flanks of the Moscow front, pushing the invaders back to a distance that means security for the Soviet capital.

Five Nazi divisions have fallen north of Moscow and several more have been destroyed to the south as the Red army defeated the Germans in the greatest battle and first major anti-Axis victory in this war in Europe.

Volokolamsk Fall Near

Over icy, snow-packed battlefields, the Soviet forces are continuing to rush forward, closing in on Volokolamsk, key to the central front northwest of Moscow. Its fall appeared imminent tonight.

The Russian troops, their steel helmets painted white, ride in trucks similarly camouflaged or on horses whitened by the frost on their coats.

The Germans, offering at best only rear-guard resistance, have been falling back steadily under the Russian pressure.

There are no signs as yet of their taking a stand on any definite line.

"Running Too Fast"

After two weeks of counter-offensive, the Russian troops are complaining:

"We can't keep up with the Germans; they are running so fast."

Two parties of American and British correspondents have followed the Russian advance north and south of Moscow.

One group has gone north through the recaptured towns of Solnetch-Nogorski and Nikolskoye, the other south to Kashira, where the German attempts to encircle Moscow were turned int oa triumphant Russian counter-smash.

Abandoned Nazi Arms

The entire scene is one of vast, wind-swept, snow-covered expanses, populated by swarming Russian army forces and littered here and there by fallen German arms and the bodies of German soldiers, jutting grotesquely from snowdrifts which have formed around them.

The Russian drive which saved Moscow started near Kievo, twenty miles north of Moscow. Red infantry under General Vlasov took that town December 2 in a single rush.

They then pressed forward through four more villages and out-flanked Solnetchnogorski, forcing the Germans to retreat December 10.

The Germans left so hastily that the town showed few signs of destruction. It now is humming with life again. Refugees have returned, and even the electricity still works, despite the nineteen-day German occupation.

Front Moves On 3 Miles

The front then moved on three miles west of Nikolskoye.

The roar of artillery can be heard there as the Russians push the Germans on toward Volokolamsk.

DEC 18 1941

The Russians freed the Moscow-Leningrad highway at Dubinini near Klin, taking the latter town and beating the German Twenty-third and One Hundred and Sixth Infantry, Thirty-fifth Motorized and First and Sixth Tank divisions in that sector.

A German non-commissioned officer, Albert Keller, of Aachen, was taken prisoner there. He told correspondents:

"Resistance was too strong. That's why we retreated. My battalion lost about fifty per cent."

Cavalry Leads Attack

South of Moscow, Red Army cavalry and guardists commanded by General Belov led the counter-attack which broke off a German salient in the Stalinogorsk sector.

The German advance guard reached the village of Piatnitsa, about sixty miles south of Moscow, just south of Kashira, but their force appeared to have been spent and they retreated quickly.

The immense power plant at Kashira, which supplied most of the electricity for Moscow, remained intact, with scant signs of battle nearby.

Go Ahead Without Tanks

Red army cavalry and infantry which had been held in reserve to await a strategic moment bore the brunt of the battle and have led the pursuit of the beaten German units.

Often without tanks, these Russian masses cut the German armored forces into small groups and wiped them out with ambushed artillery and even with hand grenades and gasoline-filled bottles.

The Germans left rear-guard groups consisting of one infantry battalion and three or four companies of automatic riflemen supported by some mortars to try to hold up the Russian advance while the main force withdrew.

armies are retreating across frozen Russia at the rate of four or five miles a day, but still too fast to bury their dead or do anything but destroy buildings and fight small actions, CBS Correspondent Larry Lesueur reported tonight from the field.

Lesueur said he had been traveling with the red army in the wake of the Germans in a war which apparently had not changed greatly since Napoleon's retreat from Moscow in 1812.

"Winter prevents the German use of wide fields for maneuver," he said, "and the woods are out of the question for tanks and trucks; so the fighting now is for roads.

"Therefore, just as in 1812, the bulk of the army plods along on foot through snow, faces drawn from fatigue, ammunition and food dragged on sleds by horses whitened by frost."

Besides burning the wooden houses they find still intact, he said, the Germans were mining roads and blasting bridges.

"The actual fighting," he continued, "now consists of Germans retreating and leaving behind all damaged and unserviceable tanks and vehicles and fighting rear guard actions at fortified points and behind houses.

"The red army sends out mobile ski men to outflank these points and the Germans immediately withdraw when they perceive the danger of being cut off."

Lesueur said that in the wake of the armies he saw many civilians returning to pick among the ruins of their homes along roadsides littered with smashed equipment and the frozen bodies of soldiers and horses.

He filed his report from Solnetchnogorski, 40 miles west of Moscow.

Nazi Retreat Across Russia Continues

NEW YORK, Dec. 17 (AP)—German planation of a German retreat which the Russians say is swiftly gaining momentum both before Moscow and in the south. The Germans declared recently that they had given up any attempt to capture Mossow this winter. Dispatches from Berlin during the past few days have spoken only of local operations.]

DEC 18 1941

The communique made no other mention of ground developments along the eastern front, but said that strong German air formations were battering the Russians on the Don River front in the south and on the central front before Moscow.

Reds Attack Finns Heavily.

Helsinki, Dec. 17 (Official Radio received by A. P.).—The Russian forces which began a general offensive against the Finnish lines yesterday are continuing heavy attacks at several places along the Eastern Finnish front and on the Svir River sector between lakes Ladoga and Onega, after losing several hundred killed, the Finnish command said today. One thousand Russians were killed in unsuccessful attacks in the Osta sector at the southern end of Lake Onega yesterday, the communique said, and several hundred more in vain assaults on the southern end of the eastern front. Attacks in the far north also were reported.

Germans Shorten Lines.

Berlin, Dec. 17 (Official radio received by A. P.).—German troops are engaged in shortening their lines in various sectors along the Russian front, the German High Command declared today.

"In the course of transition from aggressive operations to stationary warfare for the winter months, necessary improvements involving the shortening of lines now are being systematically undertaken on various sectors of the eastern front," the communique said.

[The statement apparently was the High Command's ex-

New York, Dec. 17. (AP)—The British Broadcasting corporation said today that "all communications between Leningrad and Moscow have been reestablished" as a result of the Soviet offensive. The broadcast was heard by NBC.

NEW YORK, Dec. 17 (AP).—The British radio reported tonight that the Germans had evacuated Mozhaisk, important town 57 miles from Moscow on the main highway to the west, the route of Napoleon's historic retreat from the Russian capital in 1812.

The broadcast was heard here by CBS and NBC.

Nazi Radio Harping On Difficulties In Russia

DEC 18 1941

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 17—The difficulties confronting the German armies in Russia have formed the theme of several recent broadcasts by the official German radio, heard in New York.

The Red army soldier is called "hardly inferior to the German soldier" and the "unbelievable difficulties" encountered in the eastern campaign are stressed.

One broadcast by the German wireless quoted Lieut. Col. George Soldan, writing in Adolf Hitler's newspaper, the Voelkischer Beobachter, as saying that the winter war was "an extremely hard struggle."

Amazed By Russ "Toughness"

He admitted that the great industrial resources of Russia were "underestimated by many people" and that the Soviet Army "showed an almost unimaginable power of resistance on all fronts."

In the first World War the Russian soldier was distinctly inferior to the German, Soldan said, but that is no longer true.

"The toughness and staying power of the Soviet soldiers is almost beyond belief. Whether the Soviet troops are driven merely by fear of the enemy or their political commissars, it is hard to say. The fact remains that they are offering most stubborn resistance. . . ."

Hardest Forces To Beat

He said it was clear that the Soviet army was not trying to avoid battle "but always endeavored to offer stubborn resistance from strongly fortified positions in order to prevent any further advance of the German armies into the interior of the Soviet Union."

"The Soviets, in fact, were the most active and most aggressive enemy encountered by German troops in the present war thus far," he said.

Another commentator, Hans Fritsche, came nearest of any German radio spokesman to admitting that the German Army is on the defense.

"All the worries and all the work and all the hopes of the German people are centered on this German soldier where he is fighting; whether he is attacking or defending," he said in a broadcast recorded by CBS.

Under Continuous Strain

"If it should be necessary everything will be sacrificed for him. The obligation of the German fatherland toward its soldiers, who are fighting under the most severe conditions, is in this war the factor which regulates the daily life."

The British radio, heard by NBC, quoted the Berlin correspondent of a Swedish paper as saying that "on the Leningrad front as on the Donets, the Russians are attacking with ever-increasing volume. Often these attacks are taking place at night. The Germans are under continuous strain and can find no sleep at all."

An Italian radio commentator, Mario Appelius, told his listeners "the German general staff retains full control of its nerves and its reason. German organization is tackling the Russian winter. Therefore, all is well." NBC reported the broadcast.

German General Killed.

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—DNB disclosed today that German Gen. Ernest Bernecker, an army corps commander, was killed some weeks ago on the Kharkov front in southern Russia.

GERMANS BUILT BUNKS IN VAIN

Moscow, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—Russian soldiers who recaptured Kalinin found that German soldiers had built four-tiered plank beds in houses throughout the Kalinin zone, "evidently intending to spend the winter there," a special correspondent of Pravda, Communist party organ, reported today. The report, broadcast by the Moscow radio, said that the Germans also had "evicted the population from whole villages."

RUSSIAN BOYS STALL TANKS

Moscow, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—The Germans were caught without crank handles to start their motors because all had been stolen by Russian boys, a writer in Izvestia reported from a village beyond recaptured Klin today.

Terming it an incident as heroic as it is funny, the writer, Evgenii Petrov, said that the Germans "had to run in a most natural manner, using their own feet."

"The boys were the first to scent that the Germans were about to flee," said the account. "They pilfered all the handles. As soon as our troops appeared in the village the boys solemnly presented them with the handles."

Nazi Withdrawal In Russia Puts British on Guard

DEC 8 1941

London, Dec. 17 (AP).—A government white paper, reflecting anew Britain's constant alertness against the possibility of Nazi invasion, declared today that the German withdrawal in Russia necessitated putting the British Home Guard at peak efficiency.

The statement explained a proposal for compulsory Home Guard service, asserting it was needed because the Guard's strength is not equally distributed throughout the British Isles and its training is not uniform.

The object is not expansion, it said, but reinforcement in areas where military needs demand larger forces than have volunteered.

LIBYA DRIVE TAKES BRITISH 150 MILES

Desert Troops Hammer At Rommel's Tank Force In Land Storms

Outflank Axis Reserves In Battles Beyond Gazala On Derna Road

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Dec. 17—British desert troops hammering at the waning tank strength of Gen. Erwin von Rommel amid raging sandstorms were more than 150 miles inside Libya tonight and still advancing.

DEC 18 1941

The main battle areas still were at Alem Hamza, thirty miles southwest of Gazala, and at Halegh el Oleidam, about the same distance West of Gazala. At the latter point the British rapidly outflanked Axis reserves and supply bases in a battle of annihilation with which they hope to open up the road to Derna.

Mop-Up Job At Gazala

Gazala itself was a third battle scene because some Axis units were clustered along the seacoast there, but the British apparently regarded this area as little more than a mopup job.

En route to Gazala from Tobruk the British communique said, forty more abandoned German and Italian guns and several anti-tank guns were picked up.

RAF planes operating under heavy weather difficulties again beat off Axis aircraft endeavoring to hold up the British, and also successfully attacked Axis transport columns moving to the rear, the communique said.

RAF Bombs Taranto

British bombers revisited Taranto, scene of their torpedo attack on the Italian fleet on Armistice Day a year ago, and attacked naval units at that base on Monday night, the RAF reported today.

The communique did not mention the results of the attack on the Italian mainland base, but said three planes were missing from all Mediterranean operations.

British Press Axis in Libya

Cairo, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—British pressure on the left flank of Gen. Erwin Rommel's battered North African army was maintained today, the British announced, and some progress was made despite bad weather and heavy sandstorms during the last twenty-four hours. In the area west of Tobruk, about forty more German and Italian guns were found abandoned, a British communique said, and several anti-tank guns were recovered.

Despite the weather, British fighting planes again were reported as successful in countering Axis air attacks on British ground troops. The R. A. F. also attacked Axis transport columns behind the battle front.

The move against Gen. Rommel's army was designed so to hem him in that he no longer could escape a battle to the finish.

Dispatches from the front said that there was a good possibility that the flanking maneuver, begun at Halegh el-Olebam, thirty miles west of Gazala, would cut off Gen. Rommel's main avenue of retreat along the highway to Derna.

The Axis forces, already reported badly crippled by the destruction of many armored units, then would have no alternative to accepting a finish fight—a fight which the British seem confident of winning. In an attempt to thwart the British plans, apparently-reenforced German air squadrons were striking at the lengthening supply lines of the British Imperial Eighth Army.

British quarters here were cheered, however, by reports that the Germans were becoming short on aviation fuel because of the successes achieved by the Royal Navy in hindering shipments from Europe. The main body of Gen. Rommel's forces, consisting of four Italian infantry divisions and parts of two German armored divisions, spread out along a line stretching fifteen to twenty miles southwestward from Gazala, was said to be fighting a stubborn rearguard action while trying to escape being outflanked. The British said yesterday that they had beaten off two Axis counter-thrusts and had delivered a heavy blow to the middle of the German-Italian line between Gazala and Alem Hamza. Fighting apparently was raging all along this line today.

At Gazala itself, three airdromes which formerly provided the main base for German fighter plane squadrons in eastern Libya were said to have been cleaned out. The fact that the British counter-thrusts south of Gazala and at the same time send an armored column westward in an encircling maneuver was taken here as an indication that the imperial forces were well supplied with tanks and armored cars.

The number of Axis prisoners taken in the Libyan campaign was reported to be mounting daily. In the Gazala sector, the British said yesterday that they had captured 1,100 prisoners while suffering very few casualties.

Italians Claim Captures.

Rome, Dec. 17 (Official Radio received by A. P.).—The Italian High Command announced today the capture of 800 British prisoners, several dozen guns and more than 100 tanks, motor trucks and armored cars in fierce fighting in Libya, but declared that the British continually were throwing fresh forces into the fray. Particularly heavy fighting, a communique said, raged all day yesterday in the Gazala region, forty miles west of Tobruk, with attacks and counter-attacks surging back and forth across the desert.

The Italians declared that their forces in the Salum and Bardia zones near the Libyan-Egyptian frontier held, but acknowledged that they were under heavy fire. Italian and German dive bombers were said to be blasting at British troop concentrations and supply lines along the entire front.

Nazi Stress Defensive Fight.

Berlin, Dec. 17 (Official Radio received by A. P.).—The defensive nature of the fight being waged by Germany's armed forces in Libya was emphasized again today by the German High Command, but it declared that a heavy toll was being exacted from attacking British troops. The daily communique told the story of operations on the North African front in two brief sentences:

"A heavy defensive battle west of Tobruk continued yesterday. Strong enemy attacks near Bardia were repulsed with considerable losses to the enemy."

Cruisers Battle Dive-bombers

American Correspondent With British Fleet in Mediterranean Describes Fight.

DEC 18 1941

By LARRY ALLEN.

This Associated Press war correspondent with the British Mediterranean Fleet, whose vivid descriptions of numerous air and naval battles in that sea have been among the war's journalistic highlights, is lying in a hospital in Alexandria. He is being treated for painful, but not critical, face and body bruises and the effects of a bad forty-five-minute plunge into oil-filmed water. How he got there is still hidden by the censorship, but the Germans announced yesterday that they had sunk a British cruiser off Alexandria. The following story may describe the action leading up to his injury.

Aboard a British Cruiser Battling Dive-bombers Off Libya, Dec. 14 (Delayed), (A. P.).—After a prolonged running fight against Axis air and undersea attackers, the crews of a squadron of British cruisers and destroyers stood by their battle posts three hours after nightfall tonight to repel a threatened new attack.

[No dispatch has come through from Allen to tell what happened after this alarm.]

The squadron loosed one of the heaviest barrages of the Mediterranean war in beating off the combined slashes of the Nazi dive bombers, torpedo planes and at least one submarine during the day. They pumped hundreds of shells into a rainy sky against Axis aircraft, which scattered bombs over a line of screening destroyers, spraying columns of water over the warships.

Target of Attacks.

The cruiser on which I write this seemed to be the principal target of the Nazi air attacks. One dive bomber machine-gunned the cruiser's boat deck and another gave me one of my biggest thrills of the war when it sent four big bombs screaming toward the cruiser. They exploded a few yards to starboard.

Then the planes began coming in waves—three to six at a time, weaving in and out of the clouds. Wearing a metal helmet and anti-flash gear to protect my head, face and hands, I watched the fight from the cruiser's bridge.

The battle began at 10:20 in the morning and this cruiser's first shells broke the leading formation, but one droned into a dive and sent two heavy bombs crashing into the sea between two destroyers. From then until nightfall, the skies were full of diving, twisting Nazi craft.

Destroyers Spot U-boat.

Once I saw a Nazi plane winging off in a cloud of smoke, losing altitude, but he got out of sight before I could count him downed. Once more destroyers, detecting a submarine, hustled around it to drop their lethal depth charges while other warships executed emergency turns to avoid torpedoes.

A little after four in the afternoon, with every warship in the squadron sending up a veritable hell of fire into the sky, I saw another dive-bomber go wabbling out of the fight into the West. At sundown the squadron was continuing on its course and for three hours thereafter nothing happened. Then came a new alarm.

Newsman Killed At Sea

DEC 18 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Alexandria, Egypt, Dec. 17—A. Massey Anderson, naval correspondent of Reuters, British news agency, has been killed in action at sea.

Anderson, who previously had been manager of Reuteurs in Alexandria, had witnessed many naval actions and had been praised for his coolness in attending some wounded men during the aerial bombardment of the aircraft carrier Illustrious last January.

(It is possible that Anderson was killed in the same action, not yet announced by the British, in which Larry Allen, Associated Press correspondent with the British Mediterranean fleet, was injured. Allen is now in an Alexandria hospital suffering from face and body bruises. Both Allen and Anderson were veterans of the Illustrious bombing.)

D. C. Man Gets Post in Cairo

CAIRO, Egypt, Dec. 17 (AP).—Frank Mauran, jr., of Washington arrived here today with the press and public information problems connected with the United States war effort.

Nazi Naval Base Raided.

London, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—British bombers attacked the German naval base of Wilhelmshaven in force last night and blasted at Bremen and other towns in northwestern Germany, the Air Ministry announced today. Large fires were left burning among the Wilhelmshaven docks, the announcement said.

Attacks also were aimed at the ports of Ostend, Dunkirk and Brest on the German-occupied coast of Belgium and France and mines were laid in German waters, the Air Ministry declared. The operations were carried out with the loss of only one plane, it added.

DEC 18 1941

Nazis Raid Two Ports.

Berlin, Dec. 17 (Official Radio Received by A. P.).—German air raiders blasted the British ports of Plymouth and Dover last night and also damaged a medium-sized supply ship in British waters, the German High Command announced today. It acknowledged that the Royal Air Force had dropped high explosives and incendiaries at several places in northwestern Germany's coastal area, doing some damage to civilian residences, but said that four raiders were downed.

DNB said that German pilots returning from the night raids on Britain reported they had left large fires burning in both Plymouth and Dover.

R. A. F. BOMBS SOUTH OF ITALY

British Raiders Also Attack Catania, in Sicily.

Rome, Dec. 17 (A. P.)—The Italian High Command acknowledged today that British air raiders had struck again at Brindisi, in southeastern Italy, and at Catania, on the island of Sicily—the second attacks reported on those ports in as many days.

The raiders damaged some buildings but caused no casualties, the daily war bulletin said. Anti-aircraft defenses were said to have spotted one British plane over Malta.

The British also dropped several bombs on Argostolion, in Axis-occupied Greece, but again failed to do any material damage, the Italians said. Italian and German planes were reported to have bombed targets on the British Mediterranean base of Malta repeatedly.

Rome Reports Cathedral Hit

[By the Associated Press]

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 17—A Rome radio broadcast today said Brindisi's cathedral was badly damaged in a British aerial attack upon that Adriatic seaport. (Brindisi is the seat of an archbishopric. The cathedral, once ruined by earthquakes, was restored in 1749.)

Lost Cruiser's Class Is Given

DEC 18 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 17—The Rome radio declared today that the British cruiser which the Germans reported yesterday had been sunk in the Mediterranean was of the Aurora class.

(Jane's Fighting Ships lists the Aurora as one of a class of four 5,220-ton cruisers, the other being the Arethusa, Galatea and Penelope. The ships carry a normal complement of 450 men and mount six 6-inch guns and lesser armament.)

Italian Sub Sunk: Britain

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 17—An Italian submarine carrying an Italian general and nineteen other military officers from Libya to Italy has been sunk in the central Mediterranean, the Admiralty said today.

The Admiralty said the general was not among fifty-three survivors who were made prisoners.

The general was identified as Guido

Lami.

The submarine was reported by the British to be the Ammiraglio Caracciolo, one of Italy's newest ocean-going submersibles, displacing 1,461 tons.

The British said the submarine was sunk by the destroyer Farndale.

General Lami was said authoritatively to be the chief executive engineer of Italian army headquarters in Rome.

H. M. S. Dunedin Sunk Down In Atlantic By German Torpedo

London Announcement Fails To Say Whether Any Of Crew Was Saved

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 17—The British light cruiser Dunedin has been sunk in the Atlantic, the Admiralty announced tonight.

The 4,850-ton ship, launched in November, 1918, carried a normal complement of 450 men and mounted six 6-inch guns.

A German submarine torpedoed the ship in the Atlantic, a communique said. Whether any of the crew was rescued was not announced.

Nazis Claim Another

The Germans claimed to have sunk a British cruiser this week off Alexandria in the Mediterranean, but the British have not confirmed it.

The communique said:

"The board of the Admiralty regrets to announce that H. M. S. Dunedin (Capt. R. S. Lovatt, O. B. E., R. N.) has been torpedoed in the Atlantic by a U-boat and has sunk. Next of kin of casualties have been informed."

BRITISH DENOUNCE NEUTRAL SHIP WAR

Assail U-Boat Attacks on French and Spanish.

DEC 18 1941

London, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—British officials denounced again today German submarine attacks against French and Spanish vessels and charged that they were seeking to involve Britain in war with the two countries. One source called the German attempts very crude and added that "I don't believe the French people were influenced by the sinkings, but we must be prepared."

The Admiralty, meanwhile, issued additional details on the sinking of the Spanish steamship Badalona, near the Spanish coast. A communique said that the captain of the U-boat refused to accept the assurance given by the captain of the Badalona that the ship was Spanish and the submarine fired three torpedoes which sank the ship and killed some of the crew.

"The methods adopted by the commander of this German U-boat bear a marked resemblance to those of the commander of the German U-boat who attacked the (French ship) St. Denis a few days ago," the Admiralty said. The French had announced that a submarine, "presumably British," sank the ship, but British authorities immediately denied that their submarines had been operating in the area.

Portuguese Ship Sunk

LISBON, Portugal, Dec. 17 (AP)—The 4,751-ton Portuguese freighter Cassequel tonight was reported sunk by a submarine on Monday after sailing from here Saturday for Portuguese West Africa.

A radio from the Portuguese freighter Maria Amelia reported some of the crew of forty-seven and nine passengers were rescued.

A later wireless from an unidentified foreign ship reported the rescue of thirteen crew men.

The Cassequel's owners reported one lifeboat with the captain and an undetermined number of passengers was still missing.

The Cassequel, which Portugal seized from Germany during the first World War, had made frequent trips to the United States, having been in New York last August.

There was no indication here as to the nationality of the submarine.

The sinking brings Portugal's merchant-shipping losses in this war to four, totaling about 14,000 tons.

2 New Yorkers Lost On British Vessels

LONDON, Dec. 17 (AP).—Two men who gave New York addresses were among 270 members of the British merchant or fishing fleets who have lost their lives "by enemy action" on undisclosed dates, the Ministry of War Transport announced today.

They were Siguid Anton Timm of 61 Point St., Brooklyn, and Henry Snowden of 126 Hamilton Ave., Staten Island.

British And Spanish Negotiators Confer

Serrano Suner And Hoare Reported In Conference By London Sources

London, Dec. 17 (AP)—A Reuters dispatch from Madrid reported a conference today between Spanish Foreign Minister Ramon Serrano Suner and Sir Samuel Hoare, the British Ambassador.

Rumania Merges Jewish Groups

BUCHAREST, Dec. 17 (Andi Agency to AP).—Chief of State General Ion Antonescu decreed today dissolution of the Union of Jewish Communities in Rumania, substituting central Jewish offices which alone will be authorized to represent Jewish group interests. All Jewish associations and societies will be absorbed in these new offices, and it was decreed that all Jews in Rumania, regardless of their nationality, must register with them.

RAIL WRECK KILLS 15

Sabotage Hinted as Trains Collide in Belgium.

NEW YORK TIMES (AP)

The German radio reported today that fifteen persons were killed and forty injured when a passenger train and a freight train collided at Tamines, near Namur, in Nazi-occupied Belgium.

The broadcast said an open switch caused the accident, indicating that this may have been another act of sabotage which has been harassing railroads in German-occupied territory.

NO SERB REGRETS

King Says Will to Fight Remains in Nation.

DEC 18 1941

London, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—Eighteen-year-old King Peter of Yugoslavia said today that his nation does not regret the decision to fight the Axis even though "masses of my people are being hanged or shot daily and hundreds of villages and towns are in ruins."

The King, who is here with his Government, addressed a National Defense Committee luncheon.

EXTEND CONSCRIPTION

Lords Pass Bill to Draft Men Up to Fifty.

London, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—The Government conscription bill which will make British women subject to compulsory national service and extend conscription of men for military services to the ages of 18½ to 50 years was enacted today by the House of Lords. It will take effect upon the King's assent.

The measure already had been pased in the House of Commons.

Previous conscription ages for men were 19 to 41.

Albania Declares War on the U. S.

Berne, Switzerland, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—Stefani, the Italian official news agency, reported today from Tirana that Albania had declared war on the United States.

British Raise Penalties On Food 'Scalpers'

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 17.—Lord Woolton, Minister of Food, today announced severe new penalties against "black market" food dealers as Christmas shoppers complained of high prices and the scarcity of delicacies.

He said the Government proposed to allow courts to charge offenders three times the value of the products sold in the black market or three times the price at which the food actually was illegally sold.

The Ministry of Food announced that 3,130 black market prosecutions were begun this year and 2,887 successfully ended.

Nazi Plot In Bolivia On Aid To U. S. Bared

Buenos Aires, Dec. 17 (AP)—Germany has plotted to sabotage the export of Bolivian tin and lead to the United States by wrecking railways over which the important war metals are shipped, it was reported today. These rail lines run through Chile as well as Bolivia.

The Nazi plot has been thwarted, it was stated in information received here from Bolivia, where the Government has imposed a strict censorship.

All Tagged For U. S.

All of Bolivia's large tin and lead production goes to the United States under a purchase agreement. The Germans were reported to have planned to sabotage the rail lines between the mines and the Chilean ports of Arica and Antofagasta.

In Chile, former Interior Minister Juan Antonio Rios was formally declared the winner in last Sunday's primary to choose the dominant radical party's nominee for a Presidential election in February, and Rios quickly reaffirmed his policy of collaboration with the United States.

"The realities of the moment demand full cooperation with the United States. No other policy is possible."

Public Meetings Banned

All public meetings in Argentina are banned under the country's new state of siege, but the Interior Ministry hinted an exception might permit a great pro-Roosevelt mass meeting scheduled for Saturday.

Two other pro-Democratic meetings, one honoring Winston Churchill, were still under consideration.

The Communist newspaper La Hora appeared here with blank spaces on one page showing last-minute precautionary deletions by the editors.

The pro-Fascist Crisol here, on the other hand, headlined: "Yankees steal oil from Colombians, foment revolutions, buy up politicians."

Noticias Graficas appeared here wtih two columns of blank space on the front page customarily devoted to editorial comment. The white space was topped by a headline saying "One is not able to speak badly of anyone."

Acting under the state of siege, the Government banned a great mass meeting scheduled for Saturday in homage to President Roosevelt. The demonstration had been arranged under the patronage of some of Argentina's leading public figures, including former President Marcelo T. Alvear, former President and Foreign Minister Julio A. Roca, former Foreign Minister Carlos Saavedra Lamas and a large group of senators and deputies.

Bolivia Thwarts German Plot

Nazis Planned to Sabotage Railroads in Order to Block Metal Cargoes.

Buenos Aires, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—A German plot to halt the export of Bolivian metals to the United States by sabotaging railways running to the Chilean ports of Arica and Antofagasta has been thwarted, according to information received here today. It also was learned that the Bolivian Government had imposed a rigid censorship, but whether this was connected with the reported Nazi plot was not clear.

Bolivia produces considerable tin and lead, all of which is going to the United States under a purchase agreement.

Latin America Backs U. S.

A state of siege in Argentina and quick moves in Mexico and Central America to give the United States tangible aid in war today marked Latin-America's contributions to hemisphere solidarity.

The Argentine police, formally notifying newspapers and news agencies of the Government's decree of a state of siege, ordered them to "abstain from comment on the decree or make biased publications which may perturb the political tranquillity of the country."

The announced purpose of the decree was to carry out "international promises contracted by the republic in recent Pan-American conferences."

Passage Rights Studied.

In Mexico Congress considered President Manuel Avila Camacho's request that foreign troops be allowed to pass through Mexican territory and that foreign ships and navy planes be stationed in Mexican waters and ports. An official announcement made it clear that United States troops, ships and planes were meant. The United States already has granted Mexico permission to pass troops through its territory to guard lower California.

Emergency fueling and other facilities were offered anti-Axis ships and planes by the Government of El Salvador.

The Guatemala Government today ordered all German schools and social clubs closed.

Spanish Ship Searched On Arrival In Havana

Action By Cuba Said To Determine If Vessel Carried War Materials

DEC 18 1941

Havana, Dec. 18 (AP)—The Spanish freighter Rita Garcia was boarded by a naval searching part ytonight immediately upon its arrival from Caibarien, Cuba, near the United States naval base at Guantanamo.

The reported purpose of the search was to determine whether th ship carried war materials or Spanish Falangist propaganda.

The vessel came here to take on Chilean nitrate for Spain, a produce Cuba recently embargoed in the belief that it would be used for gunpowder for the Axis rather than fertilizer for Spain. The embargo was lifted, however, when it was learned the British had given naviicerts on nitrates for Spain.

Cubans Advance War Measures

Havana, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—The Senate today passed an emergency measure giving the Government broad powers to institute voluntary or compulsory military training, to govern by decree and to levy other special defense measures by extra taxation. The bill went to the House where speedy approval was predicted.

Camacho Kin To Visit U. S.

Mexico City, Dec. 17 (AP)—Communications Minister Maximino Avila Camacho, brother of President Manuel Avila Camacho, will leave tomorrow by train for New Orleans and San Antonio, Texas. The purpose of the trip was not announced.

Canada May Be Invited

Buenos Aires, Dec. 17 (AP)—Foreign Office sources expressed the belief tonight that Canada may be invited to join the Pan-American Union and participate in the meeting of foreign ministers from the twenty-one American republics at Rio de Janeiro January 15.

These sources said that with the inclusion of Canada, which recently concluded trade agreements with several South American nations, "America would form a complete geographic entity."

It was reported without confirmation that Argentina, which recently exchanged diplomats with Ottawa and presently is representing Canadian as well as British interests in Japan, might propose Canada for membership in the Pan-American Union.

Nazi Plot To Signal Planes From Cuba Bared By Police

Havana Calls Evidence The Most Startling So Far Encountered In Campaign Against Axis

DEC 18 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Havana, Dec. 17—Police announced tonight the discovery of a Nazi plot to install military reflectors capable of signaling planes and ships at sea from a mountain range commanding a broad view of the Atlantic Ocean off Cuba.

With models and drawings of the scheme, for which surveys already had been made, they seized one Reinhold Hahn, 61, whom they identified as a German Gestapo agent and engineer who came to Cuba on a tourist card issued in Berlin.

Police said the evidence uncovered in the reflector plot was the most startling encountered so far in the vigorous campaign against Axis spies and propagandists since Cuba declared war in concert with the United States.

Accused with Hahn was a man booked as Victor Schmere Rubin, 65, described as a Lithuanian who did the field survey work for the reflector plotters in Oriente Province.

Police said Hahn also had made an extensive study of Cuban metallurgy and that Rubin had been in close touch with Nazi consultees and espionage centers.

Meanwhile, Urgency Court handed out a ten-month sentence to a White Russian identified as Andres Golowschenke, military instructor for the National Revolutionary Legion, which recently was accused of pro-Axis activities leading to the arrest of thirty of its leaders.

Others arrested today included a surgeon described as a former lieutenant of the Italian Alpini and a Japanese found strolling near a Cuban naval station. Forty Japanese "fishing boats" shabbily concealing their powerful motors have been seized in Cuba.

White Indians Pledge War Aid

PANAMA, Panama, Dec. 17 (AP)—The white indians of Panama pledged their support to the war against the axis today, promising to raise 500 men for defense on a moment's notice.

President De La Guardia said that the chiefs of this San Blas tribe, which has maintained its racial purity and fended off the encroachments of western civilization for more than 400 years, had come to see him to make the pledge.

NEW-WORLD TALKS SLATED JANUARY 15

Foreign Ministers Of American Republics To Meet At Rio De Janeiro

To Consider Wartime Measures Of Hemispheric Defense And Solidarity

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 17—The board of governors of the Pan American Union today called Foreign Ministers of the American republics to meet in Rio de Janeiro January 15 to consider wartime measures of hemispheric defense and economic solidarity.

The board announced that the meeting, called to carry out previously adopted declarations of mutual assistance following the Japanese attack on the United States, would consider these subjects:

Examination of measures to curb alien activities in the hemisphere.

Consideration of steps which might be undertaken by the republics "for the development of certain common objectives and plans which would contribute to the reconstruction of the world order."

Other Matters On Agenda

These two topics were under hemispheric defense, while under economic solidarity the agenda called for consideration of:

Control of exports and conservation of strategic materials.

Increased production of strategic materials.

Arrangements to provide each republic with essential imports.

Maintenance of adequate shipping facilities.

Still another matter slated for consideration is control of alien financial and commercial activities prejudiced to the welfare of the American republics.

United States

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17 (AP)—A War Department communiqué:

1. Philippine Theatre — There was no discernible enemy activity during the past twenty-four hours.

2. Hawaii—In the brief shelling of Kahului, on the island of Maui, by an enemy submarine, only slight damage was done to a concrete loading platform of a pineapple company. There were no casualties. About ten shells were fired.

3. There is nothing to report from other areas.

A later War Department communiqué:

1. Philippine Theatre — The American forces have the situation well in hand. Small enemy forces in the Aparri, Vigan and Legaspi areas are still under attack. Hostile vessels off the coast were attacked by Army air forces.

2. Hawaii—No further enemy activity has been reported.

3. No reports of hostile operations have been received from other areas.

A Navy communiqué:

It has been established that there were no injuries to personnel in the weak attack on Johnston Island reported yesterday. The naval situation in the Atlantic remains quiet.

MANILA, Dec. 17 (AP)—A communiqué issued by United States Army headquarters shortly after 11 A. M.:

There is no change in the situation on the ground. No air activity has been reported since yesterday.

Another Army communiqué:

The enemy at Vigan suffered heavily from an attack by our air force yesterday. One Japanese plane was shot down and at least twenty-five more were destroyed on the ground. Fuel supplies were set afire. There has been no change in the land situation today.

DEC 18 1941

British

SINGAPORE, Dec. 17 (AP)—A combined British headquarters communiqué:

In South Kedah fighting continues roughly on the line of the River Muda.

Kelantan Front—Apart from a few patrols there was little activity during the night although there is reason to believe that enemy reinforcements are arriving.

Enemy landings have taken place at Miri and Lubong, in the State of Sarawak on the northwestern coast of Borneo, from which our detachments already had withdrawn, having completely destroyed an oil refinery and wells and installations at both Miri and Seria oil fields.

Tonight's communiqué:

There is nothing further to report from Kedah and Kelantan since the issue of this morning's communiqué.

No enemy air activity has been reported.

The R. A. F. carried out reconnaissances over a wide area without meeting any opposition.

Since the thirteenth of December seven enemy aircraft have been shot down by our A. A. guns. A further five have been seen to have been hit and were probably unable to return to their bases.

HONG KONG, Dec. 16 (Delayed) (AP)—A communiqué this evening:

There has been a sharp artillery duel with the enemy throughout the day, with our guns maintaining their ascendancy. We succeeded in silencing two of the enemy's gun positions in the morning and another in the afternoon. Our batteries suffered no damage.

A Japanese plane was shot down over Lyemun this morning. The enemy pilot succeeded in extricating himself from the wreckage in the water and was last seen paddling toward the mainland in a collapsible rubber boat.

Our anti-aircraft batteries winged another enemy plane in the afternoon on the south side of the island. This plane was last seen rapidly losing altitude over the mainland. It is thought unlikely that it could possibly have returned to its base.

There have been a number of air raids throughout the day. The damage and casualties are light.

CHUNGKING, China, Thursday, Dec. 18 (AP)—A British Embassy communiqué:

In Hong Kong the enemy's shelling increased, but his air raids are not serious and there has been little damage by bombs.

Representatives of the Chinese Government in Hong Kong rendered the most valuable service in maintaining public order.

The utmost vigilance is being maintained against any possible enemy attempt to land on the island.

During the same period in Malaya the enemy's main effort is still directed in North Malaya, although there are possibilities that fresh landings on the coast are being attempted.

During air raids directed at Penang four enemy planes were shot down.

Reports have been received that some Japanese troops are wearing civilian clothes in their attempts to infiltrate through imperial defenses.

Major Gen. L. E. Dennis was appointed attaché of the Chungking Embassy last January with a view to heading a military mission to China in the event of a war with Japan.

Plans for joint military action have been under discussion and are already being put into effect. The British military mission in China now is in being and will be shortly reinforced.

CAIRO, Dec. 17 (AP)—A Middle East Command communiqué:

Bad weather with heavy sandstorms during the last twenty-four hours temporarily slowed down the rate of advance both of our main forces southwest of El Gazala and of our armored forces operating west of that area.

Despite these adverse conditions, however, our pressure has everywhere been maintained and some progress made.

In the area west of Tobruk about forty more abandoned German and Italian guns and several anti-tank guns have been recovered.

Operating under extreme weather difficulties, our fighters nevertheless again effectively countered attempts by the enemy air force to interfere with our ground troops and they also carried out successful attacks on enemy transport columns moving behind the battle front.

A Royal Air Force communiqué:

Yesterday aerial activity over the battle area in Libya was on a reduced scale.

An ME 110 which was encountered in the Tmimi-El Gazala area was shot down by our fighter aircraft, which maintained constant patrols over our land forces.

Motor transport on the road south of Agedabia was attacked and damaged.

Objectives at Benina were raided by bomber aircraft and another attack was made on isolated enemy positions at Bardia, where fires broke out in buildings. Workshops and motor transport at Bardia also were hit.

During the night of Dec. 15-16 bomber aircraft attacked naval units in Taranto harbor.

Three of our aircraft are missing from these and other operations, two of the pilots being safe.

LONDON, Dec. 17 (AP)—An Admiralty communiqué:

The Italian U-boat Ammiraglio Caracciolo has been sunk in the Central Mediterranean by the destroyer H. M. S. Farndale (Commander S. H. Carill, R. N.).

Fifty-three survivors have been taken prisoners of war.

This U-boat left Bardia in an attempt to give passage to twenty Italian military officers, amongst whom was General Guido Lami.

The general was not amongst those rescued.

Another Admiralty communiqué:

Details of the sinking of the Spanish ship Badalona reported in yesterday's Admiralty communiqué are now available.

This ship was sunk by a German U-boat close to the Spanish coast, the captain of the U-boat refusing to accept the assurance given by the captain of the Badalona that the ship was Spanish. The U-boat fired three torpedoes which sank the ship and killed some of the crew.

The methods adopted by the commander of this German U-boat bear marked resemblance to those of the commander of the German U-boat who attacked the St. Denis a few days ago. Details of the sinking of this vessel were announced by the Vichy French Admiralty in their communiqué of Dec. 9.

A third Admiralty communiqué:

The Board of the Admiralty regrets to announce that H. M. S. Dunedin (Captain R. S. Lovatt, O. B. E., R. N.) has been torpedoed in the Atlantic by a U-boat and has sunk. Next of kin of casualties have been informed.

An Air Ministry communiqué:

The naval base of Wilhelmshaven was attacked in force last night by aircraft of the Bomber Command.

The town and docks were clearly seen and large fires left burning.

Bremen and other towns in Northwest Germany were also bombed.

Other forces attacked docks at Ostend, Dunkerque and Brest and airdromes in occupied France. Mines were laid in enemy waters.

One of our aircraft is missing from these operations.

A communiqué of the Air and Home Security Ministries:

During the early part of last night a small number of enemy aircraft dropped a few bombs in coastal areas in Southeast and Southwest England.

Some damage was done and a small number of people were injured.

A Home Security Ministry communiqué:

An enemy bomber which appeared off the southeast coast of England this afternoon was shot down by our fighters. Apart from this there is nothing to report during daylight today.

Russian

MOSCOW, Dec. 17 (AP)—The Soviet mid-day communiqué:

During the night of Dec. 16-17 our troops fought the enemy on all fronts.

In the Tula direction of the front our troops smashed a battalion of a German SS regiment in a battle for locality K. On the battlefield the enemy left over 200 dead.

MOSCOW, Thursday, Dec. 18 (AP)—A Soviet Information Bureau communiqué:

On Dec. 17 our troops fought the enemy on all fronts. In a number of sectors of the western, Kalinin and southwestern fronts, our forces fiercely engaged the enemy, continued their advance, and occupied a number of populated places.

Netherland

BATAVIA, Netherlands Indies, Dec. 17 (AP)—A Netherland Command communiqué:

On Dec. 14 enemy aircraft bombed Tarempa on the Anambas Islands [off the eastern coast of Malaya] causing some damage. On the following day the enemy also machine-gunned this place. There were very few casualties.

A patrol vessel of the Royal Netherlands Navy was attacked by a large enemy bomber in the northeastern part of the archipelago Dec. 16. All bombs missed their mark.

An aircraft of the Royal Netherlands Navy scored a direct hit on an enemy destroyer which was covering a Japanese landing near Miri [in Sarawak]. All our aircraft returned safely to their bases.

DEC 18 1941

German

BERLIN, Dec. 17 (From German broadcasts recorded by The Associated Press)—A German High Command communiqué:

In the course of transition from aggressive operations to stationary warfare for the Winter months, necessary improvements involving the shortening of our lines now are being systematically undertaken on various sectors of the Eastern Front.

Strong bomber and fighter formations of the German Air Force continued attacks on Soviet troops in the Don area and the central sector of the front. Troops and tank concentrations were dispersed, batteries were put out of action and a considerable number of motor lorries were destroyed.

The enemy also suffered heavy losses by air attacks in the Volkhov River sector.

Bomber planes last night bombed port installations and public utility plants at Plymouth and Dover on the English south coast. At sea, northeast of Fraserburgh, a merchant ship of medium size was damaged by bomb hits.

In North Africa a heavy defensive battle west of Tobruk continued yesterday. Strong enemy attacks near Bardia were repulsed with considerable losses to the enemy.

Minor forces of the British Air Force last night dropped high-explosive and incendiary bombs on some places in the northwest German coastal area. Damage was done to buildings in residential quarters. Four British planes were shot down.

Italian

ROME, Dec. 17 (From Italian broadcasts recorded by The Associated Press)—An Italian High Command communiqué:

Against the Bardia stronghold and the Solum garrison there was renewed lively enemy fire.

Bitter attacks and counter-attacks continued in the El Gazala area throughout the whole of yesterday.

The enemy continually put new forces into battle. Prisoners taken in the fighting mentioned yesterday amount to over 800.

Booty includes several dozen guns and over 100 tanks, motor lorries and mechanized units.

Italian-German formations of dive-bombers repeatedly hit concentrations of enemy troops and motorized units with visible effect.

During the raids on Derna and Bengazi three planes were set on fire by anti-aircraft guns.

Several bombs dropped on Argostoli [on Cephalonia] did no damage.

During the night of Dec. 16-17 Brindisi [in Southern Italy] and Catania [in Sicily] were bombed. There were no casualties, but some buildings were damaged.

Anti-aircraft defenses of Catania destroyed a plane.

Italo-German planes repeatedly bombed military objectives in Malta.

Finnish

HELSINKI, Finland, Dec. 17 (From Finnish broadcasts recorded by The Associated Press)—An official communiqué:

Karelian Isthmus—Slow harassing fire with artillery and infantry weapons on both sides. Fort Todaleben took part in the firing. Our own artillery took under fire enemy nests, bunkers and assembling troops.

Svir Front—The enemy launched several attacks all along the front, but were in every case repulsed. The enemy lost over 1,000 killed in yesterday's fighting.

Eastern Front—In the southern sectors the enemy made several unsuccessful attempts to attack, losing several hundred killed in these vain attempts. In a sector farther north an attack was similarly attempted which was repulsed, the enemy losing heavily.

Air activity has to some extent been limited by unsuitable weather. Our aircraft continued to bomb the Murmansk railway and scored direct hits on the tracks. One locomotive was put out of action by fire from our aircraft.

Northwest Air Force Lauded For Its Attack On Submarine At Sea

Spokane, Wash., Dec. 17 (AP)—An airplane of the Second Air Force attacked a submarine while on sea reconnaissance following Japan's December 7 attack on Hawaii, Maj. Gen. Willard F. Hardon disclosed today.

Where or when the action took place was not revealed, nor its result. The Second Air Force, which General Harmon commands, has bases in Oregon, Washington, Idaho and Utah.

In a letter to his command, he said: "I wish to express my gratification for the prompt and active measures taken after the Japanese attack on Hawaii Sunday, December 7.

"Combat units performed with high efficiency and special commendation must be paid to the alertness and promptness of the airplane commander and crew of a squadron in this air force in spying and attacking a submarine."

Three Tugs Missing In Pacific War Zone

23 Men Aboard Vessels Unreported In Puget Sound Sector, Navy Reports

Seattle, Dec. 17 (AP)—Three Puget Sound tugs with twenty-three Seattle and Tacoma men aboard were listed today as unreported in the Pacific war zone. Thirteenth Naval District headquarters authorized publication of the report, without mention of the specific areas in which the tugs had been stationed.

DEC 18 1941

Drew Foss, son of Capt. Henry Foss, secretary of the Foss Launch and Tug Company, owner of the vessels, was reported aboard one vessel. The skippers are Capt. Oscar Rolstad, Tacoma; Capt. Ray Hall, Seattle, and Capt. Thomas Innes, Seattle.

The three vessels were equipped with wireless. It was pointed out they might have received warning of the Japanese attack while t sea and escaped to safe refuges.

Mariners Are Warned Of Dynamite Barge

Derelict Loaded With Explosives Said To Be Somewhere In Pacific Off Honolulu

Washington, Dec. 17 (AP)—Mariners were warned by the navy's Hydrographic Office today to be on the lookout for a derelict barge loaded with dynamite somewhere in the Pacific Ocean south of Honolulu.

The office reported that the derelict was observed on December 8—the day after the Japanese attack on Honolulu—about 500 miles southwest of Honolulu.

Whether there was any connection between the previous day's battle and the fact that the load of dynamite was floating around loose was a question which went unanswered by the Navy Department.

Filipinos Told They Battle Aggressors

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17 (AP).—Filipinos were reminded today they were "fighting the forces of aggression, the forces that would only bring to us future oppression and slavery."

J. M. Elizalde, Philippine resident commissioner, declared in a speech for broadcast to the islands, that "our neighbors can never say that we have not given them equal opportunity and friendly environment. They were allowed entry into our country as friends; yet the Japanese people now reveal themselves in the most dastardly treachery and fifth column activity. x x x my countrymen, such low and despicable acts can be met only by cold revenge."

Ship Arrives In U. S. With Alaska Evacuees

Vessel Reaches Seattle With Women And 36 Children From Sitka

Seattle Dec. 17 (AP)—The steamship Northland, a virtual floating nursery for the trip, arrived without advance notice today with women and thirty-six children evacuated from Sitka, Alaska, site of a United States naval base.

Mrs. James I. Roberts, who went to Sitka with her husband from Lubbock, Texas, said she had only twelve hours' notice to prepare to leave. She brought her 7-week-old son with her.

Sitka took the Pacific war's outbreak calmly, she reported, but underwent nightly blackouts in the long Northern nights. Mrs. Roberts said the group evacuated comprised wives and children of civilian workers at the naval base.

Transpacific Air Mail Is Ordered Suspended

Postmaster Department Announces Far East Pouches Will Go Via South Atlantic

Washington, Dec. 17 (AP)—The Postoffice Department today suspended transpacific airmail service to the Far East, and announced that the mails in the future would be promptly routed via the new South Atlantic route and Africa.

Airmails for the Netherlands Indies, North Borneo, Sarawak, Straits Settlements, Malaya, Burma, unoccupied China and the near east countries of hereafter be dispatched through Miami to Lagos, Nigeria, in Africa, via Port of Spain, Trinidad, Belem, Brazil and Bathurst, Gambia, Africa. At Lagos, direct connections will be made with existing British Empire air mail service now operating between Lagos and Singapore and also the Netherlands Indies.

Palestine, Turkey and Syria, which prior to the war were carried over the transpacific route, will be routed over the new South Atlantic route.

KNOX CITES WAKE IN BID TO INDUSTRY

Washington, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—Secretary of the Navy Knox cited today the gallant defense of Wake Island by the United States marines in urging industry to speed production.

A telegram addressed by the Secretary to the principal manufacturers and shipbuilding plants holding navy contracts read:

"The navy at Hawaii is undaunted.

"The marines still hold Wake.

"Will you meet their challenge." FRANK KNOX,

"Secretary of the Navy."

Jap Fleet Will Not Be Victorious, Declares Rear Admiral Andrews

NEW YORK, Dec. 17 (AP)—Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, commandant of the Third Naval District and a veteran of almost three years duty in the Pacific, said today that "the Japanese fleet will not be victorious in the long run."

The admiral said in an interview that he did not think the Japanese and American fleets would meet in force in the near future. He said he believed the first stage of the war would be one of attrition—the problem of reducing the enemy's forces as much as possible without staging a knockout battle.

Commenting on Japanese successes in sinking battleships, with planes, he stated that "the battleship will have to take her chances" in going within range of land based planes.

He praised the anti-sabotage defense of the army, navy and federal bureau of investigation, declaring that not a single act of sabotage had been detected in the vital north Atlantic area.

Andrews said that the navy had not yet made definite plans for use of the $60,000,000 French liner Normandie—a vessel adaptable for use as an aircraft carrier or troopship.

CALIFORNIA STORM HIDDEN

News of Nine Inches of Rain Kept a Military Secret

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 17 (AP)—Northern California was battered by the Winter's worst storm the first of the week, but until today it was a military secret.

Since naval officers and weather bureau observers, who keep weather reports from possible Japanese spies, agreed that twenty-four-hour-old weather would not be any help to the enemy, it is safe to report that a nine-inch rainfall in three days filled the Sacramento River and its tributaries to their banks.

Highway crews worked throughout parts of Northern California to clear blocked roads.

Light and telephone service at La Honda, Half Moon Bay and Iescadero were temporarily cut off when trees, blown down by high winds, fell across wires. Trees and power poles were toppled in Oakland and roofs partially ripped off two houses.

'Can't Win on Defensive'—Stirling

BUFFALO, Dec. 17 (AP).—Rear Admiral Stirling, retired, said today the United States must send a fleet, a large air force and "millions of troops" to the Orient to defeat Japan.

He said Japan has "superiority now with 5,000 planes, a superior fleet and the initiative."

Stirling asserted "this will be a three or four years' war" but "we'll work through it."

U.S. Reports Japan's Larder Is Well Filled

DEC 18 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 17—Japan opened war on the United States and Great Britain well supplied with food and—because of the simple diet of her people—with little fear of starvation from naval blockade, Agriculture Department officials said today.

Japanese live mainly on rice, wheat and fish. Reports of rice shortages have appeared in the past two years, but there are indications these were circulated to accustom the nation to a rationing system and to permit Government accumulation of reserve stocks for an emergency.

1940 Imports Set Record

Imports of rice in 1940 were the largest on record. This year's crop, estimated at 540,000,000 bushels, was only slightly smaller than last year's harvest.

That harvest is insufficient for the nation's needs, but surpluses were produced in Japanese-controlled Chosen (Korea) and Taiwan (Formosa). Nearness of those places to Japan would make it difficult for the Allies to shut off the supplies.

Likewise, the Chinese rice crop was larger than a year ago. Although China does not produce enough for its own people, the Japanese have been taking large quantities from Chinese areas under their control, officials said.

Nippon also has decreed a 250,000-acre reduction in mulberry tree cultivation—not needed now because of the loss of foreign markets for silk—in order to turn this acreage to wheat, barley, vegetables and other food crops.

The Japanese wheat crop was estimated at 53,000,000 bushels, compared with last year's record of 66,000,000 bushels. The harvest in the puppet state of Manchoukuo was 7 per cent. larger than last year's crop of 27,500,000 bushels. Officials said it was possible for Japan to obtain wheat from both Manchoukuo and China.

Japan has been a relatively heavy importer of oil seeds and vegetable oils from occupied parts of China.

Much Fishing Done

For additional food, Japan depends largely upon the sea. Much of the fishing is done within the territorial protection of the islands and is not subject to interference from hostile craft, officials said.

The Government has tightened restrictions on the culture of non-urgent crops, including tobacco, to increase the land available for food production.

Japan has encouraged the production of soybeans in Manchoukuo as a source of vegetable oil and wheat-flour substitute. The soybean production was lower, however, in the past two years than in previous years.

HOUSE ADOPTS 21-44 FOR AGE IN NEW DRAFT

DEC 18 1941

Refuses to Lower Minimum to 19 in Passing Bill for Compulsory Military Service

Measure Would Require Registration of All Men Of 18 to 64 Years; Senators Also Oppose Drop in Limit

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17—The House today refused to lower the 21-year minimum age for compulsuory military service as President Roosevelt and the War Department had requested but passed unanimously a bill raising the maximum age from 35 to 44, inclusive, and requiring all men from 18 through 64 to register with the government.

Opposition to the proposal that men of 19 be made subject to active service in the armed forces arose also in the Senate. Senator Downey (D-Calif), declaring it unnecessary to lower the age minimum, announced that he would move tomorrow to send the legislation back to the military committee because it had approved the 19-year limit "in darkness and in confusion."

Debate Bitter

The House twice refused, after bitter debate, to lower the draft age from 21. It rejected, 175 to 53, an amendment by Rep. Andrews (R-N. Y.) to make the minimum age 19, and then defeated, 173 to 113, a compromise amendment by Rep. Thomason (D-Tex) to set the minimum at 20. Both were teller votes, on which no record is made.

Democratic Leader McCormack of Massachusetts read a letter from the President endorsing the 19-44 draft ages. McCormack cautioned against "complacency" in the nation and then, speaking directly to military committeemen who opposed lowering the minimum age, he said:

"With all due respect to the distinguished members of the committee, we cannot have too many leaders in this crisis.

"While I recognize they are all outstanding military leaders, while I recognize they are undoubtedly great tacticians, while I recognize they probably could lead the Army to success in this conflict, yet I cannot accept their judgment in these days in preference to the judgment of the President of the United States and his military and naval aides.

"In this crisis we must all be good soldiers, and that applies particularly to the members of the military affairs committee of the House so far as the bill is concerned."

Thomason, ranking member of the committee, and others urged that there be no such criticism and Chairman May (D-Ky) of the committee finally said that the time had not come in this country when legislators could not exercise their functions.

McCormack explained that he meant no criticism of the committee but May interrupted to call the leader's attention to the insinuation that the committeemen were not good soldiers.

"When the time comes to wreck the lives of boys 18 years old, the committee will be the first to draft legislation, but let's don't do that until we do need them," May urged at the outset.

"Let's not destroy that unity that is now behind the President in prosecution of this war. Let's find out if the manpower in Europe is going to be used."

Wadsworth Sees Change

Rep. Wadsworth (R-NY), co-sponsor of the original selective service law, said that he thought the committee's age brackets were inadequate and that selective service officials might have to go into the group now deferred because of marriage if the 21-year-old limit was not changed.

Rep. Bolton (R-Ohio) expressed concern about what would happen to the nation if men younger than 21, who might become doctors, should be drafted, and Rep. Edmiston (D-W Va) warned that if such a step should be taken, agricultural production might suffer because of shortages of labor.

Rep. Short (R-Mo) said the compelling reason why he opposed reducing the 21-year age limit was that "we do not have adequate equipment for the 1,750,000 men we have in the Army today."

Insurance Proposed

The draft extension bill, among other things, would give presently-inducted or future selectees 120 days in which to make application for government insurance without having to take a physical examination.

Meanwhile Senator Lee (D-Okla) offered legislation to give all persons in active military service $10,000 of insurance. Premiums would be paid by the government for the period of the war and for six months thereafter.

The Senate finance committee approved legislation permitting men in the armed services to take out $5,000 of low-premium government insurance without physical examination during a 120-day period following enactment of the measure.

Washington, Dec. 17—Selective service officials said today that drafting of women for non-combatant war service was a possible future development, but a remote one, as Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (Rep., Mass.) urged that women be given a chance to volunteer for such posts.

Selective service officials said the possibility of drafting women had been mentioned only as part of a broad study of the entire productive and fighting capacity of the United States. This, they said, was nebulous, and they expressed doubt that it would reach a more definite stage in the near future.

Hershey Bars Step Now

Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service Director, said last week that a broad, long-range program was being studied which would involve the registration of 40,000,000 men and 20,000,000 women, but explained the next day that he had not intended any implication that plans were under way to draft women now.

Mrs. Rogers urged that women be allowed to take their places side by side with men "because we—the women—want to do our part."

Congress Acts Quickly On Wartime Grants

Extraordinary Powers Vested In President, Including Censorship Authority

Washington, Dec. 17 (AP)—Congress speedily completed action today on the measure vesting President Roosevelt with extraordinary wartime powers, including authority to impose censorship upon all communication mediums.

The President is expected to sign the bill promptly and a censorship plan drafted by various Government officials who have been conferring for some time probably will be ready simultaneously for his approval. Byron Price, who will be director of censorship on leave of absence from the Associated Press, is expected here Friday to assume his duties.

Approval by the House late in the day of a conference committee version of the legislation sent the bill to the White House. The Senate had approved the conference report earlier in the day.

Strong opposition forced the House Interstate Commerce Committee today to postpone, pending an attempt at a compromise, action on legislation which would empower the President to take over "all facilities for wire or radio communication" under United States jurisdiction.

Committee members who denounced the measure as "ridiculous," contended it would permit the Government to seize arbitrarily the facilities of press services or telepone companies.

Chairman Lea, Democrat, California, said, however, an effort would be made tomorrow to limit the bill's power to facilities which prove essential to military operations.

Stephen Early Presidential secretary, said the government hoped to have a censorship plan ready at once, in rough outline, for Mr. Roosevelt's approval. He was expected to sign the bill promptly.

Mr. Early said an advisory committee composed of Vice-President Wallace, Attorney General Francis Biddle, Frank C. Walker, Postmaster General, and Lowell Mellett, Director of the Office of Government Reports, had been working on various plans for some time and that they would be submitted to Byron Price, newly appointed censorship director.

Mr. Price is expected here Friday to take over his new duties. He has received a leave of absence as executive news editor of The Associated Press.

Different Than in 1917

The censorship setup will be different from that created in 1917 under George Creel, Mr. Early said. Government departments and agencies will continue to issue press releases, as at present, but those bearing on the war will be approved first by an interdepartmental committee to be established under Mr. Price's direction. In the first World War all war information was filtered through Mr. Creel's Office of Information, which had its own reporters covering the government departments.

"Mr. Price will build his own house as the needs determine," Mr. Early said. "His office will not be a news production office. You will get your news where you have always been getting it. Present information sources remain open to you, and the arrangement is decentralized and quicker than in 1917.

"The great value of news is getting it from the source to the reader in a minimum of time."

Mr. Early said that reporters would not have direct contact with the censorship office "unless they get information that is not given out."

"If you get an exclusive," he explained, "I believe you should clear it through Price's office."

Powers of President

Besides erecting a barrier against filtration of military data to the Axis, the new, broad grant of power to the Chief Executive would authorize him to re-allocate Federal functions, grant contracts without bidding, revise contracts and control completely the financial transactions of aliens.

Mr. Roosevelt, at his press conference yesterday, outlined a partly voluntary, partly compulsory censorship over all media of communication, and announced Mr. Price's appointment as director of censorship.

The fifty-year-old newsman, who asked and obtained a leave from The Associated Press once before—to join the A. E. F. and win the bars of an infantry captain overseas—left his post in New York yesterday. He could not discuss his plans, he said, until he was established in Washington.

Praises Appointment

The House was assured by Representative J. Percy Priest (Dem., Tenn.), a former newspaperman, that the nation would "appreciate" Mr. Roosevelt's appointment of Price.

Speaking from "a long experience on a daily newspaper," during which he said he knew Price well, Priest expressed confidence that "the nation may depend on him to allow the publication domestically of as much news as possible" and to prevent dissemination abroad of any information of value to the enemy.

NAVY INCREASE VOTED

Bill for 150,000 More Tons Goes to White House.

Washington, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—Legislation authorizing an increase of 150,000 tons in the navy's vessel strength was approved by the Senate today and sent to the White House.

Senator Walsh of Massachusetts, chairman of the Senate Naval Committee, won unanimous Senate approval of a measure previously passed by the House authorizing the increase in tonnage of combatant ships.

RATIONING OF TIRES WILL SUCCEED BAN

Local Boards To Certify Sale For Industrial Or Health Needs

DEC 18 1941

Curb On Dealers Extended Until Plan Is Set Up January 4

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 17—The Government today announced rationing of automobile tires will begin January 4, with sales prohibited except to individuals possessing ration cards, or to fill military orders.

Leon Henderson, Price Administrator, told a press conference that stoppage of Far East rubber imports had forced a reduction of nearly eighty per cent. in the nation's crude rubber consumption, that civilian consumption would be limited to 10,000 tons a month—compared with 47,000 used now—and that such non-essential goods as tennis and golf balls, bathing suits and rubber toys probably would be eliminated "for the duration."

To Issue Certificates

To effect a drastic reduction in the principal use of crude rubber—for tires and tubes—civilian rationing boards will be set up throughout the country to issue purchase certificates. These will go only to agencies and individuals able to show that their tire purchases are necessary to the "maintenance of industrial efficiency and civilian health."

A monthly tire quota will be established by OPM and broken down into State and county quotas based principally on registration of commercial vehicles in each area.

"For the time being," Henderson said, "production of new passenger tires will be almost entirely eliminated and production of new truck tires will be curtailed."

Stocks For 60 Days' Use

At the present time, he estimated, stocks of new tires in the United States, under demands prevailing in recent months, would have lasted about sixty days. Replacement ure sales have been averaging about 4,000,000 tires a month.

New automobiles still in production will be equipped with four tires, he noted, but spares either would be eliminated or made from reclaimed rubber. Ceiling prices on reclaimed rubber were fixed at levels prevailing between November 5 and December 5.

Efficient operation of the rationing system, Henderson said, would be the sole responsibility of local boards since "whether or not a man gets a tire will depend upon his own neighbors."

Before the ration plan begins operation, price ceilings on tires will be set to prevent sudden advances when the present temporary "freezing" order on sales is lifted. The ban was to have expired December 22 but will be extended until January 4 pending completion of the rationing details.

Takes Control Of Tin

Emphasizing effects of the Pacifi war on imports from the Far East, th Government today took control ove all tin supplies in the United State including shipments already en rou to this country.

Donald M. Nelson, OPM prioritie director, issued a four-point "freez ing" order providing that:

1. All supplies of tin shall be subject to OPM allocation and subject to designation as to their use.
2. No tin may be sold or delivered without Nelson's specific permission.
3. Future tin imports may be sold only to the RFC Metals Reserve Company or other governmental agencies.
4. Tin now afloat may not be sold without Nelson's special permission.

The order, however, permits a distributor to deliver to regular customers in less than five-ton lots, subject to priority regulations. No deliveries of tin or tin products may be made to fabricators who have ample stocks on hand.

Govt. Takes Over Control Of All Tin

DEC 18 1941

Action Includes Shipments Already En Route to This Country

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17 (AP)—Emphasizing effects of the Pacific war on imports from the Far East, the government today took control over all tin supplies in the United States, including shipments already en route to this country.

Donald M. Nelson, OPM priorities director, issued a four-point "freezing" order providing that:

1. All supplies of tin shall be subject to OPM allocation and subject to designation as to their use.
2. No tin may be sold or delivered without Nelson's specific permission.
3. Future tin imports may be sold only to the RFC metals reserve Co. or other governmental agencies.
4. Tin now afloat may not be sold without Nelson's special permission.

The order, however, permits a distributor to deliver to regular customers in less than five ton lots, subjects to priority regulations. No deliveries of tin or tin products may be made to fabricators who have ample stocks on hand.

Officials said the United States had about one year's supply of tin —at normal demand level—and that careful conservation was needed to make this reserve stretch over the emergency. They added that an order limiting the use of tin and tin lined cans would be issued within the next few days.

Virtually all United States tin is imported from British Malaya and the Netherlands Indies. Consumption in this country averages more than 100,000 tons a year and officials pointed out that Bolivan ore, now being imported, could not supply more than one-third of normal requirements.

OPM experts said that de-tinning of cans would be an expensive process, but that salvage operations in that field might be necessary.

Seek to Insure Uninterrupted Arms Output

F.D. Asks Business, Labor, Gov't Group To Reach Accord By Friday

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17 (AP)—Working under an admonition from President Roosevelt to reach an agreement by Friday, a group of business, labor and government representatives sought today to work out a plan for insuring uninterrupted arms production for the duration of the war.

"We have got to keep things going," Mr. Roosevelt told the conferees in an extemporaneous address at the White House before the meeting had organized. "We can't have stoppages. x x x The country is expecting something from you in a hurry—I don't say by tomorrow night—but it will be a thrilling thing if we could get something out in the way of a unanimous agreement by tomorrow night, Thursday, or at the latest Friday night."

Chairman William H. Davis told reporters that the conferees had agreed that no announcement would be made other than that the session would be resumed tomorrow morning, and that today's meeting was "excellent."

Cautioning the group that the American way of life was in grave danger, Mr. Roosevelt predicted that the war would "go on for a long time."

"And so," he added, "I have asked you here to help win this war just as much as if you were in uniform. I am going to use a word which none of us like—and I don't either. The word is 'must.' I am applying the word 'must' to you as individuals and to myself. x x x

"I want speed. Speed now is of the essence, just as much in turning out things in plants as it is among the fighting forces. x x x We have got greatly to increase our production program. We are still in a sense—whether you like it or not—the arsenal of the free world. x x x We have got to do perfectly unheard of things."

In asking for quick agreement the President urged the labor-management men to put aside their differences.

"After the war is won, let's go back if we want to, to old Kilkenny," he said. "And you know what a Kilkenny fight is."

There were indications that revival of the war labor board of 1918-19 would be given consideration. That it may have been discussed was indicated by the fact that every conferee was given a copy of a department of labor pamphlet outlining the work of that board.

The 1918 board adopted a no-strike, no-lockout policy and ruled that there should be no change in the status quo of existing labor contracts.

While this conference was in progress, management and labor representatives in the maritime industry pledged that there would be no strikes during the war.

STIMSON ASSERTS LEASE AID GOES ON

DEC 18 1941

War Stopped It a While Now Very Substantial.

Washington, Dec. 17 (A. P.).—Secretary of War Stimson said in a statement today that United States entry into war did not halt lend-lease aid to Axis foes.

The attack on Pearl Harbor did make it necessary, he added, "momentarily" to stop shipments abroad while a check was made on available supplies.

"Shortly thereafter," the statement said, "procedure was established for releasing very substantial quantities of lease-lend material not necessary for immediate needs of the United States." It added:

"Subsequently, a more thorough study of the proposed shipments was made. In the over-all picture the declarations of war against the United States by Japan and the other Axis Powers already have resulted and will continue to result in great stimulation of our munitions industry. This must inevitably increase rather than diminish shipments to those who are fighting our common enemy."

U. S. FOOD SUPPLIES AT RECORD LEVELS

DEC 18 1941

Wickard Sees Little Excuse For Substantial Increase In Farm-Product Prices

Secretary Says Department Will Act To Prevent Speculative Boosts

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 17—Emphasizing that the nation's food supply is of record proportions, Claude R. Wickard, Secretary of Agriculture, said today there was little excuse for any substantial increase in prices of farm products as a result of the United States entry into the war.

The department, he said, will do everything in its power to check speculative increases.

Earlier, the department said Japan was well supplied with food and there was little chance of starving her into submission.

Rechecking 1942 Goals

To assure plentiful supplies for the future, Wickard said the department was rechecking 1942 food production goals to ascertain whether, in light of the war, greater production appears advisable for any commodity.

The goals, which were announced in September, call for a sharp increase in output of meat, dairy, poultry, vegetable and edible oil products.

"The fact that we still have time to revise our production goals for 1942 before planting time begins makes it possible for us to make increases where necessary," he said.

Detailed Report Issued

Wickard issued a detailed report on the food supply situation in which he stated that the United States entered the war with the largest total supplies of food in its history.

"In addition, we have large supplies of feeds in our ever-normal granary and the productive capacity of our farms to add to our food supply on an unprecedented scale."

He said, "We have plenty for our own people, including the armed forces, and enough more to help feed our allies."

Wickard said the war had greatly reduced oceanic shipment of food supplies to this country. Outgoing ships, he said, are mostly loaded with defense materials, including food, while incoming ships are loaded with crude rubber, zinc, tin and other strategic materials.

Special Arrangements

He said, however, that some special arrangements" had been made to assure the United States of imports of certain agricultural products, such as a guarantee of space for Cuban sugar and fixed maximum ocean freight rates for cocoa and coffee from Latin America.

A brief summary of the food report follows:

Grains—Wheat supply ample for two years, while corn and barley supplies are largest in twenty years.

Meats—Commercial production in 1942 expected to set new record. The number of live stock on farms is increasing and is expected to be five per cent. larger than this year.

Eggs At Record Level

Poultry Products—Egg production now at record level and further increases expected next year. Production of chicken meat is expected to be fourteen per cent. larger next year.

Dairy Products—Production of milk and manufactured dairy products likewise is at a record level, and further increases expected next year.

Fruits—Supplies described as abundant.

Vegetables—Production of vegetables for processing in 1941 was of record proportions. Larger production planned in 1942.

Increases Expected

Edible Fats and Oils—Increased supplies af lard and oil from peanuts and soybeans expected next year. Prices may advance further, however, due to high level of domestic demand and requirements of British.

Fish—Aannual catch could almost immediately be increased from 4,443,000,000 to 4,628,000,000 pounds and later to 6,800,000,000.

SWISS TO REPRESENT IN ALL ENEMY LANDS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 17 (AP)—The State Department announced today that United States interests in all belligerent countries are being represented by Switzerland.

The department also disclosed that the list of third powers representing the interests of countries now at war with the United States stands as follows:

Japan in the United States, represented by Spain; Japan in Hawaii, represented by Sweden; Japan in Philippines and Samoa, represented by Switzerland; Germany, Italy, and Bulgaria, represented by Switzerland; Hungary and Rumania, represented by Sweden.

Switzerland also is representing the interests of the United States in German occupied territories and territory occupied by Italy.

The tiny, independent European nation likewise has been asked to undertake representation of United States interests in territories occupied by Japan, and has expressed her willingness to do so subject to Japanese assent.

U.S. To Hold Nazi Envoys In Hotel Until Exchange

Members Of Japanese Embassy Requested To Confine Selves To Premises

Washington, Dec. 17 (AP)—The State Department said tonight that German diplomats would be lodged in a "comfortable hotel" until arrangements can be made to exchange them for American diplomats in Germany.

Members of the Hungarian legation are to be placed in another hotel in the same undisclosed locality. Members of the Japanese consulates are to be "assembled at a hotel in a locality to be determined," and members of the Japanese Embassy were requested to confine themselves to the embassy's premises.

The department's announcement also dealt with newspaper correspondents from enemy countries who were caught here by the war. The German correspondents in custody pending investigation are to be lodged with the German diplomats, and Japanese newspapermen in custody pending investigation already are being placed in a hotel.

FBI NABS INVENTOR AT DEFENSE PLANT

50-Year-Old Austrian Who Found Magnesium Process Arrested In California

DEC 18 1941

Dr. Fritz L. Hansgirg In Supervisory Capacity At Scene Of 3 Explosions

[By the Associated Press]

San Jose, Cal., Dec. 17—Dr. Fritz J. Hansgirg, 50-year-old Austrian inventor of a new magnesium recovery process, was arrested by FBI agents today at the Permanente Magnesium Plant where he was acting in a supervisory capacity.

FBI agents gave no reason for the arrest.

Three explosions and a number of minor accidents have occurred recently at the $20,000,000 plant designed to produce 12,000 tons a year of the vital defense metal.

Hansgirg was looked as "en route to United States immigration authorities."

Six Years In Orient

Hansgirg came to the United States in May, 1940, after six years in the Orient where he supervised construction of a 2,000-ton a year magnesium plant in Korea for the Nippon Magnesium Metals Company, Ltd., a subsidiary of the American Magnesium Metals Corporation.

Hansgirg was a vice-president of both the American and Japanese magnesium corporations. At Permanente he was acting as technical advisor for the Henry J. Kaiser interests, which expect to have the new plant producing 12,000 tons of magnesium a year by next summer.

Held Japanese "Medieval"

The inventor of the carbothermic process of recovering the metal from the ore said it was slow work building the Korean plant because the Japanese have a medieval mind.

The Hansgirg process recovers magnesium metal directly from magensite, which is abundant in the West. This method is counted upon eventually to make the strategic metal relatively plentiful and cheap for building light, strong airplanes.

Hansgirg developed his process in Austria in 1931. It was being used there to some extent when the Nazis moved in.

GERMAN CHEMICAL PLOT GIVEN BLOW

3 New Jersey Firms Fined For Trade Practices In Latin America

Extensive Traffic In Sex And War-Treatment Hormones Is Bared

DEC 18 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Newark, N. J., Dec. 17—Three New Jersey chemical firms and four officers were fined a total of $48,000 today by Federal Judge William F. Smith in actions which Justice Department officials said would open Latin America to the United States chemical industry, free it from German dominance and plug an important leak in the economic blockade against the Nazis.

A fourth firm and its president were fined a total of $6,000, but the fine was suspended.

The defendants pleaded no defense to charges that they conspired with certain European firms to prevent other persons from manufacturing hormones in the United States and from importing them; that they conspired to allocate the world market in hormones, and maintained arbitrary and non-competitive prices.

Heavy Fines Assessed

The fines were paid immediately, and during a brief recess the Government filed civil suits asking that the companies be enjoined from further violations.

When court reconvened, the defendants consented to the decrees.

Defendants and their fines were:

Schering Corporation, of Bloomfield, $15,000; its president, Julius Weltzien, $2,000, and vice-president, Gregory Stragnell, $1,000; CIBA Pharmaceutical Products, Inc., of Summit, $10,000, and its principal officer, Vincent A. Burgher, $2,000, and Roche-Organon, Inc., of Nutley, $15,000, and its president, Elmer H. Bobst, $3,000.

Rare Chemicals, Inc., of Flemington, and its president, E. T. Fritzching, also pleaded no defense to similar charges, but fines of $5,000 against the company and $1,000 against Fritzching were suspended because manufacturing had not started, it was explained.

"War" Hormone Involved

The case, developed by the Justice Department's anti-trust division, involved a sex hormone and another hormone, the latter described as "particularly valuable in the treatment of soldiers and civilians in wartime." It is used to counteract shocks form wounds, burns, surgery and the "blackout" sometimes experienced by pilots in sudden altitude changes or swift turns.

The complaint against Schering Corporation said that while Schering AC, of Berlin, Germany, was not named a defendant "it is a coconspirator in the conspiracy."

It was said that Schering of Berlin, one of the largest distributors of drugs in the world, organized in 1936 a New York subsidiary which transferred its assets to the Bloomfield concern and the latter acted as distributor for Schering of Berlin.

Dates Back To 1939

Schering of Bloomfield took over the South American trade for the Berlin firm in 1939, when Germany began having trouble with shipments, the papers said.

Roche-Organon, Inc., was associated with a Dutch West Indies concern and was one of the world's largest dealers in hormones, the complaint against the firm said.

One alleged method of meeting the blockade was to have American firms package goods to resemble German-produced products and fill Latin-American orders for the German companies.

ARMORED DIVISION GETS MORE POWER

Gen. Devers Says Reorganized Unit Will Be Strongest World Has Seen

Statement Follows Demonstration Of New Combination Battalion

DEC 18 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Fort Knox, Ky., Dec. 17—"The reorganized United States armored division will be the most powerful the world has ever seen," Maj. Gen. Jacob L. Devers, chief of the armored force, said today.

His statement followed the demonstration of a combinatio medium and light tank ...lion representing one of the strengthened regiments of the newly reorganized armored divisions.

The special battalion, composed of two companies of medium (30-ton) tanks and one company of light (14-ton) tanks of the First Armored Division, combined for the first time and under a single battalion commander, maneuvered in an attack formation followed by closely supporting infantry and self-propelled artillery.

Will Have Artillery

"Besides the increase in the number and proportion of medium tanks," General Devers said, "the armored divisions will have self-propelled artillery and an anti-tank battalion. Also, they will be more flexible in command, having two brigadier generals under the division commander, a major general.

"The manner in which these plans have been put into effect by the First Armored Division proves that they are easily adaptable to the present setup in the other armored divisions."

"The reorganization of the armored divisions will not necessitate new or different training of the personnel," General Devers added, "and therefore will not slow up their preparation for combat."

Fire Power Increased

The fire power of the division will be greatly increased by two major changes in the weapons.

The number of guns and howitzers—37, 75 and 105 millimeter—will be increased from 429 to 752, and the replacement of many of the .45 caliber automatic pistols and .30 rifles of the carbine rifle, a .45 coliber automatic weapon capable of putting out many times more bullets per minute than the pistol, the armored force announced.

The present three-tank regiments of the armored divisions, two light and one medium, will be revamped into two-tank regiments, each containing two battalions of medium tanks and one battalion of light tanks. This will increase the number of medium tanks from 108 to 232 and decrease the number of light tanks from 273 to 158.

Outstanding Changes

Probably the most far-reaching changes are the addition of an anti-tank battalion, and the use of self-propelled artillery, the announcement said.

The anti-tank battalion will consist of twenty-seven self-propelled 37 millimeter anti-tank guns, a large number of self-propelled 75 millimeter guns and 105 millimeter howitzer artillery.

This unit is the result of the new plan of anti-tank defense in which the guns search out the tanks, rather than remain in a stationary position.

The manpower strength of the armored divisions will remain unchanged at 12,697 officers and men.

"ALL-OUT" CALL ON DEFENSE BONDS

Morgenthau Urges Investment "To The Limit"

By AP

DEC 18 1941

No Mere Token Contribution Will Suffice, He Declares

[By the Associated Press]

Chicago, Dec. 17—Treasury Secretary Morgenthau called upon Americans today to invest in defense savings bonds to "the very limit each person can afford without actually taking food and other necessities from himself and his family."

He told defense savings chiefs from the forty-eight States that their goal should be this:

". . . To reach quickly, within the next few months, every single recipient of regular current income in the United States, and to have everyone of these 35,000,000 people setting aside some part of their pay regularly within the shortest possible time.

"And when I say 'some part of their pay,' I am not thinking merely of a token contribution. I mean a real investment, the very limit that each person can afford without actually taking food and other necessities from himself and his family.

All-Inclusive

"Let's make every pay day bond day," he said, and suggested that farmers, as well as clerks, factory hands, civic employes and others with regular salaries should buy defense bonds and stamps during a nation-wide campaign to raise money to finance the nation's war effort and, at the same time, avoid the "dangerous evils of inflation."

The Secretary was asked later if the pay-roll allotment plan would substitute for a proposed pay-roll tax. He replied:

"I have always been in favor of a voluntary method."

Two Campaigns Mapped

The State defense savings staff members planned to push two methods of obtaining investments in the bonds. One, already in use in many areas, is the payroll allotment program. Under that procedure, an employe authorized his employer to deduct a specified amount from his earnings each pay day to buy bonds. It is entirely voluntary.

The second, to begin about January 10, provides for house-to-house canvasses in which citizens will be asked to sign pledges to purchase defense bonds.

Morgenthau reported that since the attack on Pearl Harbor bond sales had increased as much as 200 and 500 per cent. in various cities.

Increased Pensions Sought For Widows Of Service Men

Bill Setting $30-$83 Rate Now Awaiting President's Signature—System Democratic One

DEC 18 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 17—Widows of the fighting men who died at Pearl Harbor will receive six months' pay and a pension for life.

Awaiting signature on the President's desk is a measure to increase the pensions from the peacetime range of $22-$56 monthly to wartime levels of $30 to $83.

Uncle Sam's guarantees that wife and children will be cared for if death should strike are matched by other Government protection which shields soldiers and sailors, while they live and serve the country, from financial worry.

Nature Of Act

This is embodied in the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act of last year, which suspends "enforcement of civil liabilities"—and that includes taxes, installment payments and insurance premiums—in certain cases to permit service men "to devote their entire energy to the defense needs of the nation."

The widow's pension is not determined by the fighter's gold braid or years of service, but by the age of his widow and the number and ages of the children.

So the private's widow may receive a larger pension than the major general's, though the six months' pay, of course, would be otherwise.

Pensions are paid for death in action or from natural causes.

Sources Of Funds

The pay is granted by the War and Navy departments, the pensions by the Veterans' Administration. The latter also administers the national life insurance program, under which service men may get life insurance protection up to $10,000 at very low rates.

Under the pension bill sent to Mr. Roosevelt this week, a childless widow under 50 would receive $38 a month, provided she was not receiving monthly payments of $8 or more from Government insurance.

If she was paid insurance of that amount, her pension would be $30 monthly.

With one child younger than 10, the pension would be increased by $10 a month.

If the child were 10 or older, the additional monthly sum would be $15.

With Two Children

With two children, the basic pension would be increased by $18 if both were under 10, by $28 if both were older.

The proposed rates increase gradually to give a widow over 65, with two children over 10, a pension of $68 a month if she also draws insurance benefits or $73 without the insurance, plus $8 or $13 for each additional child.

An absolute maximum of $75 or $8. is fixed for pension payments, the amount again governed by insurance benefits.

Pensions are provided also for dependent motherless children or dependent parents of men who die in the service.

Scope Of Protection

Protection under the Soldiers' and Sailors' Civil Relief Act applies not only to members of the army and navy but to marines, Coast Guardsmen and officers of the Public Health Service detailed to duty with the army or the navy.

It reaches from the Federal courts to the lowest courts in the land.

In general, it suspends at least until a reasonable time after leaving the service suits against members of the armed services.

A court may also exercise its discretion in extending the protection to any guarantor or endorser of an obligation for a military man.

Provisions In Brief

Among provisions of the act, which is in force for the duration, but which applies only to obligations existing prior to entry into the service, are these:

The courts may stay execution of any judgment against a service man or may vacate or stay any attachment or garnishment of his property.

No eviction may be made from dwellings occupied chiefly by the wife or dependent of a person in military service if the rent does not exceed $80 a month.

Insurance Premiums

Under some circumstances the Veterans' Administration will arrange for deferment of insurance-policy premiums up to a total of $5,000 face amount of insurance. The law does not cover policies which become void if the insured enters the military service.

Real estate cannot be sold for nonpayment of taxes, except with the permission of a court, which may defer payment of the taxes until six months after termination of service.

Income taxes are deferred to a maximum of six months after the termination of military service if such service materially impairs one's ability to pay the tax.

Sub Tender Launched

VALLEJO, Calif., Dec. 17 (AP)—The submarine tender Sperry was launched at the Mare Island Navy Yard today, five months ahead of schedule.

Rear Admiral W. J. Friedell, the yard commander, pointed out that the Sperry was completed in almost seven months less time than its sister ship, the Fulton.

The new tender was named for the late Elmer Ambrose Sperry, pioneer inventor and engineer in submarine construction. Mrs. Robert B. Lea, the inventor's daughter, served as sponsor.

Light Cruiser Launched

DEC 18 1941

Camden, N. J., Dec. 17 (AP)—Without any special ceremony, the 10,000-ton light cruiser Columbia was launched today at the Camden yards of the New York Shipbuilding Company.

The sponsor was Jean Adams Paschal, 16, of Columbia, S. C., accompanied by her parents, Acting Mayor and Mrs. Gary Paschal of Columbia.

The Columbia, to be commissioned for service next year, is one of thirty-two light cruisers now under construction. She is a sister ship of the Cleveland, launched here November 1. Cruisers of this class are equipped with fifteen 6-inch guns and eight 5-inch guns, and carry eight airplanes.

Presence of U. S. Submarines Near Japan Means Fleet Is Now Ready to Strike

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

There is grim satisfaction in the warning to his people by Lieut.-Commander Tominago of Japanese Imperial Headquarters that probably twenty American submarines, big ones with a long cruising radius, are operating off Japan.

DEC 18 1941

A concrete indication that Admiral Tominago may be right is found in Admiral Hart's report that United States submersibles have made two successful attacks. The nature of the victories isn't disclosed, but we can wait for that, just so long as we know Santa Claus is on his way.

This strikes me as a very encouraging sign because it means we are beginning to swing into offensive action in the crucial battle area.

It is pleasing to feel that these under-water boats are the pilot fish which signal the advent of American naval and air re-enforcements. I don't mean that literally because there is no indication where the submarines came from, but it has been more than ten days since the attack on Pearl Harbor and a fair stretch of Pacific can be crossed in that time. The golden hours which we have gained through the grand defense made by our forces should pay returns before long.

Fleet On Hunt.

It wouldn't be surprising to see a big naval engagement break out almost any time now. Our fleet is hunting the Japs, who, if they pursue the lines which their strategy thus far has indicated they are bound to fight, to keep us from bringing aid to our bases, since Japanese success depends on securing and holding control of these. The Japs have had a set-back in not being able to seize the Philippines during the time it requires for a relief expedition to cross the Pacific from Hawaii.

From the standpoint of the ultimate outcome of the battle of the Pacific the attack of the Japanese against the British on the Malay Peninsula is more important than the assault against the Philippines. The Japs, of course, are trying to fight their way down the peninsula to the great naval base of Singapore, the fall of which presumably would deliver into their hands the great wealth of the Dutch East Indies, which Singapore guards. Japan needs the resources of the Indies badly.

Fear that American naval and air aid may be rushed to the aid of the British undoubtedly is spurring the Japanese to make a supreme effort in which, according to the British, they are fighting like fanatics. The situation is serious for Britain, but it should be remembered that the Japanese have to fight their way four hundred miles down the peninsula before they come opposite the great island which houses Singapore. This world-famous naval base isn't tottering yet by any means.

Air Supremacy Needed.

So far as concerns the defense of the Philippines, the latest word continues good. An American communique says that the situation on the ground remains unchanged, and a later army report announces the destruction of at least twenty-five Jap planes on the west coast of Luzon. That victory is of great importance because it indicates that we still retain control of the air over the strategic island of Luzon. The Japs need air supremacy to effect a conquest of the Philippines.

In the European theater the great Russian counter-offensive continues to force the Germans back from the positions which cost so much Nazi blood only a few weeks ago. Once more the strategically important manufacturing city of Kalinin, which sits astride the Moscow-Leningrad railway, is in the hands of the Bolshevists.

The recapture of Kalinin emphasizes the meaning of the Red successes. What is happening is that the Muscovites rapidly are releasing their railway communications on which the maintenance of their fighting front depended. This will give the Soviet battle line new striking power in the spring, when the Reds expect to launch a major offensive against the Nazis, if, indeed, the Russians don't get up enough steam to do the job this winter.

NEW YORK, DEC. 17-(AP)-A VARIETY OF EXPLANATIONS OF THE GERMAN WITHDRAWALS ON THE RUSSIAN FRONT COMES OVER THE GERMAN RADIO.

TO ONE ANNOUNCER GERMANY IS FIGHTING A "POSITIONAL WAR." ANOTHER SAYS THE FRONT IS IN "A STATE OF PARALYSIS." A THIRD SAYS WEATHER CONDITIONS ARE HINDERING THE GERMANS. A FOURTH EXPLAINS THAT "IT IS SOMETIMES NECESSARY TO WITHDRAW SOLDIERS IF THEY HAVE ADVANCED TOO FAR."

DEC 18 1941

AND THERE ARE OTHERS. A BERLIN BROADCAST TO INDIA AND THE FAR EAST SAID: "IT IS MERELY A QUESTION OF FACILITATING COMMUNICATIONS WITH THE REAR, AND OF CONTROL OF THE ALREADY-OCCUPIED TERRITORY."

A SURVEY OF GERMAN BROADCASTS ON VARIOUS WAVELENGTHS RECORDED HERE BY BOTH CBS AND NBC SHOWS THAT THE GERMANS ARE NOT TALKING ABOUT THE RUSSIAN FRONT VERY MUCH, BUT WHEN THEY DO THEY SPEND MOST OF THE TIME IN EXPLANATIONS, AND THEY REPEATEDLY PAY TRIBUTE TO THE STUBBORN FIGHTING QUALITIES OF THE SOVIET FOE.

WHEREAS RUSSIAN FRONT NEWS OCCUPIES MOST OF THE BROADCASTS WHEN THE GERMANS ARE MARCHING VICTORIOUSLY, THE BROADCASTS NOW ARE DEVOTED MOSTLY TO THE PACIFIC WAR.

DEC 18 1941

CBS HEARD ONE SHORT WAVE BROADCASTER EXPLAIN TODAY: "IF THE BOLSHEVIKS HAPPEN TO RECAPTURE SOME VILLAGES, OR IF THE GERMANS FALL BACK TO A WINTER LINE, THEN THIS LOCAL ELASTICITY CAN IN NO WAY AFFECT THE COURSE OF THE CAMPAIGN IN RUSSIA. WINTER HAS BROUGHT ABOUT A STATE OF PARALYSIS."

ANOTHER, SAYING THAT A "POSITIONAL WAR" IS BEING FOUGHT, SAID:

"THE POSITIONAL WAR HAS DIFFERENT TACTICAL PRE-SUPPOSITIONS FROM THE OFFENSIVE WAR. THE MAIN PRINCIPLE IS ADAPTATION TO THE TERRAIN. THE BEST TERRAIN MUST BE IN ONE'S POSSESSION TO FORCE THE ENEMY INTO A TERRAIN WHICH WILL MAKE ALL FIGHTING ACTIVITY MORE DIFFICULT TO START WITH."

DEC 18 1941

THE DIFFICULTIES OF THE GERMAN SOLDIER IN RUSSIA ARE STRESSED REPEATEDLY. LIEUT.-COL. GEORGE SOLDAN, WRITING IN ADOLF HITLER'S NEWSPAPER VOELKISCHER BEOBACHTER, WAS QUOTED ON THE GERMAN RADIO AS WRITING THAT THE WINTER WAR IS "AN EXTREMELY HARD STRUGGLE."

RUSSIA'S INDUSTRIAL RESOURCES ARE "UNDERESTIMATED BY MANY PEOPLE," SOLDAN WROTE, AND THE SOVIET UNION IS SHOWING "AN ALMOST UNIMAGINABLE POWER OF RESISTANCE ON ALL FRONTS."

"THE TOUGHNESS AND STAYING POWER OF THE SOVIET SOLDIERS IS ALMOST BEYOND BELIEF," SOLDAN SAID.

ONE GERMAN COMMENTATOR, HANS FRITSCHE, EVEN MENTIONED A GERMAN DEFENSE.

DEC 18 1941

"ALL THE WORRIES AND ALL THE WORK AND ALL THE HOPES OF THE GERMAN PEOPLE ARE CENTERED ON THIS GERMAN SOLDIER WHERE HE IS FIGHTING, WHETHER HE IS ATTACKING OR DEFENDING," FRITSCHE SAID.

THE BRITISH RADIO, NOTING THE DETAILED AND VARYING GERMAN EXPLANATIONS OF THE RUSSIAN ADVANCES, SAID:

"NO ONE IS LIKELY TO BE DECEIVED BY THESE EXPLANATIONS. EVEN A VICHY RADIO STATION, AT ALGIERS, HAD THE AUDACITY TO REMARK:

'AS WE DO NOT KNOW WHERE THE GERMANS MEAN TO SPEND THE WINTER, IT IS DIFFICULT TO CHOOSE BETWEEN THE EXPRESSION "RETREAT," WHICH THE RUSSIANS APPLY TO THE GERMAN FORCES, AND "STRATEGIC RETREAT," WHICH THE GERMANS USE.'"

THE STRAITS ARE NOT PROTECTED BY COAST ARTILLERY, ALTHOUGH ARGENTINA IS REPORTED READY TO RECONSIDER A PREVIOUS OBJECTION TO CHILE'S OFFER FOR COOPERATIVE EFFORT.

ONLY ONE MAN HAS TRIED TO FORTIFY THE STRAITS. SIXTY YEARS AFTER THEY WERE DISCOVERED, PEDRO SARMIENTO DE GAMBOA SOUGHT TO PROTECT THEM SO SPAIN'S ENEMIES WOULD BE BARRED FROM ENTERING THE PACIFIC. SARMIENTO DIDN'T KNOW ABOUT CAPE HORN; ITS DISCOVERY ENDED THE PLAN.

FEW SHIPS FIGHT THE SWELLS AND DANGERS OF CAPE HORN. MARINERS PREFER THE STRAITS BECAUSE THEY ARE PROTECTED FROM STORMS THAT ALMOST CONSTANTLY BUFFET THE CONTINENT'S TIP.

NEAR MAGALLANES, SOUTHERNMOST CITY IN THE WORLD, LOCATED ABOUT MIDWAY IN THE STRAITS, CHILE HAS A SMALL NAVAL STATION. BUT CHILE, IN WHOSE TERRITORY THE STRAITS LIE, HAS A TINY NAVY.

HOWEVER, 300 MILES FROM CAPE VIRGENES AND CAPE HOLY GHOST, THE ATLANTIC ENTRANCE TO THE STRAITS, LIE THE FALKLAND ISLANDS, GREAT BRITAIN'S SOUTH ATLANTIC NAVAL BASE. ARGENTINA'S MAJOR NAVAL BASES ARE 800 TO 1,000 MILES TO THE NORTH, AS ARE CHILE'S.

THE TREACHERY OF THE STRAITS IS INDICATED BY THE NAMES OF LANDMARKS ALONG THE 362-MILE ROUTE--FATAL BAY, FURY ISLAND, LAST WRECK POINT, DESOLATION HARBOR.

DEC 18 1941

THE WESTERN HALF OF THE STRAITS RUNS THROUGH DEEP NARROW GORGES WHERE THE GRANITE WALLS, POCK-MARKED WITH LIGHT BLUE GLACIERS THAT SEND THOUSANDS OF CASCADES DOWN THE CLIFFS, SOMETIMES RISE ALMOST VERTICALLY FROM WHAT HAS BEEN REFERRED TO AS THE SALT WATER RIVER. THE EASTERN HALF IF SHALLOWER AND WIDER, SKIRTED BY THE BROWN BARREN HILLS OF PATAGONIA AND THE NORTHERN FRINGE OF TIERRA DEL GUEGO.

A FEW HOURS WEST OF MAGALLANES, SHIPS PASS CAPE FROWARD (CORRECT), SOUTHERNMOST PART OF THE AMERICAN CONTINENT, THE SPOT WHERE THE FOOT OF THE ANDES RANGE POKES ITS TOE INTO THE FRIGID WATERS. CAPE HORN IS 200 MILES TO THE SOUTH.

DEC 18 1941

VESSELS FROM THE PACIFIC ENTER THE STRAITS THROUGH SMYTH'S CHANNEL, A DANGEROUS STRETCH OF WATER, THEN HEAD SOUTHEAST ALMOST UNTIL THEY REACH MAGALLANES. FROM THERE ON, THE STRAITS, ROUGHLY, RUN NORTHEAST.

ALTHOUGH THE VOYAGE THROUGH THE STRAITS OF MAGELLAN IS ONE OF THE

MOST SCENIC IN THE WORLD, VESSELS OFTEN GO EITHER DIRECTION FROM MAGALLANES WITHOUT PASSING A SINGLE SHIP. OFTEN THERE IS NOT A SIGN OF LIFE--JUST THE STERN, SILENT PEAKS AND THE RUMBLE OF CASCADES TUMBLING INTO THE GORGE.

South Philippine Port Raided By 30 Enemy Planes—Islands, Except Three Small Areas, "Under Control"

By RICHARD L. TURNER

Washington, Dec. 18 (AP) — American submarines, moving with deadly effect into the battle of the Far East, have sunk a Japanese transport, and probably a destroyer as well.

The Navy made this announcement tonight, and simultaneously the Army reported that enemy operations in the Philippines were virtually at a standstill. A single "mild" air raid was all that the day produced, it said.

(After this communique was issued, news dispatches from Manila said that another, and apparently more serious air raid, with 30 planes, had been made on the southern port of Iloilo on the Central Philippine Island of Panay. Civilian casualties and property damage were reported.

(A second dispatch said the Philippine government had complete control of all provinces with the exception of small areas in the vicinity of Vigan, Aparri and Legaspi where the Japanese have maintained landings.)

Earlier, however, the Army Command in Manila announced that on Monday, a land battle south of Vigan, in Northwestern Luzon, resulted in a Japanese retreat of many miles, with an undetermined number of dead left behind.

Word that America's "pigboats" had reached the area of action came yesterday from Manila. There the headquarters of Adm. Thomas C. Hart, Commander-In-Chief of the Far Eastern Fleet, said that two of three submarine attacks had been successful.

Today the Navy sparsely added the details of a transport sunk and a destroyer probably at the bottom, but, following its usual course, made no mention of specific localities or the identities of the ships involved.

The development was widely taken to mean that an effective beginning had been made at establishing a blockade about Japan, intended to snap the supply lines to her distant expeditionary forces, and cut off supplies of raw materials and food.

Here in Washington President Roosevelt went into consultation with his war council at the White House. Among his conferees was Rear Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, the newly appointed Commander-in-Chief of the Pacific fleet, who was named last night to succeed Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, relieved of his duties pending an investigation of why the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor caught the Navy off guard.

Others who participated were Gen. George C. Marshall, the Chief of Staff; Admiral Harold R. Stark, the Chief of Naval Operations; Admiral Ernest J. King, Commandant of the Atlantic Fleet; Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Chief of the Air Corps, Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of the Navy Knox.

Secretary Knox, in response to questions, said Admiral Nimitz had been made Commander of the Pacific Fleet only and had not been given the additional post of Commander-In-Chief of the United States Fleet, which embraces all naval forces. Admiral Kimmel held both titles.

Knox introduced Nimitz to reporters and the Admiral told them:

"I am very sensible of the fact that I am being intrusted with a very great responsibilty, which I intend to discharge to the best of my ability."

At the same time, the Senate complied with administration wishes by approving, 79 to 2, a bill requiring all men from 18 years of age to 64, inclusive, to register, and making all those from 19 to 44, inclusive, liable to active military service.

The House, contrary to the desires of Administration and War Department leaders, had voted to make the lower limit for military training 21 years instead of 19. The measure will now go to a Senate-House conference committee.

News of the hard-hitting and successful attack on the Japanese in the Philippines brought cheer to a capital already elated at great Allied victories in Africa and Russia, but acutely conscious of a danger spot on the approaches to Singapore.

Official reports from Manila told of an enemy defeat which pushed the invaders back many miles in the Vigan area of Luzon. The invaders apparently had set out toward Manila from their landing point at Vigan. They left an indefinite number of dead behind them as they retreated.

The action occurred on Monday, but dispatches concerning it were just received and gave no details of what might have happened since then. Otherwise the only report of enemy activity in the Pacific was that a dozen planes bombed two airports near Manila, but did little damage. They flew so high, out of deference to anti-aircraft fire, that it was hard to see them.

Washington, meanwhile, heard an increasing discussion of plans for unifying the Allied High Command so that grand strategy for prosecuting the war the world over would procede from a single source. Washington was mentioned, in London dispatches, as its probable base of operations.

On the home front, Secretary of War Stimson announced that in a short while enlistments will be refused, and the Army filled out entirely by the draft. Some 150,000 men may be taken on almost at once, he said. And from Brig.-Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of Selective Service, came word that the Army would soon get tough about exempting men with self-supporting wives.

The Senate meanwhile debated legislation authorizing the draft. It was confronted with the issue of whether the minimum draft age should be 19, as recommended by the President, or 21, as voted yesterday by the House. Gen. George C. Marshall, Army Chief of Staff, sent a letter appealing to Senators to approve the lower limit.

Voluntary enlistments will be stopped, Stimson said, "as soon as the present rush subsides."

He also announced that all reserve officers not yet called to duty had been ordered to take physical examinations, although this did not necessarily mean that they would go on active duty immediately.

To prevent false air raid alarms and unnecessary interruption of industrial production, he announced, the commanding officers of the four air force interceptor commands have been given responsibility for ordering blackouts, sounding alarms and all-clear signals, and silencing radio broadcasts.

During the day, the Industry-Labor Conference called by President Roosevelt recessed to draw up separate recommendations for an anti-strike agreement.

It appeared to some observers that the war in the Pacific, as it affected American-held territory, had stabilized itself, following the first attacks at Pearl Harbor and the effort to invade Luzon. The Japanese seemed stopped either by the nature of the resistance offered, or by a decision to concentrate their power on the battle for Singapore.

The importance of the British naval base there to American operations when the large-scale offensive against Japan is undertaken, is scarcely minimized by officials here. And so word of a British retreat in the jungles north of Singapore came as bad news.

This loss of ground, however, was considered to have been more than offset by the continued victories of the Russian Army, and the apparent smashing of Axis forces in Cirenaica, where the British reported the enemy fleeing "in chaos."

19-44 Draft Limit Wins In Senate By 79 to 2

General Marshall Declares It Would Be 'Unwise' Not to Lower Limit to 19

DOOR CLOSED TO COMPROMISE

Passage Comes Only After Long Debate; Downey Condemns 18-64 Registration

BY JACK BELL

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18 (AP).—The senate responded today to an army appeal for young soldiers of enthusiasm and stamina, voting to make all men from 19 through 44 years old liable for military service and to require the registration of males from 19 through 64.

The chamber passed the measure by the overwhelming vote of 79 to 2, California's two senators, Downey, Democrat, and Johnson, Republican, recorded the only "no" votes.

The bill now goes back to the house, which is expected to route it to a joint conference committee for adjustment of differences, chief of which was the house established minimum age of 21 for active service.

Despite a determined fight, the administration stuck to its guns through three roll calls on the controversial question of lowering the present 21-year minimum for active service.

After hearing Chairman Reynolds (D-NC) of the military affairs committee read a letter from General George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, stating that it would be "unwise" not to lower the limit to 19, the chamber voted 49 to 33 against an amendment by Senator Danaher (R-Conn) to fix 21 as the minimum.

In his letter, Marshall said the army wanted young men who "possess the vitality, enthusiasm and physical stamina necessary to the successful performance of certain types of duty." Highly skilled technicians, Marshall said, could be obtained from the upper age brackets.

Chairman Connally (D-Tex) of the foreign relations committee then stepped out of his role as a consistent administration supporter to offer an amendment to defer 19 and 20 year old men until all eligible registrants from the upper age brackets were drawn into the armed forces.

Rejected Promptly

Almost without debate, the chamber rejected this, 42 to 38, and then turned down quickly, 47 to 34, a proposal by Danaher to make the minimum age 20.

Thus the senate apparently closed the door to any speedy compromise which might bring 20-year-olds into the draft pool but exclude 19-year-olds, a proposal which some house leaders were understood to be willing to accept.

Passage of the measure came after more than six hours of debate, during which the provision for registration of men from 18 through 64 was attacked by Downey as "stupid and asinine."

Downey said that an occupational census of these men, which the army proposed to take at the time of registration, would be worthless and would not provide any usable information for two or three years.

He contended that 1,000,000 men could be drawn from present class 1-A registrants without reducing the age limit and asserted that if more than 1,000,000 were inducted within a year they would have to "train with broomsticks and sleep on the ground."

Answering this charge, Reynolds and others cited the testimony of army officials that there was no intention of inducting men until equipment was ready. Beyond that, however, Senator Chandler (D-Ky) warned that this was a young man's war, asserting that the army had to have the young men to attain its greatest efficiency.

Danaher said it was all right to register men 19 and 20 years old, but continued that their induction ought to be delayed until a survey was made of the need for them.

Joining in the debate at this point, Senator Norris (Ind-Neb) said there were no present plans for sending an expeditionary force across the seas.

"The difficulty of sending an army across the Pacific or Atlantic is almost insurmountable," he declared, adding that there were available more men "than we will be able to utilize or train at the present time."

Senator Taft (R-Ohio) declared there appeared to be an ample supply of men available without drafting those 19 and 20 years old. He said the army apparently was looking to the moral effect on other countries of making most of the nation's manpower available for military duty.

But Senator La Follette (Prog-Wis) urged his colleagues not to "come down with the jitters." Reduction of the age limit could have little effect on this country's enemies or morale at home, he argued, adding:

"The people of this country know they are in for a long, hard war."

Before finally approving the measure, the senate tacked on an amendment by Senator Brooks (R-Ill), which would defer elective state officials from active service while they were in office. Previous legislation deferred governors on the same basis.

The chamber also adopted an amendment by Senator Clark (D-Mo) providing for the payment of $5,000 to the survivors of men who had died while on active duty since October 8.

All voluntary enlistments are to be halted as soon as the present rush subsides, Mr. Stimson said at a press conference.

An immediate increase of more than 150,000 men already has been recommended in a bill which the Secretary said was on President Roosevelt's desk.

Reserve Tests Ordered.

He also made these announcements:

All reserve officers not yet called to active duty have been ordered to take physical examinations, but he said this step did not mean they necessarily would be called out immediately.

After January 1 all graduates of officer candidate schools will be ordered to duty immediately. Previously those so desiring received certificates of capacity and were permitted to return to their former enlisted ranks.

Commanders of the four air force interceptor commands in the United States have been charged with ordering blackouts, air raid alarms, all-clear signals and silencing radio signals.

Mr. Stimson said the purposes were to prevent false alarms and unnecessary interference with production. Both difficulties, he said, had been in evidence in California since the war came. The order became effective December 9.

Headquarters of the interceptor commands are: First, Mitchel Field, L. I.; second, Fort Lawton, near Seattle, Wash.; third, Drew Field, near Tampa, Fla., and fourth, at Riverside, Cal.

General Increase Planned.

The War Department is now in the process of "completing details of a general and indeterminate increase," in the army, the War Secretary said.

"We are proceeding on the basis of the utmost speed consistent with efficiency," he went on. "The ultimate strength of the land forces will be determined in the light of the strategic situation as it develops.

"We are trying to set up machinery by which the army can be increased steadily but without fixing limits which might have to be changed.

"We are trying to do it with the least disturbance to industry and the entire economic setup.

"In the light of this purpose the age limits in the new selective service legislation now before Congress is important. That is why we ask that the minimum age limit be set at 19."

"All war is a young man's game," the Secretary added.

Lately Married Face Draft

By The Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18—The government will become hard-boiled about drafting husbands whose wives are self-supporting, the Senate was told today, as military leaders made known their view that this country must have an army much larger than 4,000,000 men.

"Four million men isn't an army today," Brig. Gen. Wade H. Haislip, Assistant Chief of Staff for Personnel, declared to the Senate Military Committee. The Army will be expanded as rapidly as equipment can be obtained, he said, "without any set number in view."

A system of allowances for the families of married men inducted into service was advocated by Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, director of the selective service system. He said the attitude of draft boards toward dependency and hardship cases must "inevitably" become tighter.

However, about 1,000 farm boys inducted into the Army will be returned to the farm this Spring, he announced, adding that induction of many farm youths would threaten vital agricultural production.

The testimony of both officers, given at a closed committee session, reached the Senate in printed form today.

Mr. Hershey's proposed system of allowances would be modeled, he explained, on the world war practice of requiring a selectee with dependents to make an allotment from his pay to support his family, which the Government matched with an allowance.

"I think late marriages," he said, "will not be a problem any more, because we are going to take them in—I don't think we can do anything else.

"And I submit the Congress will have to be asked to pass an allowance and allotment law—discipline him, if you will—so that there is some means of supporting that wife who may in fact become dependent upon him."

He predicted that local boards would call for service the husbands of "marriages of convenience" whose wives earn enough to support themselves. But the allowance system will be necessary, he added, because "these boys are going to marry, and a lot of them are not marrying to evade."

Gen. Hershey said he was going to run the risk of considerable criticism by returning some 1,000 people to the soil.

Farmers Called Specialists.

"I do not believe the farmers realize the specialists they are," the draft director said. He declared that selective service officials had difficulty educating draft boards to the "fact that because he was just a farmer he was not only important but he was irreplaceable."

Gen. Hershey said a flat order to defer all farmers could not be made because many men would try to take advantage of this.

Gen. Haislip said the air force alone would require 1,000,000 men, and declared that the modern motorized and mechanized army needed just as much man power as the older type of force.

Germany has an army 8,000,000 strong, he said, adding that "it is dangerous to limit the War Department in a war where we don't know where it is going to reach, whether it is going to touch every part of the country."

TWO-MAN SUBMARINE MADE FOR THIS WAR

Appears Designed for Blow at Pearl Harbor

Washington, Dec. 18 — (AP) — Representative Vinson (D-Ga), chairman of the House Naval Committee, said today that the two-man submarine captured from the Japanese in their raid on Pearl Harbor appeared to have been built expressly for that mission.

Vinson said preliminary examination by naval experts indicated the Japanese had designed it to slide under anti-submarine nets. Two of the tiny craft were used in the attack, and the naval chairman said it appeared certain that they had been transported across the Pacific aboard a surface ship and launched when within their range.

The Navy, however, did not regard the two-man subs as new weapons. Secretary of the Navy Knox declared Monday that the Pearl Harbor attack revealed no new weapons.

(Tokio today admitted the loss of five of the new submarines.)

Mr. Vinson suggested that Navy officials look into the idea of equipping "mother ships" capable of carrying and launching squadrons of swift motor torpedo boats, such as those which have been ordered for coast defense.

He acknowledged that such small craft cannot accompany the battle fleet under their own power, but he said the deadly little power boats might be used with telling effect in naval engagements at sea under favorable conditions.

Red Successes Called Great Help In Pacific

DEC 19 1941

By John M. Hightower
Associated Press Staff Correspondent

Washington, Dec. 18—The mightiest blow yet struck for victory in the Pacific, many military men here believe, has been driven home—not in the far-flung battle zones of the Far East—but on the blood-stained snows of Russia.

The surprising Nazi reverses at the hands of the resurgent Red armies, they asserted, were unquestionably a severe setback to Tokyo, despite the initial Japanese successes at Pearl Harbor.

This upset of the Axis timetable, some officials believe, may well explain the fanatical intensity of the Japanese drives to knock out Hongkong and Singapore.

Japan Facing New Front

Unless the Japanese can take these British strongholds quickly, it was said, they must face the dread possibility of fighting the British and Russians simultaneously on the Asiatic mainland, as well as the United States in the Pacific islands. And a Russia more or less victorious in Europe could concentrate formidable strength at Japan's Siberian back door.

In terms of long-range results, the Nazi reverses represent a victory no less for the defenders of Hawaii, the Philippines, Singapore and Hongkong than for the Russians themselves because, as these experts view the war, every plane, gun and man lost by the Germans in Russia is a loss in potential reserve strength for Japan.

Defeat Weakens Whole Line

The extent of Russian successes remains to be measured in its entirety by the magnitude of the German retreat. The same is true of the British drive against German and Italian forces in Africa.

But the point which the military strategists make is that the great battles of Europe, Africa and Asia are all part of the same war, and whenever the Axis suffers a setback in one area it is weakened all along the line.

This understanding of the broad strategy of the conflict was said to be behind Administration plans for continuing full lend-lease assistance to the nations fighting the Axis, regardless of where the battle fronts may be.

In the broad strategic picture, the task of the United States thus is threefold:

The Philippines must be held and used for offensive air action against the enemy, insofar as possible; the United States Pacific and Asiatic fleets must destroy as much of Japan's navy as can be brought to battle, and America's industry must produce a veritable torrent of munitions—enough to supply not only United States forces but also the British, the Russians and all others who are fighting the Axis.

3 Possible Hitler Moves

One need for continuing to pour planes and guns into both the British Isles and North Africa was said to arise from the fact that no one can tell to what new adventure Hitler may turn, assuming he is finally able to establish a strong defense line in Russia.

Three major possibilities were mentioned:

1. A major drive through Turkey into the Near East in an attempt to cut Allied supply lines through Iran and Iraq and to knock out British armies in North Africa.

2. A military-political campaign extending the war to Spain and Portugal and opening Vichy-French ports to Nazi naval operations in the Atlantic. This development might create new problems for the United States navy in prosecuting its two-ocean war.

3. A desperate effort to crush Britain by invasion.

NIPPON BOMBERS CAUSE CASUALTIES IN PHILIPPINE ISLE

30 Jap Planes Batter At Panay in Half-Hour Raid, Manila Reports

Invaders Held in Check At All Points in Luzon, Driven Back Many Miles at Vigan

By The Associated Press

MANILA, Friday, Dec. 19—More than 30 Japanese planes have bombed the southern port of Iloilo on the central Philippine Island of Panay in their first attack in that region, U. S. Army headquarters here announced today.

"Civilian casualties and property damage have been reported," said a communique.

Attack Lasts Half Hour

The communique, issued by the headquarters of Lieut.-Gen. Douglas MacArthur, U. S. commander in the Philippines, shortly after 8 a. m. (6 p. m. EST Thursday) said:

"Iloilo city (on Panay Island) was bombed about 1:10 p. m. Thursday. More than 30 Japanese planes participated. Civilian casualties and property damage have been reported."

Press reports said the attack lasted for about 30 minutes.

Previously the Japanese had attacked only the Philippine islands of Luzon, on which Manila lies; Mindanao, large southern island where the important airport at Davao was bombed, and the central island of Cebu, southeast of Panay.

Iloilo Important Port

Iloilo is about 310 miles south and slightly east of Manila, a stop on an airline running south to Davao, southern Philippine port.

It is an important port having a large trade with Manila and other island ports as well as with foreign ports. Many industries also are centered there. Chief exports are sugar, tobacco, rice, coffee, hides and hemp.

Iloilo is the capital of the province of the same name, and has a population of 20,000.

Invaders Checked

Announcement of the Iloilo raid was made as the interior department of the Philippine Commonwealth reported that the government was in complete control of all provinces except the small areas about Vigan, Aparri, and Legaspi, where the Japanese established landing several days ago and have since been kept localized.

Throughout yesterday and last night the Japanese apparently avoided any effort to extend their small and precarious footholds on the main Philippine island of Luzon.

At one of these doubtful beachheads—about Vigan in the northwest of the island some 200 miles above Manila—it was disclosed, in fact, that the Japanese had been thrown back many miles in fighting on Monday afternoon. Nothing was said as to the subsequent developments in that area, where the Japanese also had lost at least 26 planes.

Air Ports Attacked

The fighting was south of Vigan itself. (This suggested that a Japanese attempt to push toward Manila had been smashed before it got started.)

Yesterday the invaders attempted a somewhat timorous raid on Nichols and Zablan fields in which there was only light damage. No casualties were reported.

The raiders, 12 in all as counted from the ground, flew so high in marked deference to American anti-aircraft fire that it was difficult to see them.

During the day, the entire army of the Philippines was inducted into the United States Army of the Far East and other moves consolidating and strengthening the American forces.

The consolidation of American and Philippine fighting forces was thus announced by General MacArthur:

"In order to amalgamate all defense forces and effectuate maximum cohesion and coordination, the entire Philippine army is being inducted into the United States Army in the Far East. Chief of Staff Gen. Basilio J. Valdes of the Philippine army will continue to administer his echelon."

Quezon Stresses Solidarity

Civilian as well as military solidarity was stressed by President Manuel L. Quezon of the Philippine Commonwealth in a radio address yesterday to the country.

Asking the people to be calm and confident, to carry on their duties without interruption and to ignore rumors and enemy propaganda, President Quezon proclaimed his utter confidence in the government and people of the United States, which, he said, "have carried out all promises they made, and were carrying out the independence pledge when Japan attacked."

"We are resisting effectively on all fronts and the situation is under control," he went on. "Filipinos and Americans are fighting together with signal valor under the command of Lieutenant General MacArthur, in whose courage and ability I have absolute faith.

. . . "We are fighting with America in defense of our liberties, for attainment of independence, in defense of freedom and justice everywhere and for the right of all people to be masters of their destiny," he added. "I have no doubt that in the end the victory will be on our side.

"America with her unlimited resources and strength will come to our aid. Above all, I am confident that the God of Justice, our Divine Father, is with us."

Police Tighten Watch.

Meanwhile, police tightened their watch for subversive and fifth-column activities and warned nationals of pro-Axis countries who have not been taken into custody to avoid suspicious activities.

These included Spaniards, Hungarians, some Frenchmen, Austrians and Chinese adherents of Wang Ching-wei, head of the Japanese-supported regime in Nanking.

Gen. Valdes ordered all reserve officer training corps cadets to report immediately for further military training. It was estimated the cadets total 13,000.

Filipinos Praised Highly for Part In Vigan Battle

DEC 19 1941

By the Associated Press

MANILA, Dec. 18.—Japanese invaders have been shoved back many miles in the Vigan area of Northwestern Luzon, the United States Far Eastern command announced today.

An indefinite number of Japanese dead and wounded were left on the field of battle, south of Vigan, in that action on Monday afternoon, it was said. There was no further word on what had developed since then.

Sea-borne Japanese troops secured their Vigan foothold, about 200 miles north of Manila, soon after the outbreak of the war in the Pacific.

The communique praised the morale of the Filipino soldiers involved in the fighting. Other dispatches said the Filipinos were fighting valiantly in all encounters with the Japanese.

(War Department communique No. 16 outlining the military situation at 10:30 o'clock this morning, said "there was no apparent enemy activity during Wednesday" in the Philippines and "nothing to report from other areas.")

First Alarm in Three Days.

Manila had its first air raid alarm in three days at 1:55 p.m., today (11:55 p.m., Wednesday, Eastern standard time) and before the all clear came 35 minutes later Japanese bombers, preceded by a small number of fighters, flew across the city.

In all, 12 planes were counted. They were so high they could hardly be seen, apparently having developed a respect for American anti-aircraft fire.

Bombs fell on Nichols and Zablan Fields, but caused light damage, a communique said, and no casualties were reported.

"Enemy activity today has been confined to the air," said the afternoon United States communique.

Armies Amalgamated.

The communique also announced amalgamation of the entire Philippine Army with the United States Army in the Far East.

The chief of staff of the Philippines Army, Gen. Basilio J. Valdes, will continue to administer his echelon, the announcement said.

The communique said that "in order to amalgamate all defense forces and effectuate the maximum cohesion and co-ordination, the entire Philippine Army is inducted into the U. S. A. F. E."

It also was announced that Lt. Gen. Douglas MacArthur had given President Manuel Quezon a check for $10,000,000 for public relief and civilian defense.

(In Washington, Philippines sources said the $10,000,000 came from President Roosevelt's emergency fund, having been sent to the islands yesterday, at the same time it was announced that a similar allotment had been made to Hawaii.)

Appeal Made by Quezon.

President Quezon in a radio address to the Philippines appealed for an all-out effort against the Japanese, especially by the populace behind the lines.

"We are resisting effectively on all fronts and the situation is under control," he said. "Filipinos and Americans are fighting together with signal valor under the command of Lt. Gen. MacArthur, in whose courage and ability I have absolute faith."

President Quezon urged a "business-as-usual" policy for the people and warned them against rumors and propaganda "being spread by the enemy or fifth columnists" with the intent of breaking their morale.

President Quezon told the Filipinos to have utter confidence in the Government and people of the United States "since they have carried out all promises they made and were carrying out the independence pledge when Japan attacked."

He cautioned against excessive zeal in dealing with enemy nationals.

Urges Calm and Confidence.

President Quezon told the Filipinos to be calm and confident. He said there would be much suffering and expressed deep sympathy with the mothers who have lost sons and also with those who have lost members of their families and friends.

"But war is tragic, we must expect all this," he said.

"We are fighting with America in defense of our liberties, for attainment of independence, in defense of freedom and justice everywhere and for the right of all people to be

PEACE, ORDER REPORTED ALL OVER ISLANDS

Port Of Davao Is Declared Under Full Control Of U. S. Army

Japanese Landing Forces Fully Localized, Officers Assert

[By the Associated Press]

Manila, Friday, 9.15 A. M., Dec. 19—The Interior Department of the Philippine Commonwealth reported today that the Government was in complete control of all provinces except the small areas about Vigan, Aparri and Legaspi, where the Japanese established landings several days ago and have since been kept localized.

The department said peace and order were established throughout the islands and that morale was high, with the people cooperating fully against subversive elements and fifth columnists, many of whom showed their colors when the first Japanese assault came.

Davao In U. S. Control

The southern port of Davao, on the island of Mindanao, a city with a large Japanese population and scene of an early fifth-columnist outbreak, is under complete control of the United States Army, the Interior Department stated.

Meanwhile, news dispatches quoted persons who escaped from the small occupied zones as saying the Japanese were attempting to set up local puppet governments and to circulate their own money.

The Japanese residents of such areas are quickly blossoming out as army or civilian officials, thus apparently bearing out reports that Japan for years has planted her nationals throughout the Philippines as businessmen with the intention to use them eventually as army or civilian officials when the opportunity arose.

Appear In Uniforms

Local Japanese were said to have appeared in uniforms promptly when the Japanese warships appeared off the coasts.

At each landing point, it was reported, Philippine constabulary and other soldiers battled furiously against the invaders, but at Aparri, Vigan and Legaspi they were greatly outnumbered and eventually were forced to fall back.

Japs Report U. S. Forces In Retreat, DNB Asserts

Bern, Friday, Dec. 19 (AP)—The Japanese army headquarters in Tokyo stated today, according to a DNB dispatch from the Japanese capital, that "Japanese troops which landed on the Philippines at Luzon have won the entire region northwest of Legaspi and are pursuing the enemy in retreat."

A Japanese statement was quoted as saying:

"Japanese aviation carried out incessant attacks against enemy airdromes at Manila. The principal enemy forces are destroyed so that the Japanese no longer encounter more than minimum resistance."

Outnumbered U. S. Flyers Gain Edge on Japs; Lieut. Meritt Gave Life to Wreck a Transport

Moore, Dale, Gies and Peator Join Growing List of American Air Heroes in Philippine Battles.

By CLARK LEE

DEC 19 1941

Manila, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—The roster of American air heroes is growing daily as these stout young pilots add to the list of seventy Japanese planes already officially announced as destroyed in fighting in the Philippines.

The hara kari complex of the Japanese pilots, a development of the Samurai suicide psychosis, has been more than matched by the cool courage of the American airmen who are fighting against numerical odds to hold one of the most important of Allied strongholds.

Most of the time, Americans live through their cloud battles under the semi-tropical sun. Sometimes they do not. Capt. Colin P. Kelly Jr., 26 years old, of Madison, Fla., was one of the first to die, in causing the sinking of the Japanese battleship Haruna.

Lieut. Merett Gave Life.

Another who has given his life was Lieut. Samuel H. Merett, 26, of 1541 Peachtree street, Atlanta, who led his squadron in an attack on Japanese naval transports attempting to land troops on Luzon. Two enemy vessels burst into flame as Lieut. Merett and his companions dropped their bombs and followed with low-level strafing attacks. In the final dive, Lieut. Meritt flew his plane squarely into the side of a third Japanese transport, which blew up.

Lieut. Jack Dale, 25, of Willoughby, Ohio, repeatedly attacked another group of Japanese transports, silencing their anti-aircraft weapons with machine gun fire which drove the crews to cover and smashed the Japanese guns. Lieut. Dale then dived upon the enemy landing barges, causing heavy casualties among the Japanese troops attempting to reach the shore through the surf. He was unhurt.

Under heavy machine-gun fire of attacking enemy planes, Lieut. Joseph Harold Moore, 27, of 138 South Converse street, Spartanburg, S. C., led a group of American pilots to their grounded planes. Lieut. Moore's squadron got four planes into the air and attacked the Japanese while gaining altitude.

The plane of one of Lieut. Moore's companions was hit, and the pilot who had to bail out was attacked by five Japanese planes while drifting down with his parachute. Lieut. Moore drove into the center of the enemy with his machine-gun blazing, shot down two and distracted the others. Both Lieut. Moore and the parachutist landed safely.

Attacked 20 Jap Planes.

Second Lieut. Carl Gies, 26, of Salem, Ore., went aloft to protect his home field from an anticipated attack. In the air he received radio notice that another American base, twenty miles away, was under attack. Lieut. Gies raced to the scene and dived through low-lying clouds into a group of twenty enemy planes and forced one down. Lieut. Gies returned safely although his plane was badly damaged.

Lieut. Randolph D. Peator of Campti, La., is credited with being the first American pilot to shoot down a Japanese plane over the Philippines. He got on the tail of a group of Japanese attack planes, shot one down and then joined in a general dogfight in which two more Japanese crashed.

On his way home with gasoline tanks nearly empty and ammunition running low, Lieut. Keater chased another Japanese fighter plane and saw the enemy spin to the ground and burst into flames.

Lieut. Boyd Wagner, 25, of 23 Irene street, Johnstown, Pa., is credited with having attacked five Japanese planes, downing two and then looking about for more of the enemy. Sighting twelve Japanese machines on the ground he dived toward the field through concentrated anti-aircraft fire and set five planes ablaze. His plane was damaged, but he completed his mission and returned to his base safely.

U. S. Air Heroes: Exploits Over Philippines

Manila, Dec. 18—More details were disclosed here today about the exploits of a lengthening list of American heroes of the air—men whose courage is matching the suicide complex of the Japanese and is adding to the roll of seventy Japanese planes already officially announced destroyed.

Lieut. Samuel H. Merett thus followed in death Capt. Colin Kelly, Jr., who smashed the Japanese battleship Haruna. Leading his squadron against Japanese naval transports trying to land troops on Luzon, Merett and his companions set two Japanese vessels aflame. Then, in a last dive, Merett flew his plane squarely into the side of a third Japanese transport, blowing it up.

Lieut. Jack D. Dale, repeatedly attacking another group of Japanese transports, first silenced, then smashed, their anti-aircraft guns and swept down upon the enemy landing barges to cause heavy casualties among the Japanese troops attempting to reach the shore through the surf. He was unhurt.

JAPANESE MAJOR UNMASKED

Posed as Shopkeeper in Manila for Several Years

Manila, Dec. 18—(AP)—An "Excuse, please" murmuring little Japanese shopkeeper named Hara, who for the past few years sold loaves of bread and soda pop to residents of Vigan, was unmasked today as Major Hara, of the Imperial Japanese army.

A Filipino physician arriving from a town near Japanese-occupied Vigan, 200 miles northwest of Manila, told the story. He said Hara was arrested at the outbreak of hostilities but when the first Japanese troops landed on Dec. 10 they proceeded directly to the jail and released him.

He then donned his major's uniform. Hara is also Japanese "military Governor of the Province of Ilocos Sur."

Filipinos Fight Foe With Sharpened Poles

MANILA, Dec. 19 (Friday) (AP).—Hundreds of residents of the northern Philippine districts where Japanese troops have landed are attacking the invaders with sharpened bamboo poles and the highly effective bolo knife, persons arriving here from the northern regions disclosed today.

Many residents, eager to defend their country, are forming new corps of civilian volunteer "parashoots." These are armed militiamen whose duty it is to guard against Japanese parachute troops.

500 LIVES ARE LOST ON PHILIPPINE SHIP

Only 300 Saved From Liner That Struck Mine.

Manila, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—Fully 500 persons apparently lost their lives in the sinking of the inter-island passenger steamship Corregidor, which was blown up by a mine in deep, shark-infested waters near Manila Bay yesterday, it was reported today. The ship was carrying 800 persons, including passengers and crew, and roughly 300 are known to have been rescued.

Little hope was held for the recovery of many bodies.

Although there was apparently no accurate check of those on board, it was known that all inter-island vessels usually carry double the total of the listed passengers because many travelers pay their fare aboard ship.

The 1,881-ton Corregidor, once the Engadine, and the first seaplane carrier in history, took part in the world war battle of Jutland. She received special army permission to sail on Tuesday night and hit a mine before daylight yesterday. Many survivors were in the water for five hours or more.

DEC 19 1941

The missing included Assemblyman Juan M. Reyes and Prof. Jose Reyes of Santo Tomas University. Both were brothers of Archbishop Gabriel Reyes of Cebu.

Japs Say Forces Have Landed Upon Hongkong Island

Effected Despite Fierce Resistance By British, Communique Claims

Tokyo, Friday, Dec. 19 (Official Radio Recorded by AP)—The Domei news agency reported that virtually half of the British island of Hongkong was under Japanese control by 11 a. m. today.

Giving more details than an Imperial headquarters announcement which said the Japanese Army and Navy had landed on the besieged island after more than a week of cannonading, Domei said the landings were made at three points at 10 p. m. (Thursday — 8 a. m., E.S.T.).

within two and a half hours, the agency said. Jardines Hill, a lookout post 1,420 feet high, near the center of the island, had been occupied.

By 11 a. m. today, it said, numerous defense positions had been captured and their guns silenced.

Local resistance is continuing, with Japanese guns and planes "furiously battering the enemy," Domei added.

The British, defending their big naval base at the head of the China Sea, put up a fierce resistance to the Japanese, a communique said, after having twice rejected ultimatums to surrender.

The Japanese nevertheless were said to be "rapidly carrying out further operations."

The official account said the Japnese capped their assault with an intensive pounding all yesterday and last night in which Japanese planes and the Army's artillery bombed and shelled steadily.

The landing was effected, the Japanese said, by Army and Navy forces "acting in close collaboration."

The Japanese Thursday acknowledged the loss of five "special type submarines" and 29 planes in the attack on Pearl Harbor on the opening day of the war, and they withdrew a previous claim that an American aircraft carrier had been sunk there.

A Japanese destroyer also is missing, a communique said.

The Army division of Japanese general headquarters announced that their forces in co-operation with the Navy had received "important reinforcement in all theaters of operations," and new territorial gains in the Philippines were claimed but not elaborated upon.

Japanese troops which landed at Senggora and at Kohta Bharu were said to have "destroyed British frontier fortifications on the Malay Peninsula and to have annihilated British motorized forces."

"The aviation bombed airfields in Burma and Malaya," the Japanese said.

5 U. S. Battleships Sunk, Claim

The new Japanese tally on Japanese and American losses in the Pacific war was said to have been made after air reconnaissance.

"Aerial observation," the Japanese said, had shown that five United States battleships, two cruisers and one oil tanker were sunk at Hawaii, and that 464 American planes were destroyed. The four ships were listed as of the California, Maryland, Arizona and Utah classes, and the fifth of an unidentified class.

Three enemy submarines also have been sunk in the Pacific, the communique claimed, without giving details.

The "special type" Japanese submarines apparently were the small two-man submersibles which Secretary of the Navy Knox referred to in his report Monday.

Knox reported the loss of only one United States battleship, the 32,600-ton Arizona, the 19,000-ton training ship Utah, three destroyers and a mine-layer. The old battleship Oklahoma, and an unspecified number of other craft were damaged, he said, but could be repaired.

The Japanese army reported its contingents landed at Aparri, Vigan and Legaspi, in the Philippines, were advancing, but gave no details.

Other Japanese Claims

Other Japanese claims were:

Oil depots and military facilities set afire in Hongkong by air and artillery attacks.

An air raid on Penang, off the west Malayan coast, which sank one large British ship and several smaller transports.

Destruction of nine British planes, including two Buffalo (Brewster) fighters, at Ipoh, Malaya.

Destruction of military objectives at Kunming, the Chinese end of the Burma road, in air attacks.

Loss of Five 'Special Type' Submarines Admitted by Japs

Report No Destruction Or Damage to Surface Craft at Hawaii

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Dec. 18 (Official Radio).—The Japanese naval command admitted today that five of its "special type" submarines failed to return from the December 7 attack on the United States Hawaiian naval base at Pearl Harbor.

(Apparently the craft referred to were Japan's 41-foot, two-man submersibles, one of which was captured by United States forces in the attack on Hawaii, while another was destroyed. The pocket submarines, electrically powered, have a range of 200 miles.)

The Japanese also admitted the loss of 29 planes in that attack and said a United States aircraft carrier which on December 8 had been reported sunk "now is believed to have escaped to a certain port."

The naval communique acknowledged no loss or damage of surface craft in the "historic engagement" with which the new war in the Pacific was launched.

Claim Three Enemy Subs.

The Japanese said their "special type" submarines "penetrated deeply into Pearl Harbor and sank at least one battleship of the Arizona class and in addition inflicted heavy losses on enemy ships."

In more recent action, three "enemy" submarines have been sunk in the Pacific, while one Japanese destroyer is reported missing, the navy section of imperial headquarters reported.

It did not give the nationality of the submarines or where in the Pacific they were claimed sunk.

The navy section in a revision of claims of damage done in Hawaii asserted that aerial observation showed that five United States battleships were sunk and that the United States air force there had been destroyed.

Claims of Sinkings.

The announcement asserted the photographs showed these battleships were sunk:

Two heavy cruisers and one oil tanker also were listed as sunk.

(United States Navy Secretary Knox in his report Monday said only one battleship, the 32,600-ton Arizona was sunk in the Japanese raid on Hawaii. The 19,000-ton training ship Utah, three destroyers and the mine-layer Oglala were officially listed as the other vessels sunk. The old battleship Oklahoma and an unspecified number of other craft were damaged, some so lightly that they were returned to service immediately. Mr. Knox said Army losses were severe, but that replacements already had arrived or were on the way.)

Heavy Damage Reported.

The Japanese high command declared seven United States vessels had been damaged beyond repair, listing them as three battleships—of California, Maryland and Nevada classes—and two light cruisers and two destroyers.

A total of 450 American planes were machine-gunned and set afire on the ground and 14 planes were shot down and many others were damaged in the Hawaiian attack, the high command said.

Burma Road Terminal Bombed.

Tokio, Dec. 18 (Official Radio Received by A. P.).—Military objectives in Kunming, at the Chinese end of the Burma Road, were destroyed by a mass raid by Japanese bombers today, it was reported here from the Japanese air base in French Indo-China.

Imperial Headquarters today announced the occupation of the Victoria Point air base, at the southern tip of Burma, by Japanese units last Sunday and told of Japanese advances after the destruction of British mechanized units at Singora and Kota Bharu, in northern Malaya.

Bad weather was acknowledged in both Burma and Malaya.

Hongkong Is Dive-Bombed.

Japanese bombers and artillery continued to pound military objectives in Hongkong throughout today, Domei, the Japanese news agency, reported in a dispatch datelined Kowloon, captured mainland portion of the British colony. Japanese dive bombers repeatedly blasted objectives inside the city, the dispatch said.

Reporting on the Japanese drive into British Malaya, the army section of Imperial Headquarters announced tonight that Japanese planes made a mass raid on Penang on Wednesday and sank one large and several smaller transports in the harbor. Wharves and other port facilities of Penang were reported smashed.

The communique said that three Japanese planes attacked the British airfield at Ipoh, southeast of Penang, shot down two Buffalo (Brewster) fighters and destroyed seven more on the ground.

Japs Report Advances.

Tokio, Dec. 18 (Official Radio Received by A. P.).—The army section of Japanese Imperial Headquarters declared today that the Japanese forces which landed at Aparri, on the northern tip of Luzon, had occupied an American air base there and were driving southward, while another invasion spearhead was smashing resistance in the Vigan area along the west coast.

It declared also that the Japanese units landed near Legaspi, in the southeastern reaches of the island, were driving northward, implying that a pincer action, which the Japanese had forecast last week, was under way.

The High Command also asserted that only a small air force now offered resistance in the Philippines as the result of Japanese assaults upon the islands' air bases.

Jap Diet Ends Session

Tokyo, Dec. 18—(Official Radio Received by the (AP))—The Diet (Parliament) formally closed its seventy-eighth session today after four days of work in which three budget bills and five other measures were passed.

An agreement for the exchange o monthly radio broadcasts between Tokyo and Berlin, to promote German Japanese understanding, was mad today, Domei announced.

Formosa Quake Deaths Are Placed at 319

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Dec. 18 (Official Radio).—The Ministry of Overseas Affairs announced today that 319 persons were killed and 437 were injured by the disastrous earthquake in Southern Formosa yesterday.

The ministry reported 1,768 homes were destroyed.

Railway, telephone and telegraph communications were said to have been completely restored.

JAPS ADVANCE 100 MILES IN MALAYA

British Pull Main Defense Line Back To 300 Miles From Singapore

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 18—Many Japanese soldiers drowned in Malaya when the dikes of canals were cut by British defenders and the water inundated the jungles, the London radio said today in a broadcast heard by NBC.

Rangoon, British Burma, Dec. 18 (AP)—Another large convoy of British Indian troops arrived here today with full equipment.

[By the Associated Press]

Singapore, Dec. 18—The Japanese have advanced one hundred miles into Malaya in eleven days, but have not yet managed to convert their jungle offensive into a major push, the British reported tonight as their own main defense line was pulled back to about 300 air miles north of Singapore.

Malaya's second city, Penang, and the mainland province of Wellesley were isolated from the rest of the peninsula as the British fell back from one river to another in the fluid fighting required by the terrain.

Jap Bombing Slackens

Neither side has much air support because flyers can see only unbroken greenery below. Japanese bombing has slackened notably.

The Japanese still are depending on many and repeated thrusts by small units which plunge ahead without regard for their lives, but they have yet to break a British stand in a major battle, the British declared.

Penang, an island base fifteen miles long and five miles broad off the northwest coast of Malaya, is strategically important to the defense of north Malaya and is the terminus for eight cables. It still was believed in British hands tonight, but how long it could hold out was problematical.

Japs On Mainland

Singapore had heard nothing from the island for twenty-four hours and it was known the enemy was investing the adjacent mainland.

The British withdrawal was from the Muda river. It left all of the big Thailand border province of Kedah and the smaller coastal province Wellesley opposite Penang to the Japanese.

So far this line had not been attacked in strength, tonight's communique reporting "no enemy activity" in either the west or the east of Malaya, and little air action.

Japs Attack Bridge

It did, however, report that prior to Wednesday night's withdrawal from the Muda, a strong Japanese force tried to storm Pekaka bridge.

"This," it said, "was repulsed, the enemy being driven back across the river, leaving behind many dead. The subsequent withdrawal was carried out unopposed."

"During the night," another communique said of the British withdrawal, "our troops in south Kedah and the province Wellesley successfully disengaged and now are reorganizing south of the Singei (river) Krian."

Assault Driven Off

In east Malaya, in the Kelantan area, the British said "an attack on our position was driven off with heavy casualties to the enemy."

This activity, it was believed here, meant that the Japanese would try to drive into Perak state along a first class highway on the eastern flank of the new British defense line.

South of Girk this highway can be used by all kinds of motor transport, but the terrain on either side is broken by mile-high mountains.

Wavell Optimistic

In the face of this admittedly grave situation, Singapore was cheered by a dispatch from one of Britain's great military men, Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell, now commanding in India.

"The Japanese are still a long way from overrunning Malaya or approaching Singapore," said General Wavell, at New Delhi.

"They have secured certain preliminary success due to their sudden and treacherous attack and the situation in northwest Malaya certainly is causing anxiety.

"Though the British might not be able to hold Penang and its loss would be a nuisance, the Japanese would not be able to use it straightaway.

"Active measures are well in hand to remedy the situation in Malaya."

Penang's Fate Believed Sealed

Melbourne, Australia, Dec. 18 (AP)—Australian planes have successfully bombed Japanese installations on Greenwich Island, a communique announced tonight. The island is 1 degree north of the equator and is the southernmost of the Japanese-mandated Caroline group in the Pacific.

[By the Associated Press]

Singapore, Dec. 18—Japan's offensive by land, sea and air, smashing at many points along a vast arc from Burma and the Malay Peninsula to the jagged coast of Dutch New Guinea, developed its direst threat today on the road to Singapore.

That threat in northwestern British Malaya seem to have all but sealed the fate of the island state and port of Penang.

Penang and another Straits Settlement state, Province Wellesley, have been cut off from direct connection with the rest of Malaya by a British withdrawal in Kedah province.

All Of Kedah Yielded

Official concessions indicated that all of the 115-mile-long state of Kedah had been yielded.

This meant that the Japanese were able to advance the full length of Kedah, on the northwestern side of Malaya, along the coastal railway terminating at Singapore, bastion of British naval and air power in the Far East.

Singapore had heard nothing from Penang for twenty-four hours, but the island was still believed to be in British hands although the Japanese were moving into adjacent mainland areas in Kedah after the defenders fell back to reorganize their positions.

Philippines In Arc

Within the curve of the Japanese arc of offensive lie the Philippine Islands and to their northwest the important but isolated contest for Hongkong, where Britain's chief hope was a reportedly growing Chinese offensive at the rear and on the flank of the Japanese besiegers.

The latest direct word from Hongkong was that of Gov. Sir Mark Young, who telegraphed London: "We are going to hold on."

Japanese planes spread aerial warfare to Dutch possessions. Dutch naval planes were said to have beaten off small-scale attacks on Sorong, Dutch New Guinea, and Ternate, one of twin islands, between Celebes and Halmahera.

(Forty persons were killed and one hundred were injured seriously yesterday in Japanese air attacks on the small island of Terampa in the Dutch Anambas group between Malaya and Borneo, Dutch authorities announced.

(The Dutch said the island was undefended and without military objectives and many of the victims were machine-gunned as they worked in the rice fields.)

Dutch Planes Active

Dutch naval planes were active on the offensive also. An official Batavia announcement rectified yesterday's claim that a Japanese destroyer had been hit in an assault on a Japanese naval-transport concentration off Miri, British north Borneo. Today's announcement said that the warship was a cruiser.

A flying boat dropped five 440-pound bombs from a three-mile altitude and two of them hit their mark, the Dutch communique said. The cruiser lost speed and burst into flames.

WITHDRAWAL OF

f British and Indian troops south of he Krian River was announced by he British command here today, indicating that all of the 115-mile-long tate of Kedah had been yielded to apanese invaders.

The British said they were reorganizing below the river, which lows into Malacca Strait, 30 miles outh of Penang, after disengaging perations against the enemy during he night.

A report of some fighting about Grik in northeastern Perak east of Penang and 18 miles from the Thai border, indicated that the Japanese spearheads already had struck across a new frontier.

Informed sources said they had heard nothing from Penang in 24 hours but still believed the isand off the Malayan coast to be in British hands.

Penang Raided

[The army section of Japanese Imperial Headquarters announced that Japanese planes made a mass raid on Penang Wednesday and sank one large and several smaller transports in the harbor. Wharves and other port facilities of Penang were reported smashed.

[The communique said three Japanese planes attacked the British airfield at Ipoh, southeast of Penang, shot down two Buffalo (Brewster) fighters in a dogfight and destroyed seven more on the ground.]

The province of Wellesley, directly opposite Penang on the mainland, was cut off and the Japanese were believed to be moving in.

The Japanese activity at Grik was believed to herald an attempt to drive south into Perak along the excellent highway on the eastern flank of the new British defense line. The road south of Grik can carry all kinds of motor transport, but the terrain on either side is broken by mile-high mountains.

The implication was that Japanese thrusts in eastern Malaya had been checked below Kota Bharu, the airport which was the original objective of Japanese landing parties ferried across the Gulf of Siam.

JAP BATTERIES DESTROYED BY HONGKONG FIRE

Mainland Gun Positions Blasted, British Embassy Reports

DEC 19 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Chungking, Dec. 18—The British Embassy announced tonight that the defenders of Hongkong had destroyed a number of Japanese batteries on the mainland and rejected another demand for surrender, to the "evident surprise" of the Japanese.

While Chinese troops were reported to have captured Japanese outposts along the Canton-Kowloon Railway in their effort to relieve Japanese pressure on the British island colony, the embassy here issued this communique:

"Another Japanese offer was flatly rejected this morning, to their evident surprise.

Artillery On Hills Hit

"During the day the defendign guns destroyed one section of the enemy's artillery located on Devil's Peak, and another gun firing from Club Hill.

"Japanese mortars situated on the Kowloon water front kept up a heavy fire which was returned, silencing a number of them.

"The civil population of Hongkong remains calm.

"Two attacks by light bombers did no serious damage."

Overwhelmed Near Pokut

The outposts were overwhelmed near Pokut, identified as the first station on the railway above Shumchun, which in turn is near the Hongkong mainland area now occupied by Japanese troops.

Other Chinese units, the Central News Agency said, were attacking near Swatow, big port city in eastern Kwantung province, and north of Canton.

Official Chinese dispatches also said Japanese forces had abandoned five districts in Shansi province, North China, in order to bolster their offensive on new Pacific fronts.

The Japanese had been entrenched in those areas west of a railway running out of Tatung for three years, but they moved out after leaving Chinese puppet garrisons.

These garrisons promptly went over to the Free China side, the dispatches said.

Hongkong Still Battered.

London, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—A military commentator said today that the bombing and shelling of Hongkong are continuing, and that the British artillery, according to reports, dispersed some Japanese troop concentrations and transport on the mainland and silenced two sections of artillery.

The embattled defenders of Hongkong stood pat on their decision never to surrender after their Governor and Commander-in-Chief had turned down a second Japanese demand to yield, and had received orders from London to hold on.

Military men here agreed that the island could not hold out indefinitely if the Japanese were willing to pay its price in men and materials, but the Governor, Sir Mark Young, reported to the Colonial Minister, Lord Moyne, that he had advised the Japanese commanders that he would receive no more surrender proposals. His message was delivered to Lieut.-Gen. Takaishi Sakai and Vice-Admiral Masaichi Nimi when they submitted a second ultimatum after a fresh bombardment of the beleaguered island. Sir Mark had turned down a previous demand for surrender last Saturday after the British had withdrawn from Kowloon on the mainland.

Chinese Forces Active.

Chungking dispatches said that the British had destroyed much Japanese equipment before withdrawing from Kowloon and that continued successful Chinese attacks on the Japanese rear, twenty-eight miles north of Hongkong, had caused the Japanese to rush re-enforcements and impress Chinese civilians for military duty in Canton.

Hongkong's chance of relief depended, however, in the opinion of military observers here, upon broad successes elsewhere in the Far East and especially upon an early increase in anti-Japanese aerial and naval strength. The importance of the harassing Chinese efforts was believed to lie in giving the British and Americans time to assemble these necessary forces.

China Pushes 3 Offensives

[By the Associated Press]

Chungking, China, Dec. 18—The Chinese are maintaining three counter-drives against the Japanese in Kwangtung province, facing British Hongkong on the South China coast, the Central News Agency announced tonight.

DEC 19 1941

The zones of the Chinese actions, intended primarily to relieve the Japanese siege of Hongkong Island, were outlined as follows:

1. The frontier region facing Kowloon peninsula, part of the Hongkong colony which the Japanese have occupied.

There the Chinese were pressing Pokut, identified as the first station on the Canton-Kowloon railway, west of Shumchun, at the colony border. They claimed capture of Japanese outposts.

2. The vicinity of Swatow, big port city of easternmost Kwangtung.

3. North of Canton, which in turn is northwest of Hongkong.

Meanwhile, official Chinese dispatches said that Japanese forces had abandoned five districts in Shansi province, North China, giving up territory held for three years in order to bolster their offensive on new Pacific fronts.

DEC 19 1941

Puppets Desert

The districts, west of a railway running out of Tatung, in northernmost Shansi, within the double course of the Great Wall, and also south of the inner course of the Great Wall, were said to have been reoccupied by Chinese forces.

The Japanese left Chinese puppet garrisons in the five areas, it was said, but these forces promptly went over to the free China side.

Threat to Penang Seen.

Meanwhile today a British military commentator said that a British withdrawal south of the Krian River on the southern border of Kedah increased the threat to Penang. The Japanese have now occupied the coast of the Malay Peninsula opposite Penang, the commentator added.

Other spokesmen said that the British withdrawal meant that Penang was "gone."

Many small Japanese units were equipped with one-man whippet gun carriers or tanks and automatic weapons, it was stated.

News was lacking on the situation in Borneo, where the Japanese invaded the rich Miri oil country of Sarawak, British-protected kingdom of the white rajahs on the northwest coast.

Allies Occupy Portuguese Half Of Key Isle Of Timor

Dutch And Australians Forestall Jap Seizure Of Base Between Dominion And Philippines

DEC 19 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Batavia, Netherlands East Indies, Dec. 18—Netherlands and Australian troops tonight were in full occupation of Timor, moving into the Portuguese half of the mountainous island and thus forestalling Japanese seizure of a potential assault base 450 miles from Darwin, Australia, and at the tip of the Dutch East Indies.

The occupation, practically bloodless, was made over the "objection" of the Portuguese, which had only a tiny defense force on the island. It was announced in the following communique from the Netherlands Government:

"In view of the Japanese submarine activity off Portuguese Timor, it has become an unavoidably necessity to take steps in order to safeguard this territory against Japanese aggression and to forestall its being used as a base from which attacks could be made on allied territory and communications.

Allied Force Landed

"Accordingly a force of allied troops has been landed in Portuguese Timor.

"The Portuguese Government, having reaffirmed its desire to preserve its neutrality, the local authorities in Portuguese Timor objected to the taking of the action.

"Portuguese sovereignty remains intact and it has been made clear to the Portuguese Government that the troops are to be withdrawn as soon as the threat from the enemy is removed, and that the presence of the troops is purely a measure of defense by the allied nations at war with Japan."

Half Dutch, Half Portuguese

The island, separated from Australia by the Timor Sea, is half Dutch and half Portuguese. Its mountains rise 11,500 feet.

Shortly before the war, Portugal permitted the Japanese to establish a station on the Portuguese, or northern side, for an airline from the island of Palau in the Japanese mandated Carolines. Both Britain and the United States objected.

Moreover, the Dutch contend there have been extensive Japanese activities of a subversive nature on the island. They point to the presence of a Japanese consul and thirty operatives in the tiny town of Deli.

[Portugal's Parliament was summoned for an extraordinary session Friday. President Salazar was due to make an important statement, dealing probably with the Timor incident and other matters affecting the neutrality which the Portuguese are attempting to maintain.]

Full Provisions Made

Commenting on the Japanese invasion of the Miri oil fields in Sarawak, on the northwest coast of Borneo, Dutch authorities said today that full provision had been made for such an eventuality and that the attack did not alter the strategic plans for defense of the Dutch East Indies.

The Kapuas Mountains, they said, provide an almost impenetrable barrier between North Borneo and the Dutch part of the island and preclude any immediate menace to the Dutch East Indies from the rear.

However, it was announced that Japanese bombers and machine gunners yesterday killed forty persons and wounded one hundred seriously on the small, undefended island of Terampa, in the Dutch Anambas group between Malaya and Borneo. There were other lesser raids on the Dutch island of Ternate and a coastal village in Dutch New Guinea.

A communique said the Japanese warship which was hit and set afire by Dutch naval planes during the Sarawak landing was a cruiser and not a destroyer, as at first reported.

Dutch Island Bombed.

Batavia, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—The Japanese have extended their Pacific offensive with air raids on the Dutch island of Ternate and a coastal village of the Dutch part of New Guinea, the Dutch Command announced today in a communique circulated by the news agency Aneta.

The enemy, however, was said to have been put quickly to flight by defending Dutch naval planes. All the Japanese bombs, aimed at objects in or near Sorong, northwestern New Guinea, missed their mark, according to the communique.

Yesterday a Japanese flying boat also bombed Ternate, one of twin islands in the Molukkan Sea between Celebes and Halmahera. A Dutch naval plane which engaged the attacker was slightly damaged but succeeded in driving off the Japanese craft.

Forty persons were killed and 100 were injured seriously yesterday in Japanese air attacks on the small island of Terampa in the Dutch Anambas group between Malaya and Borneo, Dutch authorities announced.

The Dutch said that the island was undefended and without military objective and that many of the victims were machine-gunned as they worked in the rice fields.

A Dutch flying boat, attacking a concentration of Japanese warships and transports yesterday off Miri, British North Borneo, actually set fire to a cruiser instead of a destroyer as previously claimed, Aneta, official Dutch East Indian news agnecy, said today.

A whole force of Dutch Army bombers attacked the concentration, it was said. Full results of the assault still have not been compiled.

Driven Off New Guinea.

[The Batavia radio, heard in New York by NBC, said that Japanese bombers had attempted their first attack on New Guinea, easternmost island of the Netherlands East Indies, only to be driven off. The Japanese were trying to attack the village of Sorong, the broadcast said. Sorong lies on a point of land in the Vogelkop Peninsula section of New Guinea, which is about 700 miles southwest of Pauau, an island in the Japanese-mandated Caroline group.]

Allied Troops Occupy Portuguese Timor, Strategic Area

Step Taken to Safeguard Territory Against Jap Aggression, Dutch Say

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 18.—The Netherlands government announced today that Allied troops had occupied the Portuguese part of the Island of Timor, between Java and Australia, strategic station on a Japanese air line.

But Timor's importance for Japanese submarine warfare was emphasized in the Dutch announcement, which said:

"In view of Japanese submarine activities off Portuguese Timor it became an unavoidable necessity to take steps to safeguard this territory against Japanese aggression and to forestall its being used as a base from which attacks could be made on Allied territory and communications."

"Accordingly a force of Allied troops have been landed on Portuguese Timor. The Portuguese government having reaffirmed a desire to preserve neutrality, local authorities in Portuguese Timor have objected to the action being taken.

Sovereignty Remains Intact.

"Portuguese sovereignty remains intact and it has been made clear to the Portuguese government that the troops will be withdrawn as soon as the threat from the enemy is removed since their presence is purely a measure of defense on the part of Allied nations at war with Japan.

A Foreign Office source said he understood there was no resistance to the Allied landing.

In unofficial but informed quarters it was predicted that the Timor occupation would lead to early repercussions which might determine the final war status of Spain and Portugal, possibly even Vichy.

Hope to Keep Spain Neutral.

It was asserted that Britain had never relinquished hope of keeping Spain neutral despite the pro-Axis affiliations of Generalissimo Francisco Franco. Concerning Portugal, however, there have been repeated admissions in the British press that the traditional British-Portuguese friendship has been somewhat frayed by effective German propaganda.

Some British sources expressed the hope that affiliation of Latin American countries with the United States would tend to encourage Spain and Portugal to resist German threats.

Timor, lying at the eastern end of the Indies Archipelago, is divided between Dutch and Portuguese sovereignty. British-American representations were made shortly before the start of war in the Pacific when Portugal permitted the Japanese to establish a station for an airline from the island of Palau in the Japanese-mandated Carolines.

The Allied occupation apparently was carried out by a combined Dutch and Australian force.

Recalling the Portuguese grant of the aerial concession in October, a Foreign Office commentator said, "there was not the slightest justification on commercial lines for establishment of such an airline."

Reports of Activity Nearby.

The objective of such an air service could only be "strategic," it was said.

"Portuguese Timor now has come within the danger zone and there were reports of Japanese air and naval activity nearby," the commentator continued.

"Japan has shown a complete and utter disregard for the neutrality of any country she felt herself strong enough to coerce and nothing is more likely than that one fine day she would descend on Portuguese Timor."

The Foreign Office source added that British-Portguese relations were "something that will have to be gone into."

[A land of towering mountains rising up out of the sea between Java and Australia, Timor is half Portuguese, half Dutch. The Portuguese half has a population of about 465,000 in 7,330 square miles. The island is only 450 miles from Darwin, Australia.]

The Portuguese went to Timor in the 16th century. The first Dutch adventurers settled there in 1613 and there has been fighting at times between the two countries. But in 1860 a treaty dividing the island between Portugal and the Netherlands was signed.

Timor exports coffee, copra and sandalwood.

Portuguese Timor has a small military force of about 300 natives and a small number of white men.

Its population totals about 465,000 and it has an area of 7,330 square miles.

The island is only 450 miles from Darwin, Australia.

Lisbon Cabinet Called.

Lisbon, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—Premier Antonio de Oliveira Salazar summoned the Portuguese National Assembly for an extraordinary meeting tomorrow afternoon. The Premier said that he would make an important statement.

The Government, having announced that the Cabinet met last night "to deal with events which may have occurred in the colony of Timor," said nothing today after the Dutch announced in London that Allied forces had taken the Portuguese territory into protective custody.

The population anxiously awaited clarification of the situation which the Government had promised. The BBC announcement of the occupation was heard in Portugal.

Chinese Red Pledges All-Out Aid

Chungking, Dec. 18 (AP)—Chou En-lai, liaison officer between Chinese Communists and the Nationalist Government and one of the three leading Chinese Communists, said today his party was ready to throw the entire weight of its troops and organized guerrillas into the Pacific war.

A party manifesto, which he handed to correspondents, urged that Chinese troops engage the enemy on all fronts and prepare a large-scale counter-offensive; that extensive propaganda be carried out among Japanese for establishment of an anti-Fascist government, and that disputes between Chinese Nationalists and the Communists be solved.

Heads Eastern Command

CANBERRA, Dec. 18 (AAP). — Major General H. D. Wynter has been appointed general officer commanding the Australian eastern command, it was announced today. Army Minister Francis Forde said the change was in accordance with the principle of placing younger men in the higher military posts. General Wynter is fifty-five years old.

A joint meeting of the Federal opposition parties approved terms for political co-operation between the government and opposition as drawn up by Prime Minister John Curtin.

Under the new war precautions and power-saving regulations, the Australian government banned all exterior lighting.

Children Quit Calcutta.

New Delhi, India, Dec. 16 (Delayed) (A. P.).—A voluntary withdrawal of many civilians especially women and children was begun from Calcutta today in view of the possibility of a Japanese attack on that Bay of Bengal port. Most members of the large American colony, after conferring recently with the American Consul-General, George R. Merrell, decided to remain.

Headhunters Will Get Them If Japs Push Into Sarawak, Says Ranee

New York, Dec. 18 (AP)—The Ranee of Sarawak, wife of Sir Charles Vyner Brooke, who rules the country, says the oil wells at Miri, Sarawak, were blown up recently when Japanese invaders appeared to be after them.

The Ranee, here three weeks, said:

"Everything the Japs want has been destroyed. They must need oil badly, because there is nothing else in Sarawak that they could use. To effect a landing they must have used suicide squads or parachute troops."

Saying it was virtually impossible to defend Miri except by sea, she added that should Japanese penetrate the interior, Sarawak's headhunters could handle them.

TROYANOVSKY SEES U. S. VICTORY

Kuibyshev, Dec. 17 (delayed) (A. P.).—Alexander Troyanovsky, former Soviet Ambassador to Japan and the United States, said today the Japanese were badly advised in attacking the United States and that America will inflict upon Japan a smashing defeat.

Troyanovsky, who was the first Soviet Ambassador to Washington in 1934 and is familiar with both Japan and the United States, wrote in the newspaper Volga that the Japanese attack was inspired "by

18 JAPS ARRESTED AS SPIES IN CUBA

All Posed as Fishermen—Some Believed Officers.

Havana, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—Eighteen Japanese who had posed as fishermen were jailed today in the Caribbean Sea village of Batabano, forty miles south of Havana, and the police said that some of them were believed to be officers of the Japanese Navy.

The eighteen, some of whom had lived in hotels in Batabano, were charged with espionage and plotting sabotage. Ten motor and fishing boats were seized.

A submarine telegraph cable runs near Batabano.

The police said that they were seeking hidden radio stations from which they believed the Japanese transmitted military information destined for Tokio.

The arrests followed a police announcement last night that two men, one identified as a German Gestapo agent, had been arrested and charged with plotting to install on a Cuban mountain range reflectors capable of signaling ships and planes at sea.

Police announced the seizure of one, Reinhold Hahn, 61, whom they identified as the Gestapo agent and also as an engineer who came to Cuba on a tourist card issued in Berlin.

A man booked as Victor Schmere Rubin, 65, described as a Lithuanian, who allegedly did field survey work for the reflector plotters in Oriente Province, was held with Hahn.

JOINT ALLIED WAR-COUNCIL PLAN REPORTED

Talk on Coordination Of War Effort Declared Already Under Way

London Feels Washington Would Be Best Site For Headquarters

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 18—Allied military and political experts were authoritatively reported tonight to be conferring on establishment of a supreme war council to direct strategy, pool resources and distribute their man power around the globe in the fight against the Axis.

Some quarters here felt that Washington would be a logical site for headquarters of the organization embracing representatives of the United States, Britain, Russia, China, the Netherlands and their allies.

Important Word Expected

"Announcements of great importance are expected soon," one source said.

Clement R. Attlee, Lord Privy Seal who spoke in the absence of Prime Minister Churchill, told the House of Commons that discussions were underway for "concerting allied war plans," and that arrangements with the Chinese high command "are well advanced."

He did not go into details for reasons of security but the British Press Association had this to say:

"In capitals of each of the four great allied powers leaders and spokesmen have already indicated their agreement to the general principle of a supreme authority for direction of the war.

DEC 19 1941

Harley Proceeding

"Discussions which now are proceeding between service and political experts are designed to bring the necessary machinery into being."

Aside from immediate strategic problems dictated by the great Russian offensive and the British sweep in North Africa—somewhat offset by initial apanese gains in the Pacific—such a upreme council apparently would leal with the status of the non-belligerent countries such as Spain, Portugal, Turkey and France.

In the midst of the December 7 tension a woman called police about a barking dog that was "disturbing her sleep."

A jittery guard raised his bayoneted rifle and challenged: "Halt and advance."

At the City Hall, the Red Cross kitchen served Hawaiian food and Hawaiians flocked there, bringing their relatives. The menu was ordered changed to corned beef. The Hawaiians melted away.

More than 150 taxicabs answered the hurry up call for duty, rushing sailors to Pearl Harbor.

A woman put a phosphorescent substance on her dog's tail so she could follow it on its nightly walk.

The night of December 7 a house almost at the tiptop of Honolulu's surrounding hills blazed with lights amid the blackout. Neighbors yelled to put out the lights. The people in the house asked "what for?" Neighbors said: "We have been attacked by the Japs." The response was: "We have been moving all day and didn't notice anything wrong."

The happiest note was December 8 when the public library declared a moratorium on all overdue book fines.

A sad note was the Federal internal revenue announcement: "The fourth and final payment of Federal income taxes for 1940 are due. Don't forget payments during the war tension."

A Paul Revere motorcyclist, "feeling dandy," roared up and down the streets at 4 a.m. December 8 arousing residents and yelling "Wake up, everybody. Wake up, war's on."

Washington Urged As Allied Council Seat

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 18—Discussions are under way for establishment of a supreme Allied war authority to direct high strategy against the Axis, the authoritative British Press Association said tonight, and some quarters here believe that Washington should be its headquarters.

Informed opinion in London was divided on the desirability of Washington or London as the seat of the prospective Allied grand council.

Agree On General Principle

Keynoting comment of British news organizations, the Press Association said:

DEC 19 1941

"In capitals of each of the four great Allied powers (the United States, Britain, China and Russia) leaders and spokesmen have already indicated their agreement to the general principle of a supreme authority for direction of the war.

"Discussions, which now are proceeding between service and political experts, are designed to bring the necessary machinery into being."

Attlee Tells Of Plans

Earlier, Clement R. Attlee, Lord Privy Seal, told the House of Commons that discussions now are under way for "concerting allied war plans" and arrangements with the Chinese high command "are well advanced."

Speaking in the House in the absence of Prime Minister Winston Churchill, Attlee said he could not go into details for reasons of security.

He said the British Government was in constant consultation with the Prime Ministers of the Dominions on allied war plans.

There was no immediate indication that an empire war cabinet would be formed.

It was believed in London that responsible representatives of Britain, the United States, Russia and the Netherlands were arranging important discussions of grand strategy and that these talks were likely to involve high officials.

The House, disturbed by reports from the Far East, voted to cut its Christmas recess in half and exacted a promise from the Government that Commons would be recalled in case of important developments.

Leslie Hore-Belisha, former War Secretary, said, "The empire is more closely encompassed by peril than ever before in history, and it will create a false impression throughout the world if we adjourn for the period suggested by the Government's motion."

Assurances Cited

Sir John Wardlaw-Milne, a Conservative, said it was not surprising that the House was disturbed by the Far Eastern situation, because Ministers and military commanders had so often assured the country that defenses there were ready to repel any attack.

Attlee indicated a Government statement would be made after Christmas, "if necessary," and rejected suggestions that the forthcoming war debate be held publicly.

(By The Associated Press)

Moscow, Dec. 18—A new line of the Red Army's December offensive was developing tonight, with the Russians throwing back the Germans directly west of Moscow after breaking off Nazi salients on the flanks north and south of the capital.

Military dispatches said that the Army of General Govorov, operating in the heart of the Moscow Front, had recaptured 200 settlements and that his vanguard was approaching Ruza, about 60 miles west of Moscow and just northeast of Mozhaisk.

Thus the offensive became general along the whole Moscow Front. On the flanks, west of Kalinin in the north and Tula on the south, the Red Army was continuing its pursuit of the Germans.

A fierce drive was pressed against the Finns and Germans in the northwest, the Russians striking in the Novgorod sector south of Leningrad after rolling the Germans back 45 miles from Tikhvin and freeing Leningrad from the threat of complete encirclement.

(British reports said that the Finnish line between Lakes Onega and Ladoga was smashed and that Leningrad's million defenders had joined in the attack on the Finns).

In the southwest, 80 more settlements fell in the relentless push which began with the recapture of Rostov and has proceeded westward above the shores of the Sea of Azov. (British reports said the Germans had lost 6,000 men of a Viennese Infantry Division in fighting near Kharkov, German-occupied "Pittsburgh of Russia.")

Only on the extreme Southern Front, in the Crimea itself, were the Germans holding the initiative There, however, the Russians reported they were checking violent assaults in the Sevastopol sector and one report said 3,200 Germans had been slain in a battle of several days' duration.

(The Russians may ultimately force a German evacuation of the Crimea, if they can keep going westward along the shore of the Sea of Azov. It appears, however, that they are still about 250 miles from the Perekop Isthmus, which connects the mainland with the Crimea).

Red Star, the Army newspaper, outlined the general plan of the Russian campaign as one to "encircle and exterminate the enemy." Pointing out that this is still a mobile campaign, with the Germans sometimes sacrificing occupied territory to escape annihilation, it urged Red Army Commanders to disregard frontal assaults and take the risk of throwing out long salients to cut off and wipe out the enemy units.

These tactics were used at Shekino and Aleksin, in the Tula area, capture of which was announced early today.

Shekino, industrial center in the Moscow coal basin south of Tula, was encircled from south and southeast and occupied Wednesday, the Germans fleeing along the Orel highway. (One British report indicated today the Russian cav[illegible] pursued them to [illegible]iles of Orel, about 200 m[illegible] of Moscow).

The German 296th Infantry Division was reported destroyed at Shekino with all its material and 80 per cent of its personnel.

Aleksin, northwest of Tula, was taken the same day with the same tactics, the Russians threatening the German rear. The Nazis continued to offer stiff rear-guard resistance while the main bodies withdrew.

DEC 19 1941

On the north of Moscow, a communique said the Germans lost 10,000 men in dead alone in the rout from Kalinin, 95 miles northwest of the capital, plus at least 191 field guns, 31 tanks and about 1,000 trucks.

Reds Gain in Southwest.

Moscow, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—

Germany lost more than 10,000 soldiers and officers in dead alone when the Red army drove the enemy out of the Kalinin sector, ninety-five miles northwest of Moscow, the Russian information bureau said tonight in a broadcast communique.

Another 3,200 were said to have been slain in the southern counter-offensive.

(This may be a duplication, in part, of 6,000 men said to have been lost by a Viennese infantry division east of Kharkov—a report issued by the British radio.)

190 Guns Claimed

In the Kalinin area the count of captured material is still incomplete, the communique said, but it is known to include 190 field guns of various calibers, among them four 12-inchers, 31 tanks, 9 planes and about 1,000 trucks already have been counted among the prizes.

The information bureau said 3,200 German soldiers and officers were slain in a battle of several days on one sector of the southern front and fifteen guns and fifty-one machine guns were among war equipment captured.

70 Villages Claimed

"In one engagement," it said, "a battery under Junior Lieutenant Gysalov beat off an enemy counter-attack by unerring fire. About 900 enemy corpses remained on the battlefield."

In the southwest, seventy villages were reported to have been recaptured by Soviet troops in a single day's operations.

Reds Near Mozhaisk.

With the Red Army on the Moscow Front, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—Now striking at the center of the Germans' Moscow line, that is, west of the capital, the Red Army was reported tonight to have recaptured 200 communities, with its vanguard approaching Ruza, just northeast of Mozhaisk.

Mozhaisk is fifty-seven miles west of Moscow.

The Russian offensive thus has become general along the entire Moscow front, after German salients had been wiped out on the northern and southern flanks of the city.

DEC 19 1941

Booty Still Uncounted.

In the Kalinin area the count of captured material is still incomplete, the communique said, but it is known to include 190 field guns of various calibers, among them four twelve-inchers. Thirty-one tanks, nine planes and about 1,000 trucks already have been counted among the prizes.

White-helmeted Russian shock troops drove westward from the Moscow defense arc today to widen gains of a 16-day-old counteroffensive both above and below the capital and the fall of German-held Volokolamsk appeared imminent.

(The British radio said the Germans had withdrawn from Mozhaisk, 57 miles from Moscow and 40 miles south of Volokolamsk, a cotton mill town that was a key point of invasion maneuvers.)

During a three-day tour of the Moscow front, United States and British correspondents have seen no signs of the German air force. Behind the lines, Russian reserve troops and supplies moved up by railways and highways. Bridges stood unscarred.

The Germans are offering only rear guard resistance on the icy, snow-packed battlefields — sacrificing infantry and mortar detachments in delaying actions — and there are no signs as yet of an attempt to make a stand on any definite line.

Here and there the bodies of German dead and abandoned weapons jut grotesquely from snowdrifts.

"Our troops fiercely engaged the enemy, continued their advance and occupied a number of populated places," said the Soviet Information Bureau, referring to the whole central front action.

Among the occupied towns listed was Aleksin, 30 miles northwest of Tula.

(Even while the Russians pressed westward and maintained neutrality in the Pacific war, the Chungking radio said large-scale Red Army maneuvers were under way in Siberia near the Japanese-held border of Manchukuo. It gave as its source a Soviet broadcast from Khabarvosk.)

Soviet troops complain:

"We can't keep up with the Germans they are running so fast."

White paint blends their trucks into winter landscape; frost forms a natural camouflage on their horses.

A German noncommissioned officer captured near Klin, Albert Keller of Aachen, told a group of correspondents at the front:

"Resistance was too strong. That's why we retreated. My battalion lost 50 per cent."

(The "almost unimaginable power" of Soviet resistance was among a variety of explanations given by the Berlin radio for the retreat. Others included a statement that Germany was now fighting "a positional war" and the admission that "it is sometimes necessary to withdraw soldiers if they have advanced too far.")

Red Army cavalry, infantry and ski troops have borne the brunt of battle since the drive which saved Moscow was started by Gen. Vlasov with the capture of Kievo, twenty miles north of the capital, December 2.

Often without tank assistance, these units cut German armored forces into small groups and wipe them out with hand grenades and flaming gasoline bottles when artillery is lacking.

The immense power plant at Kashira, which formerly supplied most of the electricity for Moscow, was found intact when Russians reoccupied that city sixty-five miles below the capital.

WINTER IS REAL AND DEADLY FOE

Reporter in Russian Cold Fights Nazi Nemesis.

DEC 19 1941

By CHARLES CASSIDY.

With the Red Army on the Moscow Front, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—Spend a couple of nights out on the Russian steppes suffering wind, snow and cold and you have an idea what the Germans are up against on the eastern front.

I have just been through two such nights.

The elements at their wildest, whining and moaning weirdly on the broad plains, broken here and there by stark forest, strike every living thing exposed to them and make death by freezing an ever-present danger. That is one of the important reasons why the Germans are now falling back from advanced positions near Moscow and seeking winter quarters.

You have no conception of the violence of this Russian winter as you drive out of the towns and villages where the Soviet troops keep warm in well-equipped quarters. It is only when you get into the open where the Germans have been forced to seek shelter in the forests or in shattered settlements that you feel the full effect. Then you see that the greatest invader, whether he be a Napoleon or a Hitler, met in this weather a foe more than worthy of his mettle.

I noticed the weather as an interesting natural phenomenon while riding out of Moscow toward the front, on a bright, crispy day.

The Road Disappears.

Gradually slate-gray clouds covered the sky. Toward nightfall the snow began and suddenly darkness came. Groping through blinding swirls of snow in the pitchblack night, the car ran slower and slower. The road disappeared under the drifts. Finally the car lunged into a ditch settling up to the hubcaps in snow.

There were no signs of life anywhere. There was nothing to do but sit in the car until daybreak.

The weather became a personal foe. There were six of us in the car, the Russian driver, a guide, one Australian, two British correspondents and myself. We sat cramped and straight upright while the wind screamed at doors and windows and penetrated the car. The snow drifted higher. The cold settled closer.

We recalled the tales of people freezing to death, of wolves roaming in packs on these steppes. We started telling jokes until memories ran out of stories so old every one knew them. Pressing close together to keep warm we dozed fitfully.

Gray morning light filtered through the windows at last. An army truck plowing through the drifts came down the road. Troops heaved us out of the ditch and broke a path to the highway.

The second night was clear and star-lit with the wind ripping snow from the road and leaving a treacherous coat of ice. Driving out to a front line town, we came to a valley where the car could neither skid up the hill ahead nor retrace its path on the slippery hill behind us. There was nothing to do but walk back four miles to town.

Sliding over the ice, falling in the snow, we met the problem faced by German troops trying to advance. The wind stung our faces, snow clutched at our feet and the starlight wrought ominous shadows and strange mirages from distant trees.

Walking Indian file and talking in hushed tones to keep together without attracting attention, we finally reached the blacked-out town. A door opened, letting a cloud of steam and a shaft of light into the night and we entered a warm haven to find food and a fire.

I hate to think what it might have been like if the Red Army as well as the weather had been against us.

Berlin Tells of Air Attacks.

Berlin, Dec. 18 (Official radio received by A. P.).—Russians were declared by the German High Command today to have suffered heavy losses in men and tanks and other vehicles under air attacks on the Soviet front.

New Attack on Finns.

Helsinki, Finland, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—The Red Army is attacking along the whole Eastern Front north of Lake Onega, the Finnish Command announced today, claiming that the assaults were repulsed everywhere.

The Red Army seemed to have shifted the weight of its offensive against the Finns to the north after, the Finns said, the Russians had been beaten back on the Svir River front, between Lakes Ladoga and Onega, northeast of Leningrad.

Air arms of both sides supported the land fighters, it was said.

Nazis Withdraw From Finland

New York, Dec. 18 (AP)—The British radio said tonight that reports from Helsinki this (Friday) morning say that "all German troops have been withdrawn from Finland in a great hurry." The broadcast was heard here by CBS.

Russ Advance Nears Kharkov

[By the Associated Press]

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 18—Havas reported in a dispatch from Bucharest today that German withdrawals in the Ukraine had brought Kharkov, the "Russian Pittsburgh" in the Donets Basin, again into the battle zone.

DEC 19 1941

Heavy fighting has been in progress northward from the Donets Basin for forty-eight hours, the news agency said.

Germany announced the capture of Kharkov, an industrial city of 650,000 population about 220 miles northwest of the Don river port of Rostov, on October 25.

The Bucharest dispatch said the Germans probably would establish a defense line along the west bank of the Donets after withdrawing from the sector between that river and the Oskol, one of its eastern tributaries.

Russian Horsemen Reported Pursuing Nazis Near Orel

Kharkov Declared to Be In Battle Zone Again; Donets Fighting Heavy

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—The British radio said today that Russian cavalry had pursued German troops to within 19 miles of Orel, about 200 miles south of Moscow. National Broadcast Co. heard the broadcast.

"Russian cavalry is now only 30 kilometers (about 19 miles) from Orel, pursuing the German troops, who are getting more and more disorganized," the British Broadcasting Corp. said.

The broadcast added that the position of Finnish troops between Lakes Onega and Ladoga, near Leningrad, was becoming "steadily more precarious."

Later the British radio, in a report heard by C. B. S., said the Russians had smashed the Finnish line between Lake Ladoga and Lake Onega and that the million defenders of Leningrad were joining in the attack on the Finns. The Finnish high command said the assaults were repulsed everywhere.

New Push Reported

It said there was growing anxiety in Helsinki, where Finnish newspapers were interpreted as preparing the public for setbacks.

Another British report heard by CBS said a new Russian offensive in the Leningrad sector had advanced across the frozen Nevo river. The advance from Tikhvin was said to be continuing unchecked, while another Soviet push was developing east of Kharkov, where a Viennese infantry division was reported to have lost 6,000 men.

Nazi Expert Calls Russians Their Equals

Writer For Hitler's Own Newspaper Quoted In Switzerland

Warning Is Pessimistic

Bern, Switzerland, Friday, Dec. 19 (AP)— A frank acknowledgement that the Russian soldiers "equal us and are sometimes even better," came today from the military expert of Adolf Hitler's own Voelkischer Beobachter.

The expert, a Lieutenant Colonel Soldan, was quoted by the Swiss paper Neue Zuricher Zeitung as writing that, "new troops brought in from Siberia and other regions where they are accustomed to the cold are put into fighting where (Russian) troops have been ten times beaten and threaten to nullify those defeats."

The Zurich paper commented that "never before has a German military writer spoken so openly to the public of the great difficulties of carrying on war in the East.

"His statements bring a new pessimistic warning to the people of the severity of the struggle in which Germany and her comrades presently find themselves."

The Zurich paper said Soldan admitted that everyone had underestimated the Russian armament, that the Russians had not used their best material against the Finns in 1939-40, and that they had learned very quickly from observing German campaigns.

Also, he was quoted, Russian economic and industrial resources had been underrated. They had been built up for a very modern war.

The discipline of the Russian soldier, he continued, "must be reckoned with.

"During great battles of destruction, the Russians always have succeeded in restoring discipline

"The Russians have not always followed the strategy of avoiding battle as in 1812.

"They always have resisted the Germans and tried to stop the advance.

"Only one who has lived through the mass attacks of the Russians in the World War can make a modest estimate of what is happening in the East today."

He concluded that the Russian soldier of today "is the same or better."

In addition to this publication, the Berlin correspondent of the Basel National Zeitung quoted a German High Command speaker as saying detailed positions of the German line in Russia no longer would be made public.

This speaker was quoted as saying that all territory won need not be held in all circumstances, since the Germans have destroyed transport systems and all other facilities in the areas from which they have withdrawn.

He said that Rostov, for example, would be useless to the Russians.

CAPTURED QUARRELING TROOPS, RUSSIANS SAY

Report Italians and Rumanians Fighting Germans

DEC 19 1941

New York, Dec. 18—(AP)—The Russian radio in a broadcast today from Sverdlovsk told of Russian cavalry in the Donets basin capturing German, Italian and Rumanian troops when these fell to fighting one another.

The broadcast, heard here, said Italian soldiers were ejected by a German regiment from a westbound train. A free-for-all, in which Rumanian soldiers joined with the Italians against the Germans, followed. Then the Russian cavalry dashed in and captured quarreling troops, the train and hundreds of supply-laden Axis trucks, the radio said.

STALIN RECALLS NAPOLEON'S FATE

Teheran, Iran, Dec. 17 (Delayed (A. P.).—Premier Joseph Stalin of Russia was reported today to have described the poorly clad, retreating German Army as resembling the forces of Napoleon in the retreat from Moscow.

The quotation was brought by Gen. Wladyslaw Sikorski, Premier of the Polish Government-in-exile, who reached here after three weeks in Russia during which he conferred with Stalin.

Many German Tanks Disabled By Armored Planes, Reds Say

DEC 19 1941

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 18.—The Soviet Embassy said today the Russians' heavily armored "anti-tank" plane was partly responsible for "the growing number of German tanks disabled in recent weeks."

The Embassy described the plane in its daily publication of Soviet War News, saying it was "protected by powerful armor which only heavy anti-aircraft shells can pierce."

"It is light and mobile and can fly at a height of less than 500 feet, so that it is beyond the reach of enemy chasers, which cannot fly so low," it was said. "It is armed with a gun whose shells can pierce the armor of any tank.

"The pilot can take an absolutely accurate aim; he does not drop his bombs at random into an accumulation of machines but aims at each machine separately."

The publication reported that the Russians also were using land mines packed in flat boxes about the size of a phonograph album which are placed in checkerboard fashion in the paths of German tanks or dragged across a road by wires on the approach of tanks, whose drivers have limited vision.

Reuters in a Stockholm dispatch said a new type of modern Soviet airplane being produced in factories out of reach of the Germans was now in use on the Russian front. The information came from the Berlin correspondent of the Swedish newspaper Dagens Nyheter.

Davies Says Red Attack 'Will Surprise World'

Ex-Envoy Asserts Napoleonic Rout 'Is Not Impossible'

MONTREAL, Dec. 18 (AP).—Joseph E. Davies, former American Ambassador to Russia, renewed today his prediction of last June that the present Soviet offensive against Germany "will surprise the world" and that "it is not impossible that the utter rout of Napoleon's armies might be duplicated."

Mr. Davies, as chairman of the President's Committee for War Relief Agencies, spoke at a luncheon given by the Canadian Red Cross and Montreal citizens. He said that a unified command for the allies is "vital" for ultimate victory.

Axis Libyan Army Is Reported To Be In Full Retreat

DEC 19 1941

"Enemy's Front Everywhere Broken," Says British Communique

CAIRO, Dec. 18.—The shattered German and Italian armies in Eastern Cirenaica were officially reported tonight in full retreat, pursued by British-manned American tanks and blasted by R.A.F. bombers.

Allied troops were pressing northward toward Derna after reaching the East-West Tmimi-Mekili road some 160 miles inside Libya, the British communique said.

"The enemy's front has everywhere been broken," the bulletin said.

But the R.A.F. reported smashing blows against Axis tanks and troop transports fleeing westward from Derna itself on the long road to Bengasi in an apparent effort to escape British encirclement.

A fierce five-day fight west and southwest of Gazala preceded the Nazi rout, the British said.

Thus far in the month-old offensive against the Armies of Gen. Erwin Von Rommel and his Italian helpers the British were reported to have taken almost 10,000 prisoners. Casualties also were said [illegible]

Although the Axis desert legions can[illegible] hopes to soar that a final konck-out blow was near at hand, an informed source said frankly "we'll have to capture a h— of a lot more prisoners before the first real sign of collapse."

The Germans and Italians were estimated to number between 60,000 and 100,000 when the British offensive began, and this source said there still are many more strong defenses between Tmimi and Bengasi. The R.A.F. constantly is bombing these positions.

Military observers also said there was a possibility that Axis plane reinforcements still were crossing the Mediterranean in an attempt to keep the British away from Bengasi, or Tripoli far to the west and next to French North Africa.

If past British strategy is employed some of the allied troops now will cut southwest across the "hump of Libya," in an effort to pin the Axis troops against the curving Libyan coast.

One factor in this encirclement tactic is a British column which was reported three weeks ago to have cut straight across the desert from Sidi Omar to a spot below Bengasi. The British have been silent about what happened to this column after merely announcing it had reached the Gulf of Sirte.

Today's communique credited Indian troops fighting southwest of Gazala with checking a furious three-day German counter-attack while other armored British units sped to the rear to out-flank the Axis soldiers.

Twenty German tanks were reported smashed, and a number of Axis planes downed before the ground forces broke and ran.

Then, pouncing on the retiring Germans' flanks and rear, the British destroyed whole columns of mechanical transports including additional Nazi tanks, the communique said. —DASH—

The Italian High Command acknowledged heavy pressure on the Axis African troops, but did not admit a retreat. But a Rome dispatch received in Buenos Aires said the Italians declared the British "had a great advantage in numbers and equipment," and were constantly throwing fresh New Zealand troops into action.

Informed sources in London were cautious about the triumphant Cairo communique, pointing out that there was no indication that the British had managed to encircle the bulk of the retiring Axis troops.

Axis Front in Libya Broken

DEC 19 1941

German Panzer Force Reported in Full Retreat After Five Days' Battle.

Cairo, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—The Axis front has been completely shattered in eastern Libya after five days of fierce combat, and the once proud panzer forces of the Germans, with their surviving Italian comrades, are in full retreat, the British Middle East Command announced today. The British said that they were in relentless pursuit.

Thus, a clinching victory seemed to have crowned the British and Allied offensive into the Italian territory one month to the day from the time when British armored forces wheeled into their second Libyan offensive.

Entire Front Broken.

"The enemy's front has everywhere been broken," a communique said.

It added that British infantry had reached the general line of the Tmimi-Mekili road.

The communique stated:

"Axis forces in eastern Cirenaica are now in full retreat.

"After five days of intensive fighting in which all remaining German and Italian resources have been thrown into the battle to try and delay our advance, the enemy front has everywhere been broken.

Chase For Nearly 30 Miles

"Yesterday our troops relentlessly pursued the enemy in spite of adverse weather conditions for a distance of nearly thirty miles.

"By evening the main body of our infantry had reached the general line of the Tmimi-Mekili road."

About twenty German tanks and a number of Axis aircraft were destroyed in counter-attacks on December 13, 14 and 15, the communique added.

8,108 Axis Prisoners

It said British airplanes attacked Axis detachments moving westward along the coastal road from Derna.

(This road extends about forty miles from Tmimi, near the coast, westward to Mekili and is about forty miles south of Derna.)

(A commentator in London said that 8,108 Axis prisoners had arrived at Alexandria by December 15 and included 76 German officers, 2,926 other ranks, 237 Italian officers and 4,869 other ranks.

(Polish and Indian troops on December 16 reported taking an additional thousand Italian prisoners.)

3 Counter-Attacks Repulsed

The communique continued:

"Details now are available of counter-attacks made by German truck-borne infantry supported by all remaining tanks on December 13, 14 and 15; the brunt of three counter-attacks, delivered with the greatest determination, were borne by the Fourth Indian Division in the center of our line.

Counter-attacks Beaten Off.

"Although the Germans had temporarily established considerable local numerical superiority in the area held by the Fourth Indian Division, the latter formation beat off attack after attack without giving ground.

"Indeed during three days and nights of intense fighting in which all available German air forces were also employed in close support of their tanks and truck-borne infantry, the division, and particularly in the last two days the Fifth Indian Infantry Brigade, actually made headway.

"Throughout yesterday's operations our air forces actively cooperated by intensive bombing of enemy transport columns obtaining excellent results, particularly on large concentrations of mechanical transport at Mekili, where vehicles were observed to be on fire. Other air formations successfully engaged detachments moving westward along the coastal road from Derna."

Commentator Cautious

(In London a responsible military commentator took a slightly more cautious line than that of the Cairo communique.

(The air attack on detachments moving west from Derna does not necessarily mean that the Axis has abandoned hopes of establishing a defense line south of that port. Driving toward Derna, the British are moving almost due north. Beyond Derna the coast curves away to the southwest.

(The commentator said there is nothing yet to show that advanced British columns have managed to cut behind the main body of retreating Axis troops and nothing definite on the fate of Axis forces in the Gazala area, which has been passed by the sweeping British advance.

DEC 19 1941

Armored Penetration

(However, the belief was expressed in London that British armored forces had penetrated well ahead of the east-west-Tmimi-Mekili road, which Cairo said had been reached by the main body of British infantry. A front along this road would be facing north toward Derna. Mekili is 180 miles from the Egyptian border.)

South African bombers raided Axis landing grounds at Barce, northeast of Bengasi, and damaged fifteen Junkers planes on the ground, an RAF communique said today.

The air force said that considerable damage was inflicted on Axis motor transport in raids on the road between El Agheila and Ghemines.

The Italian naval base at Taranto and naval headquarters in Brindisi were bombed and in Sicily airdromes at Catania and Gherbini were raided.

The naval air force atacked an Axis merchant ship under escort of a destroyer and claimed a hi and probably sinking of the ship

Seven British planes were reported lost.

Trying to Quit Gazala.

London, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—Axis forces are attempting to withdraw from Gazala, forty miles west of Tobruk, but the British are pressing the enemy hard and pursuing him, a military commentator said today.

The commentator said that 8,108 Axis prisoner had arrived at Alexandria by Dec. 15 and included seventy-six Germans officers, 2,926 Nazis of other ranks, 237 Italian officers and 4,869 Italians of other ranks.

London More Cautious.

In London a responsible military commentator took a slightly more cautious line than that of the Cairo communique.

The air attacks on detachments moving west from Derna does not necessarily mean that the Axis has abandoned hopes of establishing a defense line south of that port. Driving toward Derna the British are moving almost due north. Beyond Derna the coast curves away to the southwest.

The commentator said there is nothing yet to show that advanced British columns have managed to cut behind the main body of retreating Axis troops and nothing definite on the fate of Axis forces in the Gazala area, which has been passed by the sweeping British advance.

However, the belief was expressed in London that British armored forces had penetrated well ahead of the east-west Mimi-Mekili road, which Cairo said had been reached by the main body of British infantry. A front along this road would be facing north toward Derna. Mekili is 180 miles from the Egyptian border.

Polish and Indian troops on December 16 reported taking an additional Italian prisoners.

British Repulsed In Libya, Rome Claims

DEC 19 1941

Rome, Dec. 18 (Official Radio Received by (AP)—British attacks against Axis positions in both Bardia and the Gazala area in Libya were declared by the Italian high command today to have been repulsed.

"Italian-German armored units decisively arrested the progress of strong enemy armored units which had come up against our positions in the Gazala area," the high command said.

Tank-supported British infantrymen were said to have failed in thrusts against the port of Bardia, while intense artillery activity marked the fighting in the Salen area across the Egyptian frontier.

Counter-Attacks Cited

Units of the Brescia Division were said to have "particularly distinguished themselves "in violent counter-attacks in the Gazala area, the jumping off point for British thrusts against Axis forces farther west.

A few natives were said to have been killed by British air raids against villages of Jebel.

Several bombs were dropped Tuesday night on the Italian naval base of Taranto, the communique said, without causing damage.

Barely had the chase begun when bullets whizzed around his head. He saw some Germans and fired back. Then out of the desert suddenly appeared a British major and two captains—prisoners of the Germans, who broke away when the shooting began. They returned to camp and spread the word.

Aided by Armored Force.

A battalion of Scotsmen went out today to mop up the outfit. They were shot up pretty badly recently by just such a band of Germans. This time the sergeant was accompanied by an armored car, trucks full of soldiers, machine-gun cars and everything necessary for an effective cleanup.

They beat the brush in two wadis (gullies) without any luck. But in the third things began to happen.

"That's the place where I found 'em," said the Black Watch sergeant.

A small band of Germans was discovered behind sand dunes along the Mediterranean shore. Machine guns blazed at them. They returned a few shots and then began surrendering. Germans bobbed from behind other dunes until 90 had appeared.

A roving South African journalist surprised nine Germans hiding in a cave. They surrendered—although he was armed only with a camera.

Treasure Trove of Supplies.

Upward of 200 Germans were captured before the roundup ended. Then the Scots stumbled on a treasure trove of supplies in trucks, in caves, under tents and spread out on the ground—everything from pistols to food and portable typewriters. There were cases of fruit in tins, Chianti wine and champagne and chocolate. Everybody participated—including two truckloads of newspapermen in the expedition.

The scope of German conquests was measured in part by Norwegian fish, Yugoslav sausages and French sauces. There was a surprise package of American tinned foods—probably from huge stores of supplies, partly of American origin, which were captured in Flanders.

The final casualty score of the day was two Germans wounded, not a Scotsman scratched.

What happened to the pig that started all of this still isn't quite clear.

FASCIST SUBMARINE LOST

Italians say it Carried 22 Captured British Officers

Rome, Dec. 18—(Official radio received by AP)—The Italian high command said today that a Fascist submarine with 22 captured British officers on board was missing at sea.

The craft (presumably moving to Italy prisoners taken in the battle of Libya) has failed to return to its base, the high command said

The British yesterday announced the sinking of the Italian submarine Ammiraglio Caracciolo in the central Mediterranean. It said that Italian General Guido Lami and 19 other military officers were aboard, on the way from Libya to Italy.

Berlin Tells of Sea Attack

Berlin, Dec. 18—(Official Radio Received by AP)—The high command said today that German planes had scored two torpedo hits on a heavy British cruiser, one in a formation of ships attacked in the Mediterranean off eastern Libya.

The high command also reported that German fighters and anti-aircraft guns shot down seven British planes.

NAZI BATTLESHIPS BOMBED BY R.A.F.

DEC 19 1941

Scharnhorst and Gneisenau Attacked by Daylight.

London, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—The R. A. F. bombed the German battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau in daylight today with a powerful force of its heaviest bombers, the British announced.

An Air Ministry communique said that the ships were believed to have been hit.

Bombers and their fighter escort shot down eight German planes with a loss of six R. A. F. craft in the attack, the Air Ministry said.

The ships were in the harbor at Brest in occupied France, where they have frequently been attacked by British planes.

Docks at Le Havre also were attacked and planes on offensive patrol bombed airdromes in German-occupied territory, it added.

Berlin, Dec. 18 (Official Radio Received by A. P.).—Seven British planes were reported shot down by German fighters this afternoon when the R. A. F. attacked a port in German-occupied territory.

the steamship St. Denis has now been withdrawn.

"The German and Italian admiralties will presumably now settle among themselves whether it was the German or Italian Navy that was responsible for the sinking of the steamship St. Denis and similar outrages recently committed by submarines in the Mediterranean and in Spanish territorial waters."

Gen. Wavell Confident

New Delhi, India, Dec. 18 (AP)—Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, commander in chief of India, said today that "I expect a hard year in 1942 against the Axis, which is still formidable, but we ought to finish them off in fairly good time."

He stressed allied successes in Libya and Russia at one of his infrequent press conferences.

Wavell said that he was confident that initial advantages gained by the Japanese through treachery would be wiped out.

"There is no cause for great alarm in India," he remarked.

Civic guards have been enrolled throughout the country and air-raid defenses have been tested.

'FREEDOM ARMIES' LINKED

Yugoslav and Greek Forces in Contact, Radio Reports

New York, Dec. 18—(AP)—The British radio today quoted messages from southeast Europe as saying that the Yugoslav and Greek "freedom armies" have linked up across the mountains of south Yugoslavia and north Greece.

The broadcast, heard here by CBS, said both armies are fighting the Germans in a unified campaign with intelligence agents pooling information on enemy movements.

War To Be Long, Hard, Il Duce Tells Women

It's Last Battle That Brings Victory, Premier Mussolini Declares

Rome, Dec. 18 (Official Radio Recorded by (AP))—"The present war is a hard and long one, for it is not a war like all the others," Premier Mussolini told a group of Italian women today as he praised them for their privations and sacrifices.

It is the last battle that brings victory, Il Duce said.

Mussolini was addressing women Fascist leaders and Red Cross nurses gathered at the Palazzo Venezia on the occaion of the sixth anniversary of the offering by Italian women of their golden wedding rings to help Italy fight the war against Ethiopia.

duty of the women of Italy to remember: "This is a long war because it is different from all others.

"The Italian people know that however grave the privations and sacrifices of the internal front, they are infinitely smaller than those of the soldiers fighting on the desolate steppes of Russia or the sand dunes of Africa."

Axis Is 'Going The Whole Way'

DEC 19 1941

Berlin, Dec. 18 (Andi Agency to (AP) Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels said today that Germany, Italy and Japan are "going the whole way" in the war.

Writing in the weekly Das Reich he said the Axis powers were forced to defend their lives and "they will do it in a manner which knows no sentimental consideration."

He called the three-power alliance a natural one and said all three were conducting the war in constant offensives.

The Axis allies, he said, "feel offended and humiliated by the spokesmen for plutocracy to a degree which permits not the slightest thought of yielding."

Americans in Norway Must Report to Police

London, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—The Norwegian Telegraph Agency reported today that all Americans over 15 living in Norway had been ordered to report to the police within twenty-four hours.

Italians Reported Rebuffed by Turkey

Istanbul, Dec. 17 (delayed) (A. P.).—An official report from Ankara said today that the Turkish Government had rebuffed an Italian proposal for a Turkish-Italian treaty of friendship similar to that signed between Turkey and Germany.

The reports said the Italians were told that such broad understanding between Italy and Turkey was impossible because of long-announced Italian ambitions for complete mastery of the Mediterranean area.

Pig in Libyan Desert Brings Fortune in Food to Scots

200 Germans Captured in Roundup Among Sand Dunes on Mediterranean Shore

By PRESTON GROVER
Associated Press War Correspondent.

WITH THE BRITISH 8TH ARMY IN THE LIBYAN DESERT, Dec. 14 (Delayed).—This little pig didn't stay home—and thereby hangs a tale of fantastic events in the desert and how a band of indignant Scotsmen garnered a fortune in food and supplies and captured nearly 200 German prisoners.

A Scottish Black Watch sergeant was doing a bit of quiet foraging in an abandoned German camp far behind the present desert front yesterday when he saw and went after the porker.

RAF Heavily Bombs Brest Where 3 Nazi Warships Are Laid Up

London, Dec. 18 (AP)—The RAF today heavily bombed the Brest drydocks where the German battle cruisers Scharnhorst and Gneisenau and the cruiser Prinz Eugen are under repair.

Swarms of German fighters took to the air during the daylight raid and the British acknowledged loss of five bombers and one of their own escorting fighters. But, they said, the raiders rocked the cradles of the German ships, set a fire that raised thick black smoke from the Gneisenau's dock, and dropped "very heavy bombs very close if not on one of the ships."

Eight of the German planes were shot down, the announcement said, in dogfights in which fifty planes at a time participated through the thick bursts of anti-aircraft fire.

PARIS CURBS JEWS

New Restrictions Set Up in Nazi-Occupied City.

Vichy, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—The Paris Municipal Government ordered new measures today against Jews in the German-occupied capital and surrounding Seine Department, including a requirement that they report changes of residence within twenty-four hours. Jews entering the city likewise must report.

The orders forbade exportation from Seine Department of any wealth belonging to Jews and indicated that Jews would not be permitted to travel outside the Department except in "grave or exceptional cases."

For the last week the Gestapo has been rounding up Jews, chiefly in the legal and engineering professions, and sending them to concentration camps. Travelers arriving at Vichy said that several thousand had been arrested.

MUSSOLINI CALLS ON WOMEN TO HATE

He Says Civilians Suffer Less Than Troops.

Rome, Dec. 18 (Andi Agency to A. P.).—Premier Mussolini today told a gathering of women before his Palazzo Venezia that they must hate the enemy.

He was speaking at an observance of the sixth anniversary of "The Day of Faith," when the women of Italy gave up their wedding rings to support the conquest of Ethiopia.

LONDON, Dec. 18 (AP)—The national conscription bill providing for compulsory national service by women and extending the conscription ages for men to 18½ to 50 years became law today with the signature of King George VI.

Spanish-Nazi Parley At Madrid

Madrid, Dec. 18 (AP)—Foreign Minisfeh Ramon Serrano Suner conferred at length at the Foreign Ministry today with German Ambassador Eberhard von Stohrer. The subject of the conference was not disclosed.

War Council of Spain Continues Deliberations

Confers With District Chiefs as Latter See Franco

The German radio, heard by The Associated Press, broadcast a Madrid dispatch yesterday reporting that the supreme council of the Spanish armed forces continued its deliberations begun ten days ago after conferring with the commanders of the military districts of Madrid, Catalonia, Andalusia and Spanish Morocco.

The district commanders also reported to Generalissimo Francisco Franco before returning to their posts, it was said.

Spain Offers Aid to Argentina

BUENOS AIRES, Dec. 18 (AP).—The Spanish Embassy told Argentina today that Spain would carry mail between South America and Europe if the ships would not be halted by the British. The Foreign Office said Argentina was negotiating with British authorities to maintain mails, since Axis trans-Atlantic air lines are being stopped.

Egypt Breaks With Hungary

Bern, Dec. 18 (AP)—The Egyptian charge d'affairs at Budapest informed the Hungarian Foreign Minister today that diplomatic relations between Egypt and Hungary were broken off effective December 15, according to a Swiss telegraphic agency dispatch from Budapest.

Canada Recaptures Nazi Lieutenant

Montreal, Dec. 18 (AP) — Lieut. Ulrich Steinhilper, 22-year-old German airman, was thrown for a loss again tonight by the routine of the railroad business, which thwarted his second clean break from a Canadian prison camp in less than a month.

Steinhilper, a good man at burrowing under fences, escaped from the Bowmanville, Ont., camp in that fashion Nov. 24 and got on a Canadian National train bound for the United States—not then at war. He actually got to Niagara Falls, N. Y., but didn't know it until after the train returned to Niagara Falls, Ont.

There the train crew, on a routine check, found him on a tender.

Tonight a railroad detective, on another routine check, found Steinhilper securely tied to the battery box under a New York Central day coach about to leave for New York from Windsor station.

He readily admitted he had gone under Bowmanville's 9-foot fence again and had tied himself under the coach so he wouldn't fall.

Steinhilper is the 66th German war prisoner to escape and be recaptured. Four others were shot dead, Baron Franz Von Werra, the only one to make a clean getaway back to Germany — by jumping bond in the United States—has since been reported killed in air action.

German Airman Flees Canadian Camp Again

By the Associated Press.

BOWMANVILLE, Ont., Dec. 18.—Lt. Ulrich Steinhilper, 23-year-old German flyer who was frustrated in a flight by locomotive from the Bowmanville interment camp November 24, was hunted as a fugitive again today.

Lt. Steinhilper escaped last night. He was believed to have cut a hole in the nine-foot-high fence around the camp.

In his original bid for liberty he burrowed under the wire. He then secreted himself aboard a Canadian National Railways engine which was switching cars to Niagara Falls, N. Y., but did not realize when the international boundary was crossed. He was captured by the engine's crew after returning to Canadian territory.

Canadian Corvette Captures Nazi Sub

Halifax, Dec. 18 (AP)—Apparently referring to a Nazi U-boat captured weeks ago by a British patrol bomber in the Atlantic, Commander J. P. Connolly told the Commercial Club today a Canadian Corvette had brought a German submarine into port with its captain and crew.

He mentioned the capture only briefly and did not name the port. He pointed out the announcement of the U-boat's arrival in port had not been announced officially but that the report had "gotten around."

Connolly, the Naval Provost Marshal here, added that "one of our own people"—apparently a Nova Scotian—had figured prominently in the U-boat incident.

United States

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18 (AP)—The text of this morning's War Department's communiqué follows:

The War Department regrets to announce that an Army airplane en route from Phoenix, Ariz., to Hamilton Field, California, with several Army officers, including Major Gen. Herbert A. Dargue, Air Corps, as passengers, has been missing since 7:55 P. M., Dec. 12, 1941. The plane was last reported near Palmdale, Calif. It is believed that it may have crashed or been forced down in the mountains in that vicinity. When the plane failed to arrive at its destination on schedule, a search was instituted, which is still continuing.

Philippine Theatre: There was no apparent enemy activity during Wednesday, Dec. 17.

There is nothing to report from other areas.

A later War Department communiqué said:

Philippines: The Commanding General, Far Eastern Command, reports that enemy air activity during Dec. 18 was confined to mild raids over Luzon. Ground operations were unimportant patrol actions.

There is nothing to report from other areas.

The Navy Department issued the following communiqué:

Atlantic Area—The naval situation has been without incident. Heavy weather continues in the Western Atlantic.

Eastern Pacific—There are no new developments to report.

Central Pacific—There are no new developments to report.

Far East—Submarine actions against enemy forces in the Far East have resulted in the sinking of an enemy transport and the probable loss of one enemy destroyer.

MANILA, Dec. 18 (AP)—The headquarters of Lieut. Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur issued this communiqué today:

Enemy activity today has been confined to the air. Nichols and Zablan fields were bombed. The damage was light. No reports have been made on casualties. At least twelve planes were counted.

In order to amalgamate all defense forces and effectuate maximum cohesion and coordination the entire Philippine Army is being inducted into the United States Army Forces in the Far East. Chief of Staff General Basilio J. Valdes of the Philippine Army will continue to administer his echelon.

MANILA, Friday, Dec. 19 (AP)—The following communiqué was issued early today by Lieut. Gen. MacArthur:

ILOILO CITY [on Panay Island] was bombed about 1:10 P. M. Thursday. More than thirty Japanese planes participated. Civilian casualties and property damage have been reported.

British

SINGAPORE, Dec. 18 (AP)—The British Headquarters communiqué said today:

During the night our troops in South Kedah and the Province of Wellesley successfully disengaged and now are reorganizing south of the Krian River.

Yesterday there was some fighting in the vicinity of Grik, but no enemy activity in that area reported this morning.

In Kelantan an attack on our position was driven off with heavy casualties to the enemy.

No enemy air activity was reported during the night.

The British Far Eastern Headquarters tonight issued this communiqué:

No enemy activity during the day has been reported from either the Kedah or Kelantan fronts.

It is now learned that prior to yesterday's withdrawal from the River Muda a strong attack was launched by the enemy in an endeavor to capture Pekaka Bridge. This was repulsed, the enemy being driven back across the river and leaving behind many dead. The subsequent withdrawal was carried out unopposed.

This morning an R. A. F. Catalina flying boat while on reconnaissance 250 miles south-southwest of Saigon encountered an enemy twin-engined bomber.

In the ensuing engagement, which lasted fifteen minutes, our aircraft outmanoeuvred the enemy and inflicted such damage that it broke off the attack and was last seen with smoke pouring from one engine.

In Malaya Japanese air activity was confined to the area around Ipoh.

RANGOON, Burma, Dec. 18 (AP)—A British Army communiqué today said:

One of our patrols on the Tenasserim border exchanged shots with a frontier post.

There is nothing further to report.

MELBOURNE, Australia, Dec. 18 (AP)—A communiqué, issued by the Royal Australian Air Force, follows:

Our aircraft have successfully bombed Japanese installations on Greenwich Island, Japanese aircraft which attempted interception were driven off. One enemy aircraft was damaged.

Enemy aircraft made further reconnaissances across the Bismarck Archipelago [former German islands north of Australia now under Australian mandate]. Our reconnaissance over the sea continued.

All our aircraft have returned to their bases.

CAIRO, Egypt, Dec. 18 (AP)—British General Headquarters here today issued this communiqué:

Axis forces in eastern Cyrenaica are now in full retreat.

After five days of intensive fighting in which all remaining German and Italian resources have been thrown into the battle to try to delay our advance the enemy front has everywhere been broken.

Yesterday our troops relentlessly pursued the enemy in spite of adverse weather conditions for a distance of nearly thirty miles.

By evening the main body of our infantry had reached the general line of the Tmimi-Mekili road.

Details now are available of counter-attacks made by German truck-borne infantry supported by all remaining tanks on Dec. 13, 14 and 15; the brunt of three counter-attacks which, delivered with the greatest determination, were borne by the Fourth Indian Division in the center of our line.

Although the Germans had temporarily established considerable local numerical superiority in the area held by the Fourth Indian Division, the latter formation beat off attack after attack without giving ground.

Indeed during three days and nights of intense fighting in which all available German air forces were also employed in close support of their tanks and truck-borne infantry, the division, and particularly in the last two days the Fifth Indian Infantry Brigade, actually made headway.

Ably backed up by battalions of the Fourth Sikh Regiment and the First Punjab Regiment, who had already distinguished themselves on many previous occasions, the Buffs, admirably supported by the Twenty-first Field Regiment of Royal Artillery, played a decisive part in finally defeating these German counter-attacks, in which about twenty German tanks and a number of Axis aircraft were destroyed.

In the course of yesterday's retreat by the enemy our armored forces, operating to the flank and rear, attacked and destroyed a number of columns of mechanical transport, including four German tanks.

Throughout yesterday's operations our air forces actively cooperated by intensive bombing of enemy transport columns, obtaining excellent results, particularly on large concentrations of mechanical transport at Mekili, where many vehicles were observed to be on fire.

Other air formations successfully engaged detachments moving westward along the coastal road from Derna.

The R. A. F. Middle East Command issued this communiqué today:

Successful attacks were made on concentrations of enemy mechanized transport during operations yesterday. Numerous direct hits were obtained and much damage done to enemy vehicles, a number of which were set on fire.

Bombers of the S. A. A. F. raided the landing ground at Barce, damaging fifteen JU52s on the ground.

Other bombers attacked enemy fuel-carrying transports in the Zuara region. Several petrol tankers were blown up, others damaged.

It is now learned that during the raid on Benina airdrome Tuesday direct hits were obtained on two large enemy aircraft on the landing ground.

Our fighter aircraft were also active in the battle area operating in close support of land forces. Two ME109s were shot down and other enemy fighters severely damaged.

In addition, considerable damage was inflicted on enemy motor transport moving along the road between El Agheila and Ghemines.

Tuesday night the naval base at Taranto was again attacked, but heavy cloud prevented observation results.

Other aircraft dropped bombs in the vicinity of naval headquarters and the railway station at Brindisi.

In Sicily airdromes at Catania and Gherbini also were raided.

In the Central Mediterranean Tuesday night naval aircraft attacked an enemy merchant ship which was escorted by a destroyer.

Torpedoes struck the merchantman, which was believed sunk because the destroyer was later sighted alone.

From these and other operations seven of our aircraft are missing.

LONDON, Dec. 18 (AP)—The Admiralty today issued the following communiqué:

The Admiralty announces that the charge previously made by the Vichy Admiralty that it was a British submarine that sank the steamship St. Denis now has been withdrawn.

The German and Italian Admiralties will presumably now settle among themselves whether it was the German or Italian navy that was responsible for the sinking of the steamship St. Denis and similar outrages recently mitted by submarines in the Mediterranean and in Spanish territorial waters.

An Air Ministry communiqué today said:

Aircraft of the Bomber Command attacked the docks at Brest last night. A heavy weight of bombs was dropped.

Docks at Havre were also attacked. Fighter Command aircraft on offensive patrol bombed airdromes in occupied territory.

One aircraft of the Bomber Command is missing.

The Air and Home Security Ministries issued the following communiqué today:

In the early part of last night there was slight enemy activity, a few bombs being dropped in the northeast and Southwest of England.

At one point in the Northeast some houses were damaged and a small number of persons injured.

The Air and Home Security Ministries issued this communiqué tonight:

This morning a single enemy aircraft dropped bombs at a place on the coast of East Anglia. Some damage was done and there were a number of casualties.

Netherland

LONDON, Dec. 18 (Reuter)—The following communiqué was published this afternoon by the Information Bureau of the Government of the Netherlands Indies:

In view of Japanese submarine activities off Portuguese Timor, it became an unavoidable necessity to take steps to safeguard this territory against Japanese aggression and to forestall use of it as a base from which attacks could be made on Allied territory and communications.

Accordingly, a force of Allied troops has been landed in Portuguese Timor.

The Portuguese Government having reaffirmed their desire to preserve their neutrality, the local authorities in Portuguese Timor have objected to the action being taken.

Portuguese sovereignty remains intact and it has been made clear to the Portuguese Government that the troops will be withdrawn as soon as the threat from the enemy is removed, since their presence is purely a measure of defense on the part of the Allied nations at war with Japan.

BATAVIA, Java, Dec. 18 (AP)—The Netherlands Indies fighting forces issued this communiqué today:

During operations of our naval aircraft off Miri, one of the aircraft caused direct hits on a Japanese cruiser, and not on a Japanese destroyer as was previously reported.

From a height of approximately 5,000 meters the flying boat dropped five bombs, each of 200 kilograms, on the Japanese cruiser, which was moving at high speed. Two bombs hit their mark and exploded on the cruiser at approximately one-quarter distance from the stern. A third bomb landed near the ship and possibly was also a hit. The enemy ship lost speed and simultaneously burst into flames.

Bombers of the Royal Netherland Army also attacked the enemy landing fleet and many near misses were observed. All our aircraft returned safely.

Supplementary to the fighting services communiqué No. 4, in which it was reported that a flying boat of the Royal Netherland Navy on patrol was attacked by three enemy aircraft in the South China Sea and succeeded in beating off this attack and damaging one of the enemy planes, it is learned that this enemy aircraft crashed into the sea.

Japanese aircraft attacked Sorong, on the north coast of New Guinea. When Netherland naval planes took off, the enemy fled and all the Japanese bombs missed their mark.

On Dec. 17 a Japanese flying boat carried out a bombing attack on Ternate, one of twin islands in the Moluccan Sea between Celebes and Halmahera. A Netherland naval plane engaged the enemy. Although the Netherland plane was slightly damaged, it succeeded in driving off the attacker.

Russian

MOSCOW, Dec. 18 (AP)—The Soviet Bureau of Information today issued the following communiqué:

During the night of Dec. 17-18 our troops fought the enemy on all fronts.

In one sector of the Western Front units commanded by General Rokossovsky drove the enemy out of many populated points and in one battle captured sixteen guns, sixty-three motor vehicles, five mortars and much other material.

Guerrilla detachments in the Crimea are continuing their successful struggle against German invaders.

In the course of several days' fighting in one of the sectors of the Southern Front our men annihilated 3,200 enemy soldiers and officers and captured fifteen guns, fifty-three machine-guns, eleven mine throwers and a large quantity of ammunition.

In one engagement a battery under Junior Lieutenant Gysaloff, by unerring fire, beat off an enemy counter-attack. About 900 enemy corpses remained on the battlefield.

Our troops operating in one of the sectors of the Southwestern Front within one day freed from the enemy seventy villages, captured twenty-eight guns, 105 trucks, seventeen mine throwers and many other trophies. On the same day Curriyanoff's guards occupied ten villages.

In fighting for Kalinin Soviet troops smashed the Eighty-sixth German Infantry Division commanded by General Widhoff, the 110th commanded by General Sehert, the 129th commanded by General Rittau, the 161st under General Wilk, the 162d under General Franke and the 251st under General Burd.

The Soviet Information Bureau issued the following communiqué tonight:

According to preliminary and incomplete figures, troops on the Kalinin front, in occupying the town of Kalinin, captured from the Germans the following trophies: 191 guns of various calibers including four heavy 12-inch guns, thirty-one tanks, nine planes, about 1,000 trucks, 160 mine throwers, 303 machine guns, 292 automatic rifles, 1,300 bicycles, forty-seven motor cycles, 4,500 rifles, 21,000 shells, 12,500 mines, over 500,000 cartridges, eighteen wireless stations, four standards.

In addition our troops captured two ammunition depots, one clothing depot, carts, cable and a large amount of other war material.

Counting of trophies is in progress.

In the fighting in the Kalinin area the Germans lost over 10,000 soldiers and officers in killed alone.

MOSCOW, Friday, Dec. 19 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau today issued this communiqué:

During Dec. 18 our troops fought the enemy on all fronts.

In a number of sectors of the Western Front around Kalinin and the southwestern sectors of the front our troops engaged in fierce fighting and continued to advance, occupying a number of villages.

Seven German planes were destroyed Dec. 17. We lost one plane.

Three enemy planes were brought down near Moscow Dec. 18.

On Dec. 17 our aviation destroyed or damaged sixteen enemy tanks, two armored cars, about 730 trucks with troops and supplies, destroyed eighteen field guns with their crews, a number of buses, and set on fire ten railroad trains and annihilated or dispersed three regiments of enemy infantry.

On one sector of the Western Front General Vlasoff's units in one day destroyed thirty-two anti-tank guns, 106 trucks, three tanks, fourteen machine guns, an ammunition dump and one military supply depot.

Our units operating in another sector of the Western Front in one day's fighting dislodged the Germans from twenty-four villages, annihilated one battalion of enemy infantry and captured one tank, thirty-three trucks, thirteen guns, fifteen machine guns and many rifles.

German

BERLIN, Dec. 18 (From German broadcasts recorded by The Associated Press)—The German High Command issued this communiqué today:

In air attacks upon the central sector of the Eastern Front the enemy yesterday suffered extremely high losses in men, tanks and rolling stock.

West of the Gulf of Kandalaksha bombers plastered railway targets on the Murmansk Railway and an air base was bombed.

Last night port installations on the east and southeast coasts of England were bombed.

There were no major operations yesterday in North Africa.

In waters off Cyrenaica German bombers encountered a fairly large formation of British naval forces and scored two hits by aerial torpedoes on a heavy cruiser.

German fighters and anti-aircraft guns shot down seven British planes.

In night attacks by the British Air Force on occupied western territory the enemy lost four bombers.

In the period from Dec. 10 to Dec. 16 formations of the German Air Force and units of the navy shot down seventy-four British planes, fifty-two over the Mediterranean and in North Africa. In the same period seventeen of our own planes were lost in operations against Great Britain.

Italian

ROME, Dec. 18 (From Italian broadcasts recorded by The Associated Press)—Enemy infantry and tanks attacked the Bardia stronghold without success.

On the Solum Front there has been intense artillery activity.

Italo-German armored units decisively arrested the progress of strong enemy armored units which had come up against positions in the El Gazala area.

In violent counterattacks units of the Brescia division particularly distinguished themselves.

Enemy raids on villages of Jebel el-Achdar caused the deaths of a few natives.

At Taranto late on the night of Dec. 16, several bombs were dropped without causing any damage.

An Italian submarine with twenty-two captured British officers on board failed to return to its base.

DEC 19 1941

Finnish

HELSINKI, Finland, Dec. 18 (From Finnish broadcasts recorded by The Associated Press)—The Finnish High Command issued this communiqué today:

Karelian Isthmus: Harassing fire by enemy artillery and trench motars. Fort Todtleben took part in the firing. Infantry fire along the whole front and very fierce in the eastern isthmus. Our artillery and trench mortars successfully fired on targets observed in the enemy area, destroying several guns and bunkers, silencing machine guns and light machine guns and disturbing enemy movements.

Svir River Front: Fairly small enemy forces tried to cross the Svir, but were repulsed. Our artillery destroyed assembled enemy troop units and bunkers and silenced several enemy batteries.

Eastern Front: In nearly all sectors the enemy made attempts at attacks, all of which were repelled.

Air Activity: Our aircraft twice bombed the Murmansk railway south of Sortokka in the vicinity of Karma or Kotshkoma station, scoring direct hits with heavy bombs. A train and a storage building were also successfully bombed. A locomotive was put out of action by the fire of our aircraft and columns of horse-drawn vehicles were fired on. In an air fight in the Gulf of Finland near Seiskari an enemy flying boat was shot down despite its fighter escort. North of Maaselkae an air fight developed with nine enemy fighters, five of which were shot down. All our aircraft returned safely.

Martinique Gets U.S. Assurances

DEC 19 1941

Trade to Continue With French Colonies In Caribbean

FRENCH SHIPS NOT TO BE USED BY AXIS

F.D. Gives Pledge Territories Will Not Be Attacked

By LLOYD A. LEHRBAS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18 (AP)—American and French authorities in Martinique have reached an accord, it was learned authoritatively tonight, under which the neutral status of French possessions and naval vessels in the western hemisphere will remain unchanged.

Under the agreement, it was learned, the United States will continue to permit trade with French possessions in the Caribbean, in return for pledges that French vessels and nationals there will take no action detrimental to the United States and American interests.

An obvious interpretation of the agreement, it was said, would be that—despite Nazi efforts to secure closer Franco-German collaboration—French possessions, vessels and troops in France's American territories will not be taken over by the axis.

The friendly agreement will also, it was said, make it unnecessary for the United States to take any military action to insure that French territory or warships on this side of the Atlantic will not be used in any way against any of the American republics.

A number of senators and representatives have proposed that the United States, acting in collaboration with the other American republics, take over Martinique lest the Vichy government be forced to hand it over to Nazi Germany to be used as a base for aggression in the western hemisphere.

The accord was reached between Admiral Frederick J. Horne and Admiral Georges Robert, high commissioner for French possessions in the Caribbean, which includes Martinique, Guadaloupe and French Guiana.

Dispatches from Fort de France quoted Admiral Robert as announcing that President Roosevelt had sent personal assurances that the French territories would not be attacked.

Under an agreement reached a year ago the United States has permitted one ship a week to sail from an American port with foodstuffs and other normal civilian requirements for Martinique, and today's accord will continue that arrangement.

The supplies for Martinique are paid for with French funds "frozen" by the treasury when France was defeated by Germany.

When asked about the announcement of Robert that the United States naval officer had met with him yesterday, state department officials said they had received no official report on the conference, but that indications reaching them to date confirmed a belief that an understanding had been reached.

They said Horn had gone to Martinique to discuss naval arrangements with Robert.

In addition to concern over the presence of the French naval craft at Martinique, the geographical position of the French islands in relation to the hemisphere defense has had attention.

Ever since the collapse of France, Martinique has been regarded as a potential loophole for an Axis thrust against the Panama Canal through the great defense rim of the Windward and Leeward Islands and the new United States bases obtained from Britain in the destroyer deal. The position of the orphaned Vichy-French island at the center of the Caribbean defense chain has been a sinister question mark where the United States wanted a positive point of protection.

Demands have been made from time to time by Congressmen and naval experts and editorial writers for the seizure of Martinique on various grounds ranging from debt satisfaction to defensive necessity.

President Roosevelt stopped off at Martinique on his Caribbean cruise of August, 1940, and his visit was saluted in a communique issued by the colonial government.

But the popular affections of the islanders for the Vichy regime, on the one hand, and the De Gaullist Free French, on the other, have remained little known due to a stern censorship. There was some talk of a plebiscite in 1940 to determine between Vichy and De Gaulle, but it never came off, and the official attitude clove to the government of Marshal Petain.

Although Martinique and neighboring French Guadeloupe, both discovered by Columbus in 1502, are considered jewels of the empire for their beauty and production, and as exemplars of colonial life, their main value to the Western Hemisphere is strictly strategic. In hostile hands they would constitute a menace in the far-flung United States defenses guarding a vital link.

the Panama Canal.

Martinique was the stepping stone for materiel started from the United States in answer to the desperate appeal of Paul Reynard, pre-armistice Premier of France, for "clouds of warplanes" from across the ocean. As evidence of this, nearly 100 American-made planes, stranded while en route to collapsing France, still stand on Martinique, deteriorating under the tropical sun and lashing winds and seasonal rains—useless now.

As further evidence of former American collaboration with France, hundreds of millions in gold lie cached in Martinique, apparently a war-purchase reserve fund spirited out of France ahead of the Nazis and moved to safekeeping through Canada and the United States before France surrendered.

U. S. AND VICHY REACH ACCORD ON MARTINIQUE

French Admiral Says Washington Promised To Respect Sovereignty

Pledge Given Ships Nor Land Will Not Be Turned Over To Axis Forces

[By the Associated Press]

Fort de France, Martinique, Dec. 18—Admiral Georges Robert, high commissioner of the French Antilles, announced today that United States Rear Admiral Horne (possibly Frederick J. Horne) had flown to Martinique "to deliver President Roosevelt's personal assurances that these islands need fear no attack or change of sovereignty."

In a communique, Admiral Robert said Horne arrived at 1 P. M. yesterday from Puerto Rico in a navy plane and left at 9 A. M. today for Washington after having informed Robert that "the United States desires to maintain cordial relations with France during these difficult moments."

LAURA INGALLS SEIZED BY FBI AS NAZI AGENT

DEC 19 1941

Noted Aviatrix Accused Of Failure To Register As Foreign Emissary

Bond Is Fixed At $7,500. Hearing Is Postponed Until Next Friday

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 18—An adventure in which Laura Ingalls, aviatrix, said, "I guess I overreached myself," brought her to jail today on a charge of failing to register as an agent of the German Government.

The widely known flyer, first of her sex to pilot a plane non-stop across the continent from east to west, was unable to post the $7,500 bond fixed when she was arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham Turnage.

The hearing was recessed to December 26 to give Miss Ingalls opportunity to consult a lawyer.

Protests To Commissioner

She protested to Turnage that FBI agents who arrested her yesterday had held her incommunicado "in a small room," and that she had been without sleep for thirty-six hours.

J. Edgar Hoover, FBI director, said the arrest was the climax of several months of investigation of Miss Ingalls' activities during which she "received a specified salary from an agent of the German Reich for her efforts in spreading the propaganda which they furnished her," and that she frequently visited Washington to meet Nazi representatives.

A Justice Department official said Miss Ingalls was 38 and a native of New York city. Her only known address he added, was the Murray Hill Hote in New York, and she spent much of her time visiting friends.

America First Speaker

Hoover said she had been a "feature speaker" for the America First Committe throughout the Middle West and that on several occasions she "led groups from various women's isolationist organizations to the Capitol for protest demonstrations."

During today's hearing she made a reference to a "private investigation" which she said she had been making.

An official said she was referring to "counter-espionage" and that she had indicated in a statement that she was seeking information for the United States Government in her contact with German representatives.

Expected Suspicion

Miss Ingalls told Turnage she knew her activities would attract suspicion if they were looked into but that she had "carried on what I personally felt was my duty."

"I undertook something that I thought I could handle alone, and I guess I overreached myself," she added.

The complaint charged her with having acted as an agent of the German Government continuously since August 1.

Denies "Taking Oath"

She asked Turnage whether being an agent meant "taking an oath and swearing allegiance, which I never did." She declared that she was "a free agent" and took no orders from anyone.

She attracted attention in September, 1939, when she flew over Washington and dropped peace pamphlets which floated to the White House lawn.

Princess Taken In FBI Roundup Given Hearing

Philadelphia, Feb. 18 (AP)—Princess Stephanie Hohenlohe, reputed friend of high Nazis, went before the Eastern Pennsylvania Alien Enemy Board today for a secret hearing to determine whether she will be interned for the duration of the war.

The red-haired noblewoman, arrested by the FBI Monday at Wilmington, Del., was brought here from the United States immigration detention station at Gloucester, N. J. Nine other Axis nationals seized in the FBI roundup also appeared.

The board, after hearing Government and defense evidence, will make recommendations to Francis Biddle, Attorney General, who is empowered to release, parole or intern aliens.

Roosevelt Signs Big War Aid Bill

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18 (AP).—President Roosevelt today signed th ebill carrying $10,077,000,000 in appropriations and contract authority to expand the already huge program for the Army and Navy.

The measure provides funds for huge increases in ordnance equipment, essential supplies for an army of 2,000,000 men, and funds and contract authority for 800 naval patrol vessels.

Roosevelt Turns To History In Paying Tribute To Kelly

Writes Letter To President In 1956 Asking That Flyer's Son Go To West Point

DEC 19 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 18 — President Roosevelt reached back into the pages of history today and adapted an idea from the life of Ulysses S. Grant in order to do homage to Colin P. Kelly, Jr., American aviator who sank the Japanese battleship Haruna at the cost of his own life.

Mr. Roosevelt wrote a letter to "The President of the United States in 1956," asking that Kelly's son, Colin P. Kelly 3d, who is now 18 months old, be appointed to the Military Academy at West Point.

Mr. Roosevelt told the future President—whoever he may be—that he was making his request "in full confidence that we shall achieve a glorious victory in the war we are now waging to preserve our democratic way of life."

Token Of Appreciation

He said he was making his appeal as a token of the nation's appreciation of the heroic services of the baby's father, who met death at the outset "of the struggle which was thrust upon us by the perfidy of a professed friend."

Mrs. Marion Kelly, widow of Captain Kelly, at Madison, Fla., expressed her appreciation for the President's message, in behalf of her young son, who also is known as Corky.

"I appreciate the President's kind thought very much, indeed," Mrs. Kelly said. "Colin and I had discussed Corky's future, and we once decided that Corky should choose his own career.

"But I am certain now that when Corky grows up he will want to follow in his father's footsteps and attend West Point.

To Thank President

"I certainly hope he will in view of his father's career and President Roosevelt's thoughtful interest. I am writing by grateful thanks to the President."

The incident recalled that Ulysses S. Grant once wrote a similar letter in behalf of his grandson and namesake, Ulysses S. Grant, then 4 years old.

Princess Julia Cantacuzene, General Grant's granddaughter, tells about it in her memoirs. Col. Fred Grant, the general's son and, like his father, a veteran of the Civil War, was very anxious to have his boy go to West Point.

Asked For Favor

He went to his father a year before the latter's death and said:

"Father, I've never asked you to do me a favor, but I think if you will write it, I would like a letter from you to the then President of the United States, asking him to appoint my boy a cadet."

The Civil War campaigner fell in with the idea. He wrote:

"To the President of the United States:

"May I ask you to favor the appointment of Ulysses Grant—the son of my son, Frederick Grant—as a cadet at West Point, upon his application? In doing so you will gratify the wishes of U. S. Grant."

Sherman Adds Name

Gen. William Tecumseh Sherman came calling about that time and Colonel Grant showed him the letter, suggesting he indrose it and saying: "My youngster will be very proud of such a paper some day." Sherman immediately did so.

Young Ulysses grew up to want to be a soldier and the double letter was sent to President McKinley, who made the appointment, and with a short note returned his grandfather's letter to the young cadet.

His sister, Princess Cantacuzene, proudly recorded that young Grant fulfilled the indorsement—he graduated from West Point among the first in his clas.

Token Of U. S. Appreciation

The President's letter, written on White House stationery and dated yesterday, follows:

"To the President of the United States in 1956:

"I am writing this letter as an act of faith in the destiny of our country. I desire to make a request which I make in full confidence that we shall achieve a glorious victory in the war we now are waging to preserve our democratic way of life.

"My request is that you consider the merits of a young American youth of goodly heritage—Colin P. Kelly 3d, for appointment as a cadet in the United States Military Academy at West Point. I make this appeal in behalf of this youth as a token of the nation's appreciation of the heroic services of his father who met death in line of duty at the very outset of the struggle which was thrust upon us by the perfidy of a professed friend.

"In the conviction that the service and example of Capt. Colin P. Kelly, Jr., will be long remembered, I ask for this consideration in behalf of Colin P. Kelly 3d."

It was the second time in as many days that the President has cited the heroism of the army aviator.

Addressing the Labor-Industry Conference to curb wartime strikes yesterday, he applied the word "must" to them as individuals in urging a quick agreement, and added:

"A boy the other day was out in a plane. The Government did not tell him he had to dive on a batleship and lose his life. That was his 'must'; his own personal 'must.' There was nothing in his orders that told he had to dive his plane into a Japanese battleship. That was young Kelly's own personal 'must.'

"And each one of you and I, too, we have our personal 'musts.'"

Arnold Cites Kelly's Heroism

Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the army air forces, cited the heroism of Captain Kelly and called on officers and men under his command "to continue to fight on with the odds against us until we can build up an aerial fighting force capable of driving hostile airmen from the skies, hostile ships from the seas to decisively defeat our enemies."

Praises Kelly's Feat.

Gen. Arnold said that American air combat units in Hawaii and the Philippines, fighting against overwhelming odds, were seeking out and destroying enemy aircraft and naval vessels wherever they may be.

Capt. Kelly and his crew "proved that the most powerful naval vessels afloat can not operate with impunity within the range of our bombers and the flaming courage of our airmen," Gen. Arnold asserted. "Our officers and men are now fighting with conspicuous gallantry. Never before in the history of American air power have the army air forces been called upon to meet so many different missions, in so many threats of war, with such an extreme disparity of equipment, but never before have the officers and men of the army air forces lived up so bravely to the traditions of the air forces.

"Using what equipment they had, without thought of the odds against them, they have nevertheless fought with great heroism."

ADMIRAL JACOBS TO HEAD BUREAU

Successor of Nimitz Named for Four-year Term.

DEC 19 1941

Washington, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—Rear-Admiral Randall Jacobs, on duty with the Atlantic fleet, was nominated by President Roosevelt today to be the new chief of the Bureau of Navigation, in the Navy Department here, for a four-year term.

He would succeed Rear-Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, named Pacific fleet commander in yesterday's shake-up of the army, navy and air force Hawaiian commands because of the surprise Japanese attack at Pearl Harbor on December 7.

Admiral Jacobs has served in Washington on numerous occasions. He was assistant chief of the Bureau of Navigation before going to sea early this year. He also has had many important commands afloat.

Jobs At Pearl Harbor

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 18—Calls were issued today for several hundred men trained in shipyard occupations to aid in repairing damaged vessels of the United States fleet at Pearl Harbor.

Harold K. Montross, superintendent of the shipbuilding section of the New York State Employment Service industrial office, said qualified men in more than fifty occupations, up to the age of 62, would be accepted.

KNOX ASKS NEWS BAN ON ALLIED VESSELS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18 (AP)—Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox said today that "Publicity of the presence or movements of British and Allied war vessels in U. S. waters should be avoided."

The Knox statements follows:

"* * * Due to the present war conditions it is important that publicity on the presence or movements of British and Allied war vessels in U. S. waters should be avoided.

"Under date of March 24, 1941, Secretary Knox requested voluntary cooperation in the avoidance of publicity of British ships in American waters and under date of Sept. 18, 1941, in agreement with British authorities, this request was modified in that the press was requested to avoid publicity on the presence of these ships until their presence had been made public by the Navy Department, and then only under certain restrictions.

"In view of the present war conditions all publicity should be avoided on the presence and movements of British, American, and other Allied war vessels."

Control By Roosevelt Over Wires Approved

House Interstate Commerce Unit Okays Telephone-Telegraph Measure

Washington, Dec. 18 (AP)—Legislation to permit President Roosevelt to take control of telephone and telegraph facilities during the war was approved today by the House Interstate Commerce Committee.

Members said the authority, similar to that already enacted for radio, would continue until six months after the end of the war, or until Congress by resolution ended the emergency.

They said the measure was designed primarily to give the Government priorities where necessary over the use of telephone lines.

Roosevelt Signs Bill Giving Him New Powers

President Granted Sweeping Authority To Prosecute War Against Axis

Washington, Dec. 18 (AP)—President Roosevelt today signed legislation giving him new and sweeping administrative authority to prosecute the war against the Axis.

The powers, which reenact and extend those granted President Wilson in 1917, include authority to:

Establish a censorship over all forms of foreign communications.

Redistribute Government administrative functions.

Modify defense contracts and permit them to be entered into without competitive bidding or performance bonds.

Control alien financial transactions and utilize in the national interest approximately $7,000,000,000 of alien property in the United States.

Chairmen Sumners (Dem., Texas) and Van Nuys (Dem., Ind.) of the House and Senate Judiciary committees witnessed the signing.

Economic Defense Bd. Changes Name

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18 (AP).—The economic defense board today changed its name to the board of economic warfare, the first substitution of "war" for "defense" in the official names of government agencies.

The board, headed by Vice President Henry A. Wallace, has charge of export controls, and other economic activities connected with the war.

American Diplomats In Tokyo Are Housed In Embassy Compound

Washington, Dec. 18 (AP)—The entire personnel of the American Embassy at Tokyo is housed in the embassy compound and all are in good health, the State Department was advised today.

The department received through the Swiss Foreign Office a message dated December 11 from Ambassador Joseph G. Grew.

The American Vice-Consul at Kobe, Otis W. Rhoades, of Frederick, Md., also was reported to be housed in the compound.

JAPANESE SEIZED

Acting Consul General in Chicago Taken.

Chicago, Dec. 18 (A. P.).—FBI agents, acting on orders from the State Department, have seized Kiagachiro Ohmori, acting Japanese Consul-General in Chicago.

He was confined closely to his home and only persons authorized by the Government, FBI, Naval and Army Intelligence sections will be allowed to communicate with him, the order said.

Consulate offices were locked and sealed after the agents' visit.

Japanese Consul Held By FBI At New Orleans

New Orleans, Dec. 18 (AP)—FBI agents, acting on orders from Washington, today held Kenzo Ito, Japanese consul here, incommunicado at the consulate, which is under police guard. Takegoro Sato, chancellor of the consulate, also was held inside the building.

Jose Garay, Spanish consul, has taken over affairs of the consulate.

Germans Are Moved To Mountain Resort

Diplomats And Newspapermen To Stay There Until They Sail

DEC 19 1941

Washington, Dec. 18 (AP)—German diplomats and newspaper correspondents, under detention pending their repatriation to Germany, have been moved from Washington to a mountain resort in an eastern State.

State Department officials withheld details concerning their removal until they were safely settled in the comfortable hotel which will be their residence until they sail for Germany.

Swiss Take Charge Of U. S. Interests In Axis Countries

German Diplomats Here W[illegible] Comfort[illegible]

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18 (AP)—By the Associated Press.

Swiss envoys in the Axis capitals today took over diplomatic representation of the United States in Germany, Italy, Japan and the satellite nations which followed Adolf Hitler into war.

At the same time Dr. Charles Bruggmann, Swiss Minister here, assumed charge of German, Italian and Bulgarian interests in the United States, and W. Bostrom, the Swedish Minister, took charge of Hungarian and Rumanian interests.

Don Juan Francisco de Cardenas, the Spanish Ambassador, has taken over Japanese interests here.

The State Department also revealed that Axis diplomats here, who have had comparative freedom of movement, hereafter will be confined to specified habitations.

Will Be Lodged in Hotel.

Dr. Hans Thomsen, the German charge d'affaires, and members of the embassy staff will be lodged in a "comfortable" hotel, instead of the embassy and their homes, until arrangements are completed to exchange them for American diplomatic representatives trapped in Germany by the war.

American diplomats assigned to Berlin already have been lodged in a hotel at Lake Constance on the Swiss border pending their repatriation, according to available information.

The State Department announcement explained that action in grouping the Axis diplomats in preparation for their exchange was in accordance with international law and on "the basis of reciprocity."

Confined to Embassy.

Admiral Kichisaburo Nomura, Japanese Ambassador, and members of his staff have been requested to confine themselves to the Embassy premises. Some of the Japanese had been living in houses outside the Embassy grounds.

Japanese consuls and staff members in American cities are to be assembled in a hotel in a locality to be determined.

Brutus Coste, charge d'affaires of the Rumanian Legation, and three Legation attaches, also are to be lodged in a hotel in an undisclosed location.

Newspaper correspondents from Axis countries who were taken into custody were also being lodged in hotels in groups pending arrangements for repatriation of American correspondents in enemy countries.

The State Department announcement made no mention of the Italian or Bulgarian diplomats.

CATHOLIC BISHOPS BACK WAR GOALS

Special Committee Declares "Victory Will Mean Benediction For All The World"

Armed Forces Held Struggling For Things Given World On First Christmas

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 18—A special committee of Catholic bishops, discussing the war of the nation, declared today that "Victory will mean not a triumph of might but a benediction for all the world."

Appointed at the annual general meeting of Catholic bishops and Bishops last month, the committee is composed of Archbishop Samuel A. Stritch, Chicago; Bishop James H. Ryan, Omaha, and Bishop Aloisius J. Muench, Fargo, N. D.

Statement Of Committee

Its statement follows:

"The Catholic bishops of the United States lately appointed a committee of bishops to study in the light of the war aims of our nation the Pope's peace points. President Roosevelt recently stid that we will win the peace.

"In the clouds of war we must delineate the peace which is our inspiration and strength. Clearly it has been stated that we are fighting for the rights of men and the security of our freedoms. Victory will mean not a triumph of might but a benediction for all the world.

We desire no conquest, we seek vengeance on no peoples. Our armed forces, backed by a united nation, are struggling valiantly and courageously to the victory for things which were given to the world on the first Christmas when, through the gates of Virgin Mother, the Prince of Peace came and walked this earth.

It is for peace that we are fighting and there is no contradiction in our war and humble adoration before the crib of Bethlehem.

Indispensible Postulates

"This bishops' committee, without entering the realm of statesmanship, will try to make clear the indispensable postulates for a just peace enunciated by our Holy Father, Pope Pius XII, leaving to statesmen the details of the peace treaty.

Its work is to try to help, as becomes churchmen, our Government in being the instrument of Almighty God for the setting up of a new era in which human rights, human dignity, human freedoms, and a san human solidarity will offer to all peoples prosperity and a chance for the pursuit of happiness."

Brazil Military Attache Is Named By Army

War Department Designates Brig. Gen. Leahman W. Miller For South American Post

Washington, Dec. 18 (AP)—Brig. Gen Leahman W. Miller, of Millerton, Pa. the chief of the United States military mission to Brazil, was designated today by the War Department as military attache to Brazil.

His successor as head of the military mission was not announced. Col. Edwin L. Sibert, of Vineyard Haven, Mass., now military attache at Rio de Janeiro, will remain there as assistant military attache.

At the same time, the department announced assignment of Major Thomas H. Young, of Aquasco, Md., as military attache at Port-au-Prince, Haiti. Young now is assigned to the Seventh Infantry Division at Fort Ord, California.

Obstructions Reported In Guantanamo Bay

Navy Also Says They Have Been Placed In Harbor At St. Thomas, Virgin Islands' Port

Washington, Dec. 18 (AP)—The Navy Department reported today that obstructions have been placed in the entrance to Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, navy and marine base, and in the harbor of St. Thomas, Virgin Islands.

Entrance to Guantanamo Bay, a notice to shipmasters said, has been restricted to daylight hours for all vessels except naval craft. Shipping must be escorted by an escort vessel which maintains a twenty-four-hour watch over the bay entrance.

The notice also warned that vessels should approach the harbor at St. Thomas with caution. The navy also reported that the eastern entrance to Selat Sengkir, at Singapore, British Far Eastern stronghold, has been closed to navigation.

ALERT JUDGMENT ADVISED BY HULL

Washington, Dec. 18 (A. P.). Americans should use their judgment during the Christmas holidays in deciding whether to be especially watchful for hostile threats, Secretary of State Hull said today, and should be guided by the reports they get from newspapers and radio.

Mr. Hull indicated that he thought the basic threat to American life and security remained on the high seas in answering press conference inquiries whether in view of Japan's long preparation for the surprise attack on Pearl Harbor this country should be especially alert around Christmas.

Skater To Use Watch Hitler Gave Him For Timing Bombs

DEC 19 1941

[By the Associated Press]

San Francisco, Dec. 18—Freddie Tomlins, ice skating figure expert, pointed to the spit-second hand on his wrist watch.

"That will come in handy one of these days," he remarked. "It is just right for timing the release of bombs."

Twenty-year-old Tomlins signs RAF after his name. He's a London youth, a Royal Air Force trainee in Ontario, Canada, and hopes to be back in England in a couple of months.

Because he won the international figure skating championship, March 4, 1937, Tomlins is appearing as a featured performer on the ice at a charity skating show in Oakland this week. He is on special leave from plane piloting duties, on a sort of good-will tour, and returns to Canada this Sunday.

The time piece occupies more than an ordinary role in Tomlins' daily routine. It has its special mission, to be fulfilled if and when its owner is flying over continental Europe.

It was awarded to young Tomlins on the day, as a 16-year-old boy, he won the title in competition at Berlin with the greatest skaters in the world. On the back of the watch is an inscription. Translated it reads: "To our dear Freddie Tomlins in remembrance of his figure skating at the Berlin Sportspalast."

The man who personally presented the watch after witnessing the great German favorite, Horst Farber, defeated, had intoned: "Good sports like this will unite the nations."

The man who presented the watch was Adolf Hitler.

Freddie Tomlins expects to use the split second hand in delivering an explosive calling card in the near future.

PLIGHT OF U-BOAT VICTIMS DESCRIBED

72 Survivors Of British Cruiser Saved After Four Days Of Horror

DEC 19 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Philadelphia, Dec. 18—The rescue at sea of seventy-two survivors of the torpedoed British light cruiser Dunedin and a story of hardship and heroism was disclosed here today by the chief engineer of an American freighter.

The engineer, Girard L. Bresson, whose ship docked today, said the survivors had been on seven rafts for four days and three nights when they were fished from mid-Atlantic Ocean near the equator, November 27.

The survivors, many of whom suffered from wounds inflicted by vicious dogfish, were put ashore at a British port, Bresson said.

[The British Admiralty yesterday announced the sinking of the 4,850-ton ship, carrying a normal complement of 450 men, by a German submarine. It was not announced whether any of the crew had been rescued.]

Survivors In Bad Shape

"All of the men," Bresson related, "were in extremely bad shape when we pulled them aboard.

"About half of them had suffered horrible bites from dogfish which flew out of the water and tore pieces of their flesh from their bodies.

"One of the sailors had a large chunk taken from his chest and died five minutes later, his mates told us. All of them had a bad case of sun poisoning and were blistered. Their bodies were swollen.

"Only a few of them had had so much as a drop of water during the four days. On one of the rafts there were thirty-four men, one gallon of water and a can of sea biscuits. This was the only raft that had any provisions whatever.

Men Dive Overboard

"The men told me how some of them had stayed on the raft for a couple of days, then suddenly got up, said 'good-by' and dove overboard."

Bresson said "one seaman, known only as Butler, was the hero of the whole thing in his mates' eyes.

"He sort of organized their plight so that the rafts could be kept together.

One group of men insisted on going alone, Bresson said he was told, "but this fellow Butler swam about in the oil-coated water around his ship and dragged others aboard the rafts. Afterward, when one of the men on his raft died, he would swim to an overcrowded raft and assist one of the other survivors to his raft."

Only One Boat Lowered

Bresson said the British seamen told him "there was time to lower only one boat" before the cruiser sank after the enemy submarine's first torpedo struck.

"Although it was built to hold fifty, in the rush 120 men got into it, with the result that it went right down."

"A second torpedo," Bresson said he learned, "blew the stern off the ship and set off its magazine and depth charges.

"The last one seen to leave the ship was the captain. He slid down the side of the ship and was almost walking on the bottom when it turned over and sank."

[The British Admiralty gave the captain's name as R. S. Lovatt.]

U-Boat Submerged

"After the ship went down the submarine surfaced, cruised around about ten minutes, then submerged, leaving everyone to his fate," Bresson said he was told.

The chief engineer recalled the ship came upon the survivors just after he had finished his Thanksgiving dinner. He said the American freighter's captain, O. H. Olsen, ordered the ship back to the search even after darkness, and managed to find forty more men who had signaled with a flashlight from their raft.

GENERAL, 7 OTHERS MISSING ON FLIGHT

Dargue Believed Headed For Hawaii To Reinforce Its Defenses

Six Days Unaccounted For. Search Is Proceeding In California

DEC 19 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 18—Maj. Gen. Herbert A. Dargue and seven other army officers and men have been missing for six days on a transcontinental flight which, it is believed, was the first leg of a flying trip to reinforce Hawaiian defenses.

General Dargue may have been under orders to take command of the air forces in Hawaii, though there was no official confirmation of this in the War Department's announcement today that his plane had not been heard from since late Friday, when it was about two miles south of Palmdale, California.

It was learned, however, that orders already had been issued at that time to strengthen the high command in Hawaii.

Left Mitchel Field

Lieut. Gen. Delos C. Emmons, commander of the Air Combat Force, who has replaced Lieut. Gen. Walter C. Short as chief of the Hawaiian Department, was then on his way to Honolulu, although announcement of this change was not made until yesterday.

On Friday, General Dargue left Mitchel Field, New York, bound for Hamilton Field, near San Francisco, one of the takeoff points for flights to Hawaii. Among those flying with him were two general staff officers, Col. Charles W. Bundy and Lieut. Col. George W. Ricker, both of Washington. Their plane was a transport which was General Dargue's flying office.

The time of General Dargue's flight and the fact that the War Department announced last night that Brig. Gen. C. L. Tinker was proceeding to Hawaii to relieve Maj. Gen. Frederick L. Martin, led to speculation here that General Dargue was under orders to assume command of the air force in Hawaii.

Long In Air Service

General Dargue had been in the air service virtually since its conception and was commander of one of the two task forces employed in the great war games last summer. He had been a pilot since 1912 and led the army's Pan-American flight in 1926.

Fifty-five years old, comparatively young among United States generals, he was the senior in rank of the four air force commanders on the continent.

In addition to Bundy and Ricker, others in General Dargue's plane were:

Major Hugh F. McCaffery, Mitchel Field.

Capt. J. G. Leavitt, Los Angeles.

First Lieutenant Homer C. Burns, Spokane, Wash.

Staff Sergeant Stephen Hoffman, Charleroi, Pa.

Private Samuel J. Van Hamm, Jr., Twin Falls, Idaho.

General Dargue, whose headquarters are at Mitchel Field, took off from Phoenix, Ariz., at 5.35 P. M., Friday, for Hamilton Field.

Henry L. Stimson, Secretary of War, said the general was on an inspection flight. The route was by way of Blythe, Cal., and the ship was checked there about 6.50 P. M. the same evening. General Dargue requested permission to change his flight plan to permit him to fly by way of Palmdale.

The War Department said the plane had passed safely over the rugged San Bernardino and San Jacinto mountains, between Blythe and Palmdale, and apparently was flying northwestward up the San Joaquin valley to the San Francisco area.

Search Proceeding

Search for the plane is proceeding in the area between Palmdale and Hamilton Field. Presumably General Dargue was flying his command plane, a twenty-one-passenger bi-motored transport that is a duplicate of the latest commercial ship.

General Dargue, who commanded the first air task force that the army put in training maneuvers, directed air operations with the Third Army during the great field exercises in Louisiana in September.

Born in Brooklyn, N. Y., in 1886, he is one of the small group of air force officers affiliated with army aviation virtually from its inception. He first flew in 1912.

DEC 19 1941

Graduated In 1911

Graduated from the United States Military Academy in 1911, Dargue was commissioned in the coast artillery. Assigned to the Philippines, he served there a little more than a year and was assigned to the aviation section, Signal Corps. General Drague, with an old hydroplane which he kept in repair, made numerous flights to locate targets for the coast artillery.

"Possibly, some of the data being used new in repelling Japanese attacks on the Philippines was developed by General Dargue," the War Department said.

With the first aero squadron at Fort Sam Houston, Texas, Dargue served with Pershing's punitive expedition into Mexico.

Before assuming command of the First Air Force, he served in the Panama Canal Zone.

6 Men Reported Killed In Army Bomber Crash

Bakersfield, Cal., Dec. 18 (AP)—The coroner's office reported six men were killed today in the crash of an army bomber at Muroc Dry Lake, in the Mojave Desert, seventy miles southeast of here.

Coroner N. C. Houze was en route to Muroc, an army bombing field. His office said the accident occurred before 7 A. M. Names of the victims were not learned.

Officer Held For Criticism

DEC 19 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Columbus, Ohio, Dec. 18—Maj. Gen. Daniel Van Voorhis today ordered Col. H. C. Kress Muhlenberg, retiring Fifth Corps Area air officer, "confined to his quarters" pending an investigation of recent speeches, area headquarters at Fort Hayes announced.

Colonel Muhlenberg, on terminal leave pending retirement, told the Curtiss Flying Club, Inc., dinner meeting last night that America nearly lost the Hawaiian Islands to Japan because military planes had been given to other countries, authorities said.

Former commander of Hickam Field in Hawaii, Colonel Muhlenberg declared that the American people should not hunt "goats" for the surprise Japanese attack because they themselves were the "goats" for adopting a program which disbursed airplanes "all over the world."

Hitler Seen Preparing to Strike Anew in Effort to Aid Japanese

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

The Japs continue to trail in their race to beat time before Allied re-enforcements can arrive to take a hand in the battle of the Pacific, nothing of a decisive nature having yet occurred in any of the several strategic zones where the Nipponese are attacking—and that is good news at this stage.

However, a little item from the distant Russian front today reminds us forcibly that Hitler undoubtedly is preparing to strike again in some other direction, and that his fresh blow will be calculated to divert as many Allied resources from the Far East as possible. An Associated Press correspondent after a three-day tour of the Moscow front reports that there have been no signs of the Nazi air force. That is ominous.

Any Hitlerian offensive which will put an added strain on Allied air and naval forces will be plum-duff for the Japs. This is especially true of the aerial arm, because the Oriental battle at the moment is turning on control of the air.

So important is this question of air control that a newspaper editor has asked this column to comment on it, on the basis that "It does seem that the first phase of the war will be determined in the air." Rear Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, former commander of the Asiatic fleet, goes even further and declares the United States will win the war of the Pacific through air control.

Air Power Vital Factor.

Certainly air power is a vital factor in the battles now raging about the Philippines, Singapore, Hongkong and lesser air bases. Air re-enforcements or lack of them—especially fighter planes to fend off attacking bombers—may spell the difference between victory and defeat.

Probably the question most often in the public mind relates to our chances of bombing Japanese cities. Remember Pearl Harbor! Interest undoubtedly has been stimulated by the knowledge that the dropping of incendiaries on the flimsily built towns of the island empire would be likely to produce a holocaust. That is one reason why Russia's attitude toward Japan at this juncture of the crisis is highly important. The Bolshevists have a large air force at Vladivostok, only about 600 miles away from Nippon.

I should say that right now our chief striking power must come from aircraft carriers. We have no bases near enough to the Japanese mainland to enable us to do much practical bombing, employing the long distance bombers commonly in use by America and Britain. These ships can fly some 3,000 miles without heavy load, but obviously their serviceable bombing radius is considerably less than half that distance because allowance must be made for adverse winds, maneuvering and the return trip home.

Now if you will glance at your Far Eastern maps you will see that our available bases are outside the battle radius of such machines, so far as concerns Japan proper. We could get to Formosa from Manila—and that would be an exceedingly valuable raid, for Formosa is a strong base—or we could reach the Japs in Hainan or French Indo-China. Tokio or the other great cities of Nippon are too far away.

Of course, you will remind me that the newspapers long have been discussing bombers which are said to do much more than 3,000 miles. Also it's true that emergencies like the present frequently produce quick improvements. However, for the purpose of this article we will stick to the bombers now in general use. If we have anything else in mind for the Japs they will hear of it soon enough—and they may have cause for the concern they have been showing about possible air raids.

The Japanese got Pearl Harbor from aircraft carriers which crossed the Pacific. On the supposition that what a Jap can do a Yankee can do, it would scarcely be surprising to see Tokio or Osaka or some other enemy city bombed from airplane carriers almost any time now.

So much for that. While you and I have been bombing Tokio mentally, news bulletins have come over my printer machine to report further Allied successes in the western theater of war. The British claim that the Axis forces in eastern Libya are in full retreat, and the Russians are said to be continuing to smash back disorganized German troops in the Moscow sector.

Both these operations mean a tremendous strengthening of the general Allied position in the European war.

Mexico Now Mine, Granary For Democracy

DEC 19 1941

Produces Minerals Not Found in U.S.; Fields Will Yield Other Supplies

By L. F. STUNTZ

MEXICO CITY—(Correspondence of Wide World).—Mexico stands now where the United States did before Japan attacked her—as a mine and a granary for the democracies.

But President Avila Camacho's statement that Mexico's job of aiding the United States will be for the present in mines and fields and factories instead of the trenches raises a frank question in the United States: What can Mexico do to help?

Equally frankly, not much in her factories. Shoes from Leon for the army—a big purchase for the U. S. government was reported under negotiation a few weeks ago. Blankets and other wool textiles from Puebla. But Mexico's major industries, aside from these, are beer, processing artificial silk (with Japan, the chief source of supply cut off) and pottery.

Mexico can do more in her fields. Raw wool, leather, meat, rice—Agriculture Minister Marte R. Gomez, a few hours after President Avila Camacho spoke, gave his estimate of what Mexico could send to the United Sttaes every year: 450,000 to 500,000 head of cattle, 34,000 tons of rice, 35,000 tons of coffee, 50,000 tons of tomatoes, 26,000 tons of beans.

And Mexico can do most in her mines—with pre-war prices, the Mexican mineral output in 1938 was worth $100,000,000. Some of these are metals not produced in the United States, others reinforce the United States production. Antimony, vanadium and molybdenum for alloys, copper, lead and zinc, some tin, most of the United States supply of mercury, used in making fuses and percussion detonators for ammunition.

Other mercury supplies are in Spain and the Balkans, with the Axis taking most of the output. Russia has mercury, too, but Japan has none. Her need for it was highlighted recently when an elaborate plot was uncovered for shipping mercury to Japan hidden in drums marked "bronze scrap." Nearly 50 tons of the liquid metal was discovered in one shipment, and Mexico is not sure how much was shipped previously in this manner.

Taking first and second place in metal output, from a standpoint of value, are gold and silver. These are good for Mexico's economy, but they have not great bearing on the conduct of the war.

Even before Mexico broke diplomatic relations with Japan, the supply of metals was pledged to the United States. By treaty, the United States agreed to buy the entire surplus of metals at a fixed price. In return, Mexico agreed to sell none outside the western hemisphere. That was why Japan was unable to import mercury legitimately, though she paid $250 for a 96-pound flask, compared to a fixed price of $170.

But Mexico can do more for the United Sttaes than help clothe, feed and arm her soldiers—she can make sure no Japanese base, even a temporary one, is established on the flank of supply lines between the United States and Hawaii.

Mexico's northern border is 10 miles from the San Diego naval base.

And Mexico's west coast is cut off by the 700-mile lower California peninsula, almost deserted and isolated by sea from quick reinforcements on the mainland. The Peninsula has Magdalena bay, one of the best naval anchorages in the world. Furthermore, Japanese fishermen have operated off it for years.

Also Mexico has Acapulco, Mazatlan, Manzanillo—all good harbors and the latter well known to Japanese ships which have made it a regular port of call.

Mexico recognizes the importance of its long stretch of coast. Even before the president clarified his country's position, military, naval and air reinforcements were on their way to the west coast. All were put under a unified command, and the command was given to former President Lazaro Cardenas.

Mexico's naval force, while not etxensive, will be useful for patrol of the long coast. Mexico has 10 coast-guard cutters, about the size of small sub-chasers, three gunboats and one armed transport. All these will be under Cardenas' command.

DEC 19 1941

Mechanized warfare, if it comes to Mexico, will be new, although the government is motorizing its field artillery as quickly as possible, and three motorized regiments are already equipped. Nearly all Mexican army officers in the higher ranks have had experience in the field, but against other armies of its own type.

The Agrarian reserves, armed peasants whose training has been kept up by regular army officers, were fierce and efficient fighters in the long series of wars, collectively called the revolution, from 1910 to 1920 and they have had refresher courses in the form of three revolutionary attempts between 1920 and 1929. Mexico has been at peace since then.

There is talk in Mexico of a military treaty with the United States permitting North American troops to garrison Acapulco and the other possible bases. Mexico has lost her fear of the United States. The "good neighbor" policy is working [illegible] now.

THEY FOUND BUSINESS SLOWING DOWN AND FOUND IT HARD TO FIT INTO JAPANESE WAYS OF LIFE AFTER LIVING ABROAD. BRITISH FORCE SPLIT FOR FIGHT AT HONGKONG

DEC 20 1941

Garrison Covers Separate Landings Without Hope Of Reinforcement

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Dec. 19 (Andi to A. P.) A Domei dispatch from Tokyo said tonight that the Japanese flag was flying over Hongkong harbor and that Japanese forces were breaking the last British resistance on the island.

Final occupation is only a matter of a short time, it was stated.

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 19—A last-stand garrison of British, Canadian and native troops was believed to be fighting on at separate strong points on Hongkong Island tonight against an overpowering force of Japanese invaders.

There had been no word from the defenders of the century-old crown colony since early morning and officials refused to confirm or deny Japanese reports that it was substantially in Japanese hands.

Reports To Chungking Ended

The British Embassy at Chungking, which has been receiving regular reports from Hongkong, said communications had ceased today. Contact between Hongkong and the Chinese headquarters in Kwangtung also was broken.

The Axis reports themselves were confusing and contradictory. At about the same time, enemy broadcasts claimed:

That Hongkong's capital city of Victoria was occupied by the invaders, the defenders withdrawing to Victoria Hill.

That the fighting on Hongkong Island still "overshadows that in other sectors."

DEC 20 1941

The former broadcast was German, the latter Japanese.

Without Hope Of Retreat

The garrison fought without hope of reinforcement or retreat. Its force had been split and dispersed in several areas to cover separate landings of Japanese troops and the battle, apparently, was going on over a considerable terrain.

"Heavy fighting is going on and the position is serious," one British announcement said.

Later, a spokesman added:

"There isn't a chance for reinforcement of Hongkong, at least for a long time. The garrison has orders to hold on at all costs. Our troops will stay there and take it—and do some dishing out."

Dive Bombers Reported Active

Japanese dispatches heard by radio indicated that enemy dive bombers still were assaulting key points held by the British up to this evening; artillery positions and other military targets on the island were said in these reports to be enveloped in smoke.

Authorities here did not know whether the Japanese had invaded by sea, by air or both Chinese dispatches, however, said the Japanese had an army of 45,000 available for the assault from Kowloon, mainland part of the colony which they took last week.

The heart of the 390-square-mile colony, the capital city of Victoria, is on the island to which the battle now has moved. A million people live here, and there has been no general civilian evacuation.

Governor's Withdrawal Denied

During the day the Colonial office vigorously denied a Japanese report that Sir Mark Young, the Hongkong Governor, had left the colony. It said: "The Colonial office has been in telegraphic touch with the Governor this morning."

One scrap of news from the American consul at Hongkong was relayed from Chungking—that the consulate was intact but that his residence on Victoria Peak had been damaged badly by Japanese shellfire.

British authorities would not comment on the continuing Chinese operations behind the Japanese invaders. Chinese field dispatches said one Chinese force, attacking the Japanese flank along the Canton-Kowloon River, had reached a point ten miles northeast of Shumchun, on the colony's outer mainland border, and was continuing to push southwestward. It also was contended that a Chinese detachment operating against the outer defenses of Japanese-held Canton had destroyed enemy defense works at two points north of the rity.

The size of the Hongkong garrison has, naturally, been a military secret. It was reinforced in November, however, by the first Canadian troops ever to serve in the South Pacific. Mostly infantrymen from Manitoba and Quebec, under Brigadier J. K. Lawson, they are described as seasoned troops.

BRITISH SAID TO HOLD KEY DEFENSE POSTS

DEC 20 1941

But London Admits Being Out of Direct Touch With Its Beleaguered Colony for Hours—Victoria's Fall Rumored.

London, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—Unbroken resistance by Britain's embattled Hongkong garrison was indicated tonight by a Reuters report of a Domei announcement that fighting there and on the Malayan front overshadows any other in the Far East.

This report, unless long-delayed, presumably represented the situation in the British Crown Colony early Saturday morning, Hongkong time. It followed by one hour the British Colonial Office's acknowledgement that communications with Hongkong have been out since early this morning, London time and that it is not known directly, therefore, what—if any—new progress the Japanese have made.

Reuters quoted the Japanese agency as saying there was nothing important to report from the Philippine, Hawaiian or British North Borneo fronts.

British Hold Key Positions.

The British agency previously had announced receipt of a German broadcast of a Tokio dispatch conceding that the British still held key positions on the beleaguered island.

[The German radio declared tonight that Japanese troops have occupied the city of Victoria, the chief settlement of Hongkong. The German broadcaster quoted reports from Tokio.

[All Government and administrative offices of the British Crown Colony are in Victoria, which lies along the extensive Hongkong harbor. The broadcast said that most of the island was in Japanese hands and that British troops had withdrawn to Victoria Hill—"the Peak" which towers almost 2,000 feet high over Victoria and is the site of the Governor's residence.]

The Reuters dispatch quoting the Berlin radio was received shortly after 12 noon, Eastern standard time or 1 A. M., Saturday, Hongkong time. It stated that Japanese dive bombers were continuing to bomb British positions. Artillery emplacements and other military targets on the island were said to be enveloped in great clouds of black smoke.

The garrison had previously been reported holding out at 10:45 P. M. Hongkong time Friday against Japanese who had landed in considerable force on the island.

DEC 20 1941

British Position Grave.

There was heavy fighting and the British position was admittedly grave. Strategically Hongkong island is the most important part of the British Crown Colony of the same name whose naval installations make it second only to Singapore as a bastion of British sea power in the Far East.

The Japanese already have occupied the mainland portion of the colony, operating from long-occupied territory on the South China coast. "Heavy fighting is going on and the position is serious," a British spokesman declared, explaining that the British garrison was comparatively small and had a considerable area to defend.

Earlier this afternoon the Japanese-controlled Saigon radio was heard broadcasting an announcement that the Japanese forces had captured "the fortress of Hongkong." From the wording of the broadcast, however, it was not clear whether it referred to previous Japanese announcements of landings on Hongkong island and seizure of important heights thereon or was reporting new Japanese successes.

Young Flight Denied

Meanwhile, the Berlin radio, heard here, said today that Sir Mark Young, Governor and commander in chief of Hongkong, had escaped from the colony to an unknown destination.

But the Colonial Office today promptly spiked the rumor, saying:

"Not the slightest credence should be attached to the report that Sir Mark Young, Governor of Hongkong, has left the colony. The Colonial Office has been in telegraphic communication with the Governor this morning."

(The British radio said today that Chinese batteries emplaced along the Yellow river had destroyed five Japanese vessels. The craft were not otherwise identified. The broadcast was heard in New York by NBC.)

Capture Called Matter Of Hours

DEC 20 1941

Tokyo, Dec. 19 (Official Radio Recorded by (AP)—Domei today broadcast Japanese reports which declared that British resistance in Hongkong was collapsing and that capture of the crown colony—described as already conquered—was only a matter of

(This broadcast was made fifteen minutes after London heard a vague announcement by the radio at Saigon, French Indo-China, that Japanese forces had captured "the fortress of Hongkong." The Tokyo radio's own statement that resistance was still being encountered indicated that Saigon merely meant Japanese capture of a fortified position.)

Using Planes, Artillery

The Domei broadcast declared that Japanese forces which gained a foothold on Hongkong Island under cover of darkness last night had kept up a driving offensive with air and artillery protection.

Jardine's Hill, an observation post rising 1,420 feet at the center of the island—which has an area of thirty-two square miles—was captured after two and a half hours' fighting, the agency said, and "Japanese guns and planes are furiously battering the enemy."

Domei's report followed the announcement of Imperial Headquarters that landings had been effected after more than a week's bombardment of the British positions from artillery and air bases on the mainland and naval vessels at sea. The Japanese drove in, the communique declared, at 10 P. M. (8 A. M., New York time) on Thursday and, within thirteen hours, had overrun numerous defense positions on Hongkong island.

The communique acknowledged a fierce defense of the naval base and business center, but declared that the invaders were "rapidly carrying out further operations." Hongkong had twice rejected Japanese ultimatums for surrender.

The newspaper Nichi Nichi said that a twelve-hour barrage preceded the night landings at Hongkong. Japanese forces stormed pill-boxes in the darkness and won them in bitter hand-to-hand fighting, it reported. Then flares were set off by the landing parties and re-enforcements moved across the mile-wide strait separating Hongkong from Kowloon, the mainland section of the colony, already held by the Japanese.

Domei acknowledged that ten divisions of Chinese troops were concentrated near Canton, at the rear of the Japanese forces attacking Hongkong, but declared that they seemed unprepared for any strong offensive. Even if they should start attacking, the agency asserted, it was doubted whether they could have any major effectiveness.

[Chungking reports have declared that the forces of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek were making strenuous assaults on the Japanese rear and flanks at points within thirty miles of the Hongkong border.]

Victoria Reported Occupied

BERLIN, Dec. 19 Official radio recorded by (AP)).—Japanese troops have occupied the City of Victoria, the chief settlement of Hongkong, a German broadcast declared tonight, quoting reports from Tokio. All government and administrative offices of the British crown colony are in Victoria, which lies along the extensive Hongkong Harbor.

The broadcast said that most of the island was in Japanese hands and that British troops had withdrawn to Victoria Hill—The Peak—which towers almost 2,000 feet over Victoria and is the site of the governor's residence.

Swedish Freighter Hit In Raid On Hongkong

New York, Dec. 19 (AP)—The new 6,073-ton Swedish motorship freighter Ningpo was hit by bombs from Japanese planes and is aflame in Hongkong harbor, the American Swedish News Exchange said today.

The agency said the vessel had gone into Hongkong for repairs after suffering damage from striking a mine near Singapore. The news was received in a radio dispatch from Hongkong to Stockholm and thence to New York.

Chinese Drive Toward Colony.

Chungking, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—Dispatches from the Hongkong mainland front declared today that Chinese forces assaulting the Japanese flank along the Canton-Kowloon Railroad had reached a point ten miles northeast of Shumchun, on the colony's border.

Another Chinese force was said to have demolished Japanese fortifications at two points north of Canton in operations against the invaders' outer defenses of that occupied city.

[By the Associated Press]

Tokyo, Saturday, Dec. 20 (Official Broadcast Recorded By AP)—A single Japanese army plane has sunk a British warship, believed to be a cruiser, at anchor south of Hongkong Island, scoring two direct hits, a dispatch from a "Japanese army base" said today.

Canada Reports Contact.

Ottawa, Ont., Dec. 19 (A. P.).—Defense Minister Ralston and the Canadian Defense Department today were in contact with Canadian troops fighting under the command of Brigadier J. K. Lawson at Hongkong, it was learned. (A large contingent of Canadian infantry troops arrived at Hongkong November 16 aboard a Canadian transport.)

HONGKONG ONCE PIRATES' NEST

British Have Ruled Crown Colony for 100 Years.

By Associated Press.

Hongkong, Great Britain's mightiest stronghold on the China coast, has been British territory for 100 years. In this century of British rule it was transformed from a pirates' hideaway to one of the world's major seaports, its spacious harbor visited by some 50,000 ships a year.

Some $40,000,000 has been spent in recent years in an effort to make it impregnable. As many as fifty British warships have been based at one time behind the heavily mined entrances to its harbor. Heavy coast-defense guns and anti-aircraft batteries formed part of its network of protection. British and Indian troops were garrisoned there.

Seized during the opium war of 1839-42, Hongkong's earliest prosperity was based on British control of the opium trade. Later it became the chief embarkation port for coolies shipped to the gold fields of California and Australia.

When the Suez Canal was opened in 1869, cutting the distance between China and Europe by thousands of miles, Hongkong's trade was quadrupled and its rise to world importance began. In recent years it was the world's principal center of rice distribution, the main source being French Indo-China and the main market, interior China.

At first only the island of Hongkong came under British rule; subsequently various small portions of the nearby mainland were ceded by China. The Crown Colony of Hongkong consists of 390 square miles, one of the smallest but most important of Britain's far-flung possessions.

About Size of New York City.

Hongkong Island, site of the capital, Victoria, is only slightly larger than New York city. Its total population of approximately 1,000,000 consists mainly of Chinese, and of these nearly 100,000 live afloat on the countless houseboats of the harbor. The normal peacetime population includes approximately 20,000 European and American residents.

Typhoon shelters, consisting of strong breakwaters, have been built in various parts of the harbor to protect lives and shipping from the recurrent danger of typhoons. In 1906 a typhoon claimed some 10,000 lives.

In the early years of Japan's war against China, Hongkong became a refuge for wealthy Chinese and headquarters for various Chinese officials. Huge fortunes were made through diversion of China's imports of war materials and supplies from other ports to Hongkong.

The flow of munitions subsequently was halted under Japanese pressure, and eventually Japanese advances in southern China and French Indo-China virtually paralyzed all phases of Hongkong's commercial life, including the vital traffic in rice.

24 JAP PLANES IN BRIEF RAID ON MANILA BAY

Smoke Comes From Cavite Area, But Details Are Withheld

DEC 20 1941

Tarlac Military Objectives Attacked By Small Plane Force

[By the Associated Press]

Manila, Dec. 19—Twenty-four Japanese planes made a brief, sharp attack on the big United States naval base of Cavite on Manila Bay this afternoon while American fighter planes remained on the ground.

A second wave of nine raiders also flew across the bay less than two hours later, but a communique said there were no bombings reported after that flight.

There was no announcement of damage, or casualties at Cavite. A big column of smoke was seen rising from the Cavite area after the high-flying attack, but all fires were extinguished by sundown.

Alarm Is Brief

Manila had only a brief alarm beginning at 1.30 P. M.

"Military objectives" near Tarlac, sixty miles northwest of Manila, also were officially reported attacked yesterday afternoon by a small force of Japanese raiders.

The Commonwealth Government said the Philippine defense forces held complete dominion over all provinces except for three widely separated beachheads on Luzon Island held by the Japanese landing forces.

Under Intermittent Attack

These were at Aparri in the north, Vigan in the west and Legaspi in the southeast. These points have been under intermittent air attack by United States flyers to keep the Japanese from establishing air bases, or widening their salients.

Ground forces also have been attacking the Japanese invaders, but reports on these fights were meager.

President Manuel Quezon, at a Cabinet meeting tonight, outlined a program of civilian welfare and defense, including construction of air-raid shelters and formation of labor battalions immediately, making use of a $10,000,000 emergency fund granted by President Roosevelt.

The labor battalions will go where the army requires. Needy persons will be employed. Reliable sources said Quezon also soon would authorize detention without judicial process of persons caught looting.

Philippine President Asserts "Supplies Must Be Forthcoming" From America

Terms Islands "Citadel Of Liberty," To Be Defended To The End Against Japs

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 19—President Manuel Quezon, of the Philippine Commonwealth, declared tonight that materials, equipment and supplies were indispensable to the defenders of America's island protectorate and "must be forthcoming from the United States."

Quezon, in a broadcast made at 9.45 A. M. Saturday, Manila time, described the Philippines as "the citadel of liberty," to be defended to the end.

"Time is of essential importance for any assistance that will come from the United States," he said.

Says He's Sure Of Assistance

"I am sure that the Government of the United States is fully aware of the situation and will give us much assistance without delay."

The faith of the Philippine natives in the United States, he said, "remains unshaken in this darkest hour of our history. We know that this war is being daged in order to preserve democracy and to secure for all peoples the essential freedoms proclaimed by President Roosevelt—the freedom of thought and expression and relizion and the freedom from what and the freedom from fear."

Quezon said, "We have complete full faith and confidence in the courage and leadership of Lieut. Gen Douglas MacArthur. We know he is responsible for the success of our national defense program, and if we are now capable of resisting the aggression it is due in large measure to his vision and ability."

Saw 17 Japanese Planes

Discussing the day of invasion, Quezon said, "I went out to the street and saw, up in the sky, seventeen planes in formation. I did not know they were Japanese planes until I heard the explosion of bombs falling around my house, shaking it as though it were an earthquake."

Quezon said the Japanese were flooding the islands with propaganda in an effort to convince the Philippine people "that this is not a war between the Philippines and Japan but a war between Japan and the United States."

"They seek to convince the Filipinos through numerous methods that the objective of Japan is to liberate, not to subjegate them," he said. "The enemy has misplaced the loyalty of the Filipinos to the United States. This propaganda is having no effect on our countrymen because they are convinced that their duty demands that they fight on the side of the United States."

Manila Issues Report

Manila, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—Two waves of Japanese bombers, flying at 30,000 feet, flew over the vital naval base at Cavite, on Manila Bay, in less than two hours today in short, quick thrusts, and the first left a gigantic column of smoke billowing in the sky.

A communique issued by the United States Army, Far Eastern Command, said that no reports of bombing by the second wave of planes had been received at 4:20 P. M. (2:20 A. M., New York time), nearly three hours after the raiders had flown over the Manila area.

The Far Eastern Command also announced that "military objectives" in the vicinity of Tarlac province, northwest of Manila, on Luzon Island, were bombed by a small number of Japanese planes yesterday afternoon.

No American aircraft took to the air when the high-flying planes roared over in hit-and-run tactics. The Japanese maintained an unbroken formation and flew straight over the target.

This afternoon's communique said that twenty-four planes were in the first group. Nine were in the second group, which caused an alarm in Manila about 1:30 P. M. The city was under alarm for thirty minutes, but the attack itself lasted only a few minutes before the Japanese roared away.

DEC 20 1941

About an hour before the alarm the Far Eastern Command announced that "there has been no enemy activity this morning."

Second Raid Reported.

A damaging raid on another Philippine island was officially reported earlier, while the Philippine Commonwealth Department of the Interior announced that it held complete dominion over all provinces except for three scattered Japanese beachheads on Luzon Island.

The Far Eastern Command announced that more than thirty Japanese planes took part yesterday afternoon in a raid on Iloilo City, an important port about 310 miles south of Manila, on Panay Island. This communique said that civilian casualties and property damage were reported from the city, which has numerous industries and a population of 40,000. The raid lasted thirty minutes.

Panay Island thus was the fourth in the archipelago to be raided by the Japanese. They also have bombed the key island, Luzon; the airport at Davao, on Mindinao Island, and the central island of Cebu, southeast of Panay.

Meanwhile, the Japanese apparently were being effectively confined to the Vigan, Aparri and Legaspi areas of Luzon.

At 9:15 A. M. today the Commonwealth Department of the Interior said it was in control of all provinces except for the three invaded sectors of Luzon; that peace and order were established throughout the islands, and that Filipino morale was high. The announcement indicated every civilian was helping defend the islands. It said the people were co-operating fully against subversive elements and fifth columnists.

The department told how thoroughly the Japanese had prepared for invasion, sending agents as business men to important points. These Japanese showed their true colors when the invaders appeared, it was said.

The Japanese are attempting to set up local puppet governments and to circulate their own money in the areas they have occupied, news dispatches said.

Americans Turn Up.

Quoting persons who escaped from those areas, these advices said Japanese in such areas were appearing as army officers or civilian officials. They were said to have put on uniforms promptly when warships hove to off the coasts.

The Philippine constabulary and other soldiers battled furiously against the Japanese at every point, but they were reported outnumbered at Aparri, Vigan and Legaspi. Hundreds of Filipinos who fled Manila at the outbreak of the war to seek refuge with relatives in rural sections of northern Luzon were returning to the city because of the Japanese landings at Vigan and Aparri.

Twelve Americans also arrived after a 150-mile hitch-hiking trip across mountains from the mining town of Jose Panganiban, in Camarines Norte Province, southeast of Manila. They left their homes after receiving news of Japanese landings farther south (apparently the landing at Legaspi, 250 miles southeast of Manila).

Meanwhile, today the Far East Command announced that Gen. Basilio J. Valdes and the entire headquarters of the Philippine Army were inducted into the services of the United States this morning, including officers and enlisted men of the general and special staff. Col. Richard J. Marshall, deputy chief of staff of the United States Army Forces in the Far East, was the inducting officer, the communique added.

The Manila Labor Council pledged full support to the United States and the commonwealth governments in forming labor battalions for army or civilian use. The workers declared they were willing and ready to dig trenches, build air raid shelters, manufacture munitions, gas masks, sand bags, medical supplies and all other necessary articles for prosecution of the war.

Manila, Saturday, Dec. 20 (AP)—Like the sideshow magician, the Japanese fifth columnists are trying to do it with mirrors.

Army men returning from central Luzon said a sentry at a command headquarters spied a bright object in a tree.

Investigation disclosed that the camouflaged post was encircled with tree-top mirrors which made it a bull's-eye for bombers.

Manila, Dec. 19—Scenes at an American airport in the Philippines where the dust from a dozen Japanese air bombs still is settling after a quick raid:

Filipino pilots remove their tin hats, brush the dirt from their uniforms, pour you a glass of ginger ale, and then display a magazine article entitled "Japan's Bush League Air Force."

"Hell," says one, "if they're bush league I am in no hurry to see big-timers."

Flat On Their Faces

All had been flat on their faces except the anti-aircraft gunners during the brief raid when several Japanese planes dived to about 2,000 feet with machine guns blazing.

As they zoomed away, the bombers came over at 30,000 feet and dropped twelve bombs. None hit the field, hangars, or other military objectives. But over on one side soldiers are extinguishing a small fire in the cockpit of one plane which already was partly wrecked in a raid two weeks ago.

Wind Makes Bombs Miss

A shiny sedan drives up to the communications center where an American colonel sits. A Filipino major, graduate of West Point and commander of this base, gets out.

"We are lucky today, sir," he says, "only minor damage, and no air force personnel hit. The Japs had a line all right, but a high wind blew the bombs off their marks.

"They sneaked in on us, and we didn't have a chance to get into the air."

Pseudo-Stuka Plane

The colonel says, "They sprang a new one in this raid—a pseudo-Stuka plane. But they seem to be slow with non-refractable gear, unable to do better than 200 miles an hour."

Then he turned to the pilots:

"Who saw those dive bombers just now?" he asks.

Most of the pilots sheepishly confess, "I had my nose in the dirt."

"That's the place for your nose when you're caught short," the colonel reassured them.

Fragmentation Bombs

Then he displays a jazzed razor sharp piece of metal.

"The Japs are using fragmentation bombs," he says. "They explode about 50 feet from the ground and umbrella down. I saw two infantrymen killed because they crouched instead of falling flat."

A small fighter side-slips in to a quick landing and a young, wiry Filipino clambers out to report on a successful reconnaissance mission.

"Speedy Joe" Reports

Hedge-hopping 200 miles to locate enemy troops somewhere in Luzon, he says:

"I saw a number of Japs standing in a school yard. They scattered like chickens."

The pilot is known as "Speedy Joe," a name he picked up at Randolph Field, Texas, because he never could get a plane fast enough to suit him.

"Just give me a ship that will go high enough to bust up those bomber formations," he says. The others agree with him, since this Filipino squadron is flying outmoded planes.

Three Planes To Its Credit

Even so, the squadron has three Japanese planes to its credit, but the pilots say "that's just luck . . . we have to get above them and dive on them."

As you leave "Speedy Joe" sings out:

"I am mad, and a mad Filipino can match any ten Japs; but I hope I live long enough to fly one of those new speedy jobs."

AMERICAN WOMAN DEAD IN HONGKONG

Mrs. Florence Webb Victim of Shrapnel Fire.

DEC 20 1941

Chungking, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—Word was received here today of the first American casualty in the Japanese attack on Hongkong—Mrs. Florence Webb of Shanghai, killed by shrapnel. The United States embassy here was advised of her death.

Where she came from in the United States was not learned. Presumably she had lived for some time at Shanghai before moving to the British Crown Colony.

The embassy said that it had received a radio message from the Consul-General in Hongkong stating that the consulate was intact, but that his residence on Victoria Peak was damaged badly by shellfire.

DEC 20 1941

Joins New British Line Along River 300 Miles Above Fortress

Enemy, Suffering Heavily, Begins Thrusts At Tin Center

[By the Associated Press]

Singapore, Dec. 19—Alfred Duff Cooper, in his first broadcast since being named Resident Minister here for Far Eastern Affairs, today told Britons in the Orient bluntly that "the news is grave tonight."

[By the Associated Press]

Singapore, Dec. 19—The British have beaten the Japanese offensive in northwestern Malaya down to a substantial halt and the Imperial garrison of the outflanked island settlement of Penang off the west coast has been safely withdrawn to aid in the continued defense of the distant approaches to Singapore.

This was the situation tonight as described in official British announcements and it thus appeared that the fall of Penang—inevitable under the circumstances—had been far from a total loss.

The Exchange Telegraph in London reported the following communique was issued at Singapore Saturday morning: "The situation remains quiet on both fronts. Air force reconnaissance was carried out over enemy territory and the China Sea."

Penang's military strength remained intact, perhaps to aid in strengthening the new British line along the Krian river some 300 miles north of Singapore. Only two Europeans were left on the island—British physicians staying behind to practice under any hazard their profession.

Military Equipment Saved

Not only was British military personnel brought out, it was stated, but all of Penang's military equipment likewise was salvaged.

For twenty-four hours up until this morning the invaders had lain panting in the difficult terrain of the mainland—marshy along the west coast of the peninsula and harsh and rugged with mountains further inland. They apparently were trying to deal with their heavy casualties.

Then, they began new thrusts against strong and apparently unyielding British opposition as the probable preliminaries to an effort to take the town of Ipoh, the Malayan tin center, which is astride the main railway running down to Singapore and is flanked by mountains.

Dutch Action Reported

Strong Dutch action against Japanese forces seeking to infiltrate into British North Borneo, strategically situated to the east of the Malay Peninsula in the Singapore-Philippines-Dutch East Indies communications and defensive area, meanwhile were reported.

The East Indies command announced during the day that Dutch bombers had assaulted the invader in Sarawak, to continue bombing attacks which previously had been successfully concentrated off shore against Japanese sea power. This earlier action had set a Japanese cruiser aflame.

The Aneta news agency disclosed about the same time that Dutch army and naval forces had raided a Japanese settlement in North Borneo, interning a large number of Japanese. This, too, was a continued operation, it having been earlier reported that Dutch naval forces had liquidated a potential Japanese colony of fifth columnists at Sandakan.

DEC 20 1941

Scores Die In Raid

Dutch West Borneo was under enemy air attack, however, a communique announcing that scores of persons, including many school children, had been killed and many more injured in a Japanese raid on the town of Pontianak.

British air activity likewise was heavy, particularly in reconnaissance over the Timor Sea, between the island of Timor and Australia.

The Portuguese half of the island itself was under strong Allied control, Dutch and Australian forces having moved in yesterday, and Dutch dispatches reported that all Japanese subjects had been interned.

Jap Drive at Standstill in Malaya, British Claim

By C. YATES McDANIEL

SINGAPORE, Dec. 19 (AP)—The Japanese drive in northern Malaya has been battered to a standstill, the British announced today, but the rich island settlement of Penang, outflanked by the Japanese on the mainland, has been abandoned by its British defenders.

Presumably the withdrawal of the garrison from Penang, leaving its 108 square miles and mixed population of 240,000 to Japanese domination, was undertaken while the Japanese were thrusting their spearhead about 100 miles into northwestern Malaya.

30.24 - 13643

The garrison—of unsuspected strength—was removed without loss to another zone of defense, possibly the Krian River line, where the British hope to halt the Japanese for good, some 300 miles from Singapore.

DEC 20 1941

All equipment also was withdrawn and the island now is completely deserted by Europeans with the exception of two British doctors who remained behind to attend wounded from recent air raids.

This afternoon's communique of the combined British commands reported continued opposition to Japanese thrusts in northern Malaya and said that the R. A. F. had carried out reconnaissance flights over "enemy territory" in the Timor Sea, between the island of Timor and Australia.

The Portuguese half of Timor—where the Japanese had an air station—was occupied yesterday by Dutch and Australian forces.

An earlier communique said that the Japanese in Malaya seemed to have been stopped by sheer exhaustion and heavy casualties.

The communique said that the night was quiet all along the northern Malayan front and that the Japanese had been inactive for 24 hours.

But well-informed sources here expected a new thrust from the northwest across the Krian River, when the Japanese have rested and reinforced their spearhead, this probably to be paralleled by a push from Grik—18 miles within the border with Thailand.

The chief immediate objective of the Japanese probably is Ipoh, the heart of Malaya's tin industry, about 300 airline miles northwest of Singapore, on the main railway. Japanese planes were active over the area yesterday.

There were radio reports that Rangoon, capital of British Burma, was bombed again this afternoon and a Rangoon communique, apparently issued earlier, said that British air patrol activity had increased in the last 24 hours.

Initial Japanese landings in Sarawak, at Miri and Brunei, and possibly a third, near Lubong Point, appear to have been small-scale operations, presumably designed mainly to gain oil fields. Some oil installations were destroyed ahead of the invaders.

The Japanese, however, may attempt to extend occupation of North Borneo by seizing airfields and by occupying Labuan—island harbor off the northwestern Sarawak coast. There was no confirmation of a report that Japanese had landed at Sandakan, across the northern part of Borneo from Labuan island.

The Dutch reported last Saturday that a naval force had liquidated a Japanese colony at Sandakan which might have turned into a Fifth Column.

The British Empire forces also found in the Malayan respite a chance to solidify their Krian River line in anticipation of the next Japanese move.

There was a marked lack of hostile activity in the past 24 hours, a communique said, and this was in line with other British declarations that the invasion had been slowed despite the isolation of Penang and the mainland province of Wellesley from the remainder of the peninsula.

The British, holding a defense line 300 air miles north of the vital Singapore Naval Base, said that the invaders' penetration of 100 miles in 11 days of jungle fighting had been made with a fanatical disregard for heavy casualties.

The loss of Penang—the territory's second city—places in Japanese hands an island base 15 miles long and five miles broad, off the northwest coast, which is strategically important to the defense of north Malaya.

The invaders—achieving their gains by a series of thrusts by small units—using light tanks, have yet to break the defense in a major battle, the British asserted.

Japanese bombing has slackened markedly. Neither side has had much air support for the jungle fighting, since movements of troops and equipment are almost invisible from above.

LONDON, Dec. 19 (AP).—The British garrison at Penang, island state of British Malaya off the northwestern fighting zone, has been evacuated "quite safely," it was announced today.

Penang had been outflanked by the Japanese thrust through Kedah Province, the mainland just opposite the island.

Now, presumably, the Japanese will take over Penang, if they have not done so already.

A military commentator said nothing was known here of any civilian evacuation of the island. Probably that was not attempted, he added.

Although the announcement failed to specify when the garrison was removed, it was believed that the troops probably left before the British retired from Kedah Province to the Krian River line.

The size of the Penang garrison was not made public, nor could it be learned whether the men went to Singapore or to the Krian River front.

Dutch Bombers Blast Jap Troops in North Borneo

BATAVIA, Dutch East Indies, Dec. 19 (AP)—Dutch bombing planes have attacked the Japanese forces which have landed in northern Borneo, the Dutch East Indies command announced today.

DEC 20 1941

This was an assault on Japanese forces at Miri or at two nearby points in Sarawak, where landings have been reported. Sarawak is the British-protected domain of the "White Rajah," Sir Charles Vyner Brooke. All North Borneo is British Empire territory.

It was off Miri on Wednesday that Dutch naval planes attacked a concentration of Japanese warships and transports, setting fire to a cruiser. Now the Dutch airmen have carried the attack ashore.

The Dutch communique, however, said that owing to bad weather results of the bombing could not be ascertained.

Another communiqué, quoted by the Aneta news agency, said that scores of persons, including many school children, were killed today in a Japanese air raid on the city of Pontianak, in the West Division of Netherland Borneo.

The Netherlands Indies Command also announced that "a joint action by the Army and Navy on a Japanese settlement in North Borneo resulted in the internment of a rather large number of Japanese."

This was the second time action against a Japanese settlement on the British North Borneo coast had been announced, the previous incident having been the liquidation of a Japanese colony of potential fifth columnists at Sandakan.

Japanese were reported to have filtered into the Portuguese part of the island since the October 14 opening of the Japanese air line between Timor and Japanese-mandated Palau under a Portuguese concession. A Japanese vice-consul arrived recently with a staff of thirty.

Occupation Described.

The occupation of the Portuguese territory began at daybreak yesterday when Netherlands and Australian troops under command of a Dutch Army officer proceeded to Dilli, the Portuguese Timor capital, covered by naval forces and planes. Negotiators were sent in advance to inform the Governor of the action. The Portuguese official protested but did not resist. A guard of honor was placed in front of the Governor's palace and Portuguese officials were informed that protection of the colony would end as soon as the danger from Japan is eliminated.

Berlin, Dec. 19 (Official Broadcast recorded by A. An official German radio broadcast, today the following dispatch from Tokio

"Four hundred United States citizens and 300 British were entirely free in Japan and only 270 nationals of those two Powers had been restricted in their movements, a Japanese spokesman said today, thus contradicting reports from foreign sources tending to convey a false impression concerning the treatment of enemy nationals in Japan.

"Members of the diplomatic staff of enemy countries are resident in Embassy Legation buildings, where they are looked after by officials of the Japanese Foreign Ministry specially appointed for the purpose. All wishes of enemy nationals are, as far as possible, fulfilled by Japanese authorities.

"United States missionaries have asked their Government to be informed that they are well treated and able to continue their missionary activities."

Portugal Protests Allied Occupation Of Far East Isle

Premier Says Anzacs And Dutch Entered While Discussing Defense

(By The Associated Press)

Lisbon, Dec. 19—Australian and Dutch troops marched into Portuguese Timor when "there was no reason to consider that an attack by the Japanese was probable," and while Portugal was discussing plans with Britain for the island's defense, Premier Antonio de Oliveira Salazar told Parliament today.

"The situation is not settled yet," he said. "Discussions still are going on. I shall disclose later the further developments."

Crowds jammed the streets outside Parliament in expectation that Salazar might announce a change in foreign policy, but the Premier gave no such indication.

He asserted that Portugal, as a non-belligerent ally, had agreed to study co-operation with Britain in defending Timor, which is 450 miles off the Australian Coast, and that the suggestions for such collaboration had been made as long ago as Nov. 4.

Preparations also had been made to send Portuguese reinforcements to Timor, Salazar said.

"We also would have accepted the co-operation of Dutch troops under the command of the British General Staff—but exclusively in case of attack," he announced.

Portugal has been walking the tight-rope of neutrality ever since the war began although she is one of Britain's oldest traditional Allies.

Germany and Italy obviously were exerting pressure on her, and the Italian newspaper Il Lavoro Fascista uttered a renewed threat today when it declared:

"Portugal must not forget that strong German forces stand on the Pyrenees and that tension is rising in the area of the Atlantic."

The reference to the Atlantic meant the Azores and the Cape Verde Islands, which are coveted by the Axis in the sea fight against the Allies. Portugal has been reinforcing the islands steadily, and evinced great concern when President Roosevelt not long ago mentioned the Azores as a likely target for another Axis seizure.

"Repercussions" Threatened

The Italian Giornale d'Italia also warned that if Portugal accepted the occupation of Timor, it "could have repercussions. . . ."

Berlin propaganda stations also were busy all day broadcasting that Timor's occupation was "an arbitrary act without parallel in this war," adding that the cases of Holland, Norway, Belgium, Greece and Yugoslavia were different.

These Axis-occupied lands "violated neutrality," the Berlin radio said.

Spain, although she today declared her "non-belligerency" in the Pacific war, has never disguised her sympathies for the Axis, and some of her picked troops known as the "blue division" are fighting beside German and Italian troops in Russia.

ITALIAN PAPER WARNS LISBON

Axis Fears Seizure of Azores and Cape Verde Isles for Naval Bases.

Lisbon, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—Premier Antonio de Oliveira Salazar told his Parliament and people today that Australian and Dutch troops had invaded Portuguese Timor without the threat of a Japanese attack and while mutual defense discussions were under way. Though this speech had been forecast as one of Premier Salazar's most important statements, he gave no hint of a drastic change in Portuguese policy as a result of the occupation.

"The situation is not settled yet," he said, "and discussions still are going on. I shall disclose later the further developments."

[A. B. B. C. broadcast quoted the Italian newspaper Il Lavoro Fascista today as warning Portugal that she "must not forget that strong German forces stand on the Pyrenees and that tension is rising in the area of the Atlantic Ocean." The broadcast was heard here by C. B. S.]

Australian and Dutch forces have announced occupation of the Portuguese part of the East Indian island to forestall any Japanese action in Timor. Premier Salazar said that the first suggestions for collaboration on defense were made on November 4.

Terms of Alliance.

"Portugal agreed to study co-operation with British troops in defense of Timor in case it was attacked and according to the terms of the (British) alliance," he told the National Assembly, which had been called into extraordinary session to hear his statement. "We would also have accepted the co-operation of Dutch troops under the command of the British General Staff, but exclusively in case of attack."

DEC 20 1941

The Premier asserted that "there was no reason to consider that an attack by the Japanese was probable," and that while conversations were in progress, Australian and Netherlands troops invaded the territory of Portugal—an ally of Britain. Preparations to re-enforce Timor with Portuguese troops were being made at the time of the occupation, he said.

His speech was interrupted several times by cheers of "Long live Portugal," and crowds outside Parliament applauded Premier Salazar as he left.

Before Premier Salazar spoke, the Portuguese radio had announced every fifteen minutes throughout the day that the statement would be of "highest transcendency and importance." It kept the nation keyed up with reminders that the whole session of the Assembly would be broadcast and that loudspeakers had been set up in public places everywhere. Admiral Joao de Azevedo Coutinho, Portuguese monarchist leader, told his followers that they must unhesitatingly back the Government, no matter where its policies may lead.

Axis Expresses Azores Concern

DEC 20 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 19—Newspapers of both Germany and Italy expressed concern today lest anti-Axis occupation of the Azores and Cape Verde Islands follow the seizure of Portuguese Timor in the South Pacific.

(The Netherlands Government announced yesterday that the Portuguese half of Timor had been occupied by Allied troops to counteract Japanese submarine and other activities.)

"Attitude Awaited"

The Berlin correspondent of the Swiss newspaper, La Suisse, said German authorities were anxiously awaiting Portugal's attitude on the Timor move for its bearing on the situation of the Atlantic islands.

The Lisbon correspondent of Il Lavora Fascista asserted rumors were circulating in Lisbon that Britain twice in recent weeks had demanded the Azores of Portugal.

(Portugal, which has declared its intention to defend Portuguese positions in the Atlantic by force if necessary, has sent thousands of troops to the Azores and the Cape Verdes in recent months. Last summer the United States gave Portugal assurances regarding her Atlantic possessions.)

The Italian newspaper Giornale d'Italia, commenting today on the Australian and Dutch occupation of Portuguese Timor, said that "resistance to the Anglo-Saxon invasion demands that the Lisbon Government revise its position of neutrality."

"Portugal is unable to admit a fait accompli," the newspaper declared, "without giving birth to suspicion of an entente with British war policy. y such an attitude Portugal would invite other similar initiatives and create a precedent which could have repercussions in its vast complex colonial system."

SPAIN DEFINES WAR ATTITUDE

Declares Non-belligerency in Pacific Struggle.

DEC 20 1941

Madrid, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—The Spanish Government announced today that Spain was a non-belligerent in the Pacific war between Japan and the United States, Great Britain and other Powers.

A brief decree, signed by Generalissimo Francisco Franco and his Foreign Minister, Gen. Ramon Serrano Suner, said: "In view of the extension of the present conflagration through the state of war which exists between Japan and the United States of North America, and the participation in the same of other European and Hispan American nations, Spain maintains, as in the earlier phase of the conflict, her position of non belligerency."

The decree, dated yesterday, first appeared in today's Official Bulletin.

Within the past twenty-four hours, Gen. Serrano Suner talked with both the British Ambassador, Sir Samuel Hoare, and the German Ambassador, Eberhard von Stohrer. The Spanish Government earlier had been informed officially by the American Ambassador, Alexander W. Weddell, of the American declarations of war against Japan and against the Axis.

Spain's non-belligerency, in the light of that word's past meaning toward the war in Europe, apparently will be along these lines:

The controlled Spanish press will continue to cheer for the Axis—(Spain adheres to the anti Comintern pact, but is not a signatory of the three-Power treaty) —while the Government still maintains diplomatic relations with the United States and Britain and tries to continue friendly intercourse with Latin America.

From a material viewpoint, Spanish and American ships may trade, but Spain's "Blue Legion" will continue to fight against Russia and Spanish wol go to Germany under cont

Franco's Government has ba its foreign policy on two cardina points since the war began in 1939 — friendship for Germany and Italy, his supporters in the Spanish civil war, and a Pan-Hispanic program designed to strengthen the ties between Spain and Latin America.

Post of Resident Minister Created for Duff Cooper

LONDON, Dec. 19 (AP)—Alfred Duff Cooper, former Minister of Information, has been appointed Resident Minister for Far Eastern Affairs with Cabinet rank at Singapore, where he will preside over a war council, an official spokesman said today.

It was said he would relieve the commanders of the forces there of various "extraneous responsibilities."

Cooper has been representing the British Cabinet in the Far East since September.

SINGAPORE, Dec. 19 (AP)—Alfred Duff Cooper, in his first broadcast since being named resident minister here for Far Eastern affairs, told Britons in the Orient bluntly that "the news is grave tonight."

Speaking of the British evacuation of Penang, he said:

"Let us not blind ourselves to the gravity of the situation or the seriousness of the task that awaits us.

"Let us frankly admit that so far the Japanese have been extremely successful."

Five Japanese Ships Sunk by Chinese, Says London

NEW YORK, Dec. 19 (AP)—The British radio said today that Chinese batteries emplaced along the Yellow River had destroyed five Japanese vessels. The craft were not otherwise identified. The broadcast was heard by N. B. C.

Berlin, Dec. 19 (Official Broadcast recorded by A. P.).—A dispatch from Tokio said today that Foreign Minister Shigenori Togo has sent messages to Argentina, Brazil, Chile and Peru in which he undertook to refute accusations by the United States and Great Britain that Japan had any intentions against South America.

Jap News Given First Over German Ra

New York, Dec. 19—(AP)—Radio monitors noted today that Berlin apparently now considers Japanese news better than German reports.

NBC listeners said that for the first time the Japanese high command communique was read before the German communigue on the Berlin radio.

European news was given only three minutes out of the 15 minute morning broadcast.

Japanese Assert 'China' Is a Disgraceful Name

'Middle Kingdom' Suggested by Language Society

TOKIO, Dec. 19 (Official broadcast recorded by (AP).—The term "China" will be deleted from the Japanese language if the Society for Middle Kingdom Good Will has its way, Domei, Japanese official news agency, said in a broadcast today.

Leaders of the society have visited the Foreign, Education and six other ministries to present their contention that the name "China" should be replaced by "Middle Kingdom."

The current Japanese word for China, they said, "is derived from the Anglo-American term for chinaware, and it is truly disgraceful that such a great nation should be called by such a name."

[Actually, the English word "China" is believed to be an Occidental corruption of the name of the Chin dynasty, which ruled in the third century B. C, and whose outstanding member built the Great Wall. It is true that the current Japanese word for China—Shina pronounced shee-nah—is a Japanese adaptation of the English word. Generations of Chinese have called their country the Middle Kingdom—Chung-kuo—and the Japanese proposal to change the name of China is an apparent gesture seeking Chinese sympathy.]

Wake Island Again Raided By Bomber

Two Fliers Given D.S.C For Battle Of Hawaii Heroism

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP) — Wake Island's little garrison of United States Marines still clung tenaciously to their scarred and battered atoll tonight after beating off two more Japanese onslaughts.

This good news, with word of an intensified enemy air attack upon the Philippines — its results still unannounced—summarized the day's operations in American-held territory, as revealed in the communiques of the army and navy.

It was supplemented, however, by an announcement in Manila, that defending forces were in complete command of the situation there, except for three small areas on which the Japs established landing parties very early in the war. So far as is known, however, they have been beaten back in every attempt to extend their positions.

The War Department's evening communique had this reference to the Philippines: "Army patrols increased their ground operations."

Thus, it seemed evident to a capital busy with the legislative and administrative business of running a war, that American forces were doing every bit and more than could be expected of them.

With one eye on the military situation, Washington simultaneously watched Congress ratify a compromise agreement on the question of draft ages.

For heroism in the Hawaiian theater, the war communique announced awards of the distinguished service cross to Lieut. George S. Welch, Wilmington, Del., and Kenneth M. Taylor, Hominy, Okla. Welch was credited with bagging four Japanese aeroplanes and Taylor two in air battles over the island of Oahu Dec. 7, 1941.

From informed quarters came word that a conference of the powers fighting the Axis would be held soon in Washington, to work out a common strategy and co-ordinated distribution of war materials.

President Roosevelt declined to discuss this prospect at his regular Friday press conference, but did say that conferences between the anti-Axis nations had been in progress for a long time—weeks at least.

The House passed and sent on to the White House an appropriation bill carrying $512,000,000 for a broad extension of defense housing and to provide food reserves for the civilian population of Hawaii.

Few chapters of the present war have so electrified the nation as the picture of the stubborn little Marine garrison at Wake unconquerably fighting off a series of enemy attacks, and even sinking enemy warships off their shores.

The Navy in telling of developments there has given few details. Communication with the island has apparently been difficult and sporadic. But the country has been quick to perceive what has been going on.

Today's announcement was typically terse but revealing:

"There have been two additional air attacks by the enemy on Wake Island," the Navy said. "The first occurred on the night of the 17th-18th and was comparatively light. The second was in greater force, and occurred in the forenoon of the 19th. Wake Island continues to counter these blows."

Otherwise, the Navy reported, there were "no new developments" to report.

The Army meanwhile said:

"There was heavy bombing over Manila and over the city of Iloilo on the Island of Panay, south of Luzon (in the Philippines). There is nothing to report

2 U. S. Flyers Given D. S. C.'s For Heroism At Pearl Harbor

Welch And Taylor Are Honored By War Department For Battling Japanese Planes At Hawaii

DEC 20 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 19—Awards of the Distinguished Service Cross were announced by the War Department today to Second Lieutenants George S. Welch and Kenneth M. Taylor, of the Air Corps, for extraordinary heroism in action during the Japanese attack on Hawaii.

The awards were the first of a number to be given for heroism in Hawaii and the Philippines. Others will be made soon in accord with a policy of awarding decorations for gallantry in action as promptly as possible.

Welch, 23, a native of Wilmington, Del., was credited with destroying four Japanese planes.

Taylor, 22, of Hominy, Okla., was credited with two.

The two flyers, piloting pursuit ships, attacked an enemy formation of approximately twelve planes, said a citation. Each shot down two enemy planes and, returning to the air after refueling and loading ammunition, both attacked again. Welch accounted for two more enemy planes in the second attack.

"Both officers showed great initiative, presence of mind and coolness under fire against overwhelming odds."

Roosevelt Reveals Weeks Of Conferences With Allies

DEC 20 1941

Started Long Time Back, He Says at Press Meeting—Silent on Parley of Joint Command.

30,24 - 13645

Washington, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—President Roosevelt asserted today that conferences had been in progress for a long time—for weeks at least—among the allies combatting the Axis.

DEC 20 1941

Asked about an appointment he had Wednesday with the Australian Minister, the President replied, without elaboration, that they had discussed common defense in a common war.

The President would not discuss at his press conference, however, the possibility of an inter-allied command meeting in Washington to work out a common strategy for the conduct of hostilities.

It was learned authoritatively before Mr. Roosevelt met with the press that the United States, Great Britain and Russia were expected to take leading parts in such a meeting soon.

Diplomatic discussions, already under way, are being speeded because of the rush of world events, and it was considered probable that at least preliminary sessions could be held next month.

The information obtained here tied in with reports from London that military and political experts of the nations arrayed against the Axis were discussing the creation of a supreme war council. One London spokesman asserted that announcements of great importance were expected soon. Clement R. Atlee, British Lord Privy Seal, told the House of Commons that discussions were under way for concerting Allied war plans.

Caribbean Flank Safe.

Even before the plan for the anti-Axis conference became known, the United States got the cheering news that its Caribbean flank had been made more secure against potential attack.

It was learned authoritatively here an agreement had been reached with officials of the Vichy French Government in Martinique under which the neutral status of that and other French possessions in the Western Hemisphere will remain unchanged. Likewise neutralized were French naval vessels on this side of the Atlantic. The French naval units at Martinique include an aircraft carrier and a cruiser.

The accord reportedly was worked out by United States Rear Admiral Frederick J. Horne, who flew to Martinique, and Admiral Georges Robert, French proconsul for Western Hemisphere colonies. The United States, it was learned, will continue to permit trade with the French possessions in the Caribbean; in turn, the French pledged they would take no action detrimental to this nation's interests.

All Axis Foes Lined Up.

The State Department has made no announcement of the impending anti-Axis conference, and officials today declined any speculation concerning the nations which will participate or the questions to be discussed.

China has valiantly resisted Japanese aggression for more than four years, and the Netherlands and the British dominions now are defending strategic outposts in the South Pacific.

The date for the conference has not been set, but in view of the urgency of the situation it is expected that preliminary sessions will be held in January.

The spokesmen for the anti-Axis nations, it was learned, will thoroughly explore major questions of policy involving co-ordination of their military, economic and political strength to provide the most powerful striking power against the Axis in whatever war theater it would be most effective.

Says Understanding Exists.

Maxim Litvinoff, the Soviet's newly arrived Ambassador, hinted at the general strategy of the anti-Axis Powers when he declared that around the world there were now "separate sectors of one great battlefield."

Mr. Litvinoff added that he was sure that "complete understanding exists, or will be arrived at," between the United States, Great Britain and the Soviet "as to which should concentrate its greatest efforts and energy or which sector, and that they will be ruled in this by the interests of the common cause."

At the forthcoming conference it was forecast, the anti-Axis Powers may reach a decision as to whether the Soviet should assume an active fighting role in the Pacific, or concentrate on its increasingly successful efforts to smash Hitler's war machine on the eastern front.

M'ARTHUR GETS PROMOTION TO GENERAL RANK

DEC 20 1941

Far Eastern Commandant Confirmed Soon After Presidential Action

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 19—A grateful nation today conferred the rank of general on Douglas MacArthur, 61, once-retired soldier who has conducted a gallant defense of the Philippines with slender military resources.

President Roosevelt sent to the Senate a recommendation for promotion of MacArthur from lieutenant general to the rank which has been held by only one other American field commander in wartime, General Pershing, leader of the World War AEF.

Casting aside routine, the Senate unanimously confirmed the nomination a few hours later.

Made Record At Academy

The son of Lieut Gen. Arthur MacArthur, and born at the Little Rock (Ark.) army post, MacArthur was graduated from West Point in 190 with the academy's best scholastic record in twenty-five years.

He commanded an army division in France in 1917-18, but his military career seemed to have reached a climax with service from 1930-35 as chief of staff.

In the latter post, it was his duty to chase the bonus marchers out of Washington during President Hoover's administration. He did that job with a characteristic thoroughness which brought considerable criticism, but when he retired in 1937 President Roosevelt told him, "your record in war and peace is a brilliant chapter in American history."

Called By Quezon

That was a sentence with which to close the book, but retirement was not for MacArthur: President Quezon of the newly-formed Philippine Commonwealth asked him to organize defense forces for the islands.

MacArthur was busy at that job when war clouds formed in the Far East and President Roosevelt recalled him to active service and placed him in charge of the Far Eastern Army Command into which all Philippine forces were inducted.

The rest is a new chapter—brilliantly started but not yet finished.

As a full General, MacArthur would have equal rank with any military officer Britain or other Allies might assign to the Far East.

Although Pershing is the only field officer to hold this rank heretofore in wartime, nine others have received it in peacetime, either in active service or after their retirement.

In recent years the rank has been enjoyed temporarily by the War Department Chief of Staff while he held that post. Gen. George C. Marshall, the present Chief of Staff, is the only other General.

Aside from MacArthur and Marshall, War Dearment records list these four-starred Generals:

Ulysses S. Grant, July 25, 1866, to Mar. 4,1869; William T. Sherman, Mar. 4,1869, to Feb. 8, 1884; Philip H. Sheridan, June 1, 1888, to Aug. 5, 1888; John J. Pershing, Oct. 6, 1917, to Sept. 3, 1919, on emergency status. He was retired Sept. 13, 1924, with the unique rank and title of General of the Armies of the United States.

Tasker H. Bliss, Oct. 6, 1917, to May 19, 1918, (retroactive by 1930 act of Congress).

Peyton C. March, May 20, 1918, to June 30, 1920, (retroactive by 1930 act).

Charles P. Summerall, Feb. 23, 1929, to Nov. 20, 1930, as Chief of Staff.

Douglas MacArthur, Nov. 21, 1930, to Oct. 1, 1935, as Chief of Staff.

Malin Craig, Oct. 2, 1935, to Aug. 31, 1939, as Chief of Staff.

George Washington, records show, held the rank of General and Commander-In-Chief of the Continental Army, 1775-1783. He lost the rank, however, when the Federal Constitution was adopted, but was appointed Lieutenant General and Commander-In-Chief, July 3, 1798. Congress established the office of General in 1799, but records are lacking to show that it was ever conferred on Washington.

The President also nominated four brigadier-generals to be major-generals, twelve colonels to be brigadier-generals and Capt. John F. Shafroth Jr. to be a rear-admiral in the navy.

Second of His Rank.

Gen. MacArthur would be the second of his rank in the army. Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, likewise is a full general.

Gen. MacArthur's advancement from a three-star to a four-star general was said in military quarters not to give him any more authority than he had under his lieutenant-generalship. It was generally agreed that it was a reward for the vigorous job he is doing in defense of the Philippines.

The rank of general is the highest in the United States Army and compares with field marshal in foreign armies.

In unofficial discussion of Gen. MacArthur's nomination it was pointed out that his new rank under the United States system would be the equal of the highest field commanders of other nations concerned in the Far East fighting. However, Gen. Marshall, as Chief of Staff, is superior to MacArthur.

Gen. Pershing, when he went to France, was only a Major-General but he still was commander of all United States field forces and worked with field marshals. He later was made a full General and after the war was made "General of the Armies of the United States."

DEC 20 1941

Capt. Shafroth, born in Denver March 31, 1887, is a graduate of the Naval Academy and a veteran of thirty years naval service. He received the Navy Cross for Distinguished World War Service and also has been awarded a number of decorations by Pan-American governments. He recently was transferred to duty as Assistant Chief of the Bureau of Navigation.

Promotions Are Listed.

The army promotions, it was explained, were for the purpose of providing commanders for Philippine commonwealth troops which are rapidly being mobilized and all are temporary advancements. The War Department said:

"These officers have demonstrated their leadership in the field and are at present exercising combat command appropriate to the rank to which they are being advanced. In addition to the American officers promoted, President Quezon, on the recommendation of Gen. MacArthur, is advancing to the rank of Brigadier-General officers of the Philippine Army who have shown marked command ability during the bitter fighting which has already taken place on Luzon."

The list of nominations of American officers, with their home addresses, follows:

Brigadier-Generals to be Major-Generals: Edward P. King Jr., Atlanta; George F. Moore, Washington; George M. Parker Jr., San Francisco; Richard K. Sutherland, Elkins, W. Va.

Colonels to be brigadier generals:

Clifford Bluemel, infantry, Trenton, N. J.; R. N. Weaver, infantry, Fremont, Ohio; V. Brougher, infantry, Jackson, Miss.; Albert M. Jones, infantry, Washington; Joseph P. Vachon, infantry, Westbrook, Me.; Bradford G. Chynoweth, infantry, Washington; William F. Sharp, field artillery, Monkton, Md.; Allan C. McBride, field artillery, Frederick, Md.; Clyde A. Selleck, field artillery, Rutland, Vt.; Spencer B. Akin, signal corps, Greenville, Miss.; Charles C. Drake, quartermaster corps, Washington; Richard J. Marshall, quartermaster corps, Portsmouth, Va.

Knox Discloses 3d Pearl Harbor Air Raid Failed

DEC 20 1941

Tells Annapolis Graduates Hawaiian Base Needed Only Half-Hour Warning

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Dec. 19 (AP).—Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy, asserting that thirty minutes' warning of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor would have made "all the difference in the world," disclosed today that the third and final wave of enemy bombers met such a devastating barrage that it turned away without hitting a single objective.

Mr. Knox, speaking at graduation exercises for the Naval Academy's class of 574 for 1942, said that Japan's assault on the great Pacific naval base was a "damning account of infamous treachery" such as "was never recorded in the history of the world."

"There is no question at all, in the light of what transpired," he said, "that half an hour's warning of the approach of the Japanese planes would have made all the difference in the world.

"I say this with considerable confidence because that assault was divided into three attacks. The third came two hours after the first one. With all of the resources that were left . . . we were ready, and that attack never got home.

"It encountered, as it approached Pearl Harbor, such a barrage from every gun and every ship that the enemy planes had to sheer off, and not a single torpedo found its mark or did the slightest damage to our ships or to our equipment ashore."

On the other hand, he told the midshipmen, "We ought to have been on our guard against treachery. If we had studied Japan's record in the war with Russia when, in a similar manner, they descended upon the Russian fleet at a moment when those two nations were still at peace and destroyed that fleet without warning—if we had studied that and remembered that, we would not have been surprised."

But the attack did serve a useful purpose, he continued, because it drove home "with frightful force upon the minds of our military leaders the importance of guarding against surprise, the importance of never underestimating the boldness and resourcefulness of the enemy; and upon the civilian population, it drove home with a sense of horror the treachery of the foe we have to defeat."

DEC 20 1941

Mr. Knox told the midshipmen it would not be easy to live up to the heroism and devotion to duty shown by their Navy mates at Pearl Harbor but that it was up to them to do so.

"There are names which are fragrant in our memories whenever we think of American courage and American fighting spirit," he said, "Valley Forge and Belleau Wood, Bunker Hill and Mobile Bay, Gettysburg and Chateau Thierry.

"'Today we have a new pearl to add to the rosary of memory: Pearl Harbor."

When Midshipman Isaac C. Kidd jr., of Long Beach, Calif., stepped to the rostrum for his diploma, Secretary Knox whispered words of encouragement to him. Midshipman Kidd's father, a rear admiral, was killed in action at Pearl Harbor on Dec. 7.

Parents, relatives and friends of graduates in packed Dahlgren Hall gave the graduating class a thunderous ovation after graduation hurled their white caps high into the air.

Before caps were tossed, the entire regiment—the largest in academy history—gave the traditional three cheers for "those about to leave us." Graduates, in full dress blues, responded with three cheers for "those we leave behind us."

Commissions were conferred later upon 519 graduates, 495 becoming ensigns in the Navy and 24 second lieutenants in the Marine Corps. Twenty-six graduates were honorably discharged but some may be commissioned ensigns in the Naval Reserve later.

The new officers went on leave and will report for active duty later. Christmas leave for the regiment begins tomorrow and ends Jan. 3.

Taft Suggests Widening Of Pearl Harbor Inquiry

Asks Whether Hull Told Knox of Demands on Japan

CHICAGO, Dec. 19 (AP).—Senator Robert A. Taft, asking for a Congressional investigation of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, said today: "Perhaps th. fault at Hawaii was not entirely on the admirals and generals."

In an address before the Executives Club of Chicago, the Republican leader from Ohio said he believed the inquiry should not be left entirely to the executive department.

"We might well investigate whether Secretary Hull told Secretary Knox the contents of the note which he submitted to the Japanese government ten days before (the attack), requiring them to withdraw from China, and which was not published until after the attack on Hawaii," Senator Taft said.

"Did Secretary Knox communicate to the admiral that we had sent an ultimatum to Japan which in all probability they would not accept? Perhaps the fault at Hawaii was not entirely on the admirals and generals."

Senator Taft said that, as a matter of general principle, he believed there could be no doubt that criticism in time of war was essential to the maintenance of any kind of democratic government.

"Nevertheless," he said, "every problem must be approached in a different spirit from that existing in time of peace, and Congress cannot assume to run the war."

He said he had always been opposed to an American expeditionary force and that he still hoped that such a force would be unnecessary.

Hull Denies He Halted Patrol

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 19—Secretary of State Cordell Hull today formally denied reports spread here that the State Department had asked for a suspension of naval patrols around Hawaii during the progress of Hull's negotiations with Japanese envoys.

In biting language Secretary Hull declared there was not a shred of truth in the report and that he wished to deny it emphatically.

"Mighty Mean Person"

The State Department has not conferred with the Navy Department on the question of patrols around Hawaii or elsewhere in the Pacific, Secretary Hull said, and spreading of such rumors in such critical times could only come from some one whom he described as a mighty mean person who was, in effect, joining the fifth column in spreading foul and mendacious rumors.

Rumors and reports, some of which have come from the Congressional cloak room, it was said, declared that suspension of patrols around Hawaii during the Hull-Nomura-Kurusu talks had been a major factor in permitting the Japanese to make a surprise attack on Hawaii.

Chinese Says U. S. Should Drop Idea Of A.E.F. In Asia

Wants Land Fighting And Invasion Of Japan Left To His People

New York, Dec. 19 (AP)—K. C. Li, president of the Chinese Chamber of Commerce, urged tonight that the United States "surrender the idea of an A.E.F. to Japan" and permit China "to do the land fighting in Asia."

In an address for delivery before the China Society of America, Li declared that America should concentrate her resources on "maintaining naval and air supremacy in the Pacific and keeping Hongkong, Rangoon and other ports open."

"I urge the democracies to take full advantage of China's huge manpower and help her train and equip it for invasion of the Japanese Empire," he said. "Invasion is the surest means of ending the Japanese menace quickly and decisively."

He asserted that Chinese soldiers had gained valuable experience in fighting the Japanese during more than four years of warfare and that Chinese troops could fight "on rice and pepper, while an American soldier will need coffee, milk, butter, bread, beef and other canned goods which will be difficult to transport."

"China has already offered the British 200,000 Chinese troops for fighting service on the Burma border but the British refused," he said. "This is the time to accept China's offer and help her train and equip a Chinese expeditionary force to Japan."

American Ship Sunk In Pacific Identified

Submarine Victim Was Freighter Cynthia Olson, New York Marine Circles Hear

New York, Dec. 19 (AP)—The American ship which the White House announced was sunk by a submarine in the Pacific about 700 miles off San Francisco was identified by marine circles today as the 2,140-ton freighter Cynthia Olson, of San Fancisco.

Manned by a crew of about thirty-one, the freighter carried a load of lumber. No report has been received here as to whether the crew was rescued or lost.

The freighter was the former Matson liner Coquina. Built in 1919 at Manitowoc, Wis., she was owned by Oliver J. Olson & Co., of San Francisco.

Officials said her slow speed made it almost impossible for her to escape from a submarine. She was unarmed.

GEN. EMMONS ASSUMES POST

New Hawaiian Departmental Commander Takes Over.

By Tom Yarbrough

Honolulu, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—Lieut.-Gen. Delos C. Emmons took command of the Hawaiian Department of the army today, within twenty-four hours of his arrival, and found that the blackout was Honolulu's most immediate war intrusion—now that the shock of the first raid and the change in top commanders had largely been absorbed. Gen. Emmons took command with the issuance of two simple proclamations.

One, by Major-Gen. Walter C. Short, relinquished command of the department. The other, by Gen. Emmons, placed the department under himself. The announcement of the change of commands, arising from the Japanese surprise attack on Pearl Harbor on December 7, was made in Washington this week by Secretary of War Stimson.

Just as it was in the eight-month sitzkrieg in Britain and on the Continent in the early stages of the war, the civilian districts of this city would seem a great deal like any peacetime city of a quarter-million population were it not for the blackout.

Honolulu Enjoys Christmas Season

DEC 20 1941

Nobody Seems Downhearted After Pearl Harbor

HONOLULU, Dec. 19 (AP)—It's the Christmas season in Honolulu, despite the Pearl Harbor attack and nightly blackouts, and there are many evidences of it.

Santa Claus peers persistently from among blackout paper advertisements. Christmas shopping is on in full swing, with a goodly number of white uniformed Navy men among the sidewalk groups carrying stacks of brightly wrapped packages.

Nobody seems downhearted. Nevertheless, the territorial Office of Civilian Defense has established a public morale section to promote loyalty to the United States and interracial harmony, in which Hawaii takes great pride. This section is headed by a American, with one Chinese assistant and another of Japanese-American ancestry.

Reds Wipe Out Nazi Division "To Last Man"

Special Announcement Tells Huge German Casualties

37,000 Killed In Drive

(By The Associated Press)

Moscow, Saturday, Dec. 20 — Red Armies pursuing retreating Germans through the snows of the Moscow Front have wiped out Adolf Hitler's 134th Division to the last man and in ten days of fighting preceding this action killed and wounded 22,000 other Nazis, the Russians announced today.

This would represent a total of 37,000 Germans killed, wounded or captured in the latest successes reported by the Russians, since a German division normally has 15,000 men.

A special announcement broadcast by the Moscow radio told of the enormous casualties inflicted upon the backtracking Nazis between Dec. 7 and 17. The regular midnight communique reported destruction of the 134th Division in a trap west of Moscow and the re-capture of numerous villages and towns there and on the northwest and southwest.

German losses in equipment equalled their casualties, the special announcement said, listing 319 tanks, more than 3,700 trucks and huge quantities of other motorized equipment, and guns destroyed in the ten-day period.

The Germans were declared encircled by Soviet forces which drove west and southwest of Moscow, took by storm the town of Ruza, 60 miles due west of the capital, and cut west of the importan rail junction of Kaluga, 90 miles southwest, taking several villages. Tarussa, 65 miles south of Moscow and 40 miles northeast of Kaluga, and the town of Kanino southwest of Kaluga also were reported captured.

The General of the 134th Nazi Division was killed, the communique said, and a number of prisoners were taken.

"Not a German escaped," a communique said.

The Russians said seven Nazi divisions of perhaps 105,000 men had put up desperate resistance south of Ruza but that Red forces got the upper hand in one mighty assault after another.

Kaluga is an important rail junction on the line running south to Bryansk and Kiev. It was here that the Germans had concentrated one of their strongest forces in their now thwarted drive upon Moscow. Moreover, German troops retreating from Tula had fallen back toward Kaluga, now partly encircled.

Major Soviet Offensive Reported On Finnish Front

London, Saturday, Dec. 20 (AP)—The Russians have opened a major offensive along the entire Finnish front, taking advantage of weakened opposition caused by the German army's withdrawal of three fifths of the troops it had there originally, British reports said today.

DEC 20 1941

"Dense waves" of Russian cavalry and ski troops were reported thrown into the assault with the support of guns and tanks especially designed for warfare on this frozen front.

A Stockholm dispatch to the News-Chronicle said Finnish lines buckling under the impact of the initial Soviet thrusts had been withdrawn to the north bank of the Svir river at some points between Lake Ladoga and Lake Onega.

Other dispatches said the Germans left the Finns ill prepared to meet the slashing Red offensive and that the Nazis remaining there "are feeling the anger which has reinforced Finnish contempt as the Finns realize to what extent the German high command has been using them as a puppet power."

Finnish official reports tonight confirmed the continuation of Russian attacks on the Svir river as well as on the East Karelian front. These attacks, described as weak, were declared to have been repulsed.

Line Broken, Reds Say

The Russians, however, contend they have broken the whole Finnish-German line between the two lakes crossing the frozen Svir and advancing at three points.

The day's news from the Moscow front was a steady narrative of the capture by the Red army of scores upon scores of snowbound settlements on both flanks of the capital.

Pravda said Red army divisions had taken 138 settlements in new operations; 120 in the Tula area 100 miles south of Moscow and 18 others west of Kalini which is about 95 miles northwest of the capital.

Many Villages Recaptured.

Moscow, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—Russian Army divisions, striking from the wings of the Moscow defense arc, were today reported by Pravda, the Communist party newspaper, to have recaptured 138 villages in new operations growing out of the seventeen-day-old counter-offensive along the central front.

Falling back toward the west and southwest from the Tula area, the Germans yielded 120 towns yesterday, and eighteen others were recaptured southwest if Kalinin, despite a stubborn rear guard resistance, Pravda said. Tula lies 100 miles south of Moscow, Kalinin ninety-five miles northwest.

Russian flyers on the Leningrad front claimed the destruction of four German railway trains, about 200 trucks and about 1,000 officers and men killed or dispersed. On the Moscow front Pravda said "the enemy has been forced to abandon large quantities of air materials."

"The enemy has been forced to abandon large quantities of war materials," Pravda said.

[Meanwhile the British radio said that reports from Helsinki today announce that all German troops have been withdrawn from Finland in a great hurry, following an avowal that the Finnish lines had been broken between Lakes Onega and Ladoga by a Russian offensive in the vicinity of the Leningrad-Murmansk Railway.]

DEC 20 1941

Concentrate on Transport.

The destruction of German rolling stock was emphasized in today's official communique, as the Soviet Army sought to disorganize the Nazi withdrawal and to destroy supplies which might help the invaders to dig in on a shortened winter line.

"Our advanced units have already reached the approaches to Ruza (sixty miles due west of Moscow) and fighting is in progress at the outskirts of the town," Pravda added. Seven German divisions in the Mozhaisk sector, south of Ruza, were said to have put up stiff resistance, but the newspaper declared that "the rate of our offensive is growing noticeably."

Russian flyers and Russian ground forces alike struck at trains, trucks and buses, the Soviet Information Bureau declared.

"On December 17 our aviation destroyed or damaged . . . about 50 trucks with troops and supplies," the communique said, "destroyed . . . a number of buses, set ten railroad trains on fire and annihilated or dispersed three regiments (perhaps 6,000 men) of enemy infantry."

The destruction of 106 German trucks, an ammunition dump and a military supply depot was credited to units of Gen. Vlasov in one day's operations on the central front. Other Red Army men counted thirty-three trucks in the booty of one day.

[The British radio, in a review of fighting on the eastern front, said that the Germans were withdrawing in the direction of Kaluga, ninety miles southwest of Moscow, and about sixty miles west of the old Tula fighting zone. Snowstorms raged about the Germans in their retreat, said the broadcast, heard here by C. B. S.

On the Finnish front, northeast of Leningrad, Russian shock troops and light tanks crossed the frozen Svir river, the B. B. C. said, throwing back the Finns at three places.]

With Russian drives under way along the entire snow-covered battle line from Leningrad to Taganrog, the Red Star, the official army newspaper, urged Russian commanders to increas the use of speed troops to spea into the German lines and cut off detachments, unit by unit, for destruction. The general plan, it said, is to "encircle and exterminate the enemy." This method has already been used brilliantly, the Red Star reported, in the recapture of Shekino and Aleksin, in the Tula zone.

Russian Attacks Repulsed, Berlin Says

Berlin, Dec. 19—(Official Broadcast Recorded By AP) — Russian attacks on the eastern front are being repulsed at several points at heavy cost to the Russians, the German high command reported today.

"Hard fighting developed at several points on the eastern front as enemy attacks were being repulsed," the communique said. "The enemy suffered heavy losses."

The Germans added that the Nazi air force attacked troop concentrations, artillery positions, tank forces and lines of communication despite bad weather.

Raid on Brest.

In another section the communique (apparentyl referring to a raid by the British planes on the occupied port of Brest) said that a "raid by a strong British bomber-fighter force on a port in occupied territory was repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy."

Twelve British planes in all, including five four-engined bombers, were shot down, it said.

In the Arctic Kola bay region, the high command reported, a medium-sized merchant ship was damaged seriously by bomb hits.

No mention was made in its communique of the fighting in North Africa between British and Axis armies.

Finns Admit Reds Attack.

Helsinki, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—The Russians have launched numerous weak attacks on the Svir River front between Lake Ladoga and Lake Onega and the Eastern Karelian front, the Finnish High Command acknowledged today, but said that the attacks were repulsed with heavy losses. A communique said that despite snowfalls, Finnish planes successfully bombed the Murmansk railroad north of Karma and fighters shot down one enemy plane.

Report Train Derailed.

London, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—The Moscow radio today reported an outbreak of sabotage in Poland and derailments of a German ammunition and troop train near Lublin. Fifty German soldiers were reported killed.

Germans Admit Line Pierced By Russ

DEC 20 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Bern, Dec. 19—The Germans admitted today that Russian forces had penetrated their Eastern defenses at several points, but said they were quickly dislodged by strong counter-attacks. This came from DNB, official news agency.

Fighting was extremely violent, the agency said. Much of it was waged in snowstorms with temperatures near zero, Fahrenheit.

DNB bluntly acknowledged that the Russians continued their pressure all along the line, supported by powerful forces of artillery and armored units.

Red Losses Claimed

Russian losses were "considerable," DNB said, reporting the death of more than 600 in a sector held by one German battalion.

"Five hundred Russians fell attacking lines held by an armored division," DNB added. "The attack failed."

German artillery was said to have shelled Leningrad heavily, damaging an automobile factory and a munitions depot.

Hitler Aid Sees Peril in Russia

Military Expert Says Red Soldiers Equal and Are Sometimes Better Than Nazis.

Berne, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—In the midst of Germany's great withdrawal on the Russian front, Lieut.-Col. Solden, the military expert of Adolf Hitler's own newspaper, was today quoted as writing that Russian soliders "equal us or" and are sometimes even bett Soldan further declared that "no country other than the Soviet Union could have stood such losses in men and materials—yet the resistance of the Russian Army even today is very strong." His analysis, which appeared first in Hitler's Voelkidscher Beobachter, was republished in the Swiss newspaper Neue Zuricher Zeitung, which commented: "Never before has a German military writer spoken so openly to the public of the great difficulties of carrying on the war in the east. His statements bring a new, pessimistic warning to the people of the severity of the struggle. . . .

"New troops brought in from Siberia, and other regions where they are accustomed to the cold, were put into the fighting where troops had been ten times beaten, and threaten to nullify those defeats," Soldan declared. He then confessed that the Germans had underestimated the Russians. It is now clear, he said, that the Red Army had held back its best material in the first Finnish winter war (1939-40). He also credited the Russians with learning quickly from the Germans.

Not only Russia's army, but her economic and industrial resources were underrated, he went on to say. Russian industry, he said, had been especially built to support modern war. The writer asserted that the Russians always succeeded in restoring their troop discipline in the midst of the heaviest German destruction.

Nazis Seize Red Horses, Sleighs

DEC 20 1941

(AP) — The Germans, falling back in Russia, have taxed their wits to gain all sorts of transport, including horses and sleighs, according to a statement issued today by the Soviet information bureau.

At one town, the statement said, the Germans announced that salt would be distributed free. Peasants drove their sleighs into town from miles around to get their share.

When many peasants had gathered in the town the Hitlerite scoundrels threw a cordon around it and took away from the peasants all their horses and sleighs," the bureau said. "The Germans shot on the spot all the peasants who protested."

In all the towns and villages of the Smolensk region, the bureau reported, the Germans took from the people all pillows, feather mattresses and warm clothing. The victims are marooned in their own homes because they lack warm clothing.

London, Dec. 19 (AP)—The Rome radio reported tonight the deputy chief of the Nazi press bureau, von Stumpf, had been killed on the Russian front.

London, Dec. 19 (AP)—The German radio tonight reported that the 1,900-ton Rumanian destroyer King Ferdinand had been torpedoed by Russian naval forces.

Von Brauchitsch Seen in Mufti; Believed Ousted

NEW YORK, Dec. 19 (AP)—Field Marshal Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch, commander-in-chief of the German Armies, has been seen in civilian clothes in Vienna, leading to the belief he has been relieved of his command, the New York Times said today.

"Well-authenticated private information" was given as the source of this report.

Gen. Alfred Jodl, one of Hitler's military advisers, has been mentioned to succeed Von Brauchitsch, the Times story said.

Goebbels Speaks To Nazis Tonight

Announcement Of Broadcast Brings Speculation On Surprise Move

Berlin, Saturday, Dec. 20—(Official Broadcast Recorded By AP)—Propaganga Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels will broadcast to the German people at 8 o'clock tonight (1 p. m. E.S.T.) the German radio announced today.

The announcement said Goebbels' address would be heard over all German radio stations.

The fact that the Nazi propaganda chieftain's address will be heard in all corners of Germany indicated that it might be of major importance.

There was speculation he might discuss in some manner the wide-scale recent Nazi reverses in Russia and North Africa.

The German press itself of late has soft-pedalled reports from these two fronts, playing up instead accounts of Japan's initial successes in the Far East.

Until the Nazi drive bogged down in Russia the controlled German press spoke glowingly of the "invincible" German Army.

But now its utterances have been chiefly about the weather in Russia, the "strategic" Nazi withdrawal to "stronger positions" and the hardships under which the Army was fighting.

Emphasis also has been placed on the Russian tenacity and the high quality of their equipment, which the Germans admit now they underestimated at the start.

There has been considerable conjecture recently that Germany might be getting ready to spring some big surprise, possibly a thrust through Turkey to get at the oil fields of the Middle East. Support of this has been seen in increased German military activity in Bulgaria.

It was considered unlikely, however, that such a move would be announced by Goebbels since Adolf Hitler usually has reserved such disclosures for himself.

Goebbels' last important public pronouncement came early in November when he told the Germans they had hard sledding ahead.

Writing in the weekly Das Reich, he declared the Axis Powers were "fighting for bare existence, and the worries and distress which we all must bear in t war would pale in the face of t inferno which would await us we were to lose."

Then he admonished Germa "not to ask when victory wh come, but rather to see that it comes."

Swedes to Return From Finnish Front

London, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—A DNB broadcast from Berlin said today that a battalion of Swedish volunteers in Finland which had engaged in the battle for Hango was returning to Sweden, but would go back to Finland later in a new formation.

Swedes Irritate Nazis, Report

[By the Associated Press]

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 19 — Dispatches from Berlin indicated today that Germans are irritated over Sweden's neutrality in the European war, the correspondent of one Swiss newspaper, Neue Zurcher Zeitung, reporting that "Germany is out of humor with Sweden."

DEC 20 194

In his last speech, that is his war speech against the United States Adolf Hitler referred to "the comfortable bourgeoisie of other northern states," obviously meaning Sweden the correspondent wrote.

Ironic Remarks

"The opening of the office of a British consul in Stockholm resulted in ironic and belittling remarks in Berlin," he added.

The correspondent of La Suisse said, "for some time neutral observers have noticed hat the German press and certain German circles have made numerous remarks filled with venom in regard to Sweden and the neutral press of that country."

This writer added that the Germans interpreted the opening of the British consular branch at Stockholm as showing "the possibility that Sweden is becoming a principal in the field of activity of Anglo-Saxon propaganda."

Norse Bishops Defy Quisling

Churchmen Barred From Politics—50 Nazis Reported Killed in Polish Train Wreck.

Berne, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—The Scandinavian correspondent of the Berner Tagwacht reported today growing friction between Norwegian bishops and the German-backed government of Vidkun Quisling.

Bishop Fivind Berggrav of Oslo, leader of the churchmen and known as a democrat and progressive, has refused to permit the National Lutheran Church to participate in Quisling politics and he has refused to attend meetings of the Parliament since the German occupation.

'Holy War' Opposed.

He also has rejected efforts to have the church call for a "holy war" against Russia and, as a result, was denounced by the controlled press. He wrote to ministers, instructing them to cancel collective prayer after the Quisling Government substituted for the prayer mentioning King, Parliament and Government another calling for obedience to the Chief of State.

The correspondent also reported that the Government had been forced to write all schools warning that acts of students hostile to the State no longer could be tolerated. Another order prohibited use of the Norwegian coat of arms, colors or letters standing for King Haakon.

The Stockholm correspondent of the Basel National Zeitung reported today that the police of occupied Norway had been compelled to tighten border restrictions as the result of activity against the German-sponsored Norwegian Government.

Entry Permits Seized.

In extensive raids along the Swedish border, the police were said to have seized entry permits and to have ordered inhabitants to present their residence permits to the police to be examined and restamped. Frontier guards have also been increased.

Any one can buy plenty of food in Hawaii, including sugar, butter, meat, eggs and many other things that ordinarily shrink on a wartime market. No longer is there a rush to food stores.

Cigarette dealers who limited customers to one package at a time last week now sell them by the carton.

But it is impossible to buy, beg or borrow flashlights and flashlight batteries. This makes the blackout harder to take, because restrictions have been relaxed a bit and a careful citizen lucky enough to have a flashlight is not now so likely to have it shot from his hand.

More and more thousands are sealing up at least one room in their home or apartment for reading, card games or conversation. The rumor content of this conversation—strikingly high the first few days—has been reduced sharply by the disclosures of naval losses made by Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy.

BRITISH TAKE DERNA AIRPORT IN QUICK SALLY

Race 200 Miles In Libyan Desert In Pressing Retreating Axis Foe

Airdrome Capture Seen Forcing Enemy Base Farther West

By EDWARD KENNEDY
Associated Press Correspondent

Cairo, Dec. 19—Flying spearheads of the British Eighth Army raced 200 miles deep in the Libyan Desert tonight behind fleeing Axis forces in a relentless pursuit which netted the big airport of Derna and threatened to envelop all the coastal highlands on the hump of Cirenaica.

The advance was at such tremendous speed that British general headquarters brushed aside tabulation of captures behind the front lines on the former battlefield of Gazala, and announced: "All attention at the moment is being concentrated on maintaining relentless pressure upon the retreating enemy."

In Cairo, British headquarters made public an order of the day which the British Middle Eastern commander, Gen. Sir Claude Auchinleck, issued November 25, when the German general, Erwin von Rommel, unleashed his greatest effort to escape destruction.

"Attack And Pursue"

In part it said:

"There is only one order: Attack and pursue! His (the enemy's) position is desperate, and he is trying—by lashing out in all directions—to distract us from our object, which is to destroy him utterly. We will not be distracted, and he will be destroyed.

"You have got your teeth into him. Hold on! Bite deeper and deeper and hang on until he is finished."

The flight of the German and Italian forces had obviously forked: one force perhaps preparing a rear-guard action at the port of Derna itself, which the enemy still held at last reports; the other plunging southwest through Mekili to try to skirt the coastal highlands and reach Bengasi, main Axis base.

Tanks And Planes Strike

But British tanks were hard on the enemy's heels in both areas of pursuit and ahead of the tanks was a hard-hitting British air force.

"Our pursuit of the remaining enemy forces toward Derna and also around and beyond Mekili continued through yesterday," said a communique.

"By nightfall the Derna airdrome was in our hands, but enemy troops still were in occupation of Derna itself and also were in the Mekili area.

"Our air forces were presented with excellent targets and yesterday's bomber effort was the heaviest since operations began. Repeated attacks were made on enemy columns on roads leading to Derna and west of Mekili."

Commands Highway Zone

British sources stressed the importance of the Derna airport, saying it was on elevated ground from which artillery can command the coastal highway zone. The field lies about ten miles southeast of Derna and its loss to the Axis means that German and Italian planes must be based much farther west.

Disclosure that the British had bombed and destroyed part of an oil tank train near Zuara, western terminus of the railway of Tripoli, made observers think the Axis was getting oil supplies from French Tunisia and sending them east. Zuara is about 20 miles from the Tunisian border.

Royal Air Force headquarters reported incessant harassment of the westward Axis retreat, relating that much motor transport was smashed and heavy casualties inflicted on Axis troops.

Many Planes Destroyed

Many Axis planes were reported destroyed both in the sky and on the ground. Bengasi again was bombarded and a tanker was hit and probably sunk out at sea.

Ground forces had captured more than a dozen Axis airfields containing 200 German and Italian planes, one of them a British Hurricane fighter with German markings.

Far back of the advanced lines, at Bardia and Halfaya Pass, the British said a few enemy strong points still were holding out under heavy bombing and cannonade.

British Capture Derna Airport

Swift Gains Take Column 195 Miles Into Libya, Forcing Constant Axis Flight.

Cairo, Egypt, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—British forces driving on the heels of the broken, retreating Axis army in Libya have captured the Derna airport and are exerting incessant pressure to keep the enemy in flight, British Headquarters announced today.

The new, swift gains west of the Gazala tank battleground put the British about 195 miles deep into Libya at the start of the second month of the westward push from the Egyptian frontier and marked a decided acceleration in pace from the early, hard-won advances.

Capture of the airport indicated that British forces at Tmimi had branched, one column cutting about forty miles southwest on the Mekili Road and the other about thirty-five miles northwest toward the port of Derna.

Although Derna airport was in British hands last night, the communique said, the port itself still was Axis-held and the enemy still had troops in the Mekili area at the southern edge of the coastal highlands in eastern Cirenaica.

A flanking operation "around and beyond Mekili" was in progress, the communique added.

[This apparently was the result of an Axis split in which, British sources in London said, one force fell back to the west and another veered northwest toward Derna.]

So fast were the British driving and so intense was their concentration "on maintaining relentless pressure upon the retreating enemy," the war bulletin asserted, that "details are not yet available of captures at and west of the main Gazala battlefield."

Air support of Britain's ground forces, unparalleled since the start of the campaign, was stressed by the communique which said:

"Our air forces were presented with excellent targets and yesterday's bomber effort was the heaviest since the operations began. Repeated attacks were made on enemy columns on roads leading into Derna and west of Mekili.

"In other areas, great damage and disorganization were caused not only by bombing but also by persistent low-flying fighter attacks."

Airfield a Useful Base.

British sources placed great importance on the seizure of the Derna airfield because, they said, it is on elevated ground from which British artillery could command the coastal highway and its loss compels the Axis to shift its planes to fields much farther from the fighting zone. The field is eight or ten miles southeast of Derna.

The RAF Middle East command announced that "throughout yesterday our fighter and bomber aircraft incessantly harassed the westward retreat of the enemy in Cirenaica.

British sources predicted today early destruction or surrender of the routed German and Italian armies in Libya and contended that further concerted opposition by the Axis forces would be impossible.

Counter-Attack Smashed.

Maj. Gen. Erwin Rommel was reported to be retreating with the remnants of his shattered German-African corps after the Fourth Indian division threw off a desperate conuter-attack, bringing to a climax a fierce five-day battle west and southwest of Gazala.

The last phase of the campaign launched Nov. 18, in which British-manned American-made planes and tanks have played an important part, thrust the Axis forces back 30 miles to a sparsely-established line along the Tmimi-Mekili road some 160 miles inside Libya.

The British reported that parts of the scattered Nazi units were attempting to escape toward Derna while others were fleeing toward Mekili in hope of reaching Tripolitania.

See No Hope for Axis.

As the British advance pressed steadily forward, one observer declared that Rommel's last remaining hope was to escape to the hilly country behind the position of his present defeat. This spokesman suggested that the ...oradic ...terrain, in ...ort to stave off ...on on the chance that ...nforcements and supplies could be slipped in from European bases. The success of any such scheme was considered likely to hinge on the number of tanks the Axis forces were able to salvage from repeated British assaults.

While the observer said that the Axis would be expected, for the sage of prestige, to make every effort to save Rommel's army from total destruction, he considered it unlikely that even the re-enforcement of German air units diverted from Russia would be sufficient to alter the course of the Libyan campaign.

Axis Position 'Desperate'

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 19 (AP)—Gen. Sir Claude J. E. Auchinleck, Britain's Middle East commander, today told his troops pursuing the Axis forces in Libya that the enemy's position was "desperate . . . and he will be destroyed."

The "final order" of the day broadcast by the BBC and heard here by CBS Auchinleck said:

"During three days at your advance headquarters I have seen and heard enough to convince me—though I didn't need convincing—that the determination of your commanders and troops to beat the enemy could not be greater, and I have no doubt whatever that he will be beaten.

"His position is desperate, and he is trying, by lashing out in all directions, to distract us from our object, which is to destroy him utterly. We will not be distracted, and he will be destroyed.

"You have got your teeth into him. Hold on. Bite deeper and deeper, and hang on until he is finished. Give him no rest, and there's only one order: Attack and pursue."

170 Axis Planes Taken

New York, Dec. 19 (AP)—The British radio said today that Allied forces in Libya had seized more than 170 Axis planes, 70 of them German, and captured more than a dozen airdromes in the current offensive. The broadcast was heard by CBS.

London Cites Libya Gains

DEC 20 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 19—British forces in Libya are advancing "in all directions" west and north of Mekili, forty miles south of Derna, a military commentator said here today.

He said the British occupied Gazala, about forty miles west of Tobruk, Wednesday morning, but he was unable to say who was holding Mekili itself.

Axis forces are continuing to withdraw in two bodies, the commentator added, one northwest toward Derna and the other westward.

Italians Report Severe Fighting.

Rome, Dec. 19 (Official Broadcast Reported by A. P.).—The Italian High Command announced today that severe fighting was in progress in eastern Cirenaica toward the port of Derna.

"The enemy, with the support of fresh mechanized units from Egypt," the communique said, "is increasing pressure against the Axis troops, who are fighting with praiseworthy tenacity." Artillery fire developed again on the Bardia and Salum fronts, it was reported, and an attack by armored trucks was said to have been repulsed.

"Bombing operations on columns on the march were carried out with excellent results by Italo-German aerial formations," the High Command added.

The British were said to have lost thirteen planes, four to Italian fighters, seven to German fighters and two shot down by Axis anti-aircraft fire.

"Three of our planes are missing," the Italians said.

Rome Claims 5 Cruisers Hit By Torpedo Planes

Rome, Dec. 19 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A.P.)—The Italian high command claimed today that five British cruisers had been attacked by Axis torpedo planes in the Mediterranean, but did not say whether any were sunk.

Three were declared hit Wednesday by successive waves of Italian squadrons in Libyan waters where "important British naval forces" were present.

A fourth, it was asserted, was attacked yesterday near the British fortified island of Malta.

The fifth was said to have been hit and set on fire by German planes. Just where was not stated.

[The German high command reported a British cruiser of the 7,270-ton Leander class had been sunk off Alexandria.]

It was acknowledged that two Italian planes "did not return to their bases," and that "others returned with dead and wounded on board."

5 Cruisers Hit In Air Raids, Rome Says

Rome, Dec. 19 (Official Broadcast Recorded by AP)—Five British cruisers were declared by the high command today to have been torpedoed in the Mediterranean Wednesday afternoon, four by Italian air formations and one by German flyers.

(The German high command announced a British cruiser of the 7,270-ton Leander class had been sunk by a German submarine off the Alexandria, Egypt, naval base.)

In Major Formation

Of the five cruisers reported hit by Axis aerial squadrons, three were in a major naval formation off the coast of eastern Libya, the high command said.

Another was torpedoed by diving airmen near the British island base of Malta, it declared.

German aircraft were reported to have "torpedoed and set afire one British cruiser." The zone of this action was not officially identified.

Neither was there any official description of the extent of the damage done to the announced victims.

"Two Italian planes did not return to their bases," the high command said. "Others returned with dead and wounded on board."

2 Naval Units Damaged: Nazis

DEC 20 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 19—Exchange Telegraph today quoted the Bremen radio as saying the German air force severely damaged two other large naval units in addition to a British cruiser reported sunk north of Bengasi.

The Germans yesterday reported the attack on a formation of ships in the Mediterranean.

The DNB agency also quoted the Bremen radio as saying a Rumanian destroyer sank a Russian submarine in the Black Sea yesterday.

The radio was quoted as saying the R. A. F. lost eighty-nine planes this week against nineteen German planes. It said fifty nine were brought down in North Africa.

Report Cruiser Sunk.

Berlin, Dec. 19 (Official broadcast received by the A. P.).—A German submarine has sunk a British cruiser of the Leander class in the Mediterranean, the German High Command said today, in action off Alexandria, British base port.

Five ships compose the Leander class, according to Jane's Fighting Ships. They are the Leander herself, which displaces 7,270 tons; the Orion, Neptune, Achilles and Ajax. Each normally carries a complement of 550 men and has eight six-inch guns, eight four-inch anti-aircraft guns, four three-pounders and ten smaller guns.

2 Cruisers, Destroyer And 3 Other Craft Sunk. 1,000 Men Rescued

[By the Associated Press]

Tunis, Dec. 15 (Delayed)—Five thousand Italian seamen and troops apparently en route to Libya were drowned December 12 when British naval units sank two Italian cruisers, a destroyer and three transports in a fierce night fight off Cape Bon on the Tunisian coast.

Approximately 1,000 Italians suffering from severe burns, exposure and other injuries were rescued. They are being treated here and at Kelibia, Menzel, Temime and other towns along the coast.

The Italian cruisers reported sunk were the 5,000-ton ships Alberto di Giusanno and Alberico da Barbiano, launched in 1930.

All of the 1,200 sailors aboard the two cruisers were said to have lost their lives. The other casualties mainly were aboard the transports.

Entire Flotilla Destroyed

The British Admiralty announced last Saturday the apparent destruction of an entire flotilla of Italian ships, including three destroyers, by British and Dutch destroyers and submarines.

London naval circles expressed belief that the Italians have only eleven cruisers of the thirty-two built, or building at the start of the war.

A submarine attack apparently preceded the main engagement, then the British destroyers, Sikh, Legion and Maori, and the Dutch Isaac Sweers raced in to finish the heavier armed Italian convoy with a storm of shell and torpedo fire.

One cruiser was seen to blow up, and another was left blazing from stem to stern, the Admiralty said. Three torpedo hits on a third was reported by the submarine command.

Some 1,000 Italians were rescued and are being treated for burns and other injuries in cities along the Tunisian coast.

The Italian cruisers sunk were the 5,000-ton Giussano and Alberico da Barbiano, which normally carried complements totaling 1,000 men.

The attack was said to have occurred at midnight December 12.

(The British Admiralty announced last Saturday that British and Dutch destroyers and a British submarine, in two separate but related engagements, apparently had sunk three Italian cruisers in the Mediterranean in a night battle.)

Canberra, Australia, Dec. 19 — (AP) — Army Minister Francis Forde said today that Australian imperial forces in the Middle East have been concentrated in Palestine and Syria as a unified force.

The action was recommended by Gen. Sir Thomas Blamey, commander of the Australian forces, who urged that the A. I. F. fight in the future as a single corps.

Nazi Warships Bombed Again

London, Dec. 19 (AP)—British bombers followed up a daylight raid yesterday on the German battleships Gneisenau and Scharnhorst, under repair at Brest, with another attack last night, the Air Ministry said today.

The results were not announced in the Ministry's brief communique, but it said "none of our aircraft is missing."

Five bombers and a fighter plane were acknowledged lost in the attack yesterday upon the oft-bombed 26,000-ton vessels, while eight German defense planes were reported downed.

Anothr frequent target of R. A. F. attacks on German ships docked at Brest has been the cruiser Prinz Eugen.

British Plane Directs Rescue

Funchal, Madeira, Dec. 19 (AP)—Survivors of the Portuguese freighter Cassequel, sunk by a submarine Monday, asserted today that "We owe our lives to a British warplane."

The survivors brought to Madeira yesterday by the freighter Mariamelia said the British plane sighted their lifeboats early Wednesday and directed the Mariamelia to the rescue.

The rescued said they were unable to identify the submarine that torpedoed the Cassequel Monday. The ship, which Portugal seized from Germany during the first World War, had nine passengers and a crew of forty-seven aboard.

New York, Dec. 19 (AP)—The British radio related today that an RAF fighter fired a burst at one German dive bomber—and bagged two.

The broadcast said the first German plane, hit and crashing out of control, smashed into the other and both fell into the North Sea.

Vichy Denies Knowing of Pact

Vichy, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—Authorized French quarters today said that they had no knowledge of any naval agreement having been reached between the French High Commission of Martinique and the United States Government.

They also issued a denial of London's announcement that the French Government had withdrawn its accusation that the submarine which sank the French merchantman St. Denis recently off the Balearic Islands was "presumably British."

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19 (AP)—Navy Department communiqué No. 13 on the situation as of 9 A. M. today follows:

Atlantic Theatre—There are no new developments to report.

Eastern Pacific—There are no new developments to report.

Central Pacific—There have been two additional air attacks by the enemy on Wake Island. The first occurred on the night of the 17th-18th and was comparatively light. The second was in greater force and occurred in the forenoon of the 19th. Wake Island continues to counter these blows.

Far East—There are no new developments to report.

War Department communiqué No. 18 follows:

1. Philippine Theatre—There was a marked increase in enemy air and ground activities during the past twenty-four hours. There was heavy bombing over Manila and over the city of Iloilo on the island of Panay, south of Luzon.

2. There is nothing to report from other areas.

War Department communiqué No. 19, covering reports up to 5 P. M., said:

1. Hawaii—The War Department today announced awards of the Distinguished Service Cross to Second Lieutenants George S. Welch and Kenneth M. Taylor, Air Corps, United States Army, for extraordinary heroism in action during the Japanese attack on the Island of Oahu of Dec. 7, 1941.

These awards are the first of a number to be given for heroism in Hawaii and the Philippines during the present conflict. The others will be made in the near future.

It is the policy of the War Department to award decorations for gallantry in action as promptly as possible.

2. Philippine Theatre—Enemy patrols increased their ground operations.

MANILA, Dec. 19 (AP)—A United States Far East Command communiqué issued shortly before noon today said:

There has been no enemy activity this morning.

General Basilio J. Valdes and the entire headquarters of the Philippine Army were inducted into the service of the United States this morning, including officers and enlisted men of the general and special staff.

Colonel Richard J. Marshall, deputy chief of staff of the United States Army forces in the Far East, was the inducting officer.

The headquarters of Lieut. Ge... Douglas MacArthur issued th... communiqué at 4:40 P. M. toda...

Military objectives in the vicin... ity of Tarlac Province wer... bombed yesterday afternoon by ... small number of Japanese planes.

Twenty-four bombers attacked Cavite at about noon. Manila wa... alerted again about 1:30 P. M., but no reports of bombing have been received.

British

CAIRO, Egypt, Dec. 19 (AP)—The British Middle East Command issued this communiqué today:

Our pursuit of remaining enemy forces toward Derna and also round and beyond Mekili continued throughout yesterday.

By nightfall the Derna airdrome was in our hands but enemy troops were still in occupation of Derna itself and also in the Mekili area.

Our air forces were presented with excellent targets and yesterday's bomber effort was the heaviest since operations began. Repeated attacks were made on enemy columns on roads leading to Derna and west of Mekili.

In other areas great damage and disorganization was caused not only by bombing but by the persistent low-flying fighter attack.

Details are not yet available of captures at and west of the main El Gazala battlefield as all attention at the moment is being concentrated on maintaining relentless pressure upon the retreating enemy.

In the Bardia and Halfaya areas enemy strong points still holding out are being subjected to heavy bombing and artillery fire.

The R. A. F. Middle East Command today issued this communiqué:

Throughout yesterday our fighter and bomber aircraft incessantly harassed the westward retreat of the enemy force in Cyrenaica. Numerous bombing raids along road communications and on motorized units west of Mekili gave the enemy no respite and considerable damage was done to motor transport, many lorries being destroyed.

Our fighter aircraft were particularly active and successful. Heavy casualties were inflicted on enemy troops and a large number of vehicles were left in flames or rendered unserviceable.

Effective attacks were also made on enemy landing grounds and in an engagement with ME-109's which were seen taking off from an airdrome. One of the enemy fighters was destroyed. During the day many enemy aircraft were severely damaged either on the ground or in aerial combat.

In the battle area enemy fighters which were attempting to attack our troops west of El Gazala were engaged or driven off.

By night, attacks on road communications and retreating units of enemy forces west of Barce were maintained.

In addition our bombers raided the airdrome at Benina Wednesday night, setting the hangar and airdrome building on fire. In the course of operations Thursday night the harbor and objectives in the town of Bengazi were heavily and successfully attacked. Berka airdrome was also bombed.

DEC 20 1941

In the Central Mediterranean naval aircraft attacked an enemy tanker which was escorted by a destroyer. Two direct hits were obtained on the tanker, causing an explosion and fire. The vessel was believed to have been sunk.

From these and other operations one of our aircraft is missing.

LONDON, Dec. 19 (AP)—An Air Ministry communiqué today said:

Last night aircraft of the Bomber Command resumed the attack on warships in docks at Brest.

None of our aircraft is missing.

The Air and Home Security Ministries issued this communiqué today:

There was slight enemy activity in the early part of last night.

A few bombs which were dropped at one point in Southwest England caused neither damage nor casualties.

Netherland

BATAVIA, Netherlands Indies, Dec. 19 (AP)—The following communiqué was distributed today by the Netherlands Indies news agency:

A number of bombers of the Royal Netherlands Indies Army carried out an attack on enemy forces that landed in British North Borneo. As a consequence of adverse weather conditions the results could not be obtained. All the planes returned safely.

Today at 12:30 P. M. the city of Pontianak in Netherland West Borneo was bombed with high explosives and incendiary bombs by Japanese planes, first by land planes and later by seaplanes. The attack continues. There are no reports yet about the damage inflicted and possible casualties.

A joint action by the Navy and Army on a Japanese settlement in North Borneo resulted in the internment of a rather large number of Japanese.

A later Batavia announcement said:

A report of the Resident of the western division of Borneo to the Governor General gives the following particulars of the Japanese attack on Pontianak:

The attack lasted three-quarters of an hour. Between twenty and thirty incendiary as well as a smaller number of high explosives were dropped.

A couple of European houses and establishments were wrecked and a large fire was started in the Chinese quarter, Kampong Bali, which is still burning. It is hoped that it can be extinguished before dusk.

So far as is known many tens of people were killed, including several school children, when a bomb made a direct hit on a Netherland-Chinese school. It is estimated that about 100 persons have been seriously injured.

Russian

MOSCOW, Dec. 19 (From Russian broadcast recorded by The Associated Press)—The Soviet Bureau of Information communiqué today said:

During the night of Dec. 18-1 our troops fought the enemy on all fronts.

Soviet fliers operating on the Leningrad front destroyed four German railway trains, about 200 trucks and killed or dispersed about 1,000 enemy officers and men.

MOSCOW, Saturday, Dec. 20 (From Russian broadcast recorded by The Associated Press)—Today's Soviet Information Bureau communiqué follows:

During Dec. 19 our forces fought the enemy on all fronts.

On several sectors of the Western, Kalinin and Southwestern fronts our troops continued fierce battles with the enemy. We occupied populated areas, including the towns of Ruza, Tarussa and Khanino and villages west of Kaluga.

On Dec. 18 eight enemy planes were destroyed. Our losses were three.

Our forces wiped out the 134th German Division, not a German escaping. The general was killed. Many prisoners were taken. The 134th Division was encircled after trying to break through to the west.

DEC 20 1941

On Dec. 18 our troops destroyed twenty-eight German tanks, 340 trucks, eleven field guns and crews, 100 ammunition carts and set fire to railway trains. They also annihilated an infantry regiment and two platoons of cavalry.

This special announcement was made by the Soviet Information Bureau:

Twenty-two thousand Germans were killed and wounded on the Moscow front between Dec. 7 and 17.

During the same period they lost 319 tanks, forty-eight armored cars, 484 guns, 231 trench mortars, more than 3,700 trucks, 359 machine guns and 440 motor cycles.

German

BERLIN, Dec. 19 (From German broadcast recorded by The Associated Press)—The German High Command communiqué today said:

Hard fighting developed at several points on the eastern front as enemy attacks were being repulsed. The enemy suffered heavy losses.

Despite bad weather, the German air force attacked enemy troop concentrations, artillery positions, tank forces and lines of communications.

In Kola Bay a medium sized merchant ship was seriously damaged by bomb hits.

In the Mediterranean, a U-boat commanded by Lieutenant Driver sank a British cruiser of the Leander class off Alexandria.

Attempts by a strong British bomber and fighter formation to attack a port in occupied territories in the west failed yesterday with heavy losses for the enemy.

German fighters and anti-aircraft guns shot down twelve British planes, including five four-engined bombers. One German plane is missing.

Italian

ROME, Dec. 19 (From Italian broadcast recorded by The Associated Press)—The High Command communiqué today said:

Fierce fighting is in progress in the eastern region of the Cyrenaica highland, around Derna, where the enemy, with the support of fresh mechanized units from Egypt, is increasing the pressure against Axis troops who are fighting with praiseworthy tenacity.

On the Bardia and Solum fronts there was artillery fire. An attack by armored lorries was repulsed.

Bombing operations on columns on the march were carried out with excellent results by Italian-German aerial formations.

The enemy lost thirteen machines. Four were brought down by Italian fighters, seven by German fighters and two by anti-aircraft defenses.

Three of our planes are missing.

In the afternoon of Dec. 17 squadrons of torpedo-carrying planes attacked in successive waves in Cyrenaican waters important British naval forces and scored hits on three cruisers.

Another cruiser was torpedoed yesterday by Italian torpedo-carrying planes near Malta. German torpedo-carrying planes in their turn hit and set on fire a large enemy cruiser.

Two Italian planes did not return to their bases. Others returned with dead and wounded on board.

Planes brought down in the last raid on Taranto are admitted by the enemy to be six and not three as announced in our communiqué No. 562.

Finnish

HELSINKI, Finland, Dec. 19 (From Finnish broadcast recorded by the Associated Press)—The High Command issued this communiqué today:

Karelian Isthmus—On both sides artillery, trench mortar and harassing fire. Our artillery and trench mortars shelled enemy positions, scored hits on machine gun nests and log bunkers, and silenced a couple of direct fire cannon.

Svir River Front—The enemy launched weak attacks in numerous sections which, however, were repulsed, the enemy suffering heavy losses.

East Front—The enemy weakly attacked numerous sectors, but everywhere was repulsed. Our artillery silenced enemy batteries and gun nests.

Air—Our air force successfully bombed the Murmansk railroad north of Karma Station [Kotshkoma]. South of the upper Svir our fighters shot down one enemy plane. Local snowfalls restricted flying activities.

Congress Approves Army Draft Ages of 20 to 44, Inclusive

600,000 Potential Soldiers Left Out By Raising Limit From 19—All Men, 18-64, Must Register

DEC 20 1941

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP) — Congress cleared the way today for a 4,000,000-man Army by approving and sending to President Roosevelt legislation requiring the registration of all men from 18 to 64 years old, inclusive, and making those from 20 to 44, inclusive, subject to military service.

Officials at Selective Service headquarters said the registration probably would not begin before several weeks. Although the new draft bill makes possible an Army of at least 4,000,000, there is no way of telling whether that many men will ever be called to the colors. Secretary of War Stimson has said increases in the Army would be ordered "in the light of the strategic situation as it develops."

Both Houses agreed speedily on compromise amendments to the Selective Service Act which War Department officials said would make a total of 2,215,000 men available in the next few months, in addition to the 1,800,000 now in uniform.

This included, experts said, 915,000 men from 21 through 35 already registered and listed as [illegible] in class 1-A.

They estimated the new bill would provide an additional 600,000 class 1-A registrants from among 20-year-olds; 400,000 in the ages from 36 through 44; and 300,000 who have reached the age of 21 since the last registration was held.

By compromising on a minimum age of 20 for active service — a year younger than the House desired and a year older than the Senate had voted — Congress cut off an additional supply of 600,000 potential soldiers.

But with 100,000 youths turning 20 every month, congressional leaders said there was every reason to believe that the Army would get all of the men it could equip and train as fast as it could handle them. Under recently approved legislation the Navy could obtain up to 50,000 of the selectees and the Marines 10,000.

Registration of 23,500,000 men would be undertaken under terms of the bill calling for the listing of all males from 18 through 64. Added to the 17,500,000 already registered this would give Selective Service officials records on 41,000,000.

Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, Selective Service director, informed Congress that his staff was making preparations to begin registrations within the new age limits. Registrations will be taken in age classifications at the discretion of President Roosevelt, with those subject to active service expected to be listed first.

Hershey said the men in the latter groups would be added to the lists of those already classified under the 21 through 35 age limits and thus become subject to the draft along with them.

As finally approved, the legislation left within the Selective Service Act a provision defining dependency grounds upon which potential selectees might be deferred from active service. The Senate had sought to strike this out in order to give local draft boards more discretion in such matters, but conferees killed the Senate amendment.

A clause in the new bill provides that elective State officials shall be granted deferment as long as they remain in office.

The bill extends for 120 days the time in which members of the armed forces may apply for national insurance. It provides payments of $5,000 to the survivors of all men who died or were totally disabled on active duty since Oct. 8, or who die or are totally disabled within the next 120 days without obtaining such insurance.

Shortly after approval of the Selective Service measure, Chairman Walsh (D.-Mass.) introduced in the Senate a bill to increase the emergency strength of the Army from 300,000 to 500,000 men and to raise the Marine Corps limit from 60,000 to 104,000 men.

James Forrestal, Undersecretary of the Navy, said in a letter to Walsh that 1,00,000 men would be required for the two-ocean fleet now under construction but that 500,000 would be sufficient at the present time.

Additions to the Navy and Marine personnel are expected to be made largely through enlistments.

BARES AXIS SPYING IN LATIN AMERICA

DEC 20 1941

House Committee Says Thousands Of Nazis, Fascists, Japs Are Active There

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 19—In a startling report on Axis espionage and propaganda in Latin America, a House committee asserted today that thousands of German, Italian and Japanese agents are active there and have established air bases, arms depots and jungle radio stations.

The committee, a special aircraft investigating group headed by Representative Nichols (Dem., Okla.), based its report on a first-hand air survey of sixteen Latin-American nations which covered 21,000 miles.

As a major step toward combating these activities, the committee urged that the State Department speedily complete negotiatons to supplant German and Italian commercial air lines in Latin America with American companies.

DEC 20 1941

Threatens House Debate

Nichols said if these negotiations were not quickly concluded he would discuss the question on the House floor in an effort to bring the matter to a head.

The report declared that while many thoughtful Latin Americans were on the alert to recognize and counteract Nazi, Fascist and Falangist influence, the "subversive forces are strong, and their continuance has a very direct and harmful effect upon inter-American aviation."

Saying their information came from authoritative sources, the committee dealt at length with spy and propaganda activity in seven countries—Argentina, Peru, Chile, Mexico, Colombia, Guatemala and Brazil.

2,200 Agents In Argentina

As for Argentina, the report said there were 2,200 Gestapo agents operating in Buenos Aires alone, and there was "reason to believe that a large contingent of Storm Troopers has been organized and that secret drilling is now in progress."

The city of more than 2,000,000, the report added, had been divided into fifty-six districts, with ten cells in each district, all of which "are carefully policed and supervised by the Nazi organization."

The German Embassy in Buenos Aires, it said, operates its own printing plant and only recently "it printed the speeches delivered by a United States Senator and by Charles A. Lindbergh, compiled these speeches in a green brochure, and gave them wide distribution in Argentina to impress people there with the fact that disunity exists in the United States."

90,000 Active Nazis

It said there were 90,000 active Nazis operating in Buenos Aires, that they had infiltrated into trade unions and charitable organizations, and there was reason to believe they had perfected plans to sabotage utilities. In a crisis, they probably could establish an operating base there, it added.

Regarding Peru, the report said there were 22,000 registered Japanese in Lima and that the actual number probably exceeds 30,000; that the Nazis are "very active" in the country, and that two Lima newspapers, El Comercio and La Prenza, appear to have definite Fascist leanings."

Chile—"There is reason to believe that Storm Troopers are drilling in Chile. The very best diplomats from Germany, Spain and Italy are now coordinating their activities in Chile in order to break down the cordial relationship which has existed between Chile and the United States.

Taught In Germany

"Chilean army officers, over a period of many years, have been feted, instructed, and educated in Germany, and have developed an admiration for the German system. Santiago, the capital, has a newspaper subsidized by the Nazis."

Mexico—"It was disclosed to the committee that short-wave radio stations abound in the jungles for direct communication with Berlin and European centers. A number of these short-wave stations have actually been confiscated by the Mexican Government at the instance of the United States officers.

"The committee has reason to believe that merchant vessel departures from the United States across the Atlantic have been communicated in code to Mexico City and then by short-wave transmitted to Nazi authorities in Germany. . . .

"It is believed that the German Ambassador in Mexico City is the head of the Gestapo for the North American continent. It is known that women spies are very widely used for the purpose of procuring information of diplomatic and military value."

Colombia—"There is reason to believe that photographs of Colombia now repose in the military archives of Germany" through use of German pilots for many years on the Scadta air line.

"It was represented to the committee by competent persons that a Japanese colony, located approximately thirty miles from the city of Cali, on the Pacific side of the Andes, has become a veritable storehouse for rifles, ammunition, pistols and hand grenades, all of which were imported under the misleading appellation of farm machinery.

"This colony, ostensibly working a 2,000-acre bean farm, is surrounded with a wire fence which is electrically charged."

In Guatemala

Guatemala: "It was represented to the committee by American authorities that sixty per cent. of all the coffee plantations are owned and operated by Nazis. . . . One of the leading hotels in Guatemala City is operated by a subchief of the German Gestapo," who "has sought to lure Americans and American flyers to this hotel for the purpose of eliciting information and secrets which have some value."

"The committee is advised that the Gestapo has set up its own secret court system in Guatemala, and that violators and offenders of Nazi law, Nazi regulations and of Nazi philosophy are tried and punished."

Brazil: "It is understood by the committee that the former chief pilot of the Scadta line, a German army air force reserve officer, has settled, with one or more of his aides, and established an airport (in the northern section of the Amazon basin) possibly equipped with radio."

Radio Plant 200 Miles Out

The report said on the bulge of Brazil where Axis planes arrive from Dakar, West Africa, the former line Air France has extensive airport and radio facilities, as has the German line Lufthansa now used by Lati.

"Additional radio directional equipment is installed on the rockly island Fernando de Noronha, approximately 200 miles offshore in the direction of Dakar," the report said. "This equipment is owned by and is believed to be still in operation by Air France, which can hardly be said to have remained under purely French control."

Because of possible legal restrictions against American pilots on post-war air lines within Latin-American countries, the report recommended that ambitious young men be brought immediately from those nations for complete training in the United States "so that they may become not only competent pilots but wed to the traditions of this hemisphere."

Price Prepares To Clarify U. S War Censorship

New Director's Office Set Up by Presidential Order, Policy Board Is Created

WASHINGTON, Dec. 19 (AP).—Byron Price, newly designated director of censorship, asserted today that his first task probably would be to "summarize and clarify" the many requests the government already had made regarding information that should not be made public.

These requests, he said, have been issued "piecemeal," and some have been contradictory.

Mr. Price conferred with President Roosevelt, Attorney General Francis Biddle and Postmaster General Frank C. Walker at the White House. He preferred not to discuss details of his work until his appointment goes through formally. Meanwhile, he said, he must look around for quarters and for an executive officer to handle details of the organization of government censorship.

Both the press and the radio, he said, have sent him hundreds of messages, all offering support. They say, he added, that what they want "is for the government to tell them what to do." Mr. Price said he was going to tackle that task as soon as he could find working space in the capital.

Mr. Roosevelt formally established the Office of Censorship by an executive order today and gave its director "absolute discretion" over censorship of mail, cable, radio and other means of transmitting information outside the United States.

Policy Board Set Up

The order created a censorship policy board, with the Postmaster General as chairman, to advise the Censorship Director on policy, coordination and integration of censorship.

DEC 20 1941

In addition, the director was ordered to establish a censorship operating board consisting of representatives of government departments and agencies.

On the Censorship Policy Board, along with the Postmaster General, are Vice-President Wallace, the Secretaries o the Treasury, War and Navy, the Attorney General, the Director of the Office of Government Reports and the Director of the Office of Facts and Figures.

Text of Order

The text of the President's order follows:

"By virtue of the authority vested in me by the Constitution and the statutes of the United States, and particularly by Section 303, Title III of the act of Dec. 18, 1941, Public Law 354, 77th Congress, 1st Session, and deeming that the public safety demands it, I hereby order as follows:

"1. There is hereby established the Office of Censorship, at the head of which shall be a Director of Censorship. The Director of Censorship shall cause to be censored, in his absolute discretion, communications by mail, cable, radio, or other means of transmission passing between the United States and any foreign country or which may be carried by any vessel or other means of transportation touching at any port, place, or territory of the United States and bound to or from any foreign country, in accordance with such rules and regulations as the President shall from time to time prescribe. The establishment of rules and regulations in addition to the provisions of this order shall not be a condition to the exercise of the powers herein granted or the censorship by this order directed. The scope of this order shall include all foreign countries except such as may hereafter be expressly excluded by regulation.

"2. There is hereby created a Censorship Policy Board, which shall consist of the Vice-President of the United States, the Secretary of the Treasury, the Secretary of War, the Attorney General, the Postmaster General, the Secretary of the Navy, the Director of the Office of Government Reports, and the Director of the Office of Facts and Figures. The Postmaster General shall act as chairman of the board. The Censorship Policy Board shall advise the Director of Censorship with respect to policy and the co-ordination and integration of the censorship herein directed.

"3. The Director of Censorship shall establish a censorship operating board, which shall consist of representatives of such departments and agencies of the government as the director shall specify. Each representative shall be designated by the head of the department or agency which he represents. The censorship operating board shall, under the supervision of the director, perform such duties with respect to operations as the director shall determine.

"4. The Director of Censorship is authorized to take all such measures as may be necessary or expedient to administer the powers hereby conferred, and, in addition to the utilization of existing personnel of any department or agency available therefor, to employ, or authorize the employment of, such additional personnel as he may deem requisite.

"5. As used in this order the term 'United States' shall be construed to include the territories and possessions of the United States, including the Philippine Islands.

"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

Wire Control Bill Passed

Plan Pan-American Convoys

Delegates to Rio Conference to Discuss Use of Navies of Both Continents.

DEC 20 1941

Washington, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—Employment of North and South American navies in a hemispheric convoy to insure deliveries of strategic materials between the Americas is expected to be discussed, and possibly ratified, at the conference of foreign ministers in Rio de Janeiro.

The convoy question, diplomatic and maritime officials said, would be raised under the general study of protection of the Western Hemisphere at the January 15 meeting.

Eleven Latin American nations having navies, ranging from the larger ones of Argentina, Brazil and Chile to those of smaller nations having only gunboats, would shoulder convoy duties with the United States.

Release of suggestions made by various Latin American governments for the conference agenda showed that two nations—Chile and Venezuela—proposed that the subject of protecting American merchant shipping be brought up.

Wants Security Measures.

Chile, which already is using convoys between ports on its long south Pacific coastline, proposed that the foreign ministers authorize "security measures for the protection of vessels engaged in inter-American commerce against attack from hostile forces."

Venezuela, pointing to the "present systematic destruction of merchant vessels," proposed the topic of "organization and coordination of inter-American maritime services."

Ten of the twenty-one American republics have declared war, two have severed diplomatic relations with the Axis and the rest have pledged their adherence to inter-American solidarity.

Protection is needed, trade experts said, for the vast amounts of strategic minerals shipped to this country from Chile and Bolivia, bauxite from Dutch Guiana that is brought here for conversion into aluminum and various other materials shipped to the United States from South and Central American nations.

They also pointed to the oil, finished defense materials, machinery and lease-lend articles that this country has agreed to send Latin American countries to aid them in bolstering their defenses.

REORGANIZATION OF OPM ORDERED

Knudsen And Hillman To Have Supervision Of All Industrial Branches

Leon Henderson, Douglas MacKeachie And Floyd Odlum Become "Idea Men"

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 19—A sweeping reorganization of OPM's internal setup was ordered today, preliminary to a sharp speedup in the Government's drive to convert industry to full wartime production and trim output of civilian goods to bare necessities.

The shakeup brought all industrial branches handling civilian supplies and industries directly under the supervision of Director General William S. Knudsen and Sidney Hillman, associate director.

Formerly, these branches were governed by Leon Henderson as Civilian Supply Administrator and Douglas C. MacKeachie as director of purchases.

Two Now Solely Responsible

OPM's two top men—Knudsen and Hillman—now become solely responsible for curtailing or halting non-essential civilian production—such as rationing automobile tires and limiting automobile output—and turning all available plant machinery into war industries. In addition, the reorganization will eliminate much of the tape and many of the intermediate steps which have slowed OPM operations in the past.

Although refusing to discuss the implications of the move officially, OPM sources predicted it would leave Henderson, MacKeachie and Floyd Odlum, OPM's contract distribution director, as idea men. Recommendations of this "brain trust" will be submitted to Knudsen and Hillman and it will be up to the latter, as experts on production and labor problems, to get the results.

Formerly, the three divisions operated independently, requiring continual interexchange of plans and subsequent delays before the finished product finally reached the OPM chiefs for approval.

objective of the change, an OPM statement of policy declared.

"Industry must be converted as quickly as possible into making goods for either military purposes or for essential civilian needs," the statement said. "By essential civilian needs, we mean the minimum a civilian can get along with, so that maximum amounts of materials and resources will be devoted to the vast war effort.

Cooperation Stressed

"To speed up this conversion, it is necessary to have the full cooperation of industry and labor. . . ."

Industrial branches brought under direct control of Knudsen and Hillman include those covering pulp and paper, printing and publishing, lumber and building materials, plumbing and heating, electrical products and consumer durable goods such as washing machines and ironers, automotive transportation and farm equipment, industrial and office machinery, rubber and rubber goods, food supplies, textiles and shoes.

Production Branch Unaffected

The production branch, under W. H. Harrison, and the materials branch, under William L. Batt, were not affected by the shakeup.

NAZI INDUSTRY HIT BY RED DRIVE

Washington Hears Call for Reserves Cuts Output.

Washington, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—The Commerce Department said today that Germany's industrial backbone has been weakened by the calling up of reserve troops to bolster the war machine on the Russian front.

Recalling that Germany had suffered a labor shortage almost from the beginning of the war, the department said in a special article that summoning the reserves had further weakened working forces "in spite of the constantly growing employment of foreign workers."

The article estimated that 1,700,000 persons—one-fifth of them women—from other European countries and many war prisoners had been put to work, plus about 1,000,000 German women.

No estimate was made of the effect of the labor shortage on munitions production, but the department commented that in industries making civilian items "increased scarcity has been caused not so much by the shortage of materials as by the scarcity of skilled workers."

The article reported a cut in the clothing rations and said ration cards recently issued for winter overcoats might not be filled, in many cases, before next September.

To conserve metals, the canned vegetable ration also has been cut, and one type of ration card used in some districts now permits holders to buy only about 2.2 pounds of canned vegetables during the entire winter, with no choice of kinds.

ENVOYS OF AXIS ARRIVE AT SPAS

Germans and Japanese Are Held in Virginias.

Washington, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—The State Department disclosed today that the staff of the German embassy and German newspaper correspondents were being held, pending their departure from the United States, at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va.

It was announced recently in Berlin that the staff of the American embassy there and American correspondents in Germany had been taken to Bad Nauheim, in southern Germany.

Thus the reciprocal treatment of the Germans here has been carried out even to the point of housing them in the same type of locality as was chosen for Americans in Germany—a health resort.

DEC 20 1941

Some Due to White Sulphur.

The staff of the Hungarian legation, the State Department said, also will be concentrated at White Sulphur Springs together with Hungarian consuls in the United States.

Japanese consular officials from various parts of the United States will be taken to Hot Springs, Va., pending arrangements for their departure from the United States.

The State Department announced the names of five more American citizens employed at the embassies in Berlin and Rome who are expected to be sent home along with other American officials in Germany and Italy.

Metropolitan Residents Included.

In addition to the sixty-six American diplomatic officials and employees in Berlin previously listed, the State Department named Mrs. Signe Christine Asendorf, of Portland, Ore., and Margaret Paula Hausmann of New York city.

The names of Harold S. Bell, New York city; Mrs. Elisabetta Carlinfanti, Somerville, N. J., and Reginald E. Perkins, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., were added to the list of thirty-three American officials and employees in Rome who are to be returned to their homes here when Italian diplomatic and consular officials are sent back to Germany.

Nazi Group Includes Couple On Honeymoon

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Dec 9 (AP)—Like many an American couple before them, a German baron and baroness are spending their honeymoon at the Greenbrier hotel, thanks to two "very nice" FBI agents.

Baron Ulrich F. von Gienanth, second secretary of the German embassy and member of the German elite guard, and Karin von Gienanth of Riesch, of New York, were married yesterday at Alexandria, Va., and arrived here today with the rest of German officials and nationals who will remain here pending arrangements for their return to Germany.

The baron said that they found a law requiring a three-day waiting period in Washington too stringent, and persuaded two FBI men to cross the Virginia line with them and witness the ceremony. One of the agents signed the marriage register as a witness.

Calls Agents "Very Nice"

"Please say," the baron smiled, "that the two FBI agents were very nice men."

The couple, both aboard, had known each other fourteen years. Her two brothers were his fraternity brothers at Munich. She is a sister-in-law of Baron von Bulow, of the famous German family. She has taught at a New York girls' school for five years.

Baron von Gienanth came to America as an exchange student at Johns Hopkins University in 1931 and returned to Germany and entered the foreign service in 1932. In 1936 he was assigned to the New York office of the consul general and in 1937 became second secretary of the embassy at Washington.

Federal Works Head Says It Is Reasonable To Assume Effort Will Be Made "To Get Our Goat"

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—Brig. Gen. Philip B. Fleming, Federal Works Administrator, said today "it is reasonable to assume" that attempts will be made to bomb Washington.

In a radio address directed primarily to Government employes, Fleming said such an attempt would be primarily an effort to "paralyze our nerve," since there are no major armament production facilities here.

"In plain words," he added, "it will be an attempt to 'get our goat'—your goat. I am sure it will not succeed."

Scarce War Materials Requisitioned By Navy

More Than $1,000,000 Worth Held In Storage For Shipment Abroad Seized

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—The OPM announced today that the Navy Department had requisitioned more than $1,000,000 worth of critically scarce materials being held in warehouses and railroad terminals for shipment to foreign countries.

The seizures were the first under requisitioning authority extended to OPM by President Roosevelt's executive order of November 19.

With OPM's approval, the navy seized more than 13,000,000 pounds of steel, 3,500,000 pounds of electrolytic copper, 34,000 pounds of tin and 70,000 feet of teakwood decking and squares.

Owners of the materials, chiefly firms in Holland, Switzerland and Sweden which had placed their orders before the outbreak of war, will be paid under regulations established by the Supply Priorities and Allocations Board.

50 MILLION GAS MASKS

LaGuardia Wants Them for Coastal Areas.

Washington, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—F. H. LaGuardia, Civilian Defense Director, proposed today that the Government supply 50,000,000 gas masks for civilians in coastal areas.

This figure has been presented to President Roosevelt, Mr. LaGuardia said, adding that action in the matter would depend on the judgment of the army as to the number of masks needed. He explained that five types of masks had been designed, one for protection of babies, one for children 2 to 3 years old, one for larger children, a small adult mask for women and a universal adult mask.

The civilian defense director estimated that the masks would cost about $3.75 each and proposed that they be supplied by the Government free of cost to civilians in areas along the coast reaching some 150 to 300 miles into the interior.

EXPECT 1942 TO DOUBLE GOODS OUTPUT OF 1941

Washington, D. C., Dec. 19 (AP).—The Bureau of Agricultural Economics, in a forecast of things to come in 1942, predicted today that production of manufactured and processed goods for the war effort of the United States and its allies would be double that of 1941.

At least a third of the output, it said, would be war materials, compared with 10% in 1940.

Other forecasts for the new year included:

Labor troubles will diminish.

The amount of overtime work will increase, and additional shifts will be more fully utilized.

More Lead and Copper.

Increased output of some commodities, such as lead and copper, may be obtained by subsidizing marginal and submarginal producers.

The bureau said it expected consumer demand for products to be reduced, despite an increase in consumer income, by greater restrictions on normal economic activities and by rising taxes.

Curtailment of production of such civilian goods as automobiles, household equipment and residences, the bureau said, would tend to increase the proportion of funds available for such types of consumers' goods and services as food, clothing and amusements.

Gain in Employment.

The bureau estimated that in October this year, 42,800,000 persons were employed in non-agricultural pursuits, exclusive of relief work but including military. This compared with 38,100,000 a year earlier. The compensation of these workers was said to have been at the annual rate of $63,000,000,000 compared with $52,000,000,000 a year earlier.

Continuation of the June-to-October rate of gain, the bureau said, would carry non-agricultural employe compensation to an annual rate of $70,000,000,000 by next October.

COAST GUARD CLASS URGED TO BE READY

30 Graduated 5 Months Ahead Of Schedule At New London, Conn.

Cadets Warned Unpreparedness "Can Produce A Pearl Harbor"

[By the Associated Press]

New London, Conn., Dec. 19—Thirty cadets from the class of 1942 at the Coast Guard Academy, being graduated today five months ahead of schedule, were told never to forget the motto of their service, "Semper Paratus" (always prepared), because "a moment's lack of readiness can produce a Pearl Harbor."

"Every morning as you dress I hope the flash of that Coast Guard seal on your uniform sleeve will bring the motto afresh to your mind," said Joseph W. Barker, an assistant in the Navy Department who represented Secretary Knox at the exercises.

Urges "Eternal Vigilance"

Declaring that "eternal vigilance is the price of success," Barker told the cadets:

"Results in battle are gained not by momentary brilliance of strategic or tactical reasoning, but by the welding of the crews into fighting units through patient training. Inefficiency of leader of crew cannot be tolerated. Training, more training, and still more training is the only method to produce crews which instantaneously react properly in disasters."

Barker, dean of Columbia University's School of Engineering, reminded the cadets that he, like they, had been called from duties in education by the war emergency.

Stepped Up Program

"You are not as well equipped in theoretical training as was the class of last June," he said. "You are graduating with certain deficiencies. Your own individual training while in the service will have to make up for those deficiencies plus gaining those advanced elements of your naval education which can only come through actual service."

Under the academy's stepped-up program, the 1943 class is to be graduated next May.

U. S. TAKES PLANTS OF ENEMY ALIENS

20 in Philadelphia Area to Be Held by Treasury.

DEC 20 1941

Philadelphia, Dec. 19 (A. P.).—A Federal spokesman said today that the Treasury Department has assumed full supervision of twenty to twenty-five plants in the Philadelphia area owned or controlled by Axis nationals.

Treasury agents, following a prearranged plan, moved in quietly to prevent sabotage and insure maximum production of defense products, the spokesman declared.

The ownership of the firms had been determined by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and Treasury agents, he added. The establishments, he said, were valued at several million dollars.

The Treasury Department, acting under authority vested in its frozen funds division, will retain control, the spokesman said, until the pending alien property bill is passed in Congress.

Destroyer Launched

DEC 20 1941

NEW YORK, Dec. 19 (AP)—Another sister ship of the torpedoed destroyer Kearny, the 1,630 ton U. S. S. Bailey, costing $6,000,000 was launched today at the Bethlehem Shipyard, Staten Island. Work on the new vessel was started immediately.

Named for the late Rear Admiral Theodorus Bailey, the ship was christened by his granddaughter, Mrs. Mary De Peyster Charles.

Three submarine chasers will be launched tomorrow—two in Brooklyn and one in the Bronx.

WAR IMPROVES CANAL DEFENSE

Military Force Strengthened by Civilian Aid.

Balboa, Panama Canal Zone (Correspondence of Wide World).—The Panama Canal will be kept open. Guardians of Uncle Sam's Atlantic-Pacific life line make that pledge today with even more assurance than they could before December 7.

Unbelievably much has happened in the intervening handful of days to build up an all-out defense of the canal.

Panama has gone to war at the United States' side—with action, not words. Military defenses have been supplemented by civilian defense.

Less than an hour after word arrived of the bombing of Pearl Harbor, Japanese subjects were rushed jailward by the vanload.

Doctors and nurses have been registered, assigned to emergency stations. Schools have been closed a month early for vacation so children may be taken to the interior—away from the canal. Precautionary blackouts are held nightly. Air raid trench shelters have pockmarked Panama City's parks and vacant lots.

The canal has been closed from dusk to dawn. Daylight transit is under the heaviest kind of guard. Commercial airline ships fly in and out with all windows curtained for the twenty minutes preceding landing or following take-off.

Axis Sympathizers Held.

Over 1,000 Axis nationals and suspected sympathizers have been taken into custody in Panama alone.

Canal Zone residents—United States Government employees—are volunteering as air raid wardens, as chauffeurs, as mail censors—all the numberless war time chores.

White collar crews are building their own defense shelters while construction men keep on with vital defense work. Every resident is getting in a supply of sand for attack against incendiary bombs, a ladder to reach his rooftop, blue screening for any necessary light.

The republic of Panama's civilian defense commission is in practically continuous session.

School teachers, released by closing of schools, are heading first aid classes. Schools are being prepared for first aid stations. Blood-types are being listed. Hundreds of Panama's funny-looking little buses have been registered as ambulances.

From one end of Panama to the other, there is unity of purpose. Panamanians are in the war all the way.

TYPHUS EPIDEMIC MENACE TO NAZIS

Outbreaks Behind Lines On Russian Battle Front Believed Serious

Drastic Health Measures Are Taken By Germans In Occupied Areas

(Wide World)

[Special Dispatch to The Sun]

Bern, Dec. 19—Drastic measures taken by health authorities in the Balkan and Ukraine occupied areas indicate to observers that the outbreak of typhus behind German lines has become serious.

The newspaper Die Tat said schools have been closed in the Ukraine, and in Riga, fumigation measures to exterminate vermin were ordered. All infected territories were closed to travel.

TYPHUS

Russia has had serious typhus outbreaks in the past. Between 1918 and 1921 it was estimated that more than 25,000,000 persons were afflicted. Rumania had 800,000 deaths between 1917 and 1918, while Poland had more than 1,000,000 cases during the 1918 epidemic.

DEC 20 1941

Typhus in Battle Area

Stockholm dispatches said the typhus area included Estonia, Lithuania and White Russia, principally in the quadrangle bounded by Vilna, Brest Litovsk, Bialystok and Minsk, the region which suffered most in the German-Russian battles last summer.

All persons recalled to Germany by their duties have been submitted to severe quarantine measures.

The League of Nations epidemiological bulletin showed there were twenty-seven times more typhus cases during the first half of 1941 in the Wartheland section of western Poland than during the whole of 1938. In Ruthenia, typhus increased eight times and in northern Transylvania nine times. In Rumania, the number of cases had reached 498 a month by January, 1940.

In Bessarabia And Bukovina

The Bucharest radio announced recently that medical authorities had been sent to Bessarabia and northern Bukovina to combat epidemics in that typhus-ridden area.

The Polish Telegraphic Agency said Germans had been forced to supplement medical staffs with Jewish doctors and Jews have even been ordered to work in German military hospitals. The medical corps of the Latvian, Lithuanian and Estonian armies have been called up by the Germans to combat the epidemic and posters have been issued appealing to the populace to observe medical regulations.

Lowly Louse Carrier Of Scourge Of Armies

The lowly louse, scourge of armies, is the carrier of typhus fever, through an organism known as rickettsia, discovered and named after the American Public Health physician, Howard Taylor Ricketts.

The disease, highly contagious, lasts about fourteen days and saps the strength, brings severe nervous derangement and a spotted rash. The chief preventive is thorough delousing. Poor food, starvation and crowding are chief factors in making people susceptible.

Typhus has an incubation period of a week to ten days during which no symptoms other than languor are noticeable. The second stage usually brings rigor, headache and sleeplessness with high fever and heavy thirst. The third stage brings the rash and the typhus stupor accompained by delirium. After the crisis, the temperature falls and the stupor ends.

Mortality Of 18 Per Cent.

The disease has an estimated mortality of eighteen per cent. although varying to a high degree with older persons.

It has been recognized for many centuries but is most frequent in cold or temperate climates.

One of the most devastating epidemics of typhus occurred in Serbia in 1915, when, it was estimated, the disease cost more lives than all Serbia's fighting and prevented the army from taking the offensive.

At least 200,000 victims died and Serbia appealed for aid to the United States, France, Russia and Great Britain, who set up an international sanitary commission and sent 500 doctors and nurses to establish hospitals in the country.

The epidemic was checked within a few weeks. One American doctor estimated that seventy-five per cent. of the population had been infected.

In the Crimean War, typhus took a heavy toll, especially among French troops. It was in this campaign that Florence Nightingale established modern nursing.

During and after the Napoleonic Wars, typhus spread throughout Europe. In Saragossa, Spain, it caused 40,000 death... In 1819, there were 737,000 cases in England and Ireland, resulting in 44,000 deaths.

If this great base falls it will be a tough blow—though it will be far from fatal—to the allied strategic set-up.

For one thing it will increase the threat to the Philippines by at once depriving the Allies of a prime defensive position and giving the Japs another naval and air base within easy striking distance of Manila. This would add to the burden of our defense of the Philippines at a moment when there may be a question of whether we will be asked to send naval and air aid to support the British against the heavy Japanese drive on Singapore.

In other words, if the threat against Singapore increases we may be faced with the uncomfortable problem of whether the Philippines shall be placed in further jeopardy in order to save the British base which strategically is of greater importance.

London Statement Recalled.

What struck me as a forecast of such a dilemma cropped up last Tuesday when an informed spokesman in London told the press that the Japanese offensive on the Malayan peninsula and Britain's lack of naval superiority had raised a serious threat to Singapore. Now a statement of that sort isn't made without some vital reason back of it, especially since it lends encouragement to the enemy. It looked very much like a signal to America for help.

However, the milk hasn't been spilt yet at either Singapore or the Philippines, and there's no use in watering it with tears in advance of evil which may never come. Let's give re-enforcements a chance to reach the Far East before getting pessimistic.

Not overlooking that the battle of the Pacific is only a part of the world war, the Allies find much for satisfaction in the tussle with Adolf Hitler. If the British sustain their claim to have smashed the Axis resistance in Africa, the Allies have won a major victory. It weakens the Axis threat to control of the Mediterranean area. It will greatly lessen the effectiveness of any future drive the Germans may attempt into the Middle East through the Caucasus or Turkey.

DEC 20 1941

Reds Persuing Nazis.

Then we have the amazing Russians who are free-wheeling it after the retreating Nazis so fast that 138 more villages are reported to have fallen into the Red bag in fresh operations. Large quantities of war material are said to have been taken by the Bolshevists and, despite the German retirement, fierce fighting appears to be taking place in some sectors.

People in whose minds still rankles the Russo-German pact of 1939, continue to bombard this column with inquiries as to whether the Red counter-offensive and the Nazi withdrawal are a put up job and the forerunner of another treaty of brotherhood between the two.

Well, your correspondent freely admits that crazy things can happen in this war, but that solution of the great Hitlerian retreat just doesn't make sense. It seems to me that we are trying to be too erudite, and are being unfair to an ally, however, when we arrive at such a very smart conclusion.

The simple answer takes into account that these two nations are natural enemies, as I pointed out a few days ago. Hitler badly overreached himself in his efforts to crush the Bolshevists, and Stalin's forces are taking advantage of the distress of the invaders.

There's nothing phony about that Russian winter. As Henry Cassidy, Associated Press correspondent with the Red Army on the Moscow front, wrote yesterday "the elements at their wildest, whining and moaning weirdly on the broad plains, broken here and there by stark forests, strike every living thing exposed to them and make death by freezing an ever present danger."

That's why Hitler's armies are pulling back and abandoning a wealth of war material as they go. They have been caught in that wild waste with over-extended communications. They expected a quick victory over the Muscovites and didn't come prepared for winter fighting. Many of them are freezing to death and the rest must be suffering terribly. They are falling back to escape horrid death in the open.

That's the real story as I see it.

DEC 20 1941

CHAO-KAI, A FREQUENT VISITOR TO RUSSIA, SAID HE INTENDED TO SUBMIT HIS PLAN IMMEDIATELY TO GENERALISSIMO CHIANG KAI-SHEK.

HE CONFEERED HERE WITH BRIG. GENERAL JOHN MAGRUDER, UNITED STATE MILITARY MISSION LEADER, MAJ. GENERAL L.E.DENNYS, HEAD OF A BRITISH MILITARY MISSION, AND OWEN LATTIMORE, POLITICAL ADVISER TO CHIANG KAI SHEK.

HE SAID HIS PLAN COULD BE PUT INTO OPERATION IF THE ANTI-JAPANESE FORCES WOULD SUPPLY FUNDS FOR ARMS, AMMUNITION AND OTHER SUPPLIES AND ADDED THAT SUCH AID WAS A MATTER OF DIPLOMATIC ARRANGEMENT BETWEEN THE ALLIES, INCLUDING RUSSIA.

CHAO-KAI ADDED THAT THE JAPANESE, IN ADDITION TO KEEPING 300,000 TROOPS AT THE MANCHUKUOAN BORDER, HAVE BEEN FORCED TO USE SEVEN FULL DIVISIONS OF TROOPS TO MAINTAIN INTERNAL PEACE.

MEANWHILE, IT APPEARED THAT THE CLOSING OF THE HONGKONG AIR ROUTE AND THE JAPANESE THREAT TO THE BURMA ROAD HAD DEALT A SERIOUS BLOW TO CHINESE EXPORT TRADE.

CHINESE COMMENTATORS URGED THAT THE GOVERNMENT HELP SOFTEN THAT BLOW BY NATIONALIZING FOREIGN TRADE, STIMULATING EXPORTS THROUGH NEW ROUTES AND ENCOURAGING THE PRODUCTION OF ESSENTIAL MATERIALS.

Troops From Four Transports Land— American Flyers Beat Off Burma Road Attack.

DEC 21 1941

By the Associated Press.

American submarines slashing at sea-borne Japanese invasion forces were credited by the navy today with sinking an additional enemy transport while United States armed forces in the Philippines battled a new Japanese thrust on Mindanao Island and American fliers victoriously engaged Japanese warplanes in far-off China, on the Burma Road.

Dispatches from Chungking said that members of an international air force, composed exclusively of American volunteers who resigned from United States armed forces to serve in China, shot down four of ten Japanese planes without loss to themselves. It was the first time they had gone into action to defend the Burma Road, China's vital route of war supplies.

The navy's communique implied that the second Japanese transport to be sunk by United States submarines was sent to the bottom off the Philippines, perhaps in the Mindanao area where four Japanese transports were reported to have landed troops.

DEC 21 1941

Heavy, all-day fighting raged around Davao, the island's chief city, 600 miles south of Manila.

Battle Rages at Davao.

Manila, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—Heavy fighting is raging this evening at the predominantly Japanese city of Davao, on the island of Mindanao, in the southern Philippines, where four enemy transports early today unloaded a swarm of troops, it was announced here.

Meanwhile today Japanese warplanes struck again at Nichols Field, in Manila, but the raid was light. Only a few bombs fell on the field, it was reported, most of them falling wide of their mark and landing in Manila Bay near a large water supply tank.

DEC 21 1941

Another formation of bombers also flew toward Cavite, site of a United States naval base on Manila Bay, but no raid was reported from that district.

The air raid alarm in Manila was in effect for an hour and ten minutes.

DEC 21 1941

A communique issued at the headquarters of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commander of the United States Army in the Far East, said tersely:

"Nichols Field was bombed lightly after 12 o'clock.

"Fighting continues at Davao."

Furious Fighting at Davao.

Earlier today, just before noon, headquarters disclosed officially that the Japanese were attempting in force to establish a hold on the island of Mindanao. They swept into Davao waters early in the morning and the fighting was reported to be furious throughout the day.

That city, where the Japanese have large investments and where 1,500 Japanese of military age were rounded up by the army soon after the war began, was the first point in the Philippines to be atacked from the air. Japanese planes bombed the city at 6:30 A. M. on December 8 and returned that afternoon for another raid. Since then, however, no attacks had been announced from Davao and the army has declared it had the situation locally in hand.

Today's action at Davao was the high spot of the day's fighting as officially reported.

[That landing, apparently, was the first attempt made by the Japanese to obtain a foothold on any island in the archipelago other than Luzon.]

Early today the headquarters of Gen. MacArthur announced increased patrol activity in the Aparri, Vigan and Legaspi areas of Luzon Island, where the Japanese have landed troops, but no details were given.

The brief communique issued on the Davao fighting said:

"It has been reliably reported that the Japanese are landing in force at Davao and heavy fighting has been going on all morning."

Reliable reports from the city later placed the number of transports carrying the invading troops at four.

At a Cabinet meeting last night President Quezon outlined a program of civilian welfare and defense. This included the construction of air raid shelters and the formation of labor battalions immediately and use of a $10,000,000 emergency fund granted by President Roosevelt.

DEC 21 1941

Jap Transport Sunk.

Washington, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—The navy reported today that a United States submarine had sunk an additional enemy transport.

There were no details of this latest action by American undersea craft, but earlier this week it had been announced that a submarine had sunk one enemy transport and probably a destroyer. Thus the sinking reported today was that of the second transport lost to the Japanese by United States submarine action.

The Navy Department also reported in its communique that Cavite, the naval base in Manila Bay, had sustained a heavy bomb-raid at noon on Friday, and while this attack caused some damage to property there were only light casualties to American forces and civilian personnel.

Mindanao is the second largest island of the Philippines, and Davao, the point at which the enemy landed, is a big center of Japanese population, and has been the scene of considerable fifth column trouble since the war began two weeks ago.

Until today the Japanese had confined their invasion efforts to the largest island, Luzon, where they have been holding three precarious beachheads at the cost of heavy punishment from the American ground and air forces. The past thirty-six hours, however, have seen a great increase in the patrol activity of the forces on Luzon, with scouting parties apparently searching for any soft spots in the Filipino-American front.

Beat Off Burma Road Raid.

Chungking, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—Ten Japanese warplanes which attempted to raid Kunming on the Burma Road were heavily engaged for the first time today by an international air force and four of them were shot down without loss to the defenders, said reports to high Chinese quarters.

The international air force is composed exclusively of American volunteers who resigned from United States armed forces to serve in China. They are led by a quiet, dark wiry man whose card reads "Col. Claire L. Chennault, commander of 1st Avg."

"Avg" stands for American volunteers group.

He came to China four years ago from his home in southern Louisiana, after retiring from the United States Army, and became adviser to the Chinese Air Force.

U. S. Heroes' Exploits In Philippines Told In D. S. M. Citations

[By the Associated Press]

Manila, Dec. 20—Capt. Colin P. Kelly, Jr., who became the No. 1 American hero of this war by destroying a Japanese battleship, was killed in the flaming crash of his bomber after ordering his crew of six to save themselves, the Far Eastern command announced today in awarding him the Distinguished Service Cross.

Captain Kelly and twelve other officers and men, two of them Filipinos, were honored with the decoration—the highest army award except for the Congressional Medal—for showing extraordinary bravery, often against superior Japanese odds. Three awards, including Kelly's, were made posthumously.

DEC 21 1941

Thrilling Account Of Exploits

The announcement at the headquarters of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commander of the United States Army of the Far East, was accompanied by a description of the various deeds, a thrilling narrative of exploits in the first few days of the war.

This told the first story of Captain Kelly's death after scoring three direct hits on the battleship Haruna near Aparri on December 9, and it revealed for the first time that the men with Kelly in the plane were saved.

Plane Finally Set Afire

"While his airplane was a focal point of fire from strong hostile naval forces, Captain Kelly exhibited a high degree of valor and skill, placing three direct hits upon an enemy battleship resulting in its destruction," the citation said.

"En route to his home airfield upon completion of his mission, his airplane was set on fire by an attack of two enemy fighters. This officer ordered his crew to bail out.

"Six men saved themselves thereby, but Captain Kelly, the last to leave the burning plane, was killed in the resulting crash."

Marett's Daring Attack

The Distinguished Service Cross also was awarded posthumously to First Lieutenant Samuel H. Marett, survived by his widow, of New Braunfels, Texas. His citation said that on December 10 he took part in action near Vigan, 200 miles north of Manila, where the Japanese landed troops.

"Although warned that the enemy landing forces in Vigan were well equipped with protective fire," the award read, "Lieutenant Marett courageously led his squadron with markedly inferior armament in a concentrated attack on an enemy transport.

Two Jap Transports Set Afire

"Against a fury of protective firing he and his comrades strafed and restrafed the invaders, causing great panic and destruction upon the troops packed on ships. Two transports burst into flames.

"In one final and successful straight dive against a third transport his airplane was caught in the resulting blast of the exploding transport and together with the intrepid pilot was destroyed."

The two Filipinos honored were Capt. Jesus A. Villamor, of the Philippine Air Corps, who was cited for two separate incidents and also was awarded an oak leaf cluster, and Third Lieutenant José P. Gozer, of the Philippine Air Corps on Mindore Island.

DEC 21 1941

Other Men Decorated

The other men honored and the nearest of kin, were:

Private First Class Graley B. Williams; father, Arthur S. Williams, Rural Route 3, Iowa City, Iowa.

First Lieutenant Joseph Moore; wife, Mrs. Virl L. Moore, Spartanburg, S. C.

First Lieutenant Grant M. Mahoney; mother, Mrs. H. G. Mahoney, Vallejo, Cal.

Technical Sergeant Anthony Holub; wife, Mrs. Katherine M. Holub, Coronado, Cal.

Private First Class Joseph G. McElroy; father, Thomas B. McElroy, Philadelphia.

Second Lieutenant Jack K. D. Dale; mother, Mrs. W. O. Dale, Willoughby, Ohio.

Private Robert J. Endres; father, Michael Endres, Faribault, Minn.

Second Lieutenant Randall D. Keator; father, C. D. Keator, Campti, Louisiana.

Second Lieutenant Carl P. Gies; father, Carl A. Gies, Salem, Ore.

Wagner Also To Be Cited

The official announcement said First Lieut. Boyd Wagner, of the Air Corps, also is to be cited for the Distinguished Service Cross, "but there has been some delay in obtaining the exact facts."

It was reliably reported that the delay was due to the fact that Wagner's already legendary exploits have usually been carried out single-handed. He is credited with shooting down three Japanese planes and destroying up to seventeen on the ground.

Fellow pilots relate that as Wagner rolled out of one dogfight he caught another Japanese plane in his gunsights while still flying upside down, that he squeezed the trigger and shot the wings off the Japanese plane, then rolled over and pitched into another group of Japanese.

Fights From Grounded Plane

The third posthumous award was that of Private Williams, who died at an undisclosed airfield on December 8 during the first furious Japanese assault. "While Williams was on duty in the vicinity of his airplane," the citation said, "a severe aerial bombardment occurred.

"Not waiting for orders, he ran to his airplane and opened fire on the attacking dive-bombers which were bombing and strafing. He courageously and effectively maintained his fire until killed by a burst of fire from a hostile machine gun. His last act was in defense of the aircraft of which he was a crew member and was a vivid example of courage and devotion to duty."

Captain Villamor was cited for two separate incidents

On December 10 "in the face of heavy enemy fire from strong air forces, Captain Villamor led his flight of three pursuit planes into action against attacking Japanese planes," the award said. "By his conspicuous example of courage and leadership and at great personal hazard beyond the call of duty his flight was enabled to rout the attacking planes, thereby preventing appreciable damage at his station."

Villamor was awarded the oak-leaf cluster for leading six pursuit planes against fifty-four Japanese bombers two days later. "By this heroic action against an enemy with enormous odds, part of the attacking planes were driven off, one of the enemy planes being destroyed by the fire from Capt. Villamor's plane," the citation said.

Moore Downs Two Japs

Of Lieutenant Moore the citation said that on December 10, "in the face of heavy destructive bombardment of his airdrome by an overwhelming number of enemy bombers and pursuit planes, Lieutenant Moore led the pilots of his squadron, getting four airplanes into the air and into combat with five of the enemy before gaining fighting altitude. In the same engagement he dove fearlessly into a group of enemy planes attacking a fellow-pilot in his parachute, and by the fury of his attack destroyed two enemy planes and completely routed the rest, thereby saving his comrade's life.

"This display of courageous leadership served as an inspiration to the personnel of his command."

Gozar Tries To Ram Foe

Of Lieutenant Gozar the citation said that on December 10 he engaged one of "a greatly superior force of attacking Japanese planes," and when his guns jammed continued the attack by attempting to ram his opponent.

"By his display of courage and leadership and after a series of such maneuvers he forced the Japanese plane to flee without further attacks against the airdrome," the award said.

Lieutenant Mahoney volunteered for a vital night mission December 10, his citation showed, "in thick weather, during a complete ground blackout and in the face of severe ground fire from strongly-held positions.

"Lieutenant Mahoney secured information which was needed for a subsequent successful bombing attack.

"Again on the following day, returning from a bombing mission near Legaspi in which he destroyed an enemy flying boat and strafed an enemy-held radio station, this pilot displayed exceptional courage, performing the highly dangerous feat of landing his airplane with bombs hanging from an improperly functioning bomb release in preference to bailing out."

Holub's One-Man Fort

Sergeant Holub went through a heavy aerial bombardment at an undisclosed airdrome December 8 and "immediately ran to his airplane and returned the machine-gun fire of the subsequent attacking plane from the top turret guns of his airplane.

"After exhausting the supply of ammunition, he ran through heavy strafing fire to a nearby damaged plane from which he removed as many ammunition cans as he could carry and returned to his guns, where he continued to fire on attacking aircraft. By his display of personal heroism and devotion to duty, Sergeant Holub not only defended his aircraft from serious damage but served as a vivid and inspiring example to the personnel of his unit."

Private McElroy also was in the December 8 bombing.

"Instead of seeking shelter, McElroy ran to his machine-gun position on his grounded airplane and, in the face of devastating bomber and aerial machine-gun attack which followed, courageously and successfully defended his airplane. In the line of his fire, one hostile plane crashed in flames and two others withdrew from the attack emitting dense trails of smoke," his citation read.

Guns Silenced, Barges Wrecked

Of Lieutenant Dale's exploit December 10 near Vigan, the citation said:

"Into a concentration of anti-aircraft fire from the ground and from approximately twenty hostile naval vessels, including two heavy cruisers and several destroyers and submarines and other armed enemy craft, Dale led his flight in repeated attacks which entirely disrupted a strong effort by the Japanese forces.

"His exhibition of courage, leadership and unflinching devotion to duty in the face of great odds resulted in silencing three anti-aircraft guns and destroying numerous barges with a consequent high toll of invaders and providing an inspiration to the pilots and other personnel."

DEC 21 1941

Private Endres during the December 8 bombing of his own field ran to a nearby abandoned truck and, despite a rain of aerial machine-gun fire and bursting bombs, proceeded about the air field, collecting wounded who were lying in the open.

"Filling the vehicle with casualties, he proceeded to the station hospital, unloaded the wounded and returned to the field. With complete disregard of his own safety, Endres made seven such round trips, each with a cargo of casualties, despite continual bombing and strafing. His heroic action under tremendous odds saved many wounded from further mutilation or death."

Lieutenant Keator on December 8 was one of three officers in a pursuit flight, the citation showed.

"When attacked by nine Japanese planes, he attacked the three nearest enemy planes and quickly brought down one of the first hostile planes in air combat in the Philippines.

Gies Attacks 20 Foes

"He then immediately joined the general combat, in which he and his companions downed two more enemy planes. Later, while returning to his field alone, he encountered a single enemy fighter. Disregarding the fact his ammunition and gasoline were nearly exhausted, he pursued the enemy plane and engaged it until it plunged in flames."

"His example of unhesitating action against heavy odds served as a tremendous stimulus to others laboring under the stress of the surprise hostile attack on the first day of the war."

Lieutenant Gies on December 10 was gaining altitude for patrol over another field, accompanied by one other pilot, when he received a radio report that his own field was being strafed. "Although he realized he was greatly outnumbered and with complete disregard for the great personal risk involved, this pilot dove through the overcast into the midst of more than twenty hostile craft and downed one enemy airplane," the citation said.

"Upon rejoining his companion airplane, they immediately were attacked by three enemy fighters. Gies' furious attack sent one radier crashing and dispersed the two remaining enemy airplanes. His skill and determination further enabled Gies to fly his badly damaged plane back."

REACH MANILA

MANILA, Dec. 20 (AP).—Thirty sailors arrived here today after a tortuous, 250-mile overland journey from the Japanese-occupied port of Aparri in northernmost Luzon.

DEC 21 1941

They said poor naval and aerial marksmanship caused the Japanese to use considerable ammunition to sink the inter-island Philippines passenger freighter during the Japanese attack of Dec. 10.

The sailors said they escaped from Aparri despite the attempt of the invaders to round them up. Their nine - day journey over rough, forbidding country included one 86-mile hike through a mountain wilderness inhabited only by fierce Kalinga tribesmen.

At the time of the action, the sailors said, their vessel was anchored at the mouth of the Cagayan River.

Immediately, they said, they were bottled by two Japanese destroyers.

"They started shelling our boat, but luckily they were poor marksmen and missed us again and again," the sailors said.

The vessel's captain, who led his surviving shipmates to safety, said that Japanese planes dropped three bombs which missed the vessel as the crew members made a hasty departure for shore in small boats.

As they left Aparri, he said, he heard an explosion and saw a column of smoke which he assumed marked the end of his ship.

Manila Looters May Face Death

MANILA, Dec. 20 (AP).—An increase in looting caused General Douglas MacArthur today to issue a public warning that persons found guilty might face the death penalty.

Fourteen persons had been arrested in Manila for looting homes of evacuees and interned Japanese. MacArthur said the offenders would be subject to military trial and "imposition of the death penalty."

Army Reports Situation At Invaded Point On Mindanao Is Obscure

DEC 21 1941

Positions Declared Unchanged At Japanese BeachheadsOnLuzon

BY R. P. CRONIN, JR.

[By the Associated Press]

Manila, Sunday, 7.40 A. M., Dec. 21—Army headquarters announced today that due to communication difficulties the situation at Japanese-invaded Davao, on Mindanao Island, is obscure.

No word has been received from there since yesterday afternoon.

A brief communique disclosed that an aerial bombardment was carried out against Davao by the Japanese before they sent a considerable force of troops ashore from four transports in the early Saturday dawn.

Unchanged On Luzon

The announcement said the situation remained unchanged on Luzon Island, where the Japanese have established small beachheads on the north, northwest and southeastern coasts.

[From the Far East, meanwhile, came word that an American submarine had destroyed a Japanese transport, the second such vessel to be sunk this week by the navy's undersea arm. In addition, a Japanese destroyer probably has been sent to the bottom.]

Davao is one of the most heavily Japanese-populated centers in the Philippines and the invaders apparently chose that port for their landing with the idea of obtaining support from fifth columnists among their number.

Forces Long Prepared

Presumably the Japanese came ashore in fairly substantial forces and informed sources here believed the Davao campaign may develop into the most important land battle yet in the Philippine archipelago.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters announced yesterday afternoon that heavy fighting was under way, with ground defense forces, long prepared for just such an attempt, opposing the invaders. Doubtless these forces were strongly supported by American planes.

Heretofore initial Japanese landings have been unopposed by ground troops, except at Lingayen, northwest of Manila on Luzon island, where the Nipponese were pushed back into the sea last week.

Moros Expected To Aid

The island defenders were just as well prepared to meet the Japanese at Davao, 600 miles by land and sea from Manila, as they were at Lingayen. In addition, fierce, knife-wielding Moros who inhabit Mindanao by the thousands are expected to aid the regular military forces.

In their three other landings, the Japanese gained beachheads at Aparri, on the northern shores of Luzon, at Vigan on the northwest coast, and at Legaspi, southeast of Manila, and these forces are under ceaseless aerial harassment.

The Americans have taken a heavy toll of Japanese ships, planes and men, but have made no concerted effort so far to drive these invaders out by land assault. The reason, it is pointed out, is that these three footholds are remote and lack major strategic importance.

About 25,000 Japanese

But at Davao it appeared a determined fight was shaping up for that point commanding a short-cut sea route to Borneo on the southeast.

The Japanese population at Davao has been placed as high as 25,000.

In May, 1940, President Manuel Quezon signed a new immigration bill, limiting Japanese immigration into the islands to 500 annually. The Japanese, who estimated Japanese immigration into the islands at 5,000 a year, sharply protested.

1,500 Rounded Up

The Japanese are reported to own more than fifty per cent of the arable land at Davao and similar percentages of other industries.

Immediately upon the outbreak of the war with Japan, about 1,500 Japanese of military age were rounded up.

DEC 21 1941

Japanese bombers again swarmed over Manila soon after noon yesterday, but most of their explosives aimed at Nichols Field fell wide of their mark into Manila Bay, and the army described the attack as a light one.

Although other bombers flew toward the Cavite navy base, no attack was reported there.

Three Posthumous Awards

The United States Far Eastern command announced three posthumous awards of the Distinguished Service Cross, highest army decoration except the Congressional Medal, for valiant airmen who have engaged in the battle for the Philippines.

Ten other flyers, including two Filipinos, were awarded the cross, and it was announced that First Lieutenant Boyd (Buzz) Wagner is to be cited for the decoration, "but there has been some delay in obtaining the exact facts" because many of his legendary exploits have been lone-handed.

The three posthumous awards were to:

CAPT. COLIN P. KELLY, JR., whose bombs sank the Japanese battleship Haruna.

LIEUT. SAMUEL H. MARETT, of Atlanta.

PRIVATE GRESLEY B. WILLIAMS, first class, of Iowa City, Iowa.

Six Crewmen Escape

Captain Kelly, it was disclosed, met his death when two Japanese fighters attacked him after the sinking of the battleship. His six crewmen, ordered by Kelly to bail out, saved themselves, but he was killed in the crash of his plane.

The other awards were to:

FIRST LIEUTENANT JOSEPH MOORE, Spartanburg, S. C.

FIRST LIEUTENANT GRANT M. MAHONEY, Vallejo, Cal.

PRIVATE JOSEPH G. MCELROY, first class, Philadelphia.

TECHNICAL SERGEANT ANTHONY HOLUB, Coronado, Cal.

SECOND LIEUTENANT JACK K. D. DALE, Willoughby, Ohio.

PRIVATE ROBERT J. ENDRES, Fairbault, Minnesota.

SECOND LIEUTENANT RANDALL D. KEATOR, Campti, La.

SECOND LIEUTENANT CARL P. GIES, Salem, Ore.

CAPT. JESUS A. VILLAMOR.

THIRD LIEUTENANT JOSE J. GOZER.

An increase in looting caused General MacArthur to issue a public warning that persons found guilty might face the death penalty.

Fourteen persons had been arrested in Manila for looting the homes of evacuees and interned Japanese.

Fifth Columnists Use Mirrors to Guide Pilots

By the Associated Press.

MANILA, Dec. 20.—Like the sideshow magician, the Japanese fifth columnists are trying to do it with mirrors.

Army men returning from central Luzon said a sentry at a command headquarters spied a bright object in a tree.

Investigation disclosed that the carefully camouflaged post was encircled with tree-top mirrors which made it a bull's-eye for bombers.

Wild Tribes Of Philippines Expected To Aid U. S. Troops

Leaders Of Bolo-Swinging Moros Express Desire To Fight Off Japanese Invaders

BY RUSSELL BRINES

[By the Associated Press]

DEC 21 1941

Manila, Sunday, Dec. 21—Bolo-swinging Moros, the toughest warriors encountered by Americans in the Philippine insurrection at the turn of the century, may now throw in their lot with the defenders of this island archipelago, it was believed today.

Moro leaders have expressed a desire to organize their followers for a fight unto death against the Japanese and the war drums are throbbing through the wild hinterland inhabited by these fierce tribesmen.

There are thousands of these Moros on Mindanao Island, and now that the Japanese have landed there in force they are expected to aid the United States Army in fighting the invaders, whom they hate.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur well knows the fighting qualities of the Moros.

His father, Gen. Arthur MacArthur, the first American military governor of the Philippines, was the first American to fight them during the insurrection.

Girding themselves tightly with cloth to lessen the shock of bullets, the Moros charged entrenched positions of the senior MacArthur's troops, using only bolos for weapons.

Spurred by fanatical zeal, they stormed through veritable hails of bullets to reach the American positions and swing with deadly effect their razor-sharp knives before dropping dead themselves with scores of bullets in their tough bodies.

On the basis of the Moros' feats in that conflict, the United States Army increased the caliber of its rifles because those used then failed to halt the tribesmen.

Since the insurrection, Moro juramentados have slashed to death hundreds of constabularymen in the belief that by slaying a Christian they will reach the Mohammedan heaven.

To them, Shintoist and Buddhist Japanese are "Christians."

Washington, Dec. 20—The navy reported today that a United States submarine had sunk "an additional enemy transport."

There were no details of this latest action by American undersea craft. Earlier this week it had been announced that a submarine had sunk one Japanese transport and probably a destroyer.

Ninth Transport To Be Sunk

(To date the Japanese have lost nine transports. Three have been sunk by United States planes and two by United States submarines, while Dutch bombers have accounted for four).

The Navy Department also reported in its communique that Cavite, naval base in the Philippines, had been heavily bombed at noon yesterday but although the raid did "some damage to property" there were only "light casualties" to American forces and civilian personnel.

Text Of Communique

The text of the navy communique:

"Atlantic theater—There are no new developments to report.

"Eastern Pacific—There are no new developments to report.

"Central Pacific—There are no new developments to report.

"Far East—A United States submarine sank an additional enemy transport. Cavite sustained a heavy bombing raid at noon of the nineteenth. This raid caused some damage to property, but only light casualties to our own forces and civilian personnel."

Heavy Fighting At Davao

A fresh invasion thrust at the Philippines today, coming on the heels of intensified enemy patrol and scouting activities, apparently presaged a new attempt by the Japanese to get their stalled campaign of conquest rolling.

Official reports said Japanese troops landed in force at Davao, on Mindanao, the second largest island in the Philippine group, and heavy fighting was in progress. Davao itself is a big center of Japanese population and has been the scene of considerable fifth-column trouble since the war started.

Communique Issued

A War Department communique, outlining the situation as it was at 9.30 A. M. (E. S. T.), said:

"1. Philippine theater:

"No details are as yet available concerning the reported landing operations of the Japanese at the port of Davao on the island of Mindanao in the southern extremity of the Philippine archipelago.

"Under authority recently granted him by the Secretary of War, the commanding general of the United States Army forces in the Far East has awarded the Distinguished Service Cross to thirteen officers and enlisted men for extraordinary heroism in action.

"2. There is nothing to report concerning enemy operations in other areas."

Heretofore the Japanese had confined their invasion efforts to the largest island, Luzon, where they have been holding three precarious beachheads at the cost of heavy punishment from United States ground and air forces.

FLASH

Washington, Dec. 20 (AP)—The Navy Department disclosed today that enemy submarines have been operating off the Atlantic Coast.

Second Jap Troopship Sent To Bottom By U. S. Submarine

Chungking, Dec. 20 (AP)—Ten Japanese warplanes which attempted to raid Kunming on the Burma road were heavily engaged for the first time today by an international air force and four of them were shot down without loss to the defenders, said reports to high Chinese quarters.

The international air force is composed exclusively of American volunteers who resigned from United States armed forces to serve in China.

Major Attack Suspected

However, the past thirty-six hours have seen a great increase in the patrol activity of the forces on Luzon, with scouting parties apparently searching for any soft spots in the united States-Filipino front.

The intensified operations led to conjecture here whether the Luzon forces were ready to open a major attack synchronized with the Mindanao operation.

SOS From One Heard At Lighthouse; Other Said To Have Escaped

Navy Issues Warning Of Operations By Enemy Off Atlantic Coast

[By the Associated Press]

San Francisco, Dec. 20—The navy said tonight it had received unconfirmed reports that two oil tankers had been attacked by submarines off the California coast and that one had sent out an SOS.

One report, the navy disclosed, was that the 6,922-ton tanker Emidio was fired on off Blunt's Reef, near Eureka, and that it sent out distress signals after smoke enveloped it.

Said To Have Escaped

The other report was that the 6,771-tanker Agwiworld was attacked off Cypress Point, about 100 miles south of San Francisco. It reportedly escaped and reached a haven along the near-by coast.

"The navy does not deny, but it cannot confirm, these reports," said Rear Admiral J. W. Greenslade, commandant of the Twelfth naval district.

At the naval district headquarters, an aide to Admiral Greenslade said it had been reported without confirmation that the Blunt's Reef Lighthouse had picked up an SOS from the Emidio.

300 Miles Apart

Blunt's Reef is some 200 miles north of San Francisco, and thus approximately 300 miles north of Cypress Point, where the other alleged attack was reported to have occurred.

Earlier Admiral Greenslade had disclosed that enemy submarines were preying on shipping off the California coast as he took quick steps to assure uninterrupted production in shipyards.

Navy Warns Of U-Boats Cruising Off East Coast

Washington, Dec. 20 (AP)—The Navy Department disclosed today that enemy submarines have been operating off the Atlantic Coast.

The information was given out indirectly in a navy statement emphasizing the necessity of curtailing weather reports, and no details of the submarine operations as to place or time were divulged.

The Navy Department indicated, however, that American patrol craft, either surface or aircraft or both, had been on the trail of the submarines sufficiently to find out how they were profiting by weather forecasts.

The navy statement said:

"How a press news radio broadcast about weather aided operation of enemy submarines on the Atlantic Coast was revealed today by the Navy Department.

"The commanding officer of a naval base in the Atlantic heard a news weather broadcast specifically mention subfreezing weather in the Dakotas and a temperature of 9 degrees below zero at Duluth, points remote from the coast and apparently not concerned with naval or military operations.

"Being weatherwise, the commanding officer immediately concluded that in a few days hence his patrol area would have a clear day or two with high visibility and conditions ideal for enemy submarine attack.

"Special precautions were taken in patrol work on the calculated day, which turned out as predicted, and in the course of operations it became apparent that enemy submarines had also picked up the same information and made the same deduction.

"It was pointed out that the information so inadvertently broadcast would also have been of benefit to an enemy air attack along any port of the 'weather route' in the North American continent."

Philippine Resistance Is Being Smashed, Japanese Declare

DEC 21 1941

Invaders of Hong Kong Reported Continuing To Gain Ground

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Dec. 20 (Official Radio).—A Japanese Army and Navy communique announced today that Japanese troops had landed on the Island of Mindanao in the Philippines and declared they were smashing enemy resistance.

The landing was effected at dawn today and the situation is rapidly turning in favor of the Japanese, the communique said.

Domei News Agency reported that British troops defending Hong Kong still were offering resistance at various points around Victoria City and that the guns on Victoria Peak were replying intermittently to Japanese batteries which have been hammering them for 24 hours.

Huge fires, the news agency said, are raging in many parts of Victoria.

Advances Reported.

Japanese troops which landed on Hong Kong Island yesterday were reported continuing to gain ground and to be mopping up British forces defending a chain of fortifications extending eastward from Mount Davis.

Reporting on operations against the Philippines, a naval communique said that four Japanese fighter planes had raided American air bases at Delmonte yesterday, shooting down six large planes and setting five others afire on the ground.

(Gazeteers of the Philippines fail to list Delmonte or any town of similar name.)

Two more American planes were destroyed, a hangar was blown up and an oil depot fired in an attack the previous day on Iloilo, Panay Island, the communique said.

Full Conquest Expected Soon.

Domei indicated that full conquest of Hong Kong was expected today or tomorrow.

(Exchange Telegraph, British news agency, quoted a Tokio broadcast in a declaration that the remainder of the British garrison had been encircled on Mount Victoria and that the rest of Victoria had been occupied by the Japanese.)

Domei forecast the rescue within a few hours of 40 Japanese residents of Hong Kong, including Consul General Seiki Yano, who are believed to be safe in British custody.

The Tokio newspaper Nichi Nichi said that guns of the Mount Davis Fort as well as other British artillery positions were put out of action last night.

DEC 21 1941

Oil Tanks Burning

Large oil tanks near the Tiakoo docks have been burning since Thursday afternoon, it reported, developing huge clouds of smoke.

Nichi Nichi said fires also had largely destroyed the main office of the Hong Kong and Shanghai Banking Corp.

Many trucks flying Japanese colors are carrying disabled British troops through city streets from the fighting zone, the newspaper said.

Domei was quoted as saying that the Japanese in Hong Kong had captured 22 large oil dumps, more than 500 vehicles and supplies of rice, flour and medicine.

Tells Of Penang Capture And Predicts Hongkong's Fall For Today

Tokyo, Dec. 20 (Official Radio Recorded by AP)—The Japanese announced tonight that their troops were driving inland on the Philippine island of Minanao after a dawn landing, that the fall of British Hongkong was inevitable and that Penang Island off the Malayan peninsula had been captured.

Most of the Japanese announcements concerned the conquest of Hongkong. A Domei broadcast indicated the island's capitulation was expected today or tomorrow.

Shelled By Victoria Guns

British guns on Victoria peak were reported sporadically shelling the invaders, but the Japanese already were said to have captured more than 500 vehicles, 22 big oil dumps, supplies of rice, flour and medicine, and have disarmed many Imperial troops.

Britsh guns on Mount Davis Fort were reported put out of action, the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation's main office was destroyed, nd big fires were raging in the colony.

Claim 6 U. S. Planes Downed

In the Philippines the Japanese claimed that six American planes were shot down and five others on the ground set afire in an air attack yesterday at Delmonte.

[No such town is listed in Gazeteers.]

Eight other American planes were reported destroyed in attacks on Nichols Air Field and other military camps, and two more planes, a hangar nd an oil depot destroyed in Thursday's attack on Iloilo, Panay Island.

The Crown Council met today at the mperial Palace with Emperor Hirohito and later it was said that the Government would make "a statement on an important diplomatic affair" at noon tomorrow.

Speaker Plans To Resign

Domei said today that Shosu Koyama, Speaker of the lower House of the Japanese Diet, had advised Premier Tojo of his intention to resign prior to the regular session convening December 24.

The agency said that Vice-Speaker Kazotami Tago also was considering the possibility of resigning.

Koyama has occupied the Speaker's chair for the past four and one-half years. Toshio Shimada, former Minister of Agriculture and Forestry, was mentioned as his probable successor.

Consuls Held In Indo-China

Vichy, Dec. 20 (AP)—The Japanese in French Indo-China have placed American, British and the Netherlands consuls under house arrest authorized sources announced here today.

These sources said the French Indo-China Government had taken over control of the property of the citizens of the three powers at war with Japan.

Noted Chinese Diplomat Is Reported Captured

Bern, Dec. 20 (AP)—A DNB dispatch from Nanking said today that Dr. W. W. Yen, former Premier of China and Chinese Minister to the United States, had been captured by Japanese troops who overran the mainland portion of Hongkong.

Dr. Yen, 64-year-old alumnus of the University of Virginia, has been one of China's foremost diplomats and administrators for twenty years. He has held the posts of Premier and Foreign Minister on several occasions and has been Ambassador to Soviet Russia and Minister to Britain and Germany as well as to the United States.

He represented China at several League of Nations sessions and international conferences.

Several Chinese leaders had made their homes in Hongkong in recent years. Some of these, including H. H. Kung, Finance minister, and Madame Sun Yat-sen, widow of the founder of the republic, were flown to safety in the Chinese interior shortly after the Japanese siege began.

There was only a slim hope that counter-attacking Chinese, at the rear and flank of the invaders would be able to relieve the assault on Hongkong. Chinese dispatches said they had fought their way into Shumchun on the mainland border, forcing the Japanese to send troops back from mainland territory into the behind-the-lines battle.

Japan's New Order "Long Way" Off

[By the Associated Press]

Tokyo, Dec. 20 (Official Radio Recorded By AP)—Japan "still has a long way to go" in her program for a "new order" in East Asia, Kiwao Okumura, vice-president of the Government Information Board, acknowledged today in an appeal to the people for increased production, savings and donations.

Domei Praises Hongkong's Tenacity

DEC 21 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 20—A garrison of Middle Western and French Canadians, British Tommies and bearded Sikhs from India has staved off Japanese capture of Hongkong Island, center of Britain's No. 2 naval base in the Far East, it was reported today by the Japanese themselves.

It was at dawn last Sunday that the Japanese, operating from mainland points of vantage on the South China coast, launched what they called a "terrible" offensive by land and air against the British Empire forces.

Point-blank refusal of a Japanese ultimatum to surrender touched off the all-out attack. A subsequent ultimatum likewise was rejected, and the Japanese were told curtly to deliver no more.

Colony Fall "Staved Off"

The Japanese have fought their way onto the island of Hongkong, but today, according to a Tokyo Domei broadcast recorded by Reuters, admitted that Hongkong still was unconquered. Domei paid a tribute to the Empire defenders:

"The expected imminent fall of the colony has been staved off by their stubborn defense."

Resistance of the garrison has been augmented by naval and military volunteers drawn from Hongkong's civilian population, including many Chinese.

In the conservative opinion of British military commentators, however, Hongkong was all but lost.

There was only a slim hope that counter-attacking Chinese, at the rear and flank of the invaders would be able to relieve the assault on Hongkong. Chinese dispatches said they had fought their way into Shumchun on the mainland border, forcing the Japanese to send troops back from mainland territory into the behind-the-lines battle.

Loss Of Warships Felt

"If we hadn't lost the Prince of Wales and the Repulse, it might have been different," one British source said.

"Now, apparently, we haven't the strength to get a relieving force all that distance.

"Surrounded by hundreds of miles of hostile seas, on one hand, and hostile land, on the other, Hongkong's position is as hopeless as her fight is magnificent."

The battleship Prince of Wales and the cruiser Repulse were sunk in a Japanese air attack off the Malayan coast December 10.

Meanwhile Sir Mark Young, governor and commander in chief of the British forces at Hongkong, reported this morning by telegraph that operations still are proceeding on that beleaguered island, the British Colonial Office announced.

At the same time a military commentator declared that the last news from Hongkong "showed some troops still were fighting" there, but he was unable to give the time that information was dispatched from the Crown Colony.

The Colonial Officer's statement was the first report of communications with Hongkong in twenty-four hours. For hours it had been believed that the Crown Colony was cut off from the outside world by a ring of Japanese fire.

Young's Flight Denied

The Colonial Office's statement follows:

"The Governor of Hongkong reported by telegraph this morning that operations are proceeding on the island.

"The Governor wishes it to be known that the Japanese story that he left the island is entirely false."

The Berlin radio declared yesterday Sir Mark had escaped from the isl

30.24-13663
30.24-13663

but the Colonial Office promptly spiked the report by announcing it had been in communication with him only that morning. The message today was the first to be announced from Hongkong since then.

Of the fighting on the Malay peninsula, the military commentator said a "slight further withdrawal in northwestern Malaya was carried out by our troops without interference from the enemy."

The latest withdrawal, he said, had taken the British well south from the Krian river, but the precise point reached was not disclosed.

DEC 21 1941

Reorganizing For New Stand

(At Singapore the British high command declared that Imperial forces in northern Malaya are reorganizing for a new stand after bringing the Japanese invaders to a halt along the Krian river, some 300 miles from Singapore.

(A brief communique reported a lull in the heavy fighting which has been raging in the Perak sector on the western side of the isthmus, and mentioned only minor patrol clashes in the Grik area near the opposite coast, in which sixty Japanese were said to have been killed.)

The commentator said the British withdrew at their "leisure" from the island city of Penang, Malay Straits Settlement city, which had been isolated by the Japanese, and that "only those Europeans were left who wanted to stay."

All desirable demolition and destruction of stores were accomplished before Penang was evacuated, he added.

The Hongkong fight was conceded here to be a losing battle.

Americans Quit Hongkong

London newspapers gave full play to the Hongkong story, with such headlines as "Hongkong Fights It Out," but they acknowledged editorially that the island's position is hopeless.

The Berlin radio relayed a Domei dispatch from Tokyo saying that the Japanese flag was flying over Hongkong harbor and that final occupation of the Crown Colony was only a matter of a short time.

(A Tokyo broadcast also reported a dispatch from a "Japanese army base" declaring that a single Japanese army plane had sunk a British warship, believed to be a cruiser, at anchor south of Hongkong Island. It said the plane scored two direct hits.)

The last Americans and many British civilians from Penang arrived in Singapore yesterday. These refugees said the majority of Europeans and many Asiatic residents left Penang, a city of 400,000, before the Japanese approach.

In the party arriving at Singapore was United States Consul Robert Streeper, of Columbus, Ohio.

The last-stand garrison at Hongkong includes a Canadian force, whose arrival there was announced November 15.

DEFENSE HOLDS IN LAST STAND AT HONGKONG

DEC 21 1941

Japs Admit In Broadcasts Mount Victoria's Guns Still Reply

They Report Remnants Of British Garrison Encircled On Island Peak

BY ALFRED WALL

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 20—Written off by the generals as hopeless, the magnificent defense of Hongkong was prolonged tonight by the blood of a garrison of fighting men thrown together from two sides of the world.

Even the Japanese, in sudden praise of the last stand of the band of British Tommies, Canadians from Manitoba and Quebec and bewhiskered, stoic Indian Sikhs, admitted in a broadcast tonight:

"The expected imminent fall of the colony has been staved off by their stubborn defense."

Domei Pays Tribute

Then, in an unusual tribute, Domei added:

"They have fought desperately in a manner to win the respect of even the top Japanese."

Waiting for the end, authorities in London said it would be a miracle if the colony, a rocky square of England in the Orient for a hundred years, did not soon pass entirely into Japanese hands.

The Japanese say they have the city of Victoria and that lorries flying the scarlet ball of the rising sun are roaring through the streets, packed with disarmed British soldiers; that the cannon on Mount Davis, dominating a chain of forts eastward, have been silenced; that remnants of the British garrison are encircled on the peak of the island, Mount Victoria.

Guns Still Reply

But, their broadcasts acknowledged today, Mount Victoria's guns still replied at intervals.

None of this detail was confirmed in any degree in London. The Colonial Office limited its announcement during the day to this terse and dramatic communique:

"The Governor of Hongkong reported by telegraph this morning that operations are proceeding on the island.

"The Governor wishes it to be known that the Japanese story that he left is entirely false."

Commander Of Defense

Sir Mark Aitchison Young is the Governor—a 55-year-old colonial administrator who has served his empire from Trinidad to Tanganyika. He also is commander in chief of the tired and tattered forces of defense.

This news, a spokesman said, "shows that some troops are still fighting."

At the end of the day he added:

"If we hadn't lost the Prince of Wales and the Repulse (capital ships sunk last week off Malaya) it might have been different. Now, apparently, we haven't the strength to get a relieving force all that distance.

Position Hopeless

"Surrounded by hostile seas on one hand and hostile land on the other, Hongkong's position is as hopeless as her fight is magnificent."

Other spokesmen held no hope that poorly equipped Chinese troops, battering by day and night at the back of the Japanese forces on the mainland opposite Hongkong, could exert enough pressure to relieve the garrison.

The Chinese did, however, report they had raided Schumchun, on the Canton-Kowloon railway right at the mainland frontier of Hongkong colony.

Diversion Is Claimed

Apparently the thrust was only a raid, for the Chinese said heavy fighting subsequently developed about ten miles northeast of Schumchun after the Schumchun railway station and Japanese defense works had been blown up and destroyed.

However, the attack had the result of forcing the Japanese to divert some of their forces from the attack on the hard-pressed defenders of Hongkong to defend their rear, the Chinese said.

Present area of the fighting, as described in Chinese dispatches, would be in the neighborhood of Pinghsan, where the Chinese have been reported active previously.

Air And Land Offensive

Hongkong came under full siege at dawn last Sunday, when the Japanese, having occupied the mainland part of the colony, launched a ferocious offensive by air and land.

They fought their way across the mile-wide strip of water to the island heart of Hongkong Thursday night under cover of dive bombing and artillery barrage.

Twice Hongkong flung back at the Japanese ultimatums demanding surrender, saying finally the garrison would accept no more.

1,300 Chinese Reported Killed

Berlin, Dec. 20 (Andi Agency to AP).—Japanese reports from Shanghai tonight said the Japanese army command announced that new operations against the Twenty-seventh Chinese Army behind Japanese lines in southern Shantung had resulted yesterday in the death of 1,300 Chinese and 300 prisoners. The Chinese unit was called the strongest in the Chungking army.

BRITISH ORGANIZE NEW MALAYA LINE

DEC 21 1941

Unmolested by Japanese After Defenders Smash Another Stab by the Invaders

SINGAPORE, Dec. 20 (AP) — British Imperial defenders of the distant approaches to Singapore methodically organized a new line today in Northwest Malaya without hindrance from the Japanese invaders, after smashing an enemy stab on the main road, which winds through the mountainous interior.

British Slow Malaya Drive, Re-form Lines

Singapore, Dec. 20 (AP).—British Imperial defenders of the distant approaches to Singapore methodically organized a new line today in northwest Malaya without hindrance by the Japanese invaders, after smashing an enemy attack on the main road which winds through the mountainous interior.

The new line was being reorganized well south of the Krian River in Perak State, some 300 miles north of Singapore. The tactical problem involved a slight further withdrawal. (It seemed likely reorganization of these defenses might include bringing up of some of the reserves not yet used in the fighting of Malaya.)

Today the Japanese left the British strictly alone, following yesterday's clash at Grik, a highway settlement in the mountains northeast of the main British line.

In this sharp encounter, a communique said, 60 Japanese were killed and there were 15 British casualties.

At Singapore, a council for coordinating the British defense effort in the Malayan theatre was being organized by Alfred Duff Cooper, British cabinet minister for the Far East.

(The German radio, quoting what it said were Tokio reports, said the Japanese had crossed the Krian River.

TOKIO REPORTS OCCUPATION OF PENANG ISLAND

LONDON, Dec. 20 (AP).—Japanese Imperial Headquarters announced today that Penang, island settlement off the northwestern coast of British Malaya, was accupied last night and that the advance on the adjacent mainland continued. The Tokio broadcast was heard by Reuters.

The British acknowledged yesterday the abandonment of Penang, saying that the garrison was safely removed to another sector.

LONDON, Dec. 20 (AP).—The German radio, quoting Tokio reports, declared today that Japanese forces driving down on Singapore from northern Malaya had crossed the Krian River 300 miles north of the citadel. The British had taken up new positions along the river.

Bombed 106 Times, Malta Sends A Word Of Cheer To Hongkong

New York, Dec. 20 (AP)—The hard-hit British Mediterranean island fortress of Malta, which went through its one hundred and sixth air raid today, took time out to send a message of encouragement to its beleagured brother fighters in Hongkong, the British radio said tonight.

The message, signed by Sir William Dobey, Governor of Malta, read:

"In the name of the people of Malta I send the warmest greetings and sympathy.

"Our hearts are with you in your gallant defense against the Japanese attacks."

4 Jap Warships Reported Hit By Dutch

[By the Associated Press]

Batavia, Netherlands East Indies, Dec. 20—Dutch flyers piloting American-built planes scored direct hits on four more Japanese ships—two cruisers, a transport and another warship believed used as a plane carrier—in fierce attacks on naval concentrations off Miri, Borneo, it was said today in Netherlands East Indies communiques.

Altogether three Japanese cruisers have been reported put out of commission off Miri as a result of the Dutch attacks. The Netherlands forces reported a direct hit on a cruiser last Wednesday.

One communique said two of the hits were supplemented by bombs which exploded near one cruiser and the ship which presumably was used for transporting airplanes.

In Wednesday's attack, the cruiser set ablaze was at first erroneously identified as a destroyer.

DEC 21 1941

Action Near Sarawak

(The Exchange Telegraph reported in London that the Netherlands Government had announced one of the cruisers probably was sunk, and the British agency Reuters said it was announced in Batavia that a cruiser and a transport were left blazing.)

The ships were concentrated off Miri, where the Japanese invaded Sarawak. Sarawak is the British territory adjacent to British North Borneo, on the northern coast of the island.

Enemy planes have appeared over various parts of the northern archipelago, it was further announced. The town of Terempa, in the Anambas Islands, was attacked both Wednesday and Thursday, with sixty-five casualties.

The city of Pontianak, in Dutch West Borneo, is being cleared of its civilian population. A Japanese raid there yesterday lasted forty-five minutes.

Japanese planes also raided an airdrome in the northern archipelago, but there were no details on this action.

(The British radio, heard in New York by CBS, said today that Netherlands troops made a surprise attack on North Borneo, and captured some of the Japanese invaders.)

Enemy Seaplane Said To Have Been Downed And Another Set Afire

Japanese Declared To Have Sunk Russian Ship Near Java

[By the Associated Press]

Batavia, Dec. 20—Direct bomb hits on two Japanese cruisers, a transport, and another warship presumably used as an aircraft carrier were reported officially tonight by Dutch airmen operating big American bombers off Japanese-occupied Miri, Borneo.

Other explosives rained alongside the Japanese ships as the Dutch pilots twice attacked the invaders who are seeking to reinforce their toehold on the Sarawak coast, which is adjacent to British and Dutch Borneo, the agency Aneta said.

DEC 21 1941

Claim Three Cruisers Put Out

Another Japanese cruiser was reported hit last Wednesday, hence the Dutch asserted three enemy cruisers had been put out of action in less than a week by their flyers.

At the same time Aneta reported that seventeen Japanese planes bombed and sank the 4,200-ton Russian freighter Perekop in Dutch waters, an attack which "may lead to serious consequences," since Russia thus far is a neutral in the Pacific war.

Eight Russian crew members were killed while thirty-two others, including the captain and three women, were rescued from the ship, which was running between Vladivostok and Surabaya, Java, the agency said.

Says Flag Was Visible

The Russian flag and registration mark were clearly visible from the air, Aneta said.

[The Exchange Telegraph reported in London that one of the Japanese cruisers hit today subsequently sank, and Reuters announced from Batavia that a cruiser and transport were left ablaze by the Dutch airmen.]

Japanese planes immediately took to the air at Miri in an attempt to ward off the Dutch flyers, but it was announced that one enemy seaplane was shot down and another was enveloped in flames when last seen.

Admit Loss Of One Bomber

The Dutch acknowledged the loss of only one bomber in these two telling attacks.

Meanwhile the Dutch announced that the death toll in Terempa, Anambas Islands, had risen to sixty-five as a result of two Japanese attacks Wednesday and Thursday, but said little damage resulted.

In Pontianak, Dutch West Borneo, the civilian population was evacuating the city after a series of Japanese attacks which killed 20 persons and injured 150.

50 Bombs On Defenseless Town

Pontianak is a defenseless town, officials said, and Japanese planes apparently taking off from their newly established Sarawak base dropped fifty bombs on it.

One wiped out a Dutch-Chinese school, another razed the Chinese market, it was said.

The Japanese landing in Borneo was regarded here as "nuisance base," and not as a direct threat to the Netherlands East Indies because of the difficult intervening terrain.

Defense Workers Put Under Ban In India

Viceroy Prohibits Movement From Work Areas As Threat In Burma Draws Closer

New Delhi, India, Dec. 20 (AP)—Persons engaged in essential defense work are forbidden to leave the areas in which they are employed under an order issued tonight as Japan's thrust into Burma brought the threat of war closer to India.

The prohibition came in an ordinance signed by the Marquess of Linlithgow, Viceroy of India, who said it was designed to make provision for the maintenance of certain essential services because "an emergency has arisen."

Russian Ship Reported Sunk by Jap Planes

By the Associated Press.

BATAVIA, Netherlands Indies, Dec. 20—Japanese planes bombed and sank the 4,200-ton Russian freighter Perekop on her run between Vladivostok and Susabaya, Java, the Netherlands news agency Aneta said it was learned here today.

Eight members of the crew were reported killed while 32 others, including the captain, and three women, were rescued.

Seventeen Japanese planes were said to have taken part in the attack.

Aneta said general surprise was expressed in official circles at "this bombing of a neutral ship which, it is believed, may lead to serious consequences. The registration mark and Russian flag on the ship were clearly visible from the air, it is reported."

Chinese Capture Shumchun, Says AP

CHUNKING, Dec. 20 (AP).—Chinese Army headquarters announced tday that Chinese forces pressing along the Canton-Kowloon railway in an effort to relieve the British on the island of Hongkong forced their way into Shumchun yesterday, on the mainland border of the British colony.

Official reports said the Chinese destroyed Japanese defenses there, burned down the railway station and blew up an ammunition dump.

The assault forced the Japanese to rush reinforcements back from the Hongkong mainland section and fighting developed subsequently northeast of Shumchun, the Chinese said.

The Chinese now are attacking Japanese positions 10 miles northeast of Chumchun.

Force Guarding Burma Road Has First Clash With Enemy Planes

American Volunteer Group Battles Raid On Kunming Terminus Of Route

[By the Associated Press]

Chungking, Dec. 20—The International Air Force, composed exclusively of flyers who resigned from United States air forces to defend the Burma road, had its first clash with Japanese warplanes today and shot down four of them, it was reported here tonight.

The American flyers were said by high Chinese quarters to have encountered ten Japanese planes detailed to raid Kunming, important terminal on the Burma road, and shot four of them out of Yunnan province skies without a loss to themselves.

Strength Of Unit Secret

Details of the first action of the International Air Force were not available here.

Long in process of organization, its strength and equipment are secret.

It is led by a retired United States army officer, Col. Claire L. Chennault, whose title is "commander of first A. V. G."—A. V. G. standing for American Volunteers Group.

Now 51, quiet, dark and wiry, Colonel Chennault four years ago gave up a life of retirement in Southern Louisiana to be an adviser to the Chinese air force.

A former army aviation instructor and a recognized aviation expert, he traveled extensively over the country, and some months ago began recruiting the International Air Force.

Establishment of the force on Chinese soil presented many peculiar problems. Suitable accommodations with modern plumbing had to be prepared for the pilots, and cooks engaged who could supply "U. S. A. chow." Special care had to be taken to safeguard the health of the fliers, especially against malaria, which is widely prevalent in Yunnan province.

Mutiny Of Peiping Unit

Ten thousand Chinese troops of Japan's Nanking puppet regime mutinied near Chengchow just south of the Yellow river on the night of December 16 and killed or wounded 1,000 Japanese troops, General News Agency reported tonight.

Later the mutinous troops dynamited a section of the Peiping-Hankow railway.

The fighting was said still to be in progress.

DEC 21 1941

American University Closed

Word was received today that the American-endowed Yenching University at Peiping, in Japanese-occupied China, was forced to close soon after the outbreak of war between the United States and Japan and that its president, John Leighton Stuart, is reported under "honorable confinement."

The fate of the Rockefeller-endowed Peiping Union Medical College was not known.

Chinese Asks America To Fit His Compatriots For Japan Invasion

K. C. Li Would Have U. S. Control Sea and Air, China Conquer Nippon

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—K. C. Li, president of the Chinese Chamber of Commerce, urged last night that the United States "surrender the idea of an A. E. F. to Japan" and permit China "to do the land fighting in Asia."

In an address before the China Society of America, Mr. Li declared that America should concentrate her resources on "maintaining naval and air supremacy in the Pacific and keeping Hong Kong, Rangoon and other ports open."

"I urge the democracies to take full advantage of China's huge manpower and help her train and equip it for invasion of the Japanese Empire," he said. "Invasion is the surest means of ending the Japanese menace quickly and decisisively."

He asserted that Chinese soldiers had gained valuable experience in fighting the Japanese during more than four years of warfare and that Chinese troops could fight "on rice and pepper, while an American soldier will need coffee, milk, butter, bread, beef and other canned goods which will be difficult to transport."

"China has already offered the British 200,000 Chinese troops for fighting service on the Burma border but the British refused," he said. "This is the time to accept China's offer and help her train and equip a Chinese expeditionary force to Japan."

Two Parties in India Facing Demand to Restudy War Stand

Question May Come to Head at Meetings Slated Next Week

BY D. WITT HANCOCK

By the Associated Press.

NEW DELHI, India, Dec. 20.—With Japan's thrust into Burma bringing the threat of war closer to India, leaders of the country's two dominant political groups are facing a growing demand for immediate re-examination of their attitude toward India's participation in the conflict.

There are strong indications that these demands may come to a head next week at meetings of the working committees of the Congress Party and the Moslem League, which, though bitter rivals, are committed to one official policy—non-co-operation with Britain's war effort.

The Congress group will meet at Bardoli Wednesday and the Moslem committee at Nagpur Friday.

Many Actually Aiding.

Although political leaders maintain that Britain has not given a satisfactory statement as to India's political status after the war, many individual party members actually are co-operating fully with the imperial war effort.

The government, having ordered the release of political prisoners, apparently has taken the position that the next move is up to the Indian parties.

Signs of cleavage in the Congress Party ranks are multiplying. Mohandas Gandhi, an exponent of non-co-operation, and the president, Maulana Kalam Azad, have stated that they see nothing to justify a change in policy.

However, Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru and C. R. Rajagopalachari, both powerful Congressites, have expressed belief that the situation has changed materially.

Want Clear-Cut Declaration.

Most Indian politicians declare they would co-operate eagerly in the struggle against the Axis powers if London would make a clear-cut declaration now that India will receive dominion status on a definite date.

London's position still is as Prime Minister Churchill outlined it in a speech September 9, 1941:

"We are pledged by the declaration of August, 1940, to help India obtain a free and equal partnership in the British commonwealth with ourselves, subject of course to the fulfillment of the obligations arising from our long connection with India and our responsibilities to its many creeds, races and interests."

Move on Timor Assailed By Premier of Portugal

By the Associated Press.

LISBON, Dec. 20.—Australian and Dutch troops marched into Portuguese Timor when "there was no reason to consider that an attack by the Japanese was probable," and while Portugal was discussing plans with Britain for the island's defense, Premier Antonio de Oliveira Salazar told Parliament yesterday.

"The situation is not settled yet," he said. "Discussions still are going on. I shall disclose later the further developments."

Crowds jammed the streets outside Parliament in expectation that Premier Salazar might announce a change in foreign policy, but the Premier gave no such indication.

He asserted that Portugal, as a non-belligerent ally, had agreed to study co-operation with Britain in defending Timor, which is 450 miles off the Australian coast, and that the suggestions for such collaboration had been made as long ago as November 4.

Reprieved Till End of War

PONDICHERRY, French India (AP)—This capital of French possessions in the peninsula of India is enthusiastically Free French and pro-British but it contains a handful of men who would be happy to see the war last forever. They are persons condemned to death for murder. Before the collapse of France, convicted murderers could appeal to the court of final revision in Paris. But the De Gaulle government has ordered the verdict of the Superior Court of Appeal in Pondicherry final in all cases except those of capital punishment. Therefore persons condemned to death are enjoying a reprieve "for the duration."

New York, Dec. 20 (AP)—The Rome radio said today that "Italian troops are now withdrawn in Cirenaica west of Derna, thereby frustrating British designs." NBC transcribed the broadcast.

Retreat Of Axis Libyan Force Called Rout

(By the Associated Press)

Cairo, Egypt, Dec. 20—The Axis retreat in Libya has turned into a rout, with imperial forces chasing Gen. Erwin Rommel's battered army and British air blows taking staggering new toll of his remaining strength, the British declared today.

The main body of the retreating Axis forces apparently now is in the western part of the Gebel Akhdar Mountains, a coastal range whose western end is south of Bengasi.

The chase has become so fast, it was said, that the Axis is offering virtually no resistance and the British have been unable to make contact with the enemy except at one point in the Cirenaican highlands.

DEC 21 1941

Advance 45 Miles

Derna, on the coast, and Mekili, forty miles south, were entered yesterday, a communique announced, and the British, pushing forty-five miles further westward, now have come within 100 miles of Bengasi, the Axis' important advance supply port.

British naval aircraft, the RAF announced, torpedoed two merchantmen in a convoy of four freighters escorted by three Italian destroyers and three cruisers. Both torpedoed ships were brought to a stop and began to founder, it was said.

On land, the RAF declared that trucks, field guns, armored cars and vehicles of all kinds were attacked by British fighters and bombers on congested roads behind Mekili. Many, it said, were left in flames and others put completely out of action.

Great Havoc Caused

"Great havoc was caused to enemy mechanical transport on a number of roads which were literally packed with traffic," a communique said.

(The British radio, heard by CBS, reported that "numerous further prisoners" were taken in Libya and that "the Poles alone took more than 1,000.")

The communique said forty destroyed planes were found at the Derna airdrome.

Armored Patrols Gain

It added that forward mechanized patrols by afternoon had reached a point twenty-five miles west of Giovanni Berta, which is on the coastal road twenty miles west of Derna.

"At the same time our armored patrols were making rapid headway west of Mekili in pursuit of the enemy's main body," the communique said.

Geb el Akhdar Mountains, a coastal range whose western end extends south of Bengazi, the British said.

Desert Littered With Arms.

The rout was said to have littered desert roads with destroyed and burning tanks, guns and vehicles and to have left two merchantmen listing off North Africa with torpedo hits after an assault on a convoy guarded by three Italian destroyers and three cruisers.

(The Rome radio yesterday explained the retreat with the statement that "Italian troops are now withdrawn in Cyrenaica west of Derna, thereby frustrating British designs.")

After occupying the port of Derna and Mechili, 40 miles inland, the British were said to have pushed their advance patrols as far as 60 miles further west, within 100 miles of Bengazi, the Axis' important advance supply port.

Patrols Beyond Desert.

These patrols now are beyond the desert and in the green country of eastern Cyrenaica, which once was the region of one of Mussolini's most ambitious colonizing efforts.

Although the British were hesitant to count 10 over the once formidable German-Italian North African forces, commentators expressed confidence that the Axis, harried from land and air, could not make another strong stand even at Bengazi.

They were confident also that there would be no Axis escape to parallel the British withdrawals from Dunkirk, Greece or Crete.

South African armored cars led the way down the steep, winding road from the seaboard cliffs into Derna and found it virtually devoid of troops but with most of its native population of 12,000 still there.

The harbor had been battered by frequent RAF bombing and was in far worse condition than when the British took it in their first Libyan offensive. Derna airbase was strewn with wreckage of craft destroyed on the ground.

The RAF communique emphasized the devastation on traffic-jammed roads along the Axis line of retreat.

"Fighter aircraft," it said, "made a series of successful attacks on lorries, trucks, field guns, armored fighting vehicles and motor transport of all kinds.

"Many vehicles were left in flames. Others were put completely out of action."

Axis in Full Flight, British Near Bengazi

By EDWARD KENNEDY.

Cairo, Egypt, Dec. 20 (AP).—Axis resistance in Libya has all but collapsed and the British are in full chase of Gen. Erwin Rommel's army, fleeing westward almost to Bengazi, the British declared tonight.

The main body of the retreating Axis army is now in the western

Rommel Army Seen Cracking

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 20—British forces in Libya have advanced westward beyond Derna and Mekili, and the retreating Axis forces under Gen. Erwin Rommel now are showing "signs of disorganization," a military commentator said today.

The spokesman declared that flying British advance columns had bypassed both these places in quick thrusts toward the rear of the main German-Italian forces.

In the Libyan-Egyptian frontier zone fighting was reported still under way near Bardia and Halfaya (Hellfire) Pass, with Axis forces suffering heavily from British artillery fire.

Libya Retreat 'As Planned'

Berlin, Dec. 20 (Official Broadcast Recorded by AP)—German and Italian troops have withdrawn "according to plan" after repulsing British attacks in the battle of Libya, the high command said today.

"German bombers last night attacked military installations in Tobruk harbor," its communique reported, "and scored well-placed hits."

British Attacks Increase: Rome

Rome, Dec. 20 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A. P.)—[illegible] mass attacks are increasing in Cirenaica, but the Italian and German troops are meeting them with "great valor," the Italian high command announced today.

DEC 21 1941

The high command communique also said a strong attack on Bardia was repulsed.

It acknowledged that the airport at Derna, which is some 200 miles west of the Egyptian border, is in British hands. The airport is ten miles from Derna proper.

Italian Colonel's Medals

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Dec. 20—A New Zealand officer tells this one:

He encountered an Italian colonel captured in Libya, noted the three rows of medals on the prisoner's tunic and commented:

"You must have been in a lot of wars to get all those medals."

The colonel replied:

"Only the first row is for wars. The other two rows are for earthquakes."

Convoy Attack Crushed: Rome

Rome, Dec. 20 (Official Broadcast Recorded by (AP)—A light British naval unit was sunk, another was hit probably fatally and a large ship was damaged by Italian naval vessels protecting a convoy in the Mediterranean late Wednesday, the high command said today.

Italian vessels were reported to have emerged unscathed.

Convoy Reported Intact

Indicating that the British had sought to prevent reinforcement and supply of Axis forces in Libya, the communique said:

"During the night the enemy made off toward his bases and our convoy arrived intact at its destination despite the enemy's attacks against it."

The high command reported the action took place not far north of the Gulf of Sirte, which forms a pocket in the coastline of central Libya.

Rome Says Foe Withdrew

"Our naval squadrons cruising in the central Mediterranean while on convoy escort encountered a British naval squadron of battleships, cruisers and destroyers at dusk December 17," the communique said. "After a short burst of fire the enemy withdrew in the darkness, taking cover in the mist."

(The action apparently came within a few hours after Italian torpedo plane crews had reported hits upon three British cruisers in a naval formation off eastern Libya Wednesday).

"Enemy destroyers attempted to carry out a torpedo attack, which was frustrated, however, by the fire of our ships and a brilliant counter-attack."

Five British planes were said to have been shot down in operations at sea, against the loss of one Fascist craft.

DEC 21 1941

ITALY FEARS LIBYA ATTACK.

BERN, Switzerland, Dec. 20 (AP).—An Italian official note said today that the British offensive in Libya may assume "in the next few days a still more violent character." .. ..

It said that the British forces were always superior numerically and were being constantly reinforced by fresh troops.

Berlin, Dec. 20 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A. P.)—A decree published today by the Italian official Gazette proclaimed districts of the provinces of Cosenza, Catanzaro and Reggio Calabria to be war zones.

(All these are on the toe of the Italian boot, likely spots for any British attempt at invasion of Italy.)

TWO AXIS SHIPS SUNK FROM AIR

Convoy Blasted by British Planes Off Tripoli.

Cairo, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—British naval aircraft fired torpedoes at two 8,000-ton Axis transports and two 2,000-tonners in a heavily-guarded convoy near Tripoli on Tuesday and sank one of each tonnage, it was announced today.

Both vessels began immediately to settle by one end, it was said.

Tripoli now is one of the main ports of entry into German and Italian-held Libya, a gateway for supplies and re-enforcements for the armies being battered in eastern Libya by the British offensive.

Four Enemy Ships Sunk By U-Boats, Nazis Claim

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 20 (Official Broadcast). — U-boats have sunk four ships totaling 17,000 tons in recent operations against Brtish shipping in the Atlantic, the German high command said today, and credited scouting aircraft with sinking an 8,000-ton tanker from a convoy in St. Georges Channel.

St. Georges Channel lies between England and Ireland.

The German submarines in the Atlantic, in addition to sinking four vessels, damaged two tankers and a freighter with torpedo hits, the high command said.

The communique reported a night battle between German and Soviet destroyers in the Barents Sea, declaring, "An enemy destroyer was sunk by torpedo hits and another was damaged by artillery fire. German destroyers, which were undamaged, put into base after the successful engagement."

3 Transports Sunk, Reds Claim.

MOSCOW, Dec. 20 (AP).—The Moscow radio announced today that a Russian submarine had sunk three German transports, totaling 25,500 tons, in the Arctic.

The transports were fully loaded and were escorted by destroyers and patrol boats, the announcement said.

LONDON, Dec. 20 (AP).—The German radio last night reported that the 1,900-ton Rumanian destroyer King Ferdinand had been torpedoed by Russian naval forces.

NAZI FLYERS RAID THAMES ESTUARY

British Planes Shoot Down Two Big Bombers.

London, Dec. 20 (A. P.).—Heavy anti-aircraft fire against air raiders broke out along the Thames estuary early tonight. Machine gun fire aloft could be heard plainly.

Two of Germany's big, long-range Focke-Wulf aircraft have been shot down and a third so badly damaged it "may not have reached its base," the Admiralty announced today.

They were hit yesterday by British naval planes operating from ships "provided for defense of convoys against German long-range aircraft," the communique said.

Bombs Dropped In Southwest Part Of Country Cause Some Casualties

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 20—Ack-ack guns along the Thames set up a rolling fire tonight to repulse raiding planes and machine-gun fire could be heard in the darkness aloft.

Later an announcement said that bombs were dropped in southwest England and some casualties occurred.

Raiders attempted to attack the northeast but were forced to drop most of their bombs in the sea. One boy was injured on land. Bombs dropped in the southeast caused no damage or casualties, authorized sources said.

Long-Range Bombers Downed

The day, like many in recent months, had passed without a sign of enemy air activity. London awaited official reports on what had transpired in the new action.

The Admiralty announced earlier that two of the long-range bombers with which Germany has bombed convoys, mammoth Focke-Wulfs, had been shot down at sea and a third so badly damaged that it may not have reached base.

Craft Operated From Ships

"These valuable German aircraft were destroyed in fights Friday, December 19, by naval aircraft operating from ships provided for the defense of convoys against German long-range aircraft," the Admiralty said.

"We suffered no casualties in these successful operations."

The communique recalled recent disclosures that the British were using eight-gun Hurricanes catapulted from convoy ships for defense against long-range bombers. The British have declined to elaborate on this new technique of aerial warfare.

R. A. F. Flyer Fires At Dive-Bomber And Bags Two

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—The British radio related yesterday that an R. A. F. fighter fired a burst at one German dive-bomber—and bagged two.

The broadcast, heard here by C. B. S., said the first German plane, hit and crashing out of control, smashed into the other and both fell into the North Sea.

Soviets Place Losses Of Foe at 40,000 In Last Two Weeks

Other Villages on Central Front Are Added to Russians' Claims

DEC 21 1941

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Dec. 20.—The Red Army's grand offensive from Northern Karelia to Southern Ukraine has cut down the size of retiring Axis divisions by more than 40,000 men in two weeks, Russian reports said today.

Soviet units operating in a sector of the Leningrad front were declared by the Soviet Information Bureau to have slain 2,000 Germans, captured the railway station "B"—otherwise unidentified—and seized a large quantity of provisions and war material in a three-day battle.

The Communist party newspaper Pravda said Soviet units killed 1,600 Germans and recaptured 30 villages yesterday in the Donets Basin area.

Other villages on the central front were added to the Soviet list of gains in which 37,000 Germans were declared to have been killed, wounded and captured since December 7.

Assaults Thrown Back.

Izvestia, the government newspaper, said German asssaults on Sevastopol had been thrown back on the whole front outside that Crimean naval base which was isolated by the German drive from the Perekop Isthmus to Kerch.

The report said Soviet artillery and planes helped block Nazi motorized columns and ground forces had inflicted heavy German losses.

(Russian offensives have stalled in Finland, the Finnish high command declared in Helsinki, and all Red Army assaults have been repulsed with heavy Russian losses.

(Except for mild shell fire, the communique asserted, all sectors of the eastern front north of Lake Onega are quiet. It said the Russian drive had shifted in that direction after being thwarted south of the Svir River.)

Ruza, 60 miles due west of Moscow; Tarussa, 65 miles south, "and villages west of Kaluga," a railway center 90 miles southwest, were reported recaptured by the Russians. Kaluga itself was described as partly encircled.

Thrown Back Around Moscow.

German troops who once were more than halfway around the capital thus had been thrown back violently both above and below it. The invaders of Klin, Kalinin and Vysokoe were reported battered westward earlier this week.

The 134th Division—15,000 of Adolf Hitler's withdrawing army—was wiped out to the last man by a Russian encirclement, the Information Bureau said in reviewing developments of Thursday and yesterday, and the division commander was listed among the dead.

"Many prisoners were taken," the bureau reported.

Russia reported a week ago that 85,000 invaders had been killed before Moscow and 23 of an original 51 divisions had been smashed, surrounded or routed between November 16 and December 10.

REDS WREST KEY RAIL TOWN FROM GERMANS

Capture Of Volokolamsk, 65 Miles Northwest Of Moscow, Announced

Gains, From Arctic To Sea Of Azov, Net Vast Spoils, Many Nazi Dead

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Sunday, Dec. 21—Plunging forward with accelerated momentum, the Red Army's grand offensive has captured the key industrial and rail center of Volokolamsk, sixty-five miles northwest of Moscow, and registered other gains from Finland to the Sea of Azov, the Russians announced today.

The town of Voibokalo, south of Lake Ladoga on the northern front, and dozens more villages on the Moscow front have been reoccupied in fiercely contested battles, the Soviet Information Bureau communique announced last midnight.

Vast Spoils And Mounting Dead

With Soviet forces counting vast new spoils and mounting numbers of German dead, pursuit of disordered Nazi divisions routed in the Kalinin sector, ninety miles northwest of Moscow, was declared gaining momentum. There the wreckage of German transports and war materiel littered the snows, the communique said.

Mockingly referring to German claims that the weather largely was responsible for their reverses, the official announcement said:

"The Germans still are complaining about the snow on the Russian front which, however, makes no difference to the Russians."

Rout Matched In Other Sectors

The Russians asserted the rout of the Nazis in the Kalinin sector was being matched by similar Red army pursuits west of Moscow and on the southwestern front.

Volokolamsk, a cotton textile manufacturing center, was occupied late in October by the Germans. It had changed hands numerous times in some of the bloodiest fighting of the Moscow front.

Six German planes were destroyed yesterday and Russian flyers reported destroying or damaging four German tanks, 170 trucks with troops and supplies, seven field guns with crews, two anti-aircraft batteries, one hundred ammunition cars, setting fire to five railroad trains and blowing up an ammunition dump.

Over 40,000 In Two Weeks

Russian reports said retreating Germans had lost more than 40,000 men in two weeks and that the German arc against Moscow was now bent back. Leningrad forces reported a successful three-day attack upon its one-time besiegers.

The Leningrad fighting netted a large quantity of provisions and war materiel and recapture of an unidentified Russian railway station, with 2,000 Germans killed.

Jitters In The Dark

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Dec. 20—It's so dark on the Russian steppes at night, the Moscow radio says, that Germans are getting the jitters.

At the same hour every night they send up a stream of rockets in the area where between December 7 and December 15 Russians have wiped out 5,500 German soldiers and officers.

The Moscow radio said three fully loaded German troops transports in the Arctic (probably in the Barents Sea) totalling 25 500 tons were sunk by a Russian submarine despite their guard of destroyers and patrol boats.

30 Villages In South Retaken

Southward along the vast field of battle, Russian newspapers dispatches said 1,600 Germans met death before advancing Russians who took back thirty villages in the Donets Basin area.

DEC 21 1941

The Soviet garrison of the surrounded Crimean naval base of Sevastopol was reported to have flung back an attack by German motorized forces. Soviet artillery and planes assisting the defenders were said to have cost the Germans heavily.

Russ Drives In Finland Stalled, Says Helsinki

Helsinki, Dec. 20 (AP)—Russian offensives have stalled in Finland, the Finnish high command declared today, and all Red army assaults have been repulsed with heavy Russian losses.

Except for mild shellfire, the communique asserted, all sectors of the eastern front north of Lake Onega are quiet. It said the Russian drive had shifted in that direction after being thwarted south of the Svir river.

Axis French Legion's Leader Posted As Missing

Vichy, Dec. 20 (AP)—Reports from Paris said today that Jacques Doriot, former Communist, who was a leader of the French Legion fighting with the Axis against Soviet Russia, had been posted as missing for several days and that the legion had been cut off by Russian counter-attacks.

These reports, however, were not confirmed.

Report Von Brauchitsch Relieved.

New York, Dec. 20.—(AP.)—Field Marshall General Walther von Brauchitsch, commander in chief of the German armies, has been seen in civilian clothes in Vienna, leading to the belief he has been relieved of his command, the New York Times reported yesterday.

"Well-authenticated private information" was given as the source of this report.

General Alfred Jodl, one of Hitler's military advisers, has been mentioned to succeed Von Brauchitsch, the Times story said.

Von Stumpf Reported Killed

LONDON, Dec. 20 (AP).—The Rome radio reported last night the deputy chief of the Nazi Press Bureau, Von Stumpf, had been killed on the Russian front.

Long and Hard War Ahead, Goebbels Warns Germans

Implies That Chances of Any Further Lightning Marches Are Ended

By the Associated Press.

BERN, Switzerland, Dec. 20.—Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels of Germany told Axis readers today that "the changed world picture" had now made it necessary to count on a long and hard war.

His weekly front page article in Das Reich argued that the better chances of victory were on the Axis side, but implied that the chances of any further lightning marches were ended.

(The German radio announced today that Dr. Goebbels would broadcast to the German people at 8 o'clock this evening, 1 p.m., E. S. T.

(The announcement said Goebbels' address would be heard over all German radio stations, but did not indicate the nature of the talk. The form of the announcement indicated that considerable importance was attached to Dr. Goebbels' address.)

Long War Forecast.

"One day the hour will come when the adversary gets groggy," Mr. Goebbels wrote. "When that hour will arrive nobody can tell."

The article dealt with the Far Eastern conflict and the Axis' chances against Britain and the United States.

References to a long war have been frequent in most of the German press in the last few days, some saying the conflict would last from 5 to 10 years.

"We do not underestimate the remaining possibilities of England and America," the propaganda minister wrote.

"We have frequently pointed out that the colossal extent of both these world empires cannot be broken in days, weeks, or even months. We must compose ourselves for a hard and bitter battle.

Certain Reverses Seen.

"In this battle there certainly will be an eternal up and down in which, under the circumstances, we will not be able to avoid certain reverses. But that is not the deciding issue. The decisive issue is that by far much better chances lie on the side of the Axis and that their leadership will not hesitate to use them."

(A Berlin broadcast quoted the commentary Dienst aus Deutschland as saying clear evidence of the co-operation of the European Axis powers and Japan was afforded by Italian-German activity in North Africa to keep large British forces engaged.)

Dr. Goebbels declared that British and American leaders had underestimated Japan.

He said Germany was in a better position than in the third year of the World War, since France is conquered, the Balkans are no longer a danger and former enemies—Italy and Japan—are now allies.

DEC 21 1941

Civil Difficulties.

Civil dimculties are equal on both sides, he said, contending that if a potato crop is poor in Germany it is also poor in England; that England also has queues before cigar shops.

Certain foodstuffs can still be bought freely in England, he acknowledged, but he asserted the prices were prohibitive.

"From a military point of view," he wrote, "invasion is of course a difficult task. An English invasion of the continent is still more difficult."

He contended that supply difficulties favored Germany, since she had a railway network over the continent while England's channels were the sea.

"Events are moving quickly and are ever changing," he warned. "High watchfulness is necessary and leaders as well as the people must be constantly on guard."

Red Superiority Admitted By Goebbels

DEC 21 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 20—Nazi Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels, appealing by radio to the German people today for warm clothing for Hitler's soldiers in Russia, told them bluntly, "We are up against an enemy superior in numbers and material" on the Eastern front.

Troops' Needs Cited

New York, Dec. 20 (AP)—German Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels appealed to the German people today to donate winter clothing for German troops at the Russian front.

"It is thanks to them that we can celebrate Christmas this year, even if it is modest," Goebbels said, according to transcripts here by CBS and NBC.

The speech launched a supplementary campaign for collection of overshoes, blankets, gloves, fur-lined clothing, sweaters, scarves and any other kind of apparel to "preserve our soldiers against the bitter cold."

DEC 21 1941

Asks For Sacrifices

"The Fatherland would not deserve one quiet hour, if one soldier on the Russion front had to go without adequate clothing," Goebbels said.

"There are innumerable articles of winter clothing at home which we cannot give up very easily, but we cannot compare our sacrifices with those of the soldiers in this war winter.

"We all at home have a roof above our heads, we have a bed to sleep on, we have entertainment, and although our food rations are not large, they are bette rthan those of most European countries.

"I know how necessary it would be for you to keep what you have, but the German soldiers need it and they must come first." . . .

Lists Needed Articles

Goebbels then gave a long list of articles the soldiers need.

"We cannot send the soldiers home yet," he said. "That is only possible after the war is over, but we can send to them a piece of their homeland."

The propaganda chief read an appeal by Adolf Hitler, who said the "greatest front of all times" will be held until the final destruction of Germany's most dangerous enemy.

Evidence Of Cooperation

Goebbels declared that British and American leaders had under-estimated Japan.

HITLER BEGS NAZIS TO AID ARMY IN EAST

Goebbels Reads Plea For Gifts Of Clothing For Russian Front

Proclamation Concedes Troops Are Facing Superior Enemy

DEC 21 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 20—An appeal from Adolf Hitler read on every radio station of the Reich tonight acknowledged that his army faced an enemy superior in numbers and material and begged the straitened German people to contribute their warm clothing to enable the soldiers to endure the rigors of the bitter Eastern front.

The appeal, sounded on Hitler's behalf by Paul Joseph Goebbels, Propaganda Minister, said the German people must show their gratitude by making a Christmas gift of every article of warm clothing that possibly can be spared to the men in the army.

Nazi party members will make the house-to-house collection from December 27 to January 4, Goebbels said.

"Christmas Gratitude"

The text of Goebbels' delivery of Hitler's speech follows:

"Our soldiers are in Belgium, France—all over half of Europe and Africa—and from Finland to Klin. All people can meet the Christmas holidays with gratitude for the accomplishments of our army.

"Our soldiers in their tasks on all fronts went through with the problems which were given to them, and gave good account of munitions and other war supplies which were supplied to them by our hard-working factories and plants.

"This Christmas we owe to our soldiers who could not come home for Christmas the same gratitude we have owed to them for the past two years. But we have to make them feel, every one of them on the front, that we owe an unlimited gratitude at this time when Christmas is approaching, to make them feel that they are not alone.

Needs Are Great

"Our soldiers still need a lot for this winter. Our Wehrmacht today on the front totals so many millions that it is possible with great difficulty to send them from one single point all those things of which the single man is in need.

"But for this very reason the homeland must not have one quiet hour as long as there is a single soldier left in the east, in the southeast, in Norway or especially on the top of Finland who is not as yet equipped to withstand the rigor of winter cold.

"I know that at the last collection the German people have given all they could spare in consideration of the tense situation regarding textile supplies. Nevertheless, there are still in the homeland countless objects of winter equipment of the civil population which the population admittedly cannot very well spare but which, however, the front needs at this time without a doubt to a greater degree than the fatherland.

Sacrifices Asked

"We certainly have to deprive ourselves at home to a large extent, but one would not do justice to the front if one would compare such small curtailments with the sacrifices made at the front during this winter campaign.

"At home everybody has a roof over his head and a bed to sleep in. The nutrition is admittedly limited, but compared with that of all other European nations, still sufficient. At home one is still in a position to get such relaxation as newspapers, theaters, concerts, visits to movies, radio—the relaxation which the population needs pressingly in consideration of the strain which it bears during its process of work.

"Almost all this does not hold good for our soldiers on the Eastern front. That cannot be changed. But in one thing the Hinterland can help. It can give to its sons and fathers protection against wrath of the wintry climate.

To The Last Object

"As long as a single object of winter clothing remains still in the fatherland, it must go to the front. I know that also in the homeland the individual can spare such equipment only with great difficulty. He is not in a position to replace it. But a thousand times more urgently do our soldiers need such equipment, which they cannot replace either.

"It would be an exaggeration if I talked of sacrifices at this time. What the homeland has suffered in the war are only inconveniences, and little curtailments, compared to what our front bears daily and hourly, over two years.

"Thanks to the actions of our front, the homeland still enjoys an internally safe life. The front, for its part, must stake health and life almost in all of Europe. In Europe does our front stand guard for all of Europe, and thereby, above all, for us.

Reminder Of Losses

"As our soldiers have suffered during the summer months continuously and without complaining heat, terrific summer downpours, subsequent dust or mud in their superhuman effort on the march to victory, so do German soldiers now stand in the wintry defense positions in snow, ice, rain, sleet, frost and cold, as a safeguard of the homeland.

"The front could hardly protect itself against cold. Only the entire homeland can help our front. Who at home would dare to withdraw his help from this service or unity?

"The front needs the following badly, and above all: Overshoes, if possible lined ones, or fur-lined ones; warm woolen clothing; socks, stockings, heavy underwear, vests or pullovers; warm (especially woolen) underclothing, undershirts, chest and lung protectors; any kind of headgear protection, earmuffs, wristlets, woolen helmets; furs in all senses of the word—fur jackets and fur waistcoats, fur boots of every kind and every size; blankets, especially fur covers; thick warm gloves, again especially fur-lined leather ones; or knitted gloves, and wool mittens—altogether everything of wool is needed urgently on the front and will be doubly welcome.

A Long List Indeed

"Desired are further quilted or lined undervests, woolen shawls, neckerchiefs and scarfs—altogether everything which serves to keep up the battle against the winter cold, which has arrived so early this year.

"The party with all its auxiliary and allied organizations has been instructed to be at the disposal for collections of these items needed so badly right now at the front.

"The collection starts on December 27 and ends on the eve of January 4, 1942. Party members will make the collection from house to house or from apartment to apartment. Dear Volksgenossen (peoples, comrades), make it easier for those collectors while they are at their work.

Appeal Based On Time

"The collectors will immediately bring the given objects to central points and the army has provided facliities which will bring them in the shortest possible time to the most distant point in the front. They must be put to use by our soldiers as soon as possible and with the utmost speed.

"Germany has only seen little of the war in spite of air-raid attacks. Nevertheless this is a war which will decide the existence, or non-existence, of the German nation. Our soldiers at the front have taken from us, for the most part, the burdens of this war by their actions.

"I believe that now, during the third wartime Christmas, the homeland will have the urgent wish to show to the front its gratitude in a more visible form than in mere words. This festival which is known in the entire world as the most German one, is now approaching. For the first time in this war our soldiers are deprived of a return to the homeland, deprived even of extended furloughs.

Present For The Front

"Now it is time that the homeland proves its closeness to the front in true National-Socialist peoples' unity. We must now thank our soldiers. I would therefore like to call this collection the Christmas present from the German nation to the Eastern front.

DEC 21 1941

"German people, while apart from air raids, the German homes are safe from the enemy, millions of our soldiers now stand at the front, after a year of most severe fighting against an enemy vastly superior both in numbers and in quantities of materials.

"Victories, such as the world has so far never experienced, were achieved, thanks to the leadership and the gallantry of officers and men.

"Thus, the greatest military front of all times holds and fights from the Arctic regions to the Black Sea, from the snowfields of Finland to the mountains of the Balkans, until the hour of the final annihilation of the most dangerous enemy of all times.

Final Appeal For Help

"If the German people should all desire to give their soldiers a Christmas present, then they should do without all articles of warm clothing which they can spare during the war, and which can at any time be replaced again in peace.

"For whatever the command of the German forces, and of their various branches placed in readiness, every soldier would deserve even more. The other German people at home can help. The soldiers on the Eastern front will therefore realize that the national community for which they are fighting is no empty phrase in National Socialist Germany. ADOLPH HITLER."

Harder War In Prospect

Earlier, in his weekly front-page article in Das Reich, Goebbels told his readers that a long and harder war is in prospect as a result of "the changed world picture."

Dealing with the Far Eastern conflict and the Axis' war, which now includes the United States as well as Britain, Goebbels implied that the day of lightning marches is past but nevertheless expressed confidence that "one day the hour will come when the adversary gets groggy."

"When that hour will come," he admitted, "nobody can tell."

"We do not underestimate the remaining possibilities of England and America," he wrote. "We have frequently pointed out that the colossal extent of both these world empires cannot be broken in days, weeks or even months. We must compose ourselves for a hard and bitter battle."

In such a war, he said, Germany cannot avoid "certain reverses."

The German press, by choosing the war in the Pacific to fill its first and second pages, and by relegating the Russian and African news to less prominent treatment, reflected Goebbels' estimation of the "changed world picture."

Claims On War Fronts

From the various war fronts the high command announced these activities:

Russian—The air force destroyed many field positions and dispersed Soviet cavalry and motor columns and attacked air bases and railways. In a night battle in Arctic seas between destroyers, one Soviet warship was sunk and another damaged and a freighter was bombed by planes.

Battle of the Atlantic—U-boats sank four British ships totaling 17,000 tons and damaged three others, while a German plane sank a tanker of 8,000 tons in St. George's Channel.

10 Years For Listening To Radio

Berlin, Dec. 20 (Andi Agency to AP)—A 62-year-old woman was sentenced today to ten years in a penitentiary when a court in Katowice, Upper Silesia, found her guilty of listening to foreign radio broadcasts and disseminating the news to relatives. The court said she escaped a death sentence only because of her age.

Appeal Urges Overthrow Of Duce

DEC 21 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 20—The Russian Embassy announced today that a group of militant Italian anti-Fascists and Communists have formed a secret "Committee on Action" aimed at overthrowing Mussolini and concluding a separate Italian peace.

The announcement, which was issued in the Embassy's publication, Soviet War News, recalled the recent

Italian disclosure of a revolutionary movement, including an attempt against the life of Mussolini and extensive sabotage in Italy. (A trial of suspected spies and saboteurs was held at Trieste, Italy, this month.)

3-Point Objective

The Soviet Embassy said a committee was formed recently "in the vicinity of the Italian frontier," including members of the Italian Socialist party and a "justice and liberty" movement.

It has appealed to all Italians, the embassy said, to strive for these goals:

"Denunciation of the pact with Hitler.

"Immediate separate peace with England, the U. S. S. R. and other countries attacked by Fascism.

"Withdrawal of all Italian troops from the U. S. S. R. and other war fronts."

Obstruction Urged

The embassy said the communique is exhorting Italian soldiers and sailors "to unite to impose an end to the war," workers "to obstruct war production by every means," and farmers "to resist forced sale of your products," and refuse to pay taxes.

How the appeals are being circulated, or the extent of the committee's operations, were not disclosed.

ITALIANS ORGANIZE TO FOMENT REVOLT

DEC 21 1941

Underground Unit of Anti-Fascists Revealed By Soviet Embassy At London

BY ROBERT BUNNELLE

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 20—A new united front of anti-Fascist Italians, including Socialists and Communists plus just plain Mussolini-haters, has been formed to foment a revolution in Italy and force a separate Italian peace, the Russian Embassy said today.

In its "Soviet War News," the Embassy said a committee was formed recently "in the vicinity of the Italian frontier" to prod the Italian masses into action against the Fascist party.

All Groups Invited

"Mussolini's Government has not hesitated to sell Italy to the foreigner in order to hang onto its power against the will of the people," the committee announced.

The committee said it would invite all groups of any political tendency against Fascism to join in these aims:

Denunciation of the pact with Germany.

Immediate separate peace with England, Russia and other countries attacked by Fascism.

Withdrawal of Italian troops from all fronts.

Unity of Italian soldiers and sailors to end the war.

Sabotage by workers and refusal by farmers to sell their products or pay taxes.

Obstruction of war transport by railroad workers.

Freedom of the press, speech and assembly.

Mentions Convictions

The embassy's announcement mentioned the Italian disclosure of a revolutionary movement in northern Italy, where a number of suspected spies and saboteurs were convicted of an attempt against the life of Mussolini and of sabotage.

The committee has issued appeals to soldiers, sailors, workers and farmers to bring about its aims.

How it was circulating its appeals or the extent of its operations were not revealed.

Duce Shows 'Vigor' By Making March Of 'Several Miles'

Bern, Dec. 20 (AP)—Premier Mussolini has resumed demonstrations of his physical stamina, it was indicated today in a Stefani dispatch from Rome.

Stefani said il Duce inspected an infantry division yesterday in central Italy and then "placed himself at the head of the infantrymen and marched with them several miles on foot."

King Mihai Going Home

Rome, Dec. 20 (Official Broadcast Recorded by (AP)—King Mihai, of Rumania, and his mother, Queen Helen, who have been in Italy on a visit, were to leave Florence tonight to return to Rumania, a Stefani dispatch said.

Norse Exodus Increasing

Stockholm, Dec. 20 (AP) — Swedish newspaper dispatches reported today that increasing numbers of Norwegians were fleeing their German-occupied homeland, slipping away to England in some instances by the boatload.

Only recently, according to these advices, a 200-ton ship slipped out of a remote harbor on the Norwegian west coast with 200 persons aboard, including some accused by the Germans of political crimes."

A week ago another steamer bearing ninety persons was said to have made a similar getaway from south Norway.

Turkish Papers Warn Bulgars

DEC 21 1941

Istanbul, Turkey, Dec. 20 (Delayed) (AP)—An editorial in the newspaper Yenisabah, written by a member of the Turkish Parliament, warned Bulgaria today she was "playing a very dangerous game" and that "sooner or later weapons will have to force an understanding."

An article in the newspaper Aksam, which often reflects Government opinion, similarly asserted that Turkey feels no danger of German attack but is skeptical of Bulgarian intentions.

The warning in Yenisabah was provoked by articles in Bulgarian newspapers saying Bulgaria was concerned not so much with collective Balkan security as with what they called individual justice for Balkan nations.

The editorial indicated that Turkey regards Bulgarian occupation of parts of Axis-conquered Greece and Yugoslavia as injustice.

Army and Navy Communiques

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP).—A Navy Department communique:

How a press news radio broadcast about weather aided operation of enemy submarines on the Atlantic Coast was revealed today by the Navy Department.

The commanding officer of a naval base in the Atlantic hears a news weather broadcast specifically mention subfreezing weather in the Dakotas and a temperature of 9 degrees below zero at Duluth, points remote from the coast and apparently not concerned with naval or military operations.

Being weatherwise, the commanding officer immediately concluded that in a few days hence his patrol area would have a clear day or two, with high visibility and conditions ideal for enemy submarine attack.

Special precautions were taken in patrol work on the calculated day, which turned out as predicted, and in the course of operations it became apparent that enemy submarines had also picked up the same information and made the same deduction.

It was pointed out that the information so inadvertently broadcast would also have been of benefit to an enemy air attack along any port of the "weather route" in the North American Continent.

An earlier Navy Department communique:

ATLANTIC THEATER—There are no new developments to report.

EASTERN PACIFIC—There are no new developments to report.

CENTRAL PACIFIC—There are no new developments to report.

FAR EAST—A United States submarine sank an additional enemy transport. Cavite sustained a heavy bombing raid at noon of the 19th. This raid caused some damage to property, but only light casualties to our own forces and civilian personnel.

A War Department communique:

1. PHILIPPINE THEATER:

No details are as yet available concerning the reported landing operations of the Japanese at the port of Davao, on the Island of Mindanao, in the southern extremity of the Philippine archipelago.

Under authority recently granted him by the Secretary of War, the commanding general of the United States Army forces in the Far East has awarded the Distinguished Service Cross to thirteen officers and enlisted men for extraordinary heroism in action.

2. There is nothing to report concerning enemy operations in other areas.

MANILA, Dec. 20 (AP).—A communique from the headquarters of General Douglas MacArthur, commanding United States Far Eastern forces:

It has been reliably reported that the Japanese are landing in force at Davao, and heavy fighting has been going on all morning.

A later headquarters communique:

Nichols Field was bombed lightly after 12 o'clock.

Fighting continues at Davao.

Communiques of Belligerent Powers

DEC 21 1941

British

SINGAPORE, Dec. 20 (AP).—A communique of the British combined command:

There is nothing to report.

An earlier communique:

There was no activity on the northwest Perak front (southward from Penang), where our troops are reorganizing.

In northeast Perak, there was a sharp encounter (on Friday), our troops killing more than sixty of the enemy at the cost of fifteen casualties to ourselves.

Dutch aircraft which yesterday attacked Japanese shipping off Miri, Sarawak, in Borneo, reported a direct hit on a cruiser and another hit on a large vessel thought to be a seaplane tender. One enemy aircraft was downed in this engagement.

CAIRO, Dec. 20 (AP).—A British Middle East command communique:

Yesterday morning our troops occupied Derna and Mekili without opposition.

Forty destroyed enemy aircraft were found on the Derna Airdrome.

By afternoon our forward mechanized patrols had reached a point twenty-five miles west of Giovanni Berta. At the same time our armored patrols were making rapid headway west of Mekili in pursuit of the enemy main body.

Throughout the day our air forces subjected to severe bombing and low-flying attack many columns of the retreating enemy. Great havoc was caused to enemy mechanical transport on a number of roads which were literally packed with traffic.

To summarize yesterday's operations: Our advance into the heart of Cyrenaica continued successfully, and relentless attacks by our air forces on the retreating enemy, coupled with continuous pressure of our forward columns, succeeded in keeping the enemy on the run throughout the day.

A Royal Air Force communique:

Bomber and fighter aircraft took a heavy toll of the retreating enemy units on the road leading from Al Faidia to Barce and in the area west of Mekili yesterday.

Fighter aircraft made a series of successful attacks on lorries, trucks, field guns, armored fighting vehicles and motor transport of all kinds. Many vehicles were left in flames.

Others were put completely out of action.

Our bombers were particularly active in the region west of Mekili, where many direct hits were obtained on enemy motor units.

Maryland bombers of the South African air force raided the airdrome at Benina with good results. Two ME-109's which attempted to intercept the bombers were shot down.

The landing ground at Marau also was attacked, our bombers shooting down one ME-109 over the target.

During Thursday night, Dec. 18-19, naval aircraft located and attacked an enemy convoy of three large merchant ships escorted by units of the Italian fleet off the coast of Tripolitania.

In spite of a smoke screen put out by the warships our aircraft scored hits with torpedoes on two of the merchant vessels.

During the same night, in addition to heavy raids on Bengasi Harbor and the airdrome at Berk mentioned in yesterday's communique, objectives at Tripoli and closely packed enemy transport on the Derna-Barce road were successfully bombed.

During Friday night, Dec. 19-20, dispersed aircraft on Benina Airdrome again were attacked and a number of fires were seen to break out. Objectives at Bengasi also were bombed.

Off Malta yesterday, our fighter aircraft engaged a number of JU-88's, one of which was shot down on land. A further JU-88 which approached the island also was intercepted and severely damaged.

From these and other operations four of our aircraft are missing.

LONDON, Dec. 20 (AP).—An Admiralty communique:

News has been received that two Focke-Wulf long-range aircraft have been shot down into the sea. A third Focke-Wulf was badly damaged and may not have reached its base.

These valuable German aircraft were destroyed in fights Friday, Dec. 19, by naval aircraft operating from ships provided for the defense of convoys against German long-range aircraft.

We suffered no casualties in these successful operations.

Dutch

BATAVIA, Dec. 20 (AP).—A Dutch armed services communique:

Planes of the Royal Netherlands Army air force carried out a successful attack on Japanese ships lying off Miri, Sarawak.

One direct hit and one near miss on a cruiser were seen, and also one direct hit and two near misses were observed on another ship, presumably a ship used for transporting airplanes.

Moreover, one enemy seaplane was shot down, while another made off in flames. One of our bombers did not return.

One or two enemy aircraft were observed over various parts of the Eastern Archipelago. Terempa, mentioned in the communique of Dec. 17, was again bombed on Dec. 18. Little damage was done, but the number of dead has increased to sixty-five.

The attack on Pontianak on the west coast of Borneo, mentioned yesterday, lasted three-quarters of an hour. The enemy, consisting of nine fighters and bombers, was driven off after a fierce combat which went on for about a quarter of an hour by a patrol of three fighter aircraft of the N. E. I. air force. The population kept very calm and is now being evacuated to the surrounding country. The total number of victims known up to the present moment amounts to twenty dead, fifty seriously and 100 slightly wounded.

According to reports which have not yet been confirmed, one of our airfields in the outer possessions was attacked by Japanese bombers.

A special communique:

This morning bombers of the Netherlands East Indies Army again attacked Japanese warships and transports lying off Miri and again scored one direct hit on a Japanese cruiser and another direct hit on another transport ship.

DEC 21 1941

Russian

MOSCOW, Dec. 20 (AP).—A Soviet Information Bureau communique:

DURING, Dec. 20.—Our troops fought the enemy on all fronts.

Russian troops recaptured Volokolamsk, west of Moscow, and Volbokalo, south of Lake Ladoga. Several other villages were occupied, and in violent fighting Russian forces advanced in several sectors.

On the Kalinin, western and southwestern front, the remnants of the German divisions which were routed near Kalinin are now being pursued, and German war material and transports litter the line of their retreat. The Germans are still complaining about the snow on the Russian front, which, however, makes no difference to the Russians.

Six German planes were destroyed Dec. 19.

On Dec. 19 our flyers operating on the western front destroyed or damaged four German tanks, 170 trucks with troops and supplies, destroyed seven field guns with crews, two anti-aircraft batteries, more than 100 cars with ammunition, set fire to five railroad trains and blew up an ammunition dump.

An earlier Soviet Information Bureau communique, broadcast by the Moscow radio:

During the night of Dec. 19-20 our troops engaged the enemy on all fronts.

32.24-13669

30.24—13669

General Rokossovsky's troops continued their offensive and occupied several populated places, capturing eight tanks, 162 motor vehicles and a large quantity of other equipment.

In another sector of the front our troops during the same period captured sixteen German tanks, five guns, 100 trucks, one armored car, twenty-eight trench mortars and other booty.

Our troops operating in one of the sectors of the Leningrad front during three days' fighting with the enemy, advanced and occupied railroad station "B." During these three days the Germans lost 2,000 officers and men killed.

One unit alone during the day's fighting captured three guns, many machine guns and automatics, fourteen trucks, an ammunition dump, two tank trucks, a railroad train and a large quantity of provisions and war material.

DEC 21 1941

German

BERLIN, Dec. 20 (Official broadcast recorded by AP).—A German high command communique:

In the central sector of the eastern front heavy battles are continuing. The enemy has suffered new and heavy losses.

Bomber, dive-bomber and fighter formations destroyed field positions and battery emplacements and dispersed Soviet cavalry and motorized columns.

Other effective air attacks were directed against air bases and railroad installations. A freighter in the Barents Sea was hit by a heavy-caliber bomb.

In the Barents Sea a night battle developed between German and Soviet destroyers. An enemy destroyer was sunk by torpedo hits and another was damaged by artillery fire. German destroyers, which were undamaged, put into base after the successful engagement.

In operations against British supply shipping in the Atlantic U-boats sank four enemy ships totaling 17,000 tons. In addition, two tankers and a freighter were damaged by torpedo hits.

In St. George's Channel aircraft on armed reconnaissance sank a tanker of 8,000 tons in a convoy.

In North Africa Italian-German troops, after repulsing enemy attacks, withdrew from the enemy according to plan.

German bombers last night attacked military installations in Tobruk Harbor and scored well placed hits.

Finnish

HELSINKI, Dec. 20 (AP).—A Finnish high command communique:

On both sides, mild, harassing fire. Attempts by enemy patrols to advance were repulsed.

On the Svir (River) front, artillery and trench mortar fire on both sides was generally mild.

On the east front, all sector, there was mild artillery and trench mortar harassing fire. Otherwise it was quiet.

DEC 21 1941

Italian

ROME, Dec. 20 (Official broadcast recorded by AP).—An Italian high command communique:

Enemy armored and motorized units carried out a mass attack in Cyrenaica against Italian positions in the eastern highlands.

Italo-German forces fought with valor and great ability in new positions to the west of Derna and prevented the enemy from achieving his object.

The airdrome at Derna has fallen to the enemy.

There were renewed enemy armored attacks against our strongholds at Salum (Sollum) and Bardia, but these were repulsed.

A limited number of high explosives were dropped on Tripoli and Bengasi.

German air formations have repeatedly bombed Malta. Two British machines were destroyed in aerial combat and three were destroyed on the ground.

Our naval squadrons cruising in the central Mediterrean while on convoy encountered a British naval squadron, comprising battleships, cruisers and destroyers, at dusk Dec. 17.

After a short burst of fire the enemy withdrew in the darkness, taking cover in mist.

Enemy destroyers attempted to carry out a torpedo attack which was frustrated, however, by the fire of our ships and brilliant counterattack by our units.

A light enemy unit was sunk by the fire of cruisers.

Another was seriously hit and probably sunk by our destroyers.

A large enemy ship was hit by the fire of our biggest units. None of our ships was hit or damaged.

During the night the enemy made off toward his bases and our convoy arrived intact at its destination despite the enemy's attacks against it.

This encounter took place not far north of the Gulf of Sirte.

During the operations of our torpedo-carrying planes, which took place in strict co-operation with our naval squadrons, four enemy planes were shot down.

Another enemy plane crashed in the sea after it had been hit by the anti-aircraft guns of our warships. One Italian plane did not return.

Rios Returns to Panama As Private Citizen

By the Associated Press.

PANAMA, Panama, Dec. 20.—Anibal Rios, who gave up his claim on the presidency of Panama after the outbreak of war with Japan, returned home from Colombia last night as a private citizen, without molestation by police.

Eight of the 12 Rios supporters who had been arrested here were released simultaneously with his arrival.

Dr. Rios, who was third vice president and envoy to Peru when the Arias regime was overthrown, had contended he was entitled to the presidency after the first and second vice presidents resigned.

Admiral King Named Chief of Entire Fleet

DEC 21 1941

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP). — Secretary Knox announced today that Admiral Ernest J. King has been elevated to command of the United States Fleet and will be succeeded as commander of the Atlantic Fleet by Rear Admiral Royal E. Ingersoll.

As Commander in Chief, King will have supreme direction of the operating forces in the Atlantic, Pacific and Asiatic waters which compose the United States Navy.

He also will be responsible for the operations of the naval coastal commands and will be responsible only to the Secretary of the Navy and the President himself.

The position of Commander-in-Chief of the U. S. Fleet formerly was held by Admiral Husband E. Kimmel, who combined that position with his command of the U. S. Pacific Fleet. As a result of the surprise attack on Pearl Harbor and the fact that Secretary Knox found naval forces there were not on the alert at the time, Kimmel was removed from his command earlier this week. He was succeeded as chief of the Pacific Fleet by Rear Admiral Chester W. Nimitz.

CHALKS UP RECORD.

As commander of the Atlantic squadron since last December and Admiral of the Atlantic Fleet since February, he has had charge of organizing patrols and convoy escorts for protection against German submarines.

It was recalled as significant that in recent months reports of merchant ship losses from U-boat attacks have sharply declined.

King at 63 is tall, square-shouldered, firm of step, athletic of build, and possesser of piercing blue eyes.

He is best known in the service itself as a disciplinarian.

HE'S "DYNAMITE."

King entered the Naval Academy in 1897 and was graduated first in his class. His classmates dubbed him "Dolly," and wrote in a somewhat prophetic vein this character note:

"Temper: Don't fool with dynamite."

King served in the Spanish-American War aboard the cruiser San Francisco.

He went through the World War as assistant chief of the staff of Admiral Henry T. Mayo, commander-in-chief of the U. S. Fleet, and was awarded the Navy Cross.

But it was in the years after the war that King achieved the rare distinction of being twice decorated with the Distinguished Service Medal.

IN SUB SERVICE.

He was given command of the submarine base at New London, Conn., and was there when the submarine S-51 went down off Block Island in September, 1925. He had charge of salvage operations and for his work was awarded the D. S. M.

In December, 1927, he won his second D. S. M. for conducting similar salvage operations on the submarine S-4 off Provincetown, Mass.

Meanwhile his interest in new developments affecting the art of naval warfare led him to become one of the first high-ranking officers to make an intensive study of aviation. In 1927, at the age of 49, he qualified as a naval aviator.

King makes his home at Annapolis, Md. He is married and the father of six daughters.

Strict, Tough Seadog ---That's Navy's Boss

WASHINGTON, Dec. 20 (AP).—The U. S. Navy got for its boss today one of the strictest, toughest seadogs ever to fly the four stars of a full admiral from his personal flag.

That was the enthusiastic opinion in naval quarters when word spread that President Roosevelt and Secretary Knox had entrusted Ernest Joseph King with the gravest responsibility yet placed on an American naval officer—the responsibility of fighting a naval war on two oceans with a fleet that has not finally grown to two-ocean size.

Among naval me, there was no doubt that the job had been given to King—a veteran of two wars before this one—principally because of his work this year as Chief of Naval Forces in the Atlantic.

Senators Foresee AEF, With Africa First Goal

DEC 21 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 20—A conviction appeared to be growing among Senators today that the United States would send an expeditionary force across the Atlantic when one was adequately trained and equipped and when the necesasry combat and transport shipping was available.

There was general agreement that it might be difficult to land a second A. E. F. abroad, and several Senators declared that any American troops probably would go first to Africa, the Portuguese Azores or the Spanish Canary Islands off the coast of Africa.

"Must Do Everything To Win"

Senator George W. Norris (Ind., Neb.), who opposed American entry into the first World War but voted for this nation's recent war declarations, told reporters that he "would have no objection to an expeditionary force if the President and the military authorities believe it would do any good."

Norris added that "we're in the war now, and we have to do everything that is necessary to win it."

"I am confident there will be an expeditionary force sooner or later," declared Senator Burton K. Wheeler, (Dem., Mont.), who opposed most administration foreign policy measures until the Pearl Harbor attack.

"Can Be No Blocking It"

"Since we are in the war, there can be no effort to block another AEF if the President thinks one is necessary."

But Wheeler and Senator Gerald P. Nye, (Rep., N. D.), asserted in separate interviews that the nation was far from ready to send any sizable force abroad. Nye said he believed it would be two years before the nation had sufficient trained men, equipment and shipping facilities to fight on European or African soil.

Senators Joseph Lee, (Dem., Okla.), and Claude Pepper, (Dem., Fla.), both administration supporters, suggested that this nation might send men to the Azores, the Canaries or Africa. "We should have set up bases in Africa and taken over those islands a long time ago," Pepper declared. "But it still would be easier to do it now than to do it sometime in the future."

"Our single object is to win the war," the Florida senator continued. "We must take whatever steps are necessary to crush both Hitler and Japan."

Lee said that "despite the fighting in the Pacific, the greatest present danger to our continental soil is from bases which Hitler might operate in Africa."

He added that if President Roosevelt should deem it desirable to send an expeditionary force abroad, "there will be no quibbling about it in Congress."

The President, as commander in chief of the armed forces, now has the power to send men anywhere he chooses without consulting Congress.

Azores Tension Rising

Senatorial discussion of the Portuguese Azores as a possible future springboard for an AEF came at a time when the Axis was exerting pressure on Portugal, because Australian and Dutch troops have occupied Timor, the Portuguese island colony, in the South Pacific war zone.

One Italian paper warned Portugal that German troops stood ready within striking distance of her borders and "that tension is rising in the area of the Atlantic." The mention of the Atlantic was an obvious reference to Portugal's Azores and Cape Verde Islands, which are coveted by the Axis as bases for sea operations against the Allies.

Denied Draft Source, It Seeks Volunteers

[By the Associated Press]

DEC 21 1941

Washington, Dec. 20—Thwarted by Congress in its plan for drafting men under 20, the army will rescind recent orders against volunteer enlistments and go after the younger men, an informed Senator predicted today.

"The army has made it plain that it wants younger men," said Senator Robert R. Reynolds (Dem., N. C.), chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, "and I am sure that it will begin recruiting them immediately."

His comment was given reporters as final preparations for drafting men from 20 through 44 years old, approved by both houses yesterday, awaited President Roosevelt's signature on the enabling legislation.

Group Registrations Likely

The Presidential signature, officials said, will set in motion the machinery for registration—probably at separate times—of men 20 and 21 years old who have not yet been listed, and of men from 36 through 44.

This registration probably will not take place for several weeks, Selective Service heads said. It will be followed by registration of the 18-through-19 and the 45-through-64 age classes, groups which are not subject to compulsory military service under the Draft Expansion Act.

Stimson's Plans Upset

Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson had announced that henceforth the army would take men only through the Selective Service System. But that was before the House and Senate compromised on the minimum age of 20, instead of the 19 previously voted by the Senate.

Resumption of enlistments of younger men, Reynolds predicted, would be especially emphasized in the Air Corps, which thus far includes only regular enlisted men, as distinguished from selectees, in its ranks.

Army officials said that if enlistments were resumed special attention would be paid to the problem of preventing trained men working in essential defense industries from volunteering for active service. Under Selective Service procedure, such men ordinarily are deferred because they are of more value on their industrial jobs than they would be in the ranks.

Way To Army Of 4,000,000

Approval of the broadened selective service-age basis by Congress yesterday opened the way for a 4,000,000-man army. Selective service officials said that, once the men were registered and classified, a total of 2,215,000 potential soldiers could be added to the 1,800,000 now in uniform.

There was some speculation, meanwhile, that the navy later might draw heavily on the selective pool. The navy now has authority to take 50,000 men and the marines 10,000.

Congress has been asked to increase the authorized strength of the navy from 300,000 to 500,000 men. While this increase is expected to be filled from enlistments, James V. Forrestal, Under Secretary of the Navy, pointed out in a letter to Senator Walsh (Dem., Mass.) that a total strength of 1,000,000 men will be needed when the two-ocean navy is completed.

casualty lists.

But in the confusion of war it is inevitable that some men will be reported dead who actually are alive, officials said.

The War Department already has restored to the list of living the names of nine among nearly 200 officers and men once recorded as having met death in the Japanese attack on Hawaii.

A Complicated Job

The navy, two weeks after the Pearl Harbor attack, is still working at the job of identifying each idividual making up the total of 2,897 naval dead reported by Secretary Knox.

To reduce chances of error, both the army and navy have been reporting merely as missing those men about whose fate any reasonable doubt lingers.

The mistaken memorial service was held yesterday at Belleville for John Rauschkolb, 22, a first-class seaman. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Rauschkolb, had been notified he met death somewhere in the Pacific but today were informed he was alive.

Some Difficulties Outlined

Some of the difficulties contributing to the possibility of error were thus listed:

Destruction or capsizing of several vessels at Pearl Harbor resulted in loss or damage to ship records of men aboard. Identification often has been impossible until checks of those found to be missing have been made against the rosters sent periodically to the Navy Department from all vessels and shore stations.

Even then some identifications are tentative and mistakes may be made as in the case of the destroyer Reuben James, whose sinking by a U-boat in the Atlantic costs one hundred lives.

Half-Dozen Mistakes

Before the Reuben James casualty list was complete, a half dozen names had been removed from the roster of the dead.

Many army men met death in the destruction of their barracks in Hawaii. Bomb explosions and fire destroyed written records as well.

Although all soldiers and sailors wear identification tags, these may be destroyed likewise. In some cases identification has been possible only by comparing the number of bodies with men listed as missing.

Sometimes, too, errors crop up in the process of transmitting names to the War Department where complete records are filed, and in checking the field commander's reports against the permanent records.

A Tragic Task

On the Adjutant General's department falls the task of sending out tragic telegrams of notification to parents or other kinsmen stating that "the Secretary of War desires to express his deep regret" that a son or other relative has been killed or is missing in action.

In the relatively few instances where errors are discovered, another telegram is sent without delay, stating that the Secretary is "gratified" that a field commander has advised that a man previously reported dead has been found alive and well.

RADIO VIGIL KEPT ON ENEMY SIGNALS

FCC Tells Congress Of 90 Monitoring Stations Operating In U. S.

Foreign Broadcasts Which May Be Subversive Are Picked Up, Analyzed

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 20—Ninety-odd monitoring stations strategically located throughout the United States and its possessions are keeping a constant vigil for signals "which might be inimical to the national interests," the Federal Communications Commission told Congress today.

Devoting its annual report largely to its role in war, the commission said its national defense operations section "insures a continual and effective policing of all radio communication channels for the purpose of detecting and locating unauthorized stations operating in violation of laws, treaties or war-time regulations."

The national defense operations section, the FCC said, "works very closely with other intelligence and investigative agencies of the General Government as well as with State and municipal law-enforcement bodies."

Foreign Checks Also Cited

The report also told of the activities of the foreign broadcast monitoring service, created last February, and now translating, transcribing, analyzing and reporting on from 600,000 to 900,000 words transmitted daily by foreign stations. The commission commented:

"The importance of listening in on foreign transmissions is attested in the fact that propaganda instigated abroad almost invariably follows the example set in short-wave broadcasts, but follows it with a lag.

"Almost every political, diplomatic or military move is presaged in shifts in propaganda treatment."

3 GOP LEADERS TO CHECK ON WAR

Bridges, Taft And Brooks Call For Minority To Stiffen Vigilance

"Loyal Opposition" Is Declared Necessary At Critical Time

DEC 21 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 20—Three Republican Senators, representing as many shades of the minority viewpoint, agreed today that their party must maintain "constructive criticism" of the Administration's policies in prosecution of the war.

They drew the line against any attempt to "run the war in Congress," but all three—Bridges, of New Hampshire; Taft, of Ohio, and Brooks, of Illinois—contended in separate interviews that a "loyal opposition" was a wholesome and necessary thing.

Bridges Announces Stand

Bridges, who gave full support to the defense program long before Japan attacked the United States, took the view that the Republicans' informal platform should be upholding minority's right to question inefficient methods of producing the materials and gathering the man power needed to fight the war.

"That word 'efficient' is where we hang our hats," he said. "The best thing that can happen to this country is to have a vocal minority that is on the alert to keep us from making costly mistakes.

"I don't think we can fight the war from Congress, but I do think that we can criticize national policies constructively."

Will Demand Economy

He predicted that Republicans, looking ahead to the 1942 Congressional elections, would demand drastic reductions in non-defense expenditures as well as the elimination of what he termed "waste" in the military production program.

DEC 21 1941

Taft, who supported some and opposed other Administration policies prior to the outbreak of hostilities, expressed the belief that it was not only the Republicans' right but their duty to criticize measures which affected national policies.

Taft told the Senate recently that as far as he was concerned he was inclined to accept the recommendations of army and navy chiefs on military and naval matters. If the army said it must have 7,000,000 men, he said he was ready to go along. If the navy wanted more battleships, he was inclined to vote for them, irrespective of his personal opinion on the value of the battleships.

"All-Out War"

"After all," he told his colleagues, "this is an all-out war, a war which may ultimately threaten the very security of this country. I believe that the recommendations of the army and navy on such matters ought to be followed."

But Taft said he did not believe that all recommendations of the President must be accepted blindly, adding:

"Certainly in all fiscal matters we must exercise our own judgment. I believe that on the question of psychological and moral values our opinion is as good as that of the President or the army."

Brooks, a consistent critic of Administration foreign policy moves before the United States entered the war, indicated more willingness to raise questions concerning military matters.

Criticism Advocated

He said he believed that no layman should attempt to say what military tactics should be employed in winning the war, but added there was room for wholesome criticism of obvious errors that might otherwise be repeated.

Beyond that, he found no reason for the Republican remaining quiet about difficulties in the domestic war effort, nor for their failure to point out other mistakes that the Administration might be making in gearing the economic structure of the country to wartime tempo.

Predict Supreme U.S. War Council

Washington, D. C., Dec. 20 (AP)—

DEC 21 1941

President Roosevelt was reported on excellent authority today to be considering the creation of a supreme war council which would be subordinate only to him and would have powers even greater than those of the Cabinet.

Those in position to know said that while the plan still was embryonic, the President believed the war effort could be prosecuted more efficiently if he had a small group around him which could handle many matters of policy which now require his personal attention.

Informants said the proposed war council would be composed of from three to five men. They listed the following among those being considered for membership on the group:

Wendell L. Willkie; Rear Admiral William D. Leahy, Ambassador to Vichy; Vice President Wallace, and Philip Murray, CIO president.

Taft Hits at Hull, Knox In Urging Hawaii Probe

DEC 21 1941

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, Dec. 20.. — Senator Taft, Republican, of Ohio, asking for a congressional investigation of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, said yesterday, Perhaps the fault at Hawaii was not entirely on the admirals and generals."

In an address before the Executives Club of Chicago, he said he believed the inquiry should not be left entirely to the executive department.

"We might well investigate whether Secretary Hull told Secretary Knox the contents of the note which he submitted to the Japanese government 10 days before (the attack), requiring them to withdraw from China, and which was not published until after the attack on Hawaii," Senator Taft said.

"Did Secretary Knox communicate to the admiral that we had sent an ultimatum to Japan, which in all probability, they would not accept? Perhaps the fault at Hawaii was not entirely on the admirals and generals."

Latin America On Guard: Hull

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 20—A Congressional report told today of Axis infiltration in Latin America, leading Secretary of State Hull to comment that the American republics were unitedly on guard against subversive activity.

The report came from a special House group headed by Representative Jack Nichols (Dem., Okla.). It said after a survey of sixteen nations to the south that seven of them, according to "authoritative sources," were plagued with German, Italian or Japanese spy and propaganda work.

Hull told his press conference that the State Department would be glad to cooperate fully with Congress in clarifying the situation.

AVERS NATION HAD 9 YEARS OF WARNING

DEC 21 1941

Says Industrialists Must Make Their Every Facility Available

Declares Labor Should Be Ready To Work 55 Or 60 Hour Week

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 20—Wendell L. Willkie declared tonight that to win the war "our industrialists must make their every facility available to the people of the United States," and said that "labor must be prepared to work a fifty-five-hour, even a sixty-hour week."

In a broadcast address Willkie asserted that the nation was still relatively unprepared for the immensity of the conflict it faced, despite warnings given by President Roosevelt and other leaders.

Says Effort Still Is Slight

"We had over nine years of repeated warning," Willkie said. "But we spent our substances in public expenditures which could have been devoted to employing our people in building airplanes and ships and tanks."

Pointing out that the United States undertook a year ago to become "the arsenal of democracy," Willkie added that "stripped to actual fighting materials the American effort is still very slight—only a mere fifth of the German effort."

"We do not know the extent of Japanese and Italian expenditures," he continued. "But even to match Hitler on his own terms, even to produce at the rate of thirty billions of war materials a year, we must face the most profound dislocation in our lives—a dislocation far surpassing that of the first World War.

Calls For Hard Work

"We must dedicate ourselves henceforth, not to luxury and ease, but to Spartan simplicity and hard work. In no direction that we turn do we find ease or comfort."

Realization must be brought home to the American people, he said, that "the Administration and Congress must cut non-defense expenditures to the bone" and that "new political experimentation must be eliminated during this emergency."

"I doubt if any people in modern times have ever been called upon to make so great an effort in the whole history of the civilized world," he said. "It is, therefore, a gigantic struggle. And it may be a long struggle. We cannot win it with quick dramatics or momentary heroics.

Urges Preparedness

"The fight is world-wide and we shall have to be prepared to fight it all over the world. We must fight it with increased lend-lease aid. We must fight it with our navy. We must fight it with our troops. We must gird ourselves for that task."

Great hope for the future can be found in the fact that during the last ten years "the democratic peoples have learned in painful lessons what democracy means, what it asks of us and what we must deliver in the future if it is to survive," Willkie concluded.

SUGAR PRICES SET AT CURRENT LEVELS

DEC 21 1941

OPA Places Temporary Emergency Ceiling On Primary And Wholesale Costs

Henderson Says Order "Removes Any Reason For Higher Retail Charges"

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 2)—Sugar prices were frozen by the Government today at current levels.

The Office of Price Administration placed temporary emergency ceilings on primary and wholesale prices of all forms of refined and other "direct-consumption" sugar which, it said, should "remove any reason for higher retail sugar prices."

Announcing the order, Price Administrator Leon Henderson declared:

"The OPA has removed all possibility that retail outlets will be forced to pay more for their supplies of sugar.

No Reason For Higher Prices

"Hence there is no reason for American housewives to pay any higher prices for this fundamental foodstuff than they did before the attack on Pearl Harbor December 7."

In connection with the order, Douglas C. MacKeachie, OPM purchases director, said that within twenty-four hours after Japan attacked the United States a consumer run on sugar developed. This run, he said, dissipated within a period of a few days more than one month's supply of sugar and forced the Government's order freezing stocks.

Since last Saturday, when the freezing order was issued, consumer demand has leveled off, MacKeachie said.

Describing the nation's sugar situation as "tight but not bad," MacKeachie predicted consumers might feel a pinch next month, just before new Cuban supplies become available. He asserted, however, that there was no prospect of an immediate or future sugar shortage.

To Have Normal Supply

"We will have, at the most pessimistic estimates—providing there is no interruption of Cuban shipping—a normal supply of sugar next year," he said. "We will have about 6,500,000 tons available; although we are now consuming at the rate of about 7,400,000 tons annually, that figure includes a lot of hoarding and large inventories.

"I should say that in 1942 the country will consume about 6,750,000 tons if there is no hoarding and no heavy inventories—and that supply will get us by easily."

MacKeachie said there was little hope of receiving supplies of sugar from the Philippines next year but that possibly half of the usual Hawaiian supply could be expected. The United States usually receives about 900,000 tons of sugar a year from the Philippines and about 1,000,000 tons from Hawaii.

Domestic Supplies Up

Increased domestic supplies plus heavy imports from Cuba are expected to compensate for the shortage from Pacific trade routes.

Base prices on hundred-pound lots of sugar sold by primary producers were set as follows:

Fine granulated sugar processed by United States cane sugar refineries, 5.25 cents a pound f. o. b. refinery.

Beet sugar manufactured in the continental United States, 5.15 cents a pound f. o. b. seaboard cane sugar refinery.

Offshore refined sugar, 5.20 cents a pound f. o. b. United States cane sugar refinery nearest to port of entry.

For partially or completely processed mainland cane sugar going into direct consumption, 5.15 cents a pound f. o. b. seaboard cane sugar refinery nearest to point of ultimate sale.

Raw cane sugar, domestic or imported, for direct consumption, 4.35 cents a pound United States mainland shipping point, including all taxes and duty.

OPA officials said the ceilings recognized the most advantageous differentials exsiting among the various types of sugar.

U. S. Funds For War Now $74,440,000,000

DEC 21 1941

Estimate Of Total Authorizations Up To Present Given By OPM Experts

Washington, Dec. 20 (AP)—United States funds authorized for war purposes up to the present total $74,440,000,000, it was estimated today by OPM experts.

They said the total included Congressional appropriations, contract authorizations and Reconstruction Finance Corporation commitments. The OPM production division said new requirements resulting from the United States' entry into the war would increase by nearly $1,000,000,000 the original estimates of money needed for all types of construction during 1942.

Preliminary estimates under the old defense program put the construction total next year at about $10,400,000,000—compared with the $11,000,000,000 expected to be spent in 1941. Today's estimate boosted the total to approximately $11,250,000,000, all of which will be for defense construction or construction essential to health and safety, the OPM said.

German Trade Official Seized in New York

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Dec. 20.—Dr. Albert Degener, executive secretary of the Board of Trade for German-American Commerce, has been arrested by Federal agents and taken to Ellis Island, it was disclosed yesterday.

Dr. Degener campaigned against incipient boycotts of German goods, which developed in 1933 when the Nazi regime took over in Germany, and declared the boycotts would result in loss of American investments.

Germans From Latin Embassies Expected At White Sulphur

Party From Washington Includes Baron and Bride, Wed at Alexandria

By the Associated Press.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Dec. 20.—Other German officials, from embassies and consulates in South American countries, are expected to join members of the staff of the German Embassy at Washington at the Greenbrier Hotel here, a State Department official said.

The State Department official accompanied a party of 145 Germans and 14 Hungarians from the Hungarian Legation here yesterday. The party came by special train from Washington.

About a dozen news correspondents will be taken to Hot Springs, Va., pending arrangements for their departure, the State Department disclosed at Washington.

Members of the party here will be given full range of the hotel grounds, golf course and recreation facilities. They are here indefinitely pending their departure from the United States in return for which United States diplomats in their countries will be returned home.

Honeymooners in Party.

In the German party are a youthful baron and baroness, who are spending their honeymoon at the fashionable Greenbrier, thanks to two "very nice" F. B. I. agents.

Baron Ulrich E. von Gienanth, second secretary of the German Embassy and member of the German Elite Guard, and Karin von Vietinghoff Riesch of New York were married Thursday at Alexandria, Va., and arrived here yesterday with the Embassy party.

The baron said they found a law requiring a three-day waiting period in Washington too stringent and persuaded two F. B. I. men to cross the Virginia line with them and witness the ceremony. One of the agents signed the marriage register as a witness.

Kin of Baron von Bulow.

The couple, both about 34, had known each other 14 years. Her two brothers were his fraternity brothers at Munich. She is a sister-in-law of Baron von Bulow of the famous German family. She has taught at a New York girls' school for five years.

Baron von Gienanth came to America as an exchange student at Johns Hopkins in 1931 and returned to Germany and entered the foreign service in 1932. In 1936 he was assigned to the New York office of the consular general and in 1937 became second secretary of the Embassy in Washington.

Two Ships For Britain Are Floated In Maine

DEC 21 1941

[By the Associated Press]

South Portland, Maine, Dec. 20—Two 10,100-ton cargo carriers—first of a new fleet to be built here to augment Britain's supply line—were launched today at the American-operated, British-financed Todd-Bath shipyard.

Bearing the names Ocean Freedom and Ocean Liberty, the vessels were sponsored by Lady Gerald Campbell, wife of the director general of the British Information Service in the United States and Mrs. Sumner Sewall, wife of Maine's Governor.

Two New Keels Being Laid

In a comparatively new form of launching procedure, harbor waters poured into a huge concrete building basin where the two welded-steel ships rested, and slowly floated them.

The general public was banned from the ceremonies, at which the company band played British and American national airs.

After the vessels were floated they were taken to fitting-out berths and pumps emptied the basin to permit the laying of two new keels before nightfall.

The new vessels, similar to the Maritime Commission's liberty ships, are coal burners.

Director Of Censorship Takes Oath Of Office

Vow Administered To Byron Price In Office Of Postmaster General, Who Is Advisor

DEC 21 1941

Washington, Dec. 20 (AP) — Byron Price took the oath of office today as Director of Censorship.

The oath was administered in the Office of Postmaster General Frank C. Walker, who is chairman of the Censorship Advisory Board.

Francis Biddle, Attorney General, another member of the board, attended the ceremony. The oath was administered by Ugo Carusi, executive assistant to the Attorney General.

Price has been granted a leave of absence from his post of executive news editor of the Associated Press.

SOUTH HAS FIRST DUAL LAUNCHING

DEC 21 1941

Two Destroyers Go Down Ways At Charleston, S. C., Within 10 Minutes

Josephus Daniels, Ex-Secretary Of Navy, Is One Of Those In Attendance

[By the Associated Press]

Charleston, S. C., Dec. 20—Two gray warships slid down the building ways at the Charleston navy yard within ten minutes of each other today in the first dual launching of destroyers in the South.

The new 1,700-ton destroyers, the Tillman and the Beatty, hit the water of Charleston harbor at 10.50 and 11 A. M. They were the fourth and fifth destroyers launched at the Charleston yard this year.

Two more destroyers are under construction.

Daniels Praises Tillman

Josephus Daniels, of Raleigh, N. C., former Secretary of the Navy, told a small group permitted to attend the launching that the late Benjamin Ryan Tillman, of South Carolina, after whom the destroyer was named, had carved a place for himself in the political history of the nation.

It was Tillman, he said, "who piloted through the Senate the then biggest naval construction program in the history of the world." At that time Tillman was chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee.

A few minutes later Mrs. Charles Sumner Moore, of Atlantic City, N. J., daughter of the late Senator, christened the destroyer.

Commandant Speaks

Rear Admiral William H. Allen, commandant of the sixth and seventh naval districts and of the Charleston Navy Yard, spoke briefly during the launching of the Beatty and was in charge of the general program.

The Beatty was christened by Mrs. Charles H. Drayton, of Charleston, daughter of Rear Admiral Frank Edmund Beatty for whom the destroyer was named.

She chose as her matron of honor her sister-in-law, Mrs. Frank E. Beatty. Maid of honor to Mrs. Moore was her daughter, Miss Minnie Moore.

3 Submarine Chasers Launched At New York

New York, Dec. 20 (AP)—The submarine chaser PC-485 was launched at the Consolidated Shipbuilding Corporation here today.

Mrs. William G. Wood, wife of the corporation president, sponsored the craft, which cost about $1,000,000.

Two chasers of the same type were also launched at the Sullivan Drydock and Repair Company, Brooklyn. They were the PC-489 and PC-488, sponsored, respectively, by Miss Jeanne Krauss and Mrs. Robert Morrison, daughters of Walter Krauss, secretary and treasurer of the company.

After the vessels slid down the ways their places were taken by keels for new chasers.

Artist Chats With Price, U. S. Censor

DEC 21 1941

Director of Wartime News Choice Would Keep Secret Only Things Which Might Aid Foe

BY S. J. WOOLF.

New York, Dec. 20.—(Wide World)—Last Tuesday President Roosevelt laid his cigarette on the edge of his desk and, smiling at the reporters who filled the executive office, told them he had news of vital interest to them. Then he went on to announce that he had appointed Byron Price director of censorship.

He did not have to tell any one who Byron Price was. Most of the newsmen knew the new appointee, many were his friends. For he had worked in Washington for 22 years. He went there first as a reporter for the Associated Press, later became its news editor there and finally was made chief of its bureau. Five years ago he came to New York to become executive news editor of the entire service.

I saw Mr. Price the day after he was named. He was still somewhat surprised, for he had heard of it but a day or two before the announcement was made. He posed for me in his office in Rockefeller Center.

Father His First Censor.

"Censorship is nothing new to me," he said after he got settled in a large leather chair. "I ran up against it myself 40 years ago. I was 10 years old at the time and I decided that my home town of Topeka, Ind., needed another newspaper. Accordingly I made up my mind to publish one and I got out the first copy with the help of a pencil. The censor clamped down on me shortly after publication. He was my father, and he did not approve of some of the things I had written about my relatives."

The result was that young Price had to wait until he entered high school before he again could satisfy his reportorial cravings. Later he went to Wabash College and while there did some work for a couple of Indiana papers. After his graduation he joined the United Press for a few months and on December 16, 1912, went with the Associated Press. This was exactly 29 years ago to the day that he was selected by President Roosevelt to head the censorship board. This is the second time that Mr. Price had asked for a leave of absence. In 1918 he went to France as an infantry captain. Now he goes to Washington to take over his new duties.

He will not speak about what he is going to do, for he says he can not tell until he takes it over. One thing is certain, however, and that is that he will not forget that getting news is a reporter's job and publishing it a paper's function. He keenly appreciates the duties and responsibilities of the fourth estate and he is not going to restrict or hamper it more than is necessary for the public good.

He fully realizes that in some ways his job is going to be a thankless one, for as President Roosevelt put it "all Americans hate censorship as much as they do war."

Chief Work Coordination.

His chief work will be that of coordination, of seeing that the releases of one department are not at cross purposes with those of another. Up to the present this has not been done.

During the last war all releases came from the Department of Information; now reporters will continue to get their information from the same sources that have always given them out. Their only contact with the censorship will be in the case of exclusive stories.

Although Mr. Price would say little about what he was going to do, he had much to say about papers and their functions.

"I have felt strongly," he told me, "that for some time before we entered the war our papers were playing it up too much. I have never hesitated in saying this. This does not mean that I did not realize the importance or gravity of what was going on but that I felt that there were other subjects which were also of importance."

World Will Go On.

"Despite the war, the world will go on Even now with us in it. Santa Claus must get around and there are reindeer down there in the plaza. In times such as these the papers must not forget that there are still some light things in life.

"Of course, it is to be expected that for the next few weeks the war will take up most of the space. The people are entitled to know what is happening, no matter whether the news is good or bad. I do not believe in living in a fool's paradise. The only news that should be kept secret is that will aid our enemies.

"But I think that in a short time the papers will get back to a more normal state and play up other news besides that of the war.

Pearl Harbor Tragedy Has Many Angles

DEC 21 1941

Questions of Fleet Mobilization, Sea vs. Air Power, May Hinge on Probe

Two weeks after the naval disaster at Pearl Harbor, the nation has turned over to a presidential board the task of sifting the facts while a united people get on with the war to avenge that Japanese surprise attack.

At first blush and coupled with subsequent British sea losses in the Pacific, Pearl Harbor seemed likely to mark definitely the decline of sea power as opposed to air power. But second thoughts do not yet bear that out, for the greatest mystery is how it happened that enough battle craft to account for nearly 3000 American dead and five ships sunks were riding at harbor moorings there that tragic Sunday morning.

Up to that fateful hour it had seemed certainly established that no fleet would ever risk its fighting units or essential auxiliaries in any hardbor base, however well defended, in time of international tension. That was thought to have been settled more than a quarter century ago when torpedo-laden U-boats revolutionized naval tactics and strategy.

World War records show mobilization of the fleet was Britain's first move as war on the continent threatened. Yet it was a sea mobilization and covered by a radio blackout for the fighting ships. That was every naval power's answer to the dangers of surprise attack, since terribly enhanced by development of effective air bombers and torpedo planes.

The torpedo plane is an American conception and was first brought to success in this country. It was developed primarily a means of attacking fleets in landlocked and gun-defended base harbors. In this war, it is proving increasingly more menacing to sea power than bombing planes.

Yet the answer, so far as guarding against surprise attack on a fleet at moorings is concerned, seemed simple to naval experts. It was to withdraw the fleet to a secret sea rendezvous at the first hint of war-like tension with any power equipped to deal a surprise blow.

At sea the fleet is always under steam, its guns crews always a stand-by. It has elbow room and, above all, the factor of concealment on wide waters behind its own far-flung sea and air scout screns.

This writer does not know how much of the fleet was in or near Pearl Harbor at the time of attack. Certainly there were too many ships immobilized. The death list of men and ships proves that.

Yet American dead at Pearl Harbor have not died in vain if its grim lesson is driven home on surviving comrades and the nation as it must have been. The first job is to get on with the war, to make certain by absolute victory that neither the tread of enemy feet nor the fear of future enemy incursions disturb the rest of those Pearl Harbor dead in their far-away outpost of American freedom. Behind that must and does stand a nation resolved that hereafter no American outpost will lack the means or skills American ingenuity can provide to keep it safe in peace or war, whatever the cost.

American naval annals disclose a preview of Japanese sinister plotting long ago that foretold Pearl Harbor. It was enough, even lacking the Nipponese attack on Russia's Port Arthur before a war declaration.

In the 1915-16 period when Washington-Tokyo relations were gravely strained by Japan's 21 demands on China, two old American armored cruisers were on the China station. They were famous relics of the war with Spain and, while obsolete, were big, fast and heavily manned.

(Wide World.)

protect Japanese supply lines stretching upward of 3,000 miles, and to slowly strangle Singapore, which is essential to the operation of big American and British warships in the Western Pacific.

Ring of Invasion Bases.

Clockwise from the South China coast, these are the invasion dots which Japan is trying to make into real bases:

Hong Kong, where a valiant garrison still fought this morning to defend a virtually undefendable island; Aparri, Vigan and Legaspi on the Philippine island of Luzon, where Japanese development has been stiff-armed by the heroism of United States flyers; Davao, on the Philippine island of Mindanao, where a fierce battle is proceeding against four shiploads of invaders who possibly were aided by resident Oriental Quislings; Northwest Borneo (Sarawak), where the Japanese landed in burned out British oil lands and are being pounded by the flying Dutchmen; thence around the Strait of Malacca to Northwest Malaya, where the British, falling back and fighting back through the jungle, have yielded two provinces and the island settlement of Penang to the enemy, but have in doing so sapped the power of the Japanese land advance toward Singapore.

One may be sure this is not the end of the Japanese invasion thrusts; there will be other bad on a basis of long-time security.

The Japanese, hacking their way through the jungles of the Malayan peninsula and dependent for further progress on a few roads edged by a tangle of green and overhung by menacing mountains, have not reached the secret mainland defenses which command the approaches to Singapore. Nor have they run into the powerful imperial forces, still held in reserve, with which Singapore has been reinforced week by week.

Since the assault by Japanese suicide flyers on the Prince of Wales and the Repulse, Japan, very significantly, has given little air support to Malayan operations, save in local action. This is a heartening early indication of the limits of the Japanese air force.

When the Allied warships and particularly the planes are in the China Sea area in sufficient force, there is every reason to believe that Japan's invasion bases can be smashed, her sea lanes riddled and her fighters squeezed inexorably and crushed in the confines of the very noose they have tried to draw around the China Sea.

It is the job of the defenders of Singapore and Manila and Batavia to hold on and lash back as they are able until this irresistible reinforcement by air and sea arrives. It is America's job, a full-time, 24-hour-day job, to see that it gets there swiftly.

Noose Around China Sea

But Observer Believes Chain of Japanese Invasion Bases Can Be Smashed

By FRED VANDERSCHMIDT.

The bad news from the East this week was made by Japan's invasion dots around the China Sea. The good news was made by American and Dutch flyers and submarine crews and by British imperial troops who have prevented or retarded the growth, development and reinforcement of those invasion dots as bases.

There is nothing haphazard about these invasion dots. They are the result of a strategy treacherously plotted and assiduously scouted by hissing little agents, some of them at work when you and I were very young. The dots are intended to be the anchor points of a noose around the China Sea by which our Japanese enemies hope to prevent reinforcements of Allied forces from east, west or south; news, for this must be a defensive war for the Allies until America can get her real strength on the scene. In any event, as Winston Churchill once said, there is one thing inevitable in war: Disappointment.

But while there is no ground at all for complacency about the position in the China Sea, there is even less ground for defeatism.

Singapore True Stronghold.

Singapore has every chance to stand, despite the tragic loss of the Prince of Wales and the Repulse. The island, linked b ya narrow causeway to the Malayan mainland, is a true fortress if 15 years of methodical work and more than a hundred million dollars can build one. The works of its huge guns go five stories deep in the ground. The island's supplies have been planned

Flags of Four Nations Rippled in Hawaii Before U. S. Took Over

They Were Those of Britain, Russia, France and Hawaii Itself; Japan Protested When Stars and Stripes Were Hoisted in 1898

DEC 21 1941

Honolulu, Dec. 20.—(Wide World) British, Russian, French and Hawaiian flags rippled over Hawaii for a brief century of history before the hoisting of the Stars and Stripes in 1898 over the protest of the Japanese.

First came the British flag, planted on the islands by Capt. George Vancouver.

Then the Russians erected a fort on Kauai Island, bringing 200 Eskimos to the tropics from Alaska in 1816. With the Russians was a German fifth columnist—long before the expression came into existence. He was a secret German officer, Dr. Georg Ano Scheffer, who commanded the erection of the fort and passed as a naturalist.

About the first shooting in Hawaii by outsiders was by "madcap" Lieut. John Percival of the U. S. S. Dolphin in 1826. Angered by the refusal of officials and missionaries to allow Hawaiian women aboard his vessel, he shot up the former capital of the islands, Lahaina, on Maui Island. Missionaries protested to Washington and his promotion was held up.

Admiral Lord George Paulet landed British troops in 1843 and occupied the islands for 160 days. Capt. Lawrence Kearny, crusading American naval officer after whom the destroyer Kearny was named, arrived in the islands as Admiral Paulet was negotiating a treaty to make Hawaii British and protested vigorously. His protest brought Admiral Richard Thomas, commander of the British squadron, who ordered Lord George to haul down the Union Jack and run up the Hawaiian flag.

French troops landed in 1847 and occupied the islands for seven days because of religious and treaty difficulties. They shot up Fort Oahu and sailed off with the private yacht of King Kamehameha the Third.

The American flag was raised provisionally in 1893 when a revolution overthrew Queen Liliuolkalani. Thereafter United States troops, on their way to Manila, landed and the American flag was raised permanently in 1898 while the Japanese Admiral Toga, aboard the man-o-war Naniva, protested vigorously with a written note.

NEW DESTROYERS SWIFT, HIT HARD

Give Crews More Protection Than Sailors Had Quarter of a Century Ago

BY LOGAN REAVIS

New York, Dec. 20.—(Wide World)—The United States' new destroyers, the watchdogs of the fleet, are swifter, harder-hitting and farther ranging weapons of war than their predecessors in the first World War.

They're still the slender, agile speedsters of sea fighting, but the men aboard are given a great deal more protection from air raids and submarine attacks than the sailors had a quarter of a century ago.

The very spirit of the destroyer is speed. It cannot be loaded with heavy armor or "blisters" and maintain the required high speed per unit of ton. It's true protection lies in sinking the enemy or eluding him.

Hull Divided Into Sections

The ship's fortification against sinking is largely compartmentation—the division of its hull into watertight sections in the expectation that water entering the comparatively fragile sides may be confined sufficiently to keep the vessel afloat.

The destroyer Kearney was hit by a torpedo in the glare of a burning tanker in the North Atlantic, but the rigidity of the bulkheads in the single flooded compartment kept it afloat.

In the first World War, Jacob Jones actually was our only destroyer to be torpedoed and sunk. Naval experts attributed this sinking to the fact that the commander was unaware of a U-boat two miles away and failed to set a zig-zag course.

The World War destroyer Cassin was torpedoed and the Manley was sidewiped in a collision, depth charges being detonated in both cases, but both vessels were brought into port.

Much depends upon the number of compartments that are flooded, as in the recent Reuben James disaster. The Kearney, one of the Benson class destroyers, has an arrangement of compartments identical with the typical flush-decker, such as the Caldwell of 24 years ago.

DEC 21 1941

Subject to Enormous Strain

The long, slender destroyer is subject to enormous strain because of its speed. Once the naval architect resorted to longitudinal bulkheads to give added strength, but now he relies entirely on strong transverse walls, reducing to a minimum any communicating apertures.

Access to boiler rooms, for instance, is gained only through air locks. The covering top deck in its firm attachment to bulkheads and hull sides provide the strength given by a roof to the walls of a building.

In the new destroyers one may expect a better, perhaps thicker, deck of high tensile steel, additional reinforcements in the bulkheads and a succession of stiffeners following the inboard contours of the sides.

Another vital factor is stability and ability to return to the vertical from a bad roll. Original tests of the first of the Benson class destroyers disclosed a certain top-heaviness. The builders, eager to create a superlative vessel, had overreached themselves.

Naval officials were critical of the ship's "tactical diameter," the 180-degree swing off course, and demanded changes. As a result, certain weights were removed from topsides and 60 tons of deadweight placed along the keel. Destroyers still on the ways were likewise rectified and after further tests of maneuverability and general behavior were pronounced "perfect."

Appear to Be Top-heavy

Due to the enlargement of the forward superstructure, the new ships appear top-heavy in comparison to the old types, but the balance is correct, nevertheless.

At top speeds the ships can be handled more easily due to improved design in silhouette, better rudder and propeller form and the ingenious rounding of the deck edging of the forecastle facilitating cleavage of the sea.

Against the improved submarine, the destroyer today shows increased speed, striking power, and better observation and detection ability. It has more powerful pumps than the early vessels to resist the inrush of the sea due to a possible torpedo or bomb attack.

Against the airplane, it has a powerful armament of highly maneuverable five-inch guns and machine-guns. Gun crews usually have the protection of shields or turrets.

And in a fight with heavier ships, the new destroyer may launch the most dangerous torpedo assault yet developed.

DUTCH VICEROY IN EAST INDIES KEEPS IN POST

DEC 21 1941

War Causes Governor to Stay in Office for Duration—His Powers Unlimited

BATAVIA, Java, Netherlands East Indies (Correspondence of Wide World).—Head man in the glittering Dutch empire in the south seas, The Netherlands East Indies, is a blue-eyed, blue-blooded governor general whose name will never fit into any headlines unless newspapers get a lot bigger.

It is Jonkheer Alidius Warmoldus Lambertus Tjarda van Starkenborgh Stachouwer.

In an unprecedented move, his governorship has been extended indefinitely.

He was scheduled to relinquish the seals of authority last September, having served the appointed five years, but the occupation of Holland and the dangerous situation in the Pacific induced the queen's government-in-exile to keep him there. Now that Japan has attacked, he probably will remain in charge for the duration.

Only once since the five-year term was decreed has a governor general remained beyond that period. That was during the first World war. No man ever serves a second term. In fact, rigid convention stipulated that a former governor general shall not even reside in the Indies as a private citizen.

DEC 21 1941

The reason lies in the fact that, for all practical purposes, the governor general is invested with almost absolute power. Even in normal times, he is nearly a dictator. So the Dutch, who have a healthy dislike for dictators, have made it impossible, through written and unwritten law, for any man to hold the reins very long.

Titles No Longer Fictional

In peacetime, his titles of commander in chief of the army and commander of the navy in Indian waters were legal fictions. Now they are operational realities. He can arbitrarily dispose of all resources, human and material. This includes noncombatants.

The official boundaries of his powers, even before, were very wide.

Sixteen years ago a strategic word was revised in the state regulations for the Indies. "Bevelen" (order, command) became "aanwyzing" (suggestion, direction). It gave the governor general a wide new prerogative, radically altered the relationship between his office and the government at The Hague.

On internal matters, the governor general is nominally influenced by two groups, the council of the state, highest advisory body, and the people's council, a semi-elected parliament. But the law requires him to listen only "in certain instances" to the former. And by decree, he can pass a measure over a rejection by the latter.

This rise of power, years ago, occasioned a colonial wisecrack: "The governor general has more power in the Indies than the queen in Holland." Spoken in jest, it has become a political truth.

The present governor general has the power but none of the personal hallmarks of a dictator.

He is 52, trim, handsome, clean-cut, and he looks 42. He speaks unaccented English, with the crisp incisive manner that suggests the typical American business executive.

The house of van Starkenborgh Stachouwer traces back to the Fifteenth century. Its scion in the Indies is an aristocrat to his fingertips. His life has conformed in all details to the rigidly correct pattern of Dutch nobility. . . . Studied law, entered the diplomatic service, served with distinction in half a dozen capitals (among them Washington), became governor of his native province, and president of the university from which he was graduated, married well. His wife is an American from Baltimore.

No Crowd-Pleaser

Mainly because he is no crowd-pleaser, no dynamo of personal magnetism, there has been at times a sharp cleavage in public opinion about him.

A typical complaint—"At the time of the invasion, we wanted to have parades and bands and a speech from him. It would have made everybody feel better. But he wouldn't do it."

It is impossible to picture him in that role, standing on the white marble steps of the Konigsplein palace, engaging in theatrics and receiving huzzas from the adoring crowd. He does not appeal to popular imagination, but he commands complete respect and confidence in the Indies.

In a manner, he is reserved, austere, correct, coldly intellectual. He has no intimate friends. All his contacts are reined in, held to the official relationship. He lives in the chill north-light of official duty.

And therefore, according to Hollanders, he suffers in popularity by comparison with some of his predecessors, earthy meerschaum-puffing burghers, who were sometimes seen wandering the palace grounds in pyjamas, sometimes received official callers, coatless, and snapped their galluses as they talked.

Not this occupant of the palace.

At the stroke of six in the morning, he is dressing, usually in lightweight gray suits. He seldom wears whites, virtually a uniform in the tropics. At 7 o'clock the first of three large, locked boxes, contining telegrams and official documents, is placed before him. He spends an hour poring over the contents before breakfast at 8. At 2 o'clock, he gets the second. At 6 o'clock, after the afternoon siesta, the third. He is a precision instructor of regularity and protocol.

Endless Treadmill of Work

Those three boxes form an endless treadmill. If, just once, he slips a cog, he may have to work all night to catch up. He has no lieutenant governor, to whom he might delegate part of this burden.

They follow him even on his week-ends, in peacetime usually spent at Buitenzorg, a garden spot some forty miles from Batavia.

He is what the Dutch call a liberal Protestant.

Mainly from necessity, he permits himself few pleasures, only a measure of relaxation. He doesn't drink or smoke. Tennis and badminton, with his family, are for exercise, there is no entertainment reading in his library. Last winter, with due formality, he attended the Java premiere of "Gone With the Wind." The closest approach to a hobby is discussing obscure points in diplomatic history. Sometimes, at official dinners, he disengages himself from the guests, corners an expert in the subject, and opens the argument.

He receives 60,000 guilders a year in salary and 70,000 in emoluments for palaces expenses, ($70,-200) which, as is usual in the top brackets of all diplomatic service, falls below his expenses.

Rectitude marks all his actions. He thought it improper to grant an interview to an American newspaperwoman, said: "She should see my wife."

His wife is the former Christine Marburg, of Baltimore, daughter of a one-time United States ambassador to Belgium. They were married in 1925 and have two daughters, Frances and Tine.

This is the pattern the Japanese followed in their opening attack on United States territory. The long, surprise thrust at Hawaii was a "flying chariot" move, coming on the heels of a "feeling-out" maneuver by the two Nipponese envoys in Washington.

The defender in the Oriental chess game always answers the long-range attack with a shorter counter thrust which the aggressor cannot face without risking almost certain loss of material. And then the aggressor flees to a safer position.

That is what happened when the United States Navy met the Japanese Navy after the first shock of the war was past.

No one but the Japanese general staff knows, of course, whether the Japanese are in this war following the tactics of their famous old game. But there is no peacetime pursuit more comparable to war than chess. Chess is taught as military instruction in many schools. The same factors are involved in it as in war—time, space and material. The battle of Waterloo has been fought out, move by move, on the chessboard.

So it is something more than a mere play on words to observe that if Japan continues to play the game she has begun in this war, it is doubtful that she can win. Because chess players at West Point play by different rules.

In Occidental chess a captured piece is dead. It no longer plays any part in the game.

In Oriental chess, a captured piece remains actively on the side lines, to be put back into the game whenever the captor desires. It can be put on any open space on the board.

War in the Orient was fought in this same way for hundreds of years before the turn of this century. Feudal war lords sparred with each other in what

It's Oriental Chess

By John Lear

In the classical openings of the game of Oriental chess there is no conflict between the opposing pieces.

The first three moves are made, as it were, in silence, the aggressor feeling out the defender, in the dark.

Suddenly a "flying chariot," the most powerful of the pieces, strikes across more than half the width of the board and threatens to paralyze the defense of the opposing king.

often [illegible] game of bluff, and then fell in with the one [illegible] certain to win. It was not a question of individual treachery, it was a custom. And the fighting men went wherever the warlords ordered them.

In other words, onetime enemy pieces were taken out of the play and put back at convenient times and places.

I first learned to play Oriental chess from Japanese newspaper friends during the first years of Japan's invasion of China. The game baffled me for months because I could not get accustomed to thinking out a defense against pieces which were not at the moment on the board but might be at any time. After I got fairly proficient at the simpler openings, I challenged the Japanese to switch and play the Occidental game. They did and they were even more helpless than I had been with them in their game.

I asked them whether, in playing western chess, they were not perhaps up against an unaccustomed directness and finality. They agreed.

I suggested, then, that the Japanese in invading China may have found themselves up against the same thing; after being accustomed to take enemy armies and put them into battle for their own cause, they were confronted with a China which did not [illegible]k into such parts and which did not yield.

To my surprise, my Japanese friends, extremely well informed on events in the Far East, conceded it was so.

In the present war with the United States, the Oriental game may succeed insofar as position is concerned. Islands and other strategic points of land may be seized by the Japanese and used against the country which once held them.

But that will be accepted by the United States as only temporary at best.

JAPANESE FLIERS CREAM OF SOCIETY

Nearly All of Nippon's Pilots Have Been to College at Home or Overseas.

New York, Dec. 20.—(Wide World)—Japan's youthful fliers are the cream of Nippon society.

Nearly all the Japanese pilots have been educated in colleges in Japan or abroad. Most of the members of the air force speak English.

They receive the best equipment the Japanese Navy has to offer. They are better fed and taken care of than members of any other branch of the service.

The air force is under the Navy. The Army has only a few old planes that seldom have taken part in action even in the four years of fighting in China.

Socially the Japanese Navy outranks the Army in Japan. A Japanese soldier seldom is seen in the company of naval men in public.

Only high Army officers are invited to naval gatherings. Even in the ports of southern China and French Indo-China, far from home, the men in the two services do not fraternize.

There also is a distinct difference between members of the Japanese air force and Army and Naval personnel. Japanese boys who are flying and navigating planes are modern and much like college boys in America.

They often have brought their bombers down on a military field after an attack on some Chinese city, make a hurried report, then stripped off their coats for a game of basketball or baseball, their favorite sport.

Many of the pilots attended schools in America and England and have returned to Japan in recent years. They found business slowing down and found it hard to fit into Japanese ways of life after living abroad. Forced to join the Army or the Navy, they chose the air arm of the Navy because it was more modern and offered the greatest opportunity.

Navy's Goal Now Is 5000 New Pilots Every Year; Army Calling for 20,000 Men a Month

DEC 21 1941

BY DEVON FRANCIS

New York—(Wide World)—The United States is launched on a pilot training project intended ultimately to give it mastery of the air.

Whoever masters the air, according to the rule books of both the Axis and its allied opponents, has taken a long step toward world military superiority.

The Army air forces are calling for 20,000 men a month to qualify as aviation cadets. The last announced objective of the Navy was an output of 5000 pilots annually. That has been boosted.

Just 15 months ago the total military pilot power of this country was only 8300 men—counting Army, Navy and Marine Corps.

At more than 130 fields aviation cadets are learning to fly. At tactical fields, to which they are transferred when they win their wings, they are learning to use airplanes as weapons.

A Stupendous Increase

Let's look at this stupendous increase in the pilot training program as it is related by the calendar of events:

In 1936 the Navy was turning out pilots at Pensacola, Fla., at the rate of 250 a year.

In 1937 the lone advanced training school run by the Army air corps graduated its largest class, 184 men.

As late as Dec. 9, 1940, the Navy announced an objective of 800 students a month by July, 1942. It wanted a pool of 25,000 fliers by 1945.

As late as January, 1940, the Army wanted enough pilots to man 5500 airplanes, then the air corps goal.

Then the German march through the Low Countries began. President Roosevelt in a message to a joint session of the House and Senate suggested a production of 50,000 warplanes a year.

In the same month the President announced a program whereby 50,000 civilians would be given preliminary training in the year beginning July 1. Some of them, it was intended, would filter into the armed services for basic and advanced courses.

DEC 21 1941

From that point on the goal has grown ever larger.

By October, 1940, the army wanted to commission 12,000 pilots a year. Last March that was boosted to 30,-000 a year. In July it became 40,000.

Today the sky is the limit. The navy has four huge schools in operation. The army has upward of 70.

In addition, dozens of fields are giving primary training to potential army and navy pilots.

Those are the figures. The job itself is something else, the biggest task this country ever has set for itself in terms of trained manpower for war. It takes almost six months to train an aviation cadet to feel at home in the air.

"Natural" fliers are few. I can count on the fingers of one hand the ones I have known. The rest were taught to fly, to react in split seconds to an emergency.

One of the world's best stunt pilots almost spun an airplane into the ground a few months ago because he did not know what was happening to his ship.

"I knew something was wrong," he related afterward. "I had lost sight of the horizon, and the airplane was turning, but I didn't know what to do to stop it."

He tried correcting for an inside spin. The plane spun on. He worked his controls to bring it into level flight from an outside spin. That did the trick. He brought his ship into normal flight a bare 1000 feet from the ground.

It is an axiom in flying that a [illegible] dent spends his first 50 hours wa[illegible]

ing the ground. The ground looks different from the air. Familiar hills and valleys flatten out. Railroads seem to run the wrong way. Even cities look strange.

As the Cadet Advances

Weeks after an aviation cadet first goes aloft with his instructor, he begins regarding his airplane as something he can command, not as something which must be conquered.

He learns to loop and roll, the two primary maneuvers around which all movements of an airplane are built. He learns to navigate from one point to another, both by map and by instruments. He learns to fly without radio. He learns how to take off and land on dimly-lighted fields at night.

Finally, he learns how to fire guns and, if he is a bomber pilot, how to reach an objective and make a run on a target while unnerving anti-aircraft fire blossoms into shrapnel all around him.

DEC 21 1941

That is the job the United States has set for itself in an effort to gain mastery of the air.

So far, one member of the Axis has the jump on us—Germany. By long-range planning the Nazis have created an unplumbed reserve of pilots for air warfare. As early as three years ago more than 100,000 young men were in training as fliers. What the figure is now, nobody knows.

Less important as an enemy is Italy, where the talk has been big but the results meager.

Still unknown but evidently capable of striking a hard first blow is the manpower of the Japanese air force. The last available figure on training there was 1000 pilots a year. That unquestionably is far below the actual output.

America probably will be producing military pilots at the rate of 50,-000 a year by next spring.

Fliers in Two World Wars Compare Notes

(Editor's note: Clayton Knight, aviation's foremost artist, contrasts by story and pictures his own experience of being shot down behind the German lines in an airplane in 1918, with the experience of a Canadian flyer in the present war.)

How does it feel to be shot down? I've heard that question a thousand times since that day in 1918 when I got mine. I know how it felt in the first World War but I was curious to compare notes with somebody who had been shot down in this war.

I asked a young Canadian ace who got his over England and was recuperating on leave in this country:

"How does it feel to be shot down?"

"You tell me and I'll tell you," he countered.

So I told him about how we were flying behind the German lines at a height of 15,000 feet. He had to smile at that because most of their fights today are twice that high and their planes go about four times as fast.

My crash? I was piloting a two-seater D. H. 9 and our squadron was on its way to bomb an ammunition dump in occupied Belgium. We did bombing only occasionally. Our real work was for the Intelligence Corps.

We should have kept our eyes open everywhere, I suppose, but we were so busy watching the ground for the target that we forgot to look up and around. Forgetting to look above and behind you was as fatal then as it is today. A fellow with a stiff neck had better stay on the ground.

All of a sudden, hell broke loose. A flight of German single-seater fighters had been hiding in the sun above us, and before anybody spotted them they were on our tails and the machine gun bullets were buzzing around our ears like hornets.

I could see the tracers going into the wing alongside of my head and I instinctively ducked my head to keep from getting that one in the back of the neck. For some reason or other that's where you always expected it.

Cockpit on Fire

I felt the motor lose power. It had probably been hit at the first burst. When my observer's guns stopped I thought he had been hit too. I didn't have much time to worry about him because just below me, in the cockpit which was usually dark I noticed a strange glow.

The floor of the cockpit was on fire! And one thing we fellows feared most was getting "cooked." A tracer, I realized, must have ignited the fabric, and although I knew I was falling in a spin and that three or four of the Boche were following me down, to get in a finishing shot, I went to work on that fire and stamped and slapped it with my gloved hand for all I was worth.

The other fellows told me after the war that when they saw the smoke trailing me down they thought it was curtains for us both. They even reported that we were shot down in flames.

We must have fallen 5,000 feet, getting peppered all the time, when somehow or other I got the fire out. Then, I knew I didn't have much chance to get out of the thing with a whole skin, but at least I wasn't going to cook. So I sat up and looked the situation over.

I felt pretty cool and detached now, as though I were sitting apart watching an exciting show.

Just then, I saw a fokker on my tail and another diving head on, at me. My observer's guns had jammed and there was nothing I could do about the fellow on my tail, so I got the nose of the ship up and watched the fellow in front through my sights.

I'll never forget how he looked—getting bigger and bigger until his plane filled my sights. We were both shooting. His bullets were hitting all around me. I felt one rip my leg, but I could see my tracers going into him, too. Still he didn't fall or even swerve, so in a last desperate attempt to finish him off I decided to crash into him. He was right on top of me now. I closed my eyes and waited that split second for the end.

But it wasn't the end. When I opened my eyes he was gone. Maybe I got him. I never did learn. The next thing I knew, the ground was coming up at me awful fast. I remember thinking that I had missed the bullet in the back of the neck, missed the cooking and now was going to get in the third way—in a crash.

But I guess my number wasn't up. I crashed all right, but instead of "going west," I went east to a few German hospitals for the rest of the war. My observer got out with a few scratches.

"That's all there is, brother," I told the Canadian, "except I was scared stiff."

DEC 21 1941

"I don't blame you," he said sympathetically.

Then he told me his story:

"We were in a dog-fight about 30 feet up over the Channel," he began, "I had on my oxygen mask and Mae West——"

"What was she doing up there with you?"

"A Mae West is a rubber vest life preserver. If you fall in the water you just pull a key and it fills up with gas and keeps you afloat. We call them Mae Wests because they give you a gay 90 figure.

"I was flying a single-seater Hurricane fighter with machine guns in each wing and the sweetest automatic cannon you ever saw, and we were up against the latest Messerschmitt single-seats, equally well armed and just about as fast.

"One of them passed my sights for a second and I was lucky enough to get him. Then another loomed up and I was just going to give him a burst when it happened.

Able to Slide Cover

"The whole front end of my ship suddenly blew right up in my face! It was the most uncanny feeling. My motor and entire front part of the fuselage had disappeared into thin air. I thought for a moment that I was dead and didn't know it. I had been hit by one of those 23-millimeter high-explosive shells, I learned afterward. Like you, I hadn't looked over my shoulder and one of the jerries had scored a perfect hit.

"The next thing I knew I was falling upside down and what was left of my plane was on fire. Unless I got out of my green house fast I would be roasted like a chicken in an oven. I gingerly reached up an arm and to my great joy was able to slide back the cover.

"If it had jammed I wouldn't be here telling you this. But it worked and I fell—or rather drifted—out because I was falling at about the same speed as the plane. I had to push the plane away with my feet and gave myself a hot foot doing it.

"But I got clear and started on my long trip down. I didn't open my chute right away for two reasons—some ambitious Nazi might give me a burst for luck or my own plane might fall on me.

"And then began the strangest sensation of my life. Falling wasn't unpleasant at all. It was more like floating in water. Breathing was slightly more difficult than it is on the ground, but not very much. I found myself breathing like a swimmer does—by turning my head to one side and gulping the air.

"Falling is a lot like swimming. You can change your position, as you can in water, by twisting around. When I started to get my bearings I swung my body around and watched the fight still going on above me. To one side and a little above I could see my plane zigzagging crazily down in a trailer of smoke. Nobody was following it down. They must have thought I had been killed in the explosion. Guess I should have been.

Napoleon's Record of Defeat Haunts Nazi Russian Campaign

Remarkable Parallels to Debacle of 129 Years Ago Seen All Through Drive on Moscow; Corsican Got Into Red Capital, Hitler Hasn't Made It

DEC 21 1941

BY GLADWIN HILL

New York, Dec. 20.—(Wide World)—The Russians might well adopt "N" as a V-like symbol of defiance to harass the Germans.

"N" was the classic monogram of Napoleon, and it is Napoleon's record all the way along that has stalked hauntingly beside the German march on Moscow.

Napoleon tried the same thing and failed; went down to miserable defeat. Are the Germans heading the same way?

There have been remarkable parallels all through the campaign. Both Napoleon and Hitler started from about the same place at the same time of year—Napoleon June 24, Hitler June 22.

Napoleon got to Smolensk August 16, and although the Germans claimed sooner, it was not until nearly that date that they let newspapermen into the area, and there still was fighting nearby.

It was September 14 that Hitler started falling behind Napoleon's time-record. On that date, the Corsican got into Moscow. Hitler hasn't got there yet.

This would seem to be the critical period, from the standpoint of the parallel, because it was this time 129 years ago that Napoleon's Army driven back out of Moscow by the resurgent Russians, was retreating in confusion.

Napoleon himself, his original army of 500,000 having been reduced by disastrous battles, disease, famine and desertions to a pathetic 10,000, had turned over command to Murat and dashed back to Paris in a non-stop 13-day journey to start organizing a new army for the next spring.

In this respect, Hitler is considerably ahead of his predecessor's record. The German drive on Moscow was brought to a standstill; now the Germans are retreating; the German communiques have dropped into the laconic nothings of their earlier periods of temporary frustration; the Germans have acknowledged that the Russians are "attacking" again; and from the Russian side come reports of recapturing towns by the hundred.

But the German army is far from being in rout, and if it can maintain its long-drawn-out supply lines may well settle down and hold most of its captured territory for the winter.

That much-talked-of season will not be the disastrous handicap of legend if the present campaign follows the Napoleon parallel.

It was less the weather than bad discipline and morale that made Napolean's retreat such a horrible fiasco. His army was two-thirds Germans, Austrians, Poles and Italians—without the bond of national unity that most of Hitler's forces have—and when things started going bad, they ran.

The panic was so great that the retreat over the Beresina River that hundreds of men were trampled under foot crowding onto the bridges although the river was easily fordable.

Just about this time 129 years ago, the Prussian contingent of Napoleon's army was arranging a deal with the Russians that left Murat, with a feeble little band of 1000 men, unprotected in the Prussian city of Konigsberg. He had to withdraw, and pjresently left the men and went back to Paris himself. That was the very bitter end of Napoleon's march on Moscow.

Litvinoff, Soviet Envoy, Has Had Long Career of Hardship

DEC 21 1941

BY FRANK L. WELLER

Washington. — (Wide World) — Maxim Maximovich Litvinoff, the new Soviet Ambassador to the United States, is strictly a cosmopolite, clean-shaven and serene. In most ways, he is exactly unlike the American's idea of a Bolshevik.

He is 65 now, paunchy, and poised in the dignity of experience. He is nothing like the caustic son of a Jewish family who was dragged from his middle-class Russian-Polish home to serve in the Czar's army at 18. No traces are left of the revolutionary firebrand, comrade of Lenin, Trotsky, Maxim Gorki and Stalin—nor of his flight from the imperial secret police at Kiev in 1899, imprisonment in Siberia in 1901, escape from France in 1909 and British internment in 1918.

The fortunes of the 1917 Russian revolution changed all that. Litvinoff has been the Soviet contact man with western Europe and the world for a double decade.

Foreign Commissar Nine Years

As foreign commissar from 1930 to 1939, he gave Russia her only era of honored participation in the family of nations. He became one of the really important diplomats. Europe, Asia and America lent an ear to his words.

A link with the past, on the occasion of his 60th birthday, was the coveted "Order of Lenin" decoration pinned on his breast by Premier Josef Stalin. Praising him in the name of the Soviet supreme council as "one of the oldest active Bolsheviks," Stalin dubbed Litvinoff "Papasha" ("dear father").

Litvinoff actually contributed very little to the ideology of world revolution. His practical sense, knowledge of western Europe and experience as a newspaperman, teacher, draftsman and salesman kept his feet on the ground. He wanted a strong Russia, governed for the people, and he wanted collective peace through international disarmament.

The new ambassador is something of an enigma, taken in the light of his utter subservience to the politik (policy) bureau—the real rulers of Russia—and his personal behavior abroad. Certainly he has none of the exaggerated courtliness of the old Czarist nobility which he hated. He is more nearly—but not quite—like a prosperous businessman.

Papasha likes good living and good friends. He is a finicky eater because of stomach trouble, and drinks little liquor, to save strain on a weak heart.

Customary social amenities bore him. He has lived too much life to be impressed in the presence of notables. Drawing room repartee and small talk get his goat. He avoids formal dinners, usually asking to appear later provided there are men present of skill and understanding.

Litvinoff is no orator and only a fair conversationalist. But he who wishes to argue merits of profound issues finds in the squat Russian a foeman worthy of his steel. His background is an excellent high school education and the wisdom of 20 years at the helm of moving events. Strangers, unaware of his identity, instantly note the power of his personality and mark him as a man who has seen life and responsibility.

He Dresses As He Pleases

The ambassador is homely, by Hollywood standards. His head is too big and leathery flesh hangs in folds at his chin. His face is lined and blemished by moles which he once had removed to a degree. He stands 5 feet 8, weighs 200 pounds, wears thick-lensed spectacles and has his thinnish red-gray hair cropped close.

His coats never fit his powerful shoulders, his vest slips up over a ponderous waistline and his size 17 collars usually are wrinkled. He is important enough to dress as he pleases.

When he came to Washington in 1933 to negotiate United States recognition of Soviet Russia after 16 years of futile pleas on his part, he resembled nothing so much as an old-time corner butcher rigged out for a convention.

Litvinoff speaks English in Cockney accent heavily larded with Slavic gutterals. An Oxford-bred interpreter amused the League of Nations by starting to translate Litvinoff when Russia came to the Geneva conferences in 1934. His English grammar is good and those who know him easily understand his diction.

"When no means of making war exist, war will disappear," he said in advocating demilitarization of all Governments when England and France merely talked of collective security at disarmament conferences.

"We do not covet other people's land nor shall we yield an inch of our own," he added. He urged on all nations the "indivisibility of peace," warned them to unite against Nazi Germany, failed to get action and surrendered his diplomatic post when Hitler and Stalin signed a non-aggression pact after the 1939 Munich debacle.

He is making a comeback now.

Backed League of Nations

Litvinoff, born Maier Enoch Wallach and variously known in his revolutionary days as Luvine, Felix, Nitz, Graf, Buchmann and Finkelstein, put Russia on record as backing the League of Nations, favoring a tri-partite alliance of England, France and Russia to preserve the peace of Europe, calling for sanctions against Italy in her Ethiopian campaign and recommending non-intervention for all nations in the Spanish civil war.

Through it all Litvinoff maintained a sense of humor and a keen wit. When reporters asked him, after the United States had recognized the Soviets, whether he had agreed to religious freedom for all, which he had not, he replied:

"I can't talk any business with you today—this is Sunday!"

BIG INCREASES MADE IN MERCHANT MARINE

DEC 21 1941

South American Republic Encouraged by This Government Expected to Bear Burden of Transportation to This Continent

AXIS VESSELS ARE CONFISCATED

BY SERGIO DE SOUZA,
Wide World Staff Writer.

RIO DE JANEIRO—Brazil, pledged with the United States in her war against Japan, expects to shoulder a major maritime burden as one of her contributions to war effort.

With the second largest merchant marine of the Western Hemisphere, Brazil's role has been designated for some time—in transport between North America and South America, and that part will grow in importance should the war's progress—as is considered probable—cause diversion of United States vessels now in the South American service to other duties.

Maritime circles here even have looked ahead to a time when the United States might have to depend on the Brazilian merchant marine for principal South American contact in interchange of vital raw materials and manufactured goods. Plans have been made accordingly.

Growth of the Brazilian merchant marine in the last decade has been augmented greatly by recent large additions.

In 1939 Brazil acquired eighteen vessels from the United States, with a total of 68,191 tons. Nearly all these today are being used in Brazilian service to North America.

DEC 21 1941

Some Axis Ships Acquired by Purchase

Recently an agreement was signed here with the embassies of Italy and Germany for the purchase of axis ships which had been anchored here, most of them since the outbreak of the conflict in Europe.

From Italy eight ships were obtained, totaling about 44,315 tons, under agreement whereby they are to be returned after the war. No action has yet been taken concerning four other Italian ships now in Brazilian ports totaling 38,851 tons, including the luxury vessel Conte Grande, of 23,861 tons. Two ships were purchased from Germany, totaling 7,408 tons, and one Finnish vessel of 3,506 tons was bought.

The Brazilian fleet shortly will be augmented further by six Danish vessels, totaling about 21,000 tons, which have been in Brazilian ports for some time. Negotiations for their purchase are scheduled to be completed soon.

Absolute necessity of maintaining South American ship service is felt mutually by the two continents. The United States depends on South America for many raw materials essential to war conduct, materials which are found only in South America or materials whose other sources have been cut off by the war. South America depends on the United States as the only remaining source of many manufactured articles, formerly supplied from Europe or Japan.

It was pointed out here that recent requisitions of the United States navy from the United States merchant marine, even before the attack by Japan, caused a noticeable drop in tonnage available for South American service.

Steady Shipping Service Undertaken by Brazil

Brazilian shipping [illegible] now view as their problem the maintenance of adequate service with the United States, as well as continuance of the extensive service built up along Brazil's 4,106 miles of Atlantic coastline and between other South American nations.

The Brazilian merchant marine operates under the direct control of the federal government through the national merchant marine commission, which determines freight rates, operations, new lines and all other problems.

The principal Brazilian navigation company is the Lloyd Brasileiro, government owned and subsidized to the extent of about $1,000,000 annually. This line maintains a most complete coastwise and vast river service, as well as regular service with the United States, Argentina, Uruguay, Venezuela and Mexico. Until recently regular service was maintained with Europe through Lisbon and with Africa through Capetown.

Two Other Lines Important Carriers

Below Lloyd Brasileiro in size and operations importance are the Navegacao Costeira and Lloyd Nacional.

These three principal companies have between them 101 steam vessels, sixteen motorships and ninety-two smaller motor driven vessels. These represent about 350,000 tons of Brazil's total operating tonnage of 715,320. New acquisitions of axis and other vessels will add almost 200,000 tons to this total.

Brazil has a total of 1,090 registered commercial vessels (of all sorts), but many are small or antiquated and devoted to short coast wide or river service, and would not serve for international convoy duty.

The largest Brazilian passenger vessel is the Bage, of 8,235 tons, and the largest freighter the Caprero, of 7,874 tons. The first was confiscated from Germany in the last war, and the second is a former Italian vessel, bought as old iron after she had been aground eight years, salvaged and returned to operations.

Brazil has but three tankers, two of slightly more than 7,000 tons each and one of 2,500 tons.

Brazil has six shipyards capable of modern building and repairs to large vessels, of which the best belong to the Costeira line and is located in Rio's harbor. In addition to the harbor here it has a large floating dock capable of lifting ships up to 20,000 tons.

Young and Old, Frail and Hearty Join Britain's Blood-Fight Ranks

DEC 21 1941

Nation-Wide Transfusion Service Is Set Up as Citizens in All Walks of Life Volunteer Donations—Bomb Victims Are Eager

BY RUSSELL LANDSTROM

LONDON (Correspondence of Wide World). — The emergency blood transfusion service counts the weak and the afflicted as well as the strong among its donors.

A London auxiliary fireman stationed at the docks gave a bottle of blood and later wrote to the medical officer at the infirmary:

"Should the patient who had my blood ever complain of hearing firebells, just tell him it must be a false alarm. Don't forget, doc, if you want any more just let me know and I'll be right on the spot."

A prominent physician who has charge of the blood transfusion work in a royal infirmary in western England said that he and his assistants had gone out into villages and towns and taken donations from volunteers on the spot

On one of those trips in late winter, he related, "We were received in a lovely Georgian house. Our hostess was elderly and too frail to serve as a donor. She had, therefore, requested that she might entertain the local donors and help the doctors and nurses.

No Sacrifice Too Great

"It was a scattered parish and the donors had some distance to come. Most of them worked on farms but some were employed in a munitions factory about eight miles away and although they had cycled over straight from work they were neither too tired nor too hungry to give blood before proceeding to the village for their evening meal and rest.

"Many came that day, and when the light began to fail, the old lady stood over us, candle in hand.

"We carried the crate of blood from the house into a pitch-black, stormy night. The hostess put on her mackintosh and escorted us to our car with a hurricane lamp.

"Four days later some of this blood was used when a neighboring town was heavily raided."

The physician told of a tiny 70-year-old woman, weighing scarcely more than 100 pounds, who after making her second donation about four months after the first, declined to ride the full four miles to her home.

She accepted a lift only as far as a market, saying that she hadn't started her shopping yet and she feared she would miss the weekend cut of beef if she didn't hurry.

Before the war, this doctor explained, most towns in Britain had small panels of blood donors serving the needs of hospitals in their own areas. In the early days of the war existing services quickly enlarged the panels, and the areas which had no organizations formed them at once.

Service Co-Ordinated

The ministry of health co-ordinated voluntary groups by appointing regional transfusion officers in London and the provinces.

Generally, volunteers are accepted between the ages of 18 and 60, but many are girls of 15 and 16, who say they are older. At the other end of the scale ten years or more are frequently subtracted from age by both men and women.

"All sections of the community have volunteered, including the armed forces," the physician went on. "We have enrolled from among the deaf, the blind and the paralyzed. No handicap seems to be too great. There are few persons whose blood is not suitable for the preparation of serum or plasma, for blood remains fairly impersonal and standardized the world over. However, some are advised because of ill-health not to serve.

"Many come to the hospital to be grouped, but sometimes we go to the premises where volunteers are working. Farmhouse kitchens, headmaster's studies, casual wards of workhouse infirmaries, boardrooms, village halls and first-aid posts have all ben used for the purpose.

"We have welcomed our clients in the small office of a cinema manager, in a railway goods shunting yard, in the back room of a milliner's shop and by the friendly light of a Waterford chandelier in a famous Jacobean mansion.

"We have toured the countryside in all weathers. On one night in the middle of winter volunteers from several hamlets pocketed in the hills came through driving snow and the black-out, hefty farmhands, land girls and farmers' wives, all hard-worked, yet ready to give first aid to the blitzed towns."

"Among our keenest donors," said another authority on transfusions, "are those who have been bombed out. Thus evacuees form an appreciable proportion of our panel. We have also enrolled many aliens—friendly, neutral and enemy."

The hospitals of Britain and the fighting services, he said, were well equipped with stocks of blood, "and there is no lack of volunteers to replace that which is used."

The gift of American blood, at a time when Britain was suffering under the blitzkrieg and not nearly so well supplied with stocks, was enormously enheartening, he said.

"Much has been learned since the World war," averred the doctor. "We owe a lot to pioneer work in Barcelona during the Spanish civil war, which established the value of stored blood and aimed at making transfusion a measure practicable on the battlefield.

"Since then American and British workers have shown the value of plasma and serum in the treatment of severe burns and shock. Many lessons are being learned as a result of this war, and we can be assured that important deductions and discoveries concerning blood transfusion will be among them."

Armada Of 80 Japanese Transports Seen Approaching Philippine Coast

BULLETIN

DEC 22 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Manila, 11.15 A. M. Monday, Dec. 22—A flotilla of eighty enemy transports was sighted this morning off Lingayen Gulf, on the west coast of Luzon. The army, in announcing the hostile approach, said there was no doubt that this was the beginning of Japan's major drive on the Philippines.

The port of Lingayen, 110 miles northwest of Manila, lies in the sheltered waters of the gulf of the same name.

First Attempt Foiled

The Japanese tried one landing there last week, but were pushed back into the sea by Philippine land forces.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters has anticipated an attempted landing in force there and preparations have long been completed to meet just such an eventuality.

Two Beachheads Held

The first repulsed Japanese thrust at Lingayen was the initial encounter between the invaders and the Philippines' stout land defenders.

DEC 22 1941

In other Luzon landings, which were unopposed, the Japanese have gained small beachheads on the Luzon coast at Aparri, in the north, and at Vigan, in the northwest, some one hundred miles above Lingayen.

Two Other Footholds

The Japanese also have gained footholds at Legaspi, southeast of Manila, and at Davao, heavily Japanese-populated port 600 miles south of Manila on Mindanao Island.

At Legaspi the invaders have been under ceaseless aerial assault, while at Davao, army headquarters here said, confused fighting raged but no clear picture of developments there was available.

Heavy Bombs Drop On Manila

DEC 22 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Manila, Monday, Dec. 22—A high-flying formation of six Japanese planes bombed Manila this morning with heavy bombs which caused little damage, while invading forces in northern Luzon probed cautiously southward and confused fighting continued on the Gulf of Davao at the opposite end of the archipelago.

The raiders roared through the mist over Manila at 7.42 A. M. and ground forces threw up a tremendous barrage of exploding shells. The planes, mere specks in the sky, hurriedly dumped their explosives and made off.

Most of the bombs fell harmlessly in the water. There were no fires.

Extra-Heavy Bombs

Military authorities said the Japanese appeared to be using bombs three times the size of those dropped in previous raids.

These informants said that with three air bases now established in northern and western Luzon, the Japanese now apparently are able to carry bigger loads.

Today's raiders appeared to be three-engined bombers.

All eyewitness reports agreed that Japanese yesterday raided the open town of Baler, the birthplace of President Manuel Quezon in Tayabas vince. The town is on the east coast of Luzon.

Called Inexcusable

"Baler is an open city and there are absolutely no military objectives in that vicinity," the announcement said. "It was an inexcusable, unwarranted attack."

Gen. Douglas MacArthur's terse Sunday evening communique indicated that the force which has been in the Vigan area for almost two weeks was attempting to move southward again on the coastal highway which runs between the mountains of northwest Luzon and the China Sea, but he said that no real action had yet been joined.

DEC 22 1941

True Picture Missing

Of the invading army which succeeded in getting ashore Friday night from four transports at Davao, Mindanao Island, 600 miles south of Manila, General MacArthur said frankly that he had been unable all day to get a true picture of the fighting, which continued to be heavy.

The Japanese were adding to their air support at Davao.

Whether the confusion was a result of shattered communications was not stated. Davao is the major Japanese settlement in the Philippines, some 25,000 living in the surrounding area. Fear has been expressed that many of these residents who still are at large have found means of aiding the invaders.

Moros Pledge Loyalty

Significantly, however, the dread Moros, bolo-swinging warriors, accounted the fiercest in the world, took this occasion to renew their oath of loyalty to the United States through the Datto Tabujur, their headman.

The Datto, who already has one son fighting with the United States Far Eastern forces, probably at Davao, sent a message to United States Commissioner Francis B. Sayre saying: All Zamboango Mohammedan elements are with me in the defense of democracy."

Many Moros live on southern Mindanao, in the newest battle area, and the tribal organization of these brown-skinned fighters is of the highest order—fully capable of dealing with Japanese fifth columnists and invaders alike.

Brief Raid On Manila

Military installations in the Manila area were raided briefly Sunday, a few bombs being dropped before noon on Nichols Field and the Cavite naval base. The Japanese flew so high they were almost invisible in the clear blue sky. One small fire was started in the Cavite area.

General MacArthur issued two communiques up to late afternoon, plus a review of the second week of war in this theater.

The communiques told this short story of the current action:

11.30 A. M. (9.30 P. M., E.S.T., Saturday): "Fighting continues at Davao. No clear picture of exactly what is occurring there is available. Patrol activities continue northward" (in the Vigan area and at Aparri on the north Luzon coast, where there is another Japanese beachhead).

4.40 P. M. (2.40 A. M., E.S.T., Sunday): "The situation in Davao remains obscure. The enemy has been active in the air in that section. The enemy southward of Vigan has increased his action, but there are still limited skirmishes between patrols."

The review of last week's operations said both ground and air forces of the United States command had struck back with increasing fury at the Japanese invaders; that enemy patrols had been routed in the Vigan section, and at Legaspi, about 200 miles southeast of Manila.

At least thirty Japanese planes were destroyed, twenty-five of them on the ground, five in the air.

An even dozen Japanese air raids were listed, "but for the most part damage was not serious and casualties were light."

Two Japanese transports were crippled by United States air forces at Legaspi.

Assails Singapore "Incompetence"

[By the Associated Press]

Sydney, Monday, Dec. 22—Sir Charles Brooke, the Rajah of Sarawak, said today in an interview that the present position of the British in Malaya was due to "gross incompetence and almost criminal negligence" of military and political leaders in Singapore.

DEC 22 1941

Member of a British family which ruled Sarawak on the Island of Borneo for the last ninety-nine years, Sir Charles termed the Singapore authorities "brass hats . . . lah-di-day, old-school-tie incompetents who are responsible for the fantastic position in Malaya."

"They should be sacked immediately," he said.

"When I left I was given to understand that should Sarawak be attacked it would be given air support. The first thing that happens is Japan calls Britain's bluff and we have to blow up our oil fields. The only air protection over Sarawak today is Dutch."

"About five weeks ago Thai military and political officers were shown over the Singapore defenses," Sir Charles said. "This was a fantastic error." (Thailand now is allied with Japan.)

SINGAPORE, Dec. 21 (AP)—The British announced today the loss of a 623-ton naval auxiliary, the converted merchantman Banka, and said four European officers and 40 Malay sailors were missing. Six crewmen were saved.

Gob Off Sub Tells Of Hide-And-Seek With Japs At Sea

BY CLARK LEE

[By the Associated Press]

Manila, Dec. 21—"It's tougher 'n hell out there, but we can take it," said a big, unshaven American bluejacket.

The sailor, a chief petty officer from an Asiatic Fleet submarine, was ashore for the first time in two weeks and was mighty anxious to get back to sea and out of the Manila air-raid belt.

His submarine had been at sea for several days before the war and for eleven days and nights it was busy combing Far Eastern waters for enemy ships. He was quite cautious not to mention names of places or disclose anything that might give information to the enemy. But he did talk.

Hide-And-Seek With Japan

"We played hide-and-seek with Jap ships and planes for eleven days," he related.

"During daylight hours we were under most of the time, coming up only for a look-see.

"We threw lots of fish (torpedoes) at them.

"We took the air at night but that's dangerous business because of the risk of being fired on both by the Japs and our own forces.

No Face Wash For 11 Days

"We got caught short on water and didn't have a face wash for eleven days but there was enough for drinking and cooking."

The big sailor's conversation halted abruptly as an air-raid alarm sounded and he cocked his ear to catch the wail of the sirens. then he said:

"Damned if it isn't dangerous around here. Believe you me, I don't like these air raids. I'm going back to my ship and hope we shove off pronto. I feel safer at sea than bottled up here where Jap airmen can get a crack at me."

Moros Pledge Loyalty to U. S.

MANILA, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—The Philippines' bolo-swinging Moros, among the world's fiercest fighters, renewed their oath of loyalty to the United States and stressed through one of their high Mohammedan officials that they are ready for all-out defense of democracy.

"All Zamboanga Mohammedan elements are with me in the defense of democracy," the Moros' headman, Datto Tabujur, messaged Francis B. Sayre, United States High Commissioner for the Philippines.

The Datto already has one son with the United States' Far Eastern forces, probably battling for Davao, and another son about to be called to the colors.

MacArthur Personally Presents Decorations

Two Flyers, Ohioan And Filipino, Gets D. S. C.—Citation To Capt. Colin Kelly Read

Manila, Monday, Dec. 22 (AP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur personally presented the Distinguished Service Cross today to Second Lieutenant Jack K. D. Dale, of Willoughby, Ohio, and Capt. Jesus A. Villamor, of the Philippine Air Corps, who won the decoration for daring exploits in the early days of the Pacific war.

The general also read a citation to Capt. Colin P. Kelly, D. S. C. winner and first United States army hero of this conflict, who fell to his death after sinking a Japanese battleship.

Visibly affected as he read the citation, General MacArthur declared Captain Kelly's sacrifice would live forever in the memory of the American people.

Ten other Distinguished Service Crosses have been awarded, but the recipients were on duty today and could not attend the ceremony.

British Admit Retreat Of 45 Miles in Malaya, Repel Western Drive

DEC 22 1941

By HAL. YATES McDANIEL

SINGAPORE, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—The British forces defending Singapore have retreated 45 miles through the jungles on the eastern side of the Malay Peninsula but have beaten off an attack on the western side, the British announced tonight.

A communique said forces in northeastern Malaya had been successfully withdrawn from the area of Kelantan State between Kota Bharu, where the Japanese made their initial landing Dec. 8, and Kuala Krai, 45 miles to the south.

ON CENTRAL RAILROAD

Kuala Krai is situated inland on the central Malayan railroad about 300 miles north of Singapore.

"Loss of airdrome facilities in northern Kelantan and the vulnerability of communications" prompted a decision some days ago to execute a withdrawal, it was stated.

The retreat involved a series of co-ordinated night movements which resulted in "bringing out the greater part of the British force and the majority of stores and equipment" despite attempted Japanese interference on land and in the air, the British said.

DEC 22 1941

REPULSE ONE ATTACK

Shortly before, another communique had announced the repulse of a Japanese attack in the Lenggong area, in northwest Malaya.

Lenggong is about 30 miles southwest of Grik, or 48 miles south of the Thailand frontier, and is on the eastern bank of the Krian River where the British were last reported organizing strong defense positions after surrendering Perak State, Wellesley Province and the offshore tin smelting island of Penang.

IN STRAIGHT LINE

The British positions tonight thus were almost in a straight line across the Malay Peninsula about 300 miles north of this Far Eastern fortress. The Japanese evidently were aiming their thrusts along the railroads which skirt the eastern and western sides of the peninsula.

Some quarters thought Japan might launch a major drive for Ipoh, an important tin mining centre 25 miles south of Lenggong at almost any hour.

MOVING ALONG ROAD

The Japanese apparently were already beginning to feel their way along the road from Grik.

Another communique announced the loss of the small 623-ton converted merchantman Banka, along with four of her officers and 40 of her Malay sailors. Six of the crewmen were saved. The communique gave no hint of how the Banka had been destroyed.

RAID 180 MILES AWAY

During the day the Japanese raided the Kuala Lumpur area on the railway 180 miles north of Singapore. One of the planes was shot down and another probably destroyed, the British said. Kuantan on the eastern coast was attacked from the air Saturday.

The British said they had lost but one plane today in Malayan fighting.

BRITISH PUBLIC AROUSED

Although the British in the second week of the Pacific war had not sustained any loss as heavy as the sinking of the Prince of Wales and Repulse, the unchecked Japanese drive down the peninsula stirred the press and public to ask pointed questions about the conduct of the war.

"When do we stop withdrawing and when do we start hitting back?" was the tenor of these questions.

All eye-witness reports agreed that the British, Australians and Indians composing the Malayan defense force were fighting magnificently, but the Japanese had pushed toward Singapore at the rate of more than seven miles a day in the fortnight just passed.

interviewers that the Malayan jungle was unsuitable for operations with armored vehicles and did not offer sufficient field of fire for use of much artillery behind mobile units led by tanks.

At frequent intervals in the last 12 months the Singapore command has announced the arrival of warplanes and air force "veterans of the Battle of Britain" and several months ago newsmen were encouraged to publicize the fact that Britain had perfected a chain of air bases from Burma through Malaya to Borneo. They were permitted to see some of these planes and to visit the air fields.

CLAIM NO BOMBINGS

Since Dec. 12, the command here has not reported any bombings of Japanese bases in Thailand or Japanese lines of communication. Although British fighters were reported on Dec. 9 and Dec. 13 to have downed several Japanese aircraft, the only official mention of aerial activity, other than patrol work, since then has been of Dutch airmen's success against Japanese warships.

Neither the local newspapers nor international press correspondents were permitted to describe the magnitude of the Japanese terror bombing of Penang or the extent of its effect upon the city's population and public services.

The wholesale flight of the island's inhabitants and the stories they told of people machine-gunned in the streets, and the looting, however, have spurred the Singapore population and the authorities in Singapore to prevent a repetition here.

GRIM FIGHTING STILL PERSISTS AT HONGKONG

DEC 22 1941

Britons Thrilled By Stubborn Stand Against Tremendous Odds

King George And Colonial Secretary Send Messages Of Praise

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 21—Hongkong's grimly resisting defenders still defied overwhelming Japanese might tonight, urged on to hold their rock-hewn strongholds in the island's peak by an exhortation of its Governor: "The eyes of the empire are upon you! Be strong! Be resolute and do your duty!"

Britons were thrilled by accounts of the garrison's stubborn fight against great odds, but no hope was held out here that the invaders could be driven back, and British sources refused even to speculate how long its resistance could last.

King Sends Praise

King George VI, Colonial Secretary Lord Moyne and other officials sent messages of praise to Governor Sir Mark Young and Maj. Gen. C. M. Maltby, Hongkong's commander in chief, for the valiant stand of the garrison, drawn almost equally from Canadian and United Kingdom forces, and the crown colony's volunteer defense force of Europeans and Chinese.

The story of the struggle, which has been waged in part behind a barrier of long-distance silence, was filled in for Britons today by three belated Hongkong communiques and exultant Japanese predictions that the island's downfall was imminent.

Day-Long Fighting

The communiques were from Friday, when the Japanese secured their first foothold on the island in day-long fighting after the first landing forces had been put ashore from Kowloon, on the mainland, under cover of darkness the night before.

Now, said Tokyo broadcasts, fighting has spread to the Happy Valley race course east of the captured colonial capital, Victoria, and one British strong point after another in the towering hills of Hongkong is being smashed.

The fortifications, according to these reports, are being pounded by closely cooperating air and artillery forces and about half of one hundred trapped British vessels have been sunk in Japanese-controlled waters around the island.

Jap Occupation Admitted

The Colonial Office announced the Hongkong communiques, which said the Japanese troops succeeded in setting foot on the island at Taikoo, across the narrow strait from Kowloon on the island's north shore and east of Victoria.

The communiques told this graphic story of that Black Friday on Hongkong island.

"10.30 A. M. Hongkong time: The enemy shelled the resident area of Victoria (the capital city) at dusk yesterday (Thursday) evening and did some damage to property. After dark they increased the severity of their bombardment on the eastern sector of the north shore of the island, and some enemy troops succeeded in landing in the neighborhood of the north point of Taikoo during the night.

"The enemy is now being engaged by our forces."

Counter-Attacks Launched

"2.30 P. M., Local Time—Counter measures against the Japanese landing parties continue. The Governor has sent the following message to all his Majesty's forces in Hongkong:

"The eyes of the empire are upon you! Be strong! Be resolute and do your duty!'

"5.30 P. M., Local Time—Operations against the enemy landing party on the island are proceeding."

Fierce Action Reported On Border Of Hongkong

Chungking, China, Dec. 21 (AP)—Fierce fighting was in progress today around Shumchun, on the outer mainland border of Hongkong colony, as Japanese forces counter-attacked the Chinese armies which have been trying to relieve enemy pressure on Hongkong.

During the morning the British Embassy received a message from the Hongkong garrison which said the defenders of the island still were holding out.

The Japanese mustered a considerable force from Canton to attempt to dislodge the Chinese from strategic points which they have recaptured along the Kowloon-Canton railway.

A midday message from Hongkong said the fighting on the island still was heavy and that the situation was serious, the British Embassy announced later.

It was believed here that the Japanese had yet been unable to batter down organized resistance.

Hong Kong Gets Malta Greetings

VALLETTA, Malta, Dec. 21.—(AP)—Malta, mid-Mediterranean island which over the week-end had its ten hundred and sixtieth air raid, today sent "warmest greetings and sympathy" to the defenders of Hong Kong.

Five Japanese Airmen, Trapped, Kill Selves

Cornered By Chinese After Escape And Flight In Boat, All Found Shot

Chungking, Dec. 21 (AP)—Cornered after escaping from their Chinese captors, five Japanese aviators were reported by the Central Chinese News Agency today to have committed suicide.

The news agency said the five, who were among ten escaped Japanese airmen, were caught aboard a small sailboat on the Min River in Szechwan province.

Shots rang out when the Chinese ordered the boat to heave to and when the pursuers boarded the craft they were said to have found the five uniformed bodies of the Japanese.

Chungking, Dec. 21 (AP)—Sixteen American missionaries, headed by Dr. Ralph A. Ward, of Lorain, Ohio, who has been serving as Methodist Bishop of West Virginia, have arrived safely in the interior from Shanghai and Wuhu, friends were informed in telegrams today.

The party which headed for the interior when the Pacific war started was believed making its way to Chungking.

Japan Reports Thailand In Pact to Assist War

Announces Ten-Year Accord for Full Military Aid

LONDON, Dec. 21 (AP).—Japan announced officially today that Thailand had signed a pact agreeing to assist Japan with all military, political and economic means, Reuters, a British news agency, reported this morning.

The announcement said the ten-year treaty, signed at Bangkok, provides for the following:

An alliance based on mutual respect for the independence and sovereignty of the two countries; mutual aid with all political, economic and military means in the event either party is engaged in armed conflict with one or more third powers; execution of this aid to be determined by a common accord between competent Japanese and Thai authorities; neither country to conclude an armistice or peace without consent of the other.

The pact became effective immediately.

Foreign Minister Shigenori Togo sent a message to the Thai Premier and Foreign Minister, Luang Bipul Songgram, saying the new pact "will pave the way for full co-operation in bringing the war in east Asia to a glorious and successful conclusion," Reuters said.

New Guinea Reported Invaded by Japs

LONDON, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—The Rome radio was heard here tonight declaring that "it is confirmed from many sources that Japanese troops have carried out a landing in New Guinea, which is of great strategic importance."

New Guinea, half Dutch and half under Australian mandate, is directly north Australia.

DUTCH SINK 3 MORE TOKIO TROOPSHIPS

NEW YORK, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—A British broadcast quoted Batavia reports today that Netherlands forces had sunk three more Japanese troopships off Borneo.

The broadcast, heard here by C. B. S., said two were sunk by naval forces and a third by a Dutch torpedo bomber.

FROM KOREA

The transports were said to have been en route to Borneo from Korea, on the mainland of Asia facing Japan, indicating that Japanese invasion forces in the South China Sea islands may have been drawn from Manchukuo.

Dutch and United States forces in the Far East thus have announced the sinking altogether of 13 Japanese transports.

DEC 22 1941

Tells Of Submarines Seen Off Island In Answer To Portuguese Premier

Contends Delay In Action Would Have Made Defense Too Late

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 21—The British Government declared in an eight-point statement tonight that Australian and Dutch troops occupied Portuguese Timor only after Japanese submarines had been sighted in the immediate vicinity and Japanese attack appeared imminent.

In answer to Premier Antonio de Oliveira Salazar's statement to the Portuguese Parliament, the statement said "nothing has emerged more clearly from the present war than that if defensive action is delayed until an attack has actually developed it is likely to be too late."

[In his speech Friday before the National Assembly, Salazar said that the Portuguese territory in the Far East had been occupied before any threat of attack appeared and while Portugal was discussing a common defense.]

Pledge Withdrawal When S

The British Government had been in consultation with the Portuguese over giving "immediate assistance in the event of a Japanese attack on Portuguese Timor" before the occupation was decided upon, the statement continued, and "an undertaking already has been given that the troops which entered Portuguese Timor will be withdrawn as soon as the emergency with which they came to deal is passed."

Regret was expressed that it had been necessary to carry out the occupation but it was declared necessary to defense of the vital interests of the allied nations at war with Japan.

While discussions were going on with Portugal, the statement continued, "a fundamental change in the situation was brought about by Japan's sudden act of treachery on December 7."

DEC 22 1941

Say Offer Was Accepted

"On December 11 an offer was made to the Portuguese Ambassador in London of immediate assistance in the event of a Japanese attack on Timor, and it was proposed that this assistance be furnished by Australian and Netherlands troops," the statement said.

"The Portuguese Government accepted these proposals and in response to a request of the Portuguese Ambassador they were confirmed in writing on December 15."

The statement said Portugal's communication stated "that the threat to Timor must be regarded as so imminent as to make immediate precautionary measures necessary to protect Timor and stressed the importance of local authorities there being given wide latitude so as to ensure that the assistance contemplated would be forthcoming in good time."

Submarines Identified

The statement then declared that Japanese submarines were identified near Timor on December 15 and the "danger thus was immediate, and it was in these circumstances that allied military commanders on the spot, in the exercise of the responsibility which devolves upon commanders in the field, judged it essential to take action to which the Portuguese Government have felt bound to take strong exceptions."

The British Government expressed fear that the Portuguese forces could scarcely have prolonged resistance without help, and concluded with: "His Majesty's government gladly note Dr. Salazar's statement that Portuguese reinforcements to strengthen the Timor garrison are being prepared."

Portuguese Take Action In Cape Verde Islands

Lisbon, Dec. 21 (AP)—It was announced today without elaboration that the Portugese colonial minister had arrived at the Cape Verde Islands to put into effect plans for "cooperation" between Portugese Guinea, on the west coast of Africa, and Portugal's Cape Verde Islands, lying off that coast.

The Portuguese have been consistently reinforcing their garrisons in these strategically placed colonial possessions.

Diario de Noticias followed up Premier Antonio de Oliveira Salazar's Friday address on the Dutch-Australian occupation of Portugese Timor in the Far East by emphasizing his statement that "the question is not finished and must be."

The newspaper said that "the universal conscience" would protest against the atcion taken against "neutral, unarmed territory."

Vichy Assigns Decoux To Far East Protection

Vichy, Dec. 21 (AP)—The Vichy Government today named Admiral Jean Decoux as high commissioner for the Pacific as well as Governor General of Indo-China, his present post. He is supposed to coordinate French interests in Indo-China, New Caledonia, Oceania, India and the New Hebrides, so they will be safe against "any surprise."

Authorized sources linked the move with the recent Allied occupation of Portuguese Timor, which they professed to believe "underlines the fact that the menace which weighs on the possessions of nations which many times have affirmed their neutrality is growing nearer and nearer."

9 of Allies' Subs Sunk In 2 Weeks, Japs Say; Hong Kong Is Bombed

DEC 22 1941

TOKIO, Dec. 21 (Official broadcast recorded by A. P.).—Nine submarines of unstated nationality have been sunk by the Japanese Navy since the start of the two-week-old war of the Pacific, said an announcement today from the Imperial Navy which thus sought to assure the people that defense against undersea raiders had been strengthened.

Five officers and 32 men were captured from one of the British, American or Dutch submarines by a Japanese destroyer, said the Navy communique.

HONG KONG STILL HOLDS

Meanwhile, fighting raged across Happy Valley Race Course east of Victoria in beleaguered Hong Kong Island where a British Empire garrison still held on, Japanese dispatches said.

Japanese planes bombed Mount Davis, a stronghold at the western end of the island; Mount Cameron, which flanks Victoria Peak on the other side to the east, and the settlement of Aberdeen on the south side.

Artillery, aided by naval guns, shelled British shore batteries and fortifications.

'MATTER OF TIME'

Japanese accounts said one after another British strong point was being reduced on the rock-bound island and that complete fall was only a matter of time.

The cabinet information board issued a special notice to the people to refrain from excessive jubilation when the fall of Hong Kong is announced, and banned lantern and flag parades.

(Transocean, a German news agency, said the Tokio population celebrated on Saturday night the occupation of Hong Kong "with colors flying, illuminations, torchlight and lantern parades and enthusiastic crowds singing patriotic songs and cheering Tenno (Emperor Hirohito)." There was no indication whether this was an inaccurate report, or whether a premature celebration actually had occurred.)

CAUSE HAVOC IN FLEET

Japanese army planes from a mainland base swarmed down upon a concentration of British gunboats and ships in Deepwater Bay off the mainland part of the colony this morning and caused great havoc with their rain of bombs, a Domei news agency dispatch said.

Asahi's correspondent said more than 100 ships were trapped in Hong Kong and that approximately half of them had been sunk in the last few days since the Japanese occupied the mainland.

He said the vessels included three destroyers, four gunboats, four minelayers, eight patrol boats, two tankers and two transports.

900-MILE BLOCKADE

Nichi Nichi's reporter said one British gunboat was destroyed by planes on Saturday, and that two were scuttled by their crews while trying to escape.

Asahi said the Japanese naval blockade extending along a line of more than 900 miles about Hong Kong made escape of the ships impossible. The navy was said to be co-operating closely with the land attack on the island.

CUT COMMUNICATIONS

In Malaya, Japanese forces were reported pressing southward through jungle country toward Singapore.

In the Philippines, a Domei report declared the Japanese had slashed communications between the United States force defending Davao in Mindanao and its headquarters in Manila.

A Domei dispatch from Saigon, Indo-China, said Japanese planes caused great damage to military installations in raids Sunday on Cavite naval base, Nichols Field and the town of Tarlac.

Conclusion of an offensive and defense alliance between Thailand and Japan was announced. Domei said it was the first step in a series of such treaties designed to weaken the A.B.C.D. alignment.

DOESN'T JOIN AXIS

Tomokazu Hori, a deputy spokesman, told a foreign press conference, however, that the pact did not make Thailand a member of the Three-Power Pact, and that it applied for the present only to the war between Japan and Britain and the United States.

The means by which Thailand will carry out her agreement of mutual aid will be "decided by mutual consent," Hori said.

(Reuters, British news agency, said the 10-year pact bound Thailand and Japan to assist one another with all military, political and economic means and not to conclude a separate armistice without the other's consent.)

DEC 22 1941

DENY RED SHIP SUNK

Both naval and army authorities denied vehemently that there was any foundation to reports from The Netherlands East Indies yesterday that a squadron of 17 Japanese planes had attacked and sunk the Soviet steamer Perekop, plying between Vladivostok in Siberia and Surabaya in the Indies.

Authorities said the report was coined to estrange Japan and Russia.

NAVY BAGS 14 U-BOATS AND DEALS WITH TOKYO SUBMARINES, KNOX SAYS

Secretary's Assurance Follows Torpedoing Of Tanker In Which Washington Reports Lifeboats Shelled And 22 Of Crew Missing

DEC 22 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 21—A report on the success of the United States Navy in bagging Axis submarines—at least fourteen "probably sunk or damaged" in the Atlantic and several "effectively dealt with" in the Pacific—was given to the nation tonight by Frank Knox, Secretary of the Navy.

Amid reports by the navy that hostile submarines were active off both the East and West coasts of the country, Knox issued a statement admonishing the public that news of attacks on American shipping, unaccompanied by immediate word of counter-measures, should not be construed to mean that the navy was doing nothing.

Had Taken Counter-Measures

The text of Knox's announcement, issued by the Navy Department, follows:

"The navy has been aware for sometime that enemy submarine activity in and near American waters was impending and naturally has already taken appropriate counter-measures.

"The release of information of the attacks on our shipping, unaccompanied by information as to what we are doing to protect it, must not be construed by the public as an indication that the navy has done nothing about it.

Keeps Methods Hidden From Foe

"I can assure the public that the navy has already adequately dealt with more than one submarine which has sought to make attacks on our naval and merchant vessels.

"Immediate announcement of the strength and disposition of the United States naval forces which are combating enemy submarines, the methods that we have used, and the place and time of our attacks upon them would provide the enemy with military information which he would dearly love to obtain.

"Therefore, I do not propose now, nor in the future, to make immediate announcement of the destruction of enemy forces unless I am satisfied that the enemy himself is fully informed on this subject. From time to time I shall give a summary of the losses we have inflicted on the enemy, and shall indicate the general locality of these actions.

Evidence Carefully Weighed

"For example, after careful weighing of the evidence I can now state that in the Atlantic Ocean, United States naval forces have up to the present time probably sunk or damaged at least fourteen enemy submarines.

DEC 22 1941

"This probability, as well as the prevalence of the bitter North Atlantic winter weather which the Germans do not seem to like, may account for the recent comparative security of the North Atlantic routes.

"In the Pacific our naval forces have already effectively dealt with several Japanese submarines."

Reports Boats Shelled

This word followed a report by the navy that three lifeboats of the S. S. Emidio were shelled by the submarine which torpedoed the tanker off California.

The navy listed only thirty-two rescued of the Emidio's crew, which it numbered at fifty-four, but the steamship line said that no more than thirty-seven were aboard and that it knew of only five men missing.

The navy's communique said that "three lifeboats were destroyed by submarine gunfire." Officials did not clarify whether the boats were shattered while still in their davits when the tanker was attacked or whether the submarine, presumably Japanese, had fired upon helpless seamen seeking safety in the boats after abandoning their ship.

Smoke At Sea Reported

San Diego, Cal., Dec. 21 (AP)—The navy tonight investigated reports of a burning ship at sea off San Diego, and reported "all clear."

Naval officials would make no other comment.

A towering column of smoke was visible about twelve miles offshore during the day, leading observers to believe a ship was afire.

30.24 — 13683

Army observers at Camp Callan, however, said they believed the ship was not burning, but probably was an American tanker under forced draft. Army officers added the vessel probably made port shortly after dark.

Japan Thought To Have 40 Long-Range Submarines

DEC 22 1941

Washington, Dec. 21 (AP)—Japan is believed to have about forty submarines with a range permitting operations off the United States west coast, where attacks have been made on American vessels.

Reports by the navy to Congress and information in naval publications indicate that the total known Japanese submarine fleet is in excess of seventy, with more than half that number capable of traveling from 14,000 to 16,000 miles without refueling.

With Seattle only 4,257 miles from Yokohama, this range would make it possible for the submarines to put out from bases in the Far East, reach the American West Coast, remain there for some time to operate against shipping and return to their ports.

Might Use Island Bases

Use of existing Japanese bases in the Caroline or Marshall islands or refueling from mother ships at sea would shorten the voyage and make possible a longer stay in American coastal waters.

Records indicate that the Japanese have some submarines as large as 2,700 tons, this group containing big minelayers able to carry and sow in shipping lanes as many as sixty mines.

Generally, the Japanese undersea vessels are copies of the German U-boats. The crews of the biggest type submarines are composed of about ninety men and officers.

OCEAN WAR HITS JAPAN HARD BLOW

DEC 22 1941

Supply of Fish Cut Down by Allied Fleets

DEC 22 1941

PALO ALTO, Calif., Dec. 21 (AP)—Allied war fleets prowling the Pacific have struck Japan in a vital economic spot by curtailing her second most important food supply—fish—says Dr. Albert W. C. T. Herre, Stanford University authority on fishes.

THIRD FROM SEA

Year by year Japan has been depending more and more on the sea for material necessities. Some American authorities estimate that up until the war began she was getting one-third of all her natural resources from the Pacific Ocean.

Gradually her fishermen fanned out from Nippon's islands until they were operating from the Bering Sea to the Antarctic Ocean. A few years ago they even were operating out of Japan to the American side of the Pacific, taking salmon from ocean areas fed by United States rivers.

Sailed Far Off

These fishermen also spread through the waters of the Philippines, Malay, the East Indies and finally to the shores of Burma and India.

They sailed thousands of miles from home, Dr. Herre said, to get certain kinds of fish highly prized in Japan. Other fish, caught incidentally on these expeditions, they sold in the ports of Calcutta, Rangoon, and in Malay and Philippine settlements whose native fishermen were less efficient.

Now on the seas where the Japanese used to hunt in comparative peace, they themselves are being hunted.

In most rice-eating countries, particularly Japan, fish is the number two food. In the Oriental diet, these two things go together as do ham and eggs on the American table.

Face Peril Now

Besides the danger of hostile warships, a motor fuel shortage has contributed to the plight of the Japanese fishermen. It takes petroleum to make trips several hundred miles seaward with heavy fishing trawlers, and Japan has been short on oil fuel since the United States began cutting down on exports to Nippon several months ago. This was reflected by a shortage of fish in Japan's great sea food markets long before actual warfare began, Dr. Herre said.

Now most of Japan's scanty oil supply must be conserved for her fighting planes, tanks and warships. Even if there are fishermen able to venture seaward without motorships they must operate at the risk of capture or death.

U. S. TANKER OUTMANEUVERS SUB IN PACIFIC

Tanker Captain Tells How Agwiworld Tried To Ram Enemy Craft

Attacker Fired Without Warning Twenty Miles West Of Santa Cruz

[By the Associated Press]

San Francisco, Dec. 21—The American tanker Agwiworld outmaneuvered an attacking enemy submarine after attempting to ram it, Capt. F. B. Goncalves reported when he brought his ship into port today.

Captain Goncalves said his ship was twenty miles due west of Santa Cruz, Cal., when the submarine fired without warning or even hailing the ship.

Santa Cruz is north of Cypress Point, previously mentioned locale of the encounter.

500 Yards Due West

"The first thing I knew there was the explosion of a shell over our stern," he said. "I was in my room. I ran to the bridge.

"The submarine was lying about 500 yards due west of us in the path of the sun. I put the helm hard to port and headed straight for the sub.

"When the second shot came, I put the helm hard over to starboard and then presented the stern to the sub. There was a heavy ground swell which kept the sub's gun deck awash.

Next Six Shots Miss

"The next six shots missed us, but some of them came awful close.

"If we had only had a gun, that sub would never shoot at another ship. It was a beautiful target for us."

First Mate Edward Crabtree said the encounter lasted about half an hour.

"At the first shot we radioed a warning to the navy and all other ships," he said. "All hands rushed to their boat station. I was in my room when the first shot came, and I ran to the deck.

"There was a heavy northwest ground swell. The submarine was faster than we are, but she couldn't use her speed.

Gun Deck At Surface

"Her gun deck was about surface level. If she had tried to make any speed in that swell her gun crew would have been washed overboard.

"She kept running with us about 500 yards off. Her aim was bad because of the swell rocking her.

"I think she didn't try to close with us for two reasons: She was afraid of being rammed and she had heard our warning to the navy and she had to be ready to get out of the vicinity fast."

Six Years In Navy

Another tanker crew member, Third Mate D. F. Gosney, had served six years with the United States Navy submarine branch.

"I was on the poop deck when sub began to shoot," he said. "I down on my face and stayed there until we had swung and were heading directly at the sub. Then I got up and manned my station.

"There was no panic aboard. The sub kept in the sun. We headed north. I believe the sub used a five-inch on us. It's too bad we didn't have a gun."

The Agwiworld raced toward the shore and its crew could not tell exactly when the submarine submerged. The tanker hovered close to shore for several hours and then headed to safety.

5 Or 6 On Sub Platform

During the attack on the Agwiworld, five or six men were visible on the submarine's gun platform, manipulating the weapon, Gosney said.

Captain Goncalves is no stranger to sea warfare or submarines.

A graduate of the Brazilian Naval Academy, he served in the last war as second officer on a Norwegian freighter, and was torpedoed in the North Sea.

"We were given a warning that time, however," he said.

Home Is In Texas

Captain Goncalves' home is at Port Arthur, Texas. He is an American citizen and has lived in the United States twenty-five years.

Most of the crew were sleeping in their bunks below when the tanker reached harbor today.

"They've had a long watch," said the first mate.

Crabtree explained that crewmen had remained up through the night, maintaining a vigil against a second attack.

"Funny thing," he remarked. "I transferred to this run eight months ago from a New York-Dutch West Indies run to get away from the trouble zone.

Says "This Is Our Scrap"

"Now I'm all around it. But it's all right this time. This is our scrap. Eight months ago it was a foreign affair."

DEC 22 1941

"No, there was no panic. Every man went to his boat station and the 'old man' knew what he was doing all the time. That helped a lot."

Pointing to a spot on the poop deck where he was standing when the first shell from the submarine whistled just above the ship's rigging, Gosney smiled.

"Boy, I hit the deck," he said.

Tanker Torpedoed Off West Coast; Another Escapes

[By the Associated Press]

Seattle, Dec. 21—Enemy submarines, edging close to California shores, shelled and torpedoed the big American tanker Emidio and fired deck guns at the tanker Agwiworld, the navy disclosed today.

Possibly five of the Emidio's crew were lost. Five were injured and thirty were rescued. When last seen the vessel was still afloat but wallowing and riding low. She had been hit in the stern by the torpedo.

Escaped By Shifting Course

The Agwiworld escaped by turning from her course and racing shoreward. It was said her only damage was a severed hawser line, which was cut by a shell whizzing close by.

The Emidio was attacked, Thirteenth Naval District headquarters said, twenty miles off the coast, about 200 miles north of San Francisco. The submarine fired several shots and the Emidio sought to flee, then a torpedo crashed into her stern.

Two Attacks In Five Hours

The Agwiworld also was about twenty miles offshore, near Cypress Point, one hundred miles south of San Francisco, when a submarine broke the surface and started firing her deck gun.

These attacks took place within a space of five hours yesterday. The scenes of action are about 300 miles apart, indicating that at least two enemy U-boats were operating off the coast.

The 6,912-ton Emidio, owned by Socony Vacuum Oil Company and normally carrying a crew of thirty-eight, was reported to have been going southward without cargo. Details were not available as to the Agwiworld, which is operated by the Richfield Oil Company.

Made Way To San Francisco

The Agwiworld, 6,771 tons, which was attacked yesterday morning, kept close to shore and made her way to San Francisco. Eight or nine shots were reported to have been fired at her.

German armies in Russia, Adolf Hitler announced tonight he was taking over personal direction of the Nazi land forces, and he immediately appealed to his soldiers—"fanatically," as he put it—to wait out the winter for new arms and troops.

Hitler first announced in a surprise move that he had replaced General Field Marshal Walther von Brauchitsch as commander of the armies.

Then he addressed his soldiers, speaking to them as a bitterly experienced, wounded, almost blinded, old soldier; as one who knows the horrors of war.

Admits Damage of Red Armies

Hitler said intuition led him to his fateful decision.

The dramatic announcements, including the hold-fast exhortation to his troops, contained the harsh admission that the great Red Army offensive of recent weeks was hurting Germany to the core—and on the home front specifically.

Hitler either is desperate or is feinting, in the opinion of observers here. It seemed he either feared trouble on the home front or was planning some big new move against his enemies, the democracies—perhaps both.

On the face of his pronouncements, Germany will be on the defensive—both east and west—until spring.

London Acclaims Split in Nazi High Command as Sign of Major Weakness

BERLIN, Dec. 21 (Official broadcast recorded by Associated Press).—Fuehrer Adolf Hitler announced tonight that, because the course of the war against Russia—now six months in progress—has "exceeded all past notions," he has been induced to "follow his intuitions" and take over the post of commander in chief of the army in place of Field Marshal General Walther von Brauchitsch.

Then, in a message to the German Army, Hitler mentioned Japan and the world-wide war and said that Germany's battle "is now approaching its culminating and turning point."

"The present war," he said, "is now entering upon a new and favorable stage for us. We are now facing a decision of world-wide importance."

The German Army's task now in Russia, Hitler said, is, "up to the coming of spring, to hold and defend with . . . fanaticism what they have hitherto conquered with immeasurable heroism and heavy sacrifices."

Answered "Inward Call"

In announcing that he had replaced Brauchitsch, Hitler said that, because of "the vastness of the theater of war" and the close link between land operations and political and economic war aims, he has decided "to reserve to himself personally all essential decisions in this sphere."

Recalling that he already had answered "an inward call" and become his "own generalissimo" when he took charge of all the German armed forces early in 1938, Hitler said that now he must take personal direction of the army, combining "in his own hands the leadership of the whole armed forces with the supreme command of the army."

In his statement, in which he spoke of himself in the third person throughout, Hitler said he was replacing Brauchitsch "while fully recognizing his merits."

The actual replacement took place on Dec. 19, it was said.

Text of Hitler's Message

The text of Hitler's message to the German Army follows:

"Soldiers of the army and S.S. (Schutz Staffel, or Elite Guard) formations:

"The battle of liberty of our people for the security of its future existence—a battle which is to make it impossible for us to be threatened every twenty or twenty-five years with war under a fresh pretext, but in reality for the same Jewish capitalist interests—is now approaching its culminating and turning point.

"The German Reich, Italy and nations allied to us have had the fortune to find in Japan, who is a world power, a new friend and comrade in arms.

"Japan has been strangled with the same forms and pretexts as we ourselves.

"With lightning destruction of the American Pacific Fleet and British forces at Singapore, with occupation of numerous British and American bases in western Asia by Japanese forces, the present war now is entering upon a new and favorable stage for us.

"We are now facing a decision of world-wide importance.

"Our armies in the east, after their immortal victories without parallel in world history against the most dangerous enemy of all time must now, owing to the onset of winter, be brought from mobile progress into a stationary front.

New Weapons Promised

"It is their task, up to the coming of spring, to hold and defend with like fanaticism what they hitherto have conquered with immeasurable heroism and heavy sacrifices.

"From the new eastern front nothing else is today expected than what German soldiers achieved in four Russian winter campaigns twenty-five years ago.

"Every German soldier must set an example to our loyal allies.

"Apart from this, however, fresh units will be formed and above all new and better weapons will be issued as they were last winter.

"Defense of the front in the west will be strengthened from Kirkenes (Norway) to the Spanish frontier.

"Difficulties of organizing communications on this front, today extending over the whole continent and stretching as far as North Africa, must be overcome. But this will be successfully accomplished.

"Preparations for immediate resumption of offensive operations in the spring until the enemy in the east is finally destroyed must be taken at once. Other defensive war measures are about to be taken.

"These tasks demand that the armed forces and the home front should brace themselves for the greatest common effort.

"It is the army which bears the weight of the struggle. In these circumstances I have therefore decided, in my capacity as supreme commander of German armed forces, to assume personally leadership of the army.

"I know war from four years of mighty conflict in the west from 1914 to 1918.

"I experienced personally the horrors of almost all battles as an ordinary soldier.

"I was wounded twice and even threatened with blindness.

"Thus nothing that torments you, weighs upon you and oppresses you is unknown to me.

DEC 22 1941

Sees Doubled 'In Destiny

"I alone, after four years of war, never for a second doubted the resurrection of my people. With my fanatical will, I, a simple soldier, succeeded after more than fifteen years work in uniting once more the whole German nation and in freeing it from the death sentence of Versailles.

"My soldiers, you will therefore understand my heart solely belongs to you, that my will and my work serve unflinchingly the greatness of my people, that my mind and my resolution are directed only towards destruction of the enemy—that is towards victorious conclusion of this war.

"What I can do for you, my soldiers of the army and S. S. formations, by way of care and leadership, will be done.

"What you can do for me and what you will do, I know you will do with loyalty and obedience until the Reich and our German people are finally saved.

"God Almighty will not withhold victory from his brave soldiers.

"Der Fuehrer's headquarters, Dec. 19, 1941 (signed), Adolf Hitler."

Explains Army Change

Hitler's statement announcing he was taking the place of Brauchitsch said:

"When Der Fuehrer, on Feb. 4, 1938, assumed commanding power of the whole armed forces, this was done out of concern for the then threatening military struggle for the freedom of the German people.

"The raison d'etre (the reason for being) imperatively demanded that all powers should be concentrated in one hand.

"Only thus could preparations for resistance succeed, a resistance which it was known would lead to a 'total war' even more than did the World War of 1914-'18, forced upon the German people by the same enemy.

"In addition, the realization of an inward call and his own will to take upon himself the responsibility weighed with the statesman Adolf Hitler when he resolved to be his own generalissimo.

"The course of this war has more and more confirmed recognition of this fact, but it was fully shown only when the campaign in the east assumed proportions which exceeded all past notions.

"The vastness of the theater of war, the close connection of the conduct of land operations with the political and economic war aims, and also the numerical size of the army compared with other parts of the armed forces have induced Der Fuehrer to follow his intuitions and to influence in the strongest possible manner the operation and equipment of the army and to reserve to himself personally all essential decisions in this sphere.

"Following up his decision of Feb. 4, 1938, Der Fuehrer therefore resolved on Dec. 19, 1941, while fully recognizing the merits of the present supreme commander of the army, Field Marshal General von Brauchitsch, to combine in his own hands the leadership of the whole armed forces with the supreme command of the army."

Brauchitsch after the German reverses in Russia came as the most sensational step since the reorganization of the Germany army in 1938.

DEC 22 1941

Plans Defensive Strategy

Mentioning that Japan is newly a "comrade-in-arms" and that the war is being fought against the United States, Hitler said that Germany's battle "is now approaching its culminating and turning point."

"The present war is now entering upon a new and favorable stage for us," he said. "We are now facing a decision of world-wide importance."

Germany from now to spring will fight a "deefnsive" war, he said, not only against Russia, but also on the western front, which "will be strengthened from Kirkenes (Norway) to the Spanish frontier."

Speaking to his army with a note almost pleading in tone, Hitler promised his men better conditions, better equipment and "fresh units" to be formed.

Referring to the Russians as "the most dangerous enemy of all time" and acknowledging that the campaign in the east had "exceeded all past notions," Hitler told his soldiers that he himself knows just how it feels when the army "bears the might of the struggle."

Points to War Record

"I know war," he said, from four years of mighty conflict in the west from 1914 to 1918. I experienced personally the horrors of almost all battles as an ordinary soldier. I was wounded twice and even threatened with blindness.

"Thus nothing that torments you weigh upon you and oppresses you is unknown to me."

"I alone, after four years of war," he continued, "never for a second doubted the resurrection of my people.

"With my fanatical will, I, a simple German soldier, succeeded after more than 15 years in uniting once more the whole German nation and in freeing it from the death sentence of Versailles.

"My soldiers, you will therefore understand my heart solely belongs to you, that my will and my work serve unflinchingly the greatness of my people, that my mind and my resolution are directed only towards the restruction of the enemy—that is, towards a victorious conclusion of this war.

"What I can do for you, my soldiers of the army and SS (Elite Guard) formations, by way of care and leadership, will be done.

"What you can do for me and what you will do, I know you will do with loyalty and obedience until the Reich and our German people are finally saved."

Points to Vast Program

In his announcement that he was replacing Von Brauchitsch, Hitler said:

"The vastness of the theater of war, the close connection of the conduct of land operations with the political and economic war aims, and also the numerical size of the army compared with other parts of the armed forces have induced the Fuehrer to follow his intuitions and to influence in the strongest possible manner the operation and equipment of the army and to reserve to himself personally all essential decisions in this sphere."

It was thought here that the reference to political and economic war aims might have great significance. Although emphasizing that any theorizing was "purely guesswork" at this stage, one observer said that the twin German setbacks on the Russian and Libyan fronts might have led Hitler to strengthen as far as possible his personal hold on the civil population through the sufferings of winter.

Hitler said the task of the German army in Russia from now "up to the coming of spring" is "to hold and defend with like fanaticism what they have hitherto conquered with immeasurable heroism and heavy sacrifices."

Asks Troops Give More

"From the new eastern front nothing else is expected than what German soldiers achieved in four Russian winter campaigns 25 years ago," he said. "Every German soldier must set an example to our loyal allies.

"Apart from this, however, fresh units will be formed and above all new and better weapons will be issued as they were last winter.

"The defense of the front in the west will be strengthened from Kirkenes (Norway) to the Spanish frontier.

"The difficulties of organizing communications on this front, today extending over the whole continent and stretching as far as North Africa, must be overcome. But this too will be successfully accomplished.

"Preparations for immediate resumption of offensive operations in the spring until the enemy in the east is finally destroyed must be taken at once. Other defensive measures are about to be taken.

"These tasks demand that the armed forces and the home front should brace themselves for the greatest common effort."

Hails Japs as Comrades

In mentioning Japan as an ally Hitler said:

"With lightning destruction of the American Pacific fleet and British forces at Singapore, with the occupation of numerous British and American bases in Western Asia by Japanese forces, the present war now is entering upon a new and favorable stage for us."

Hitler only a few weeks ago had spoken of the beginning of the decisive phase of the battles for Moscow and Leningrad—battles which the winter and the Russian offensive turned into an officially announced withdrawal to winter lines.

The Russian offensive was keeping up its terrific pace still today, however. The Russians were said by an authoritative military commentator to have driven wedges into German positions, making it impossible for the Nazis to halt their retreat and dig in. The Russian communique announced the capture of new towns today.

The Germans have made no secret of their preparations for a spring offensive, as mentioned by Hitler today, but it was not immediately clear whether the new change in command of the German Army means that an effort would be made to hasten that offensive. Some thought it probable.

Look to Spanish Border

Although new offensive action against Rusisa must wait until spring, Hitler was regarded as having hinted at a new preparation toward the Spanish border to link supply lines with North Africa, where both Germans and Italians are retreating in haste—in disorder, today's Cairo dispatches said—before the swift British offensive.

Ankara dispatches in recent weeks have reported German military action in Bulgaria, while Berlin and Rome dispatches have spoken of the expectation that Spain and Portugal might soon clarify their position in the new order.

These dispatches have said also that discussions toward a French-Axis understanding on Africa are at least in a preliminary stage.

The German news agency DNB carried announcements of Hitler's two communiques and they were broadcast over the Berlin radio and picked up here.

NAZI DEBACLE IS HINTED IN ARMY SHAKEUP

DEC 22 1941

Von Brauchitsch's Removal Not Likely To Win German Favor

Embassy Blurb Of Last August On Field Marshal Is Recalled

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 21—The German nation heard its most grevious news since Adolf Hitler put on his field gray uniform September 1, 1939, when it was told tonight that it's Führer had cast aside the man to whom he had given command of his armies.

Field Marshal General Walther von Brauchitsch, commander in chief of the German army, has been fired while the gray legions are on the run for the first time in more than two years of war—both in Russia and Libya.

The implications of his displacement—by Hitler himself—are inescapable.

May Outrank Hess Flight

In German minds, this sudden shift of topmost command at such a moment may rank even with the mysterious flight of Rudolf Hess, Hitler's Deputy Führer, as a sign of trouble in the nation's leadership.

Only last August, the German Embassy in Washington wrote this blurb about the 60-year-old commander in chief of Hitler's armies:

"Accomplishment and character alone determine the worthiness of an officer to himself and the world, and both of these factors mark to a particularly high degree the career of the commander in chief of the army. Field Marshal General Walther von Brauchitsch.

"The glorious achievements of the German armies during the renaissance of the German nation are particularly connected with his name.

Full Credit Given

"In all military events which have led to the foundation of the Greater Germany, the army and its commander in chief had a decisive share.

"Under his command German troops went on to win back German territories in Austria, in the Sudeten, in Bohemia and in Memel.

"Under his leadership, the German army destroyed the Polish armies in hard, fast battles. The campaign in the west in 1940 proved again his extraordinary capability which can master even the most difficult task of our days."

Now his name is particularly connected with those armies' first debacle.

Brauchitsch, born in Berlin in 1881, is the son of a German cavalry general, Bernhard von Brauchitsch, who was once director of the Academy of War.

The younger von Brauchitsch rose as an artillery officer. Trained in his own home and in the cadet corps, he was made a lieutenant and entered the first World War as a captain.

He held staff positions on the Western Front and distinguished himself by personal participation in front-line actions.

After the war he served with various regiments and as chief of staff of the Sixth Division.

Colonel In 1928

He became a colonel in 1928 and two years later was appointed chief of the department in the Ministry of War.

In 1931, then raised to the rank of major-general, he was inspector of artillery and later became commander of the first division.

When the German army was reorganized in 1935, von Brauchitsch, by now a lieutenant-general, became successively commander of the first army corps, commander of the first military district and, in 1936, general of artillery.

Hitler united the highest command of Germany's armed forces in then Colonel-General von Brauchitsch on February 4, 1938, and entrusted to him leadership of the army.

Reaction To Hitler's New Move

DEC 22 1941

London

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 21—Some quarters here suggested today that Hitler's move in displacing Field Marshal von Brauchitsch might indicate the first tangible sign of a split between the Nazi party and the German army leaders.

They noted that such a split might also have been considered evident from the fact that the army in Russia has been commanded from two headquarters—the general staff headquarters and the Führer's own headquarters.

The military correspondent of the British Press Association wrote:

"Hitler's generals probably forced him to assume all responsibility, for none knew better than they what risks were involved in attacking Russia so late in the year.

Purge Held Possible

"Hitler has ordered a retreat. It may be the generals who impressed upon him the necessity of saving the army from complete annihilation. Whether he has cut adrift from the generals and whether assumption of supreme command means he will proceed with his own ideas of strategy remains to be seen. . . . A wholesale purge might follow the dismissal of von Brauchitsch."

Another British observer noted that von Brauchitsch, a soldier of the old school, reputedly was not an ardent Nazi and twice had disagreed with Hitler on the dissemination of political doctrines within the army.

It was not immediately clear whether the new change in command of the German army means that an effort would be made to hasten a spring offensive. Some thought it probable.

Spain May Be Next

Although new offensive action against Russia must wait until spring, Hitler was regarded as having hinted at a new preparation toward the Spanish border to link supply lines with North Africa, where both Germans and Italians are retreating in haste—in disorder, today's Cairo dispatches said—before the swift British offensive.

Ankara dispatches in recent weeks have reported German military action in Bulgaria, while Berlin and Rome dispatches have spoken of the expectation that Spain and Portugal might soon clarify their position in the new order.

These dispatches have said also that discussions toward a French-Axis understanding on Africa are at least in a preliminary stage.

Gloomy Poem

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 21—The German radio is broadcasting winter poems and the theme is gloomy.

Here is one recorded and translated by CBS:

"After a yeer af sweat and toil
"No green blooms on my tree.
"From the sky and from the soil
"Grief has come to me.
"How happy I have been a year ago—
"Dark looks the future—full of woe. . . ."

Unrest Reported

Jerusalem, Dec. 21 (AP)—A mysterious anti-Nazi radio broadcasting tonight from German-occupied central Europe said Hitler's military reverses had created unrest in Germany and that hasty measures were being taken against feared demonstrations.

The announcer reported barricades were being built on many German roads, machine-gun nests installed at important highway junctions and SS black shirt elite guard garrisons heavily reinforced everywhere.

Russians Claim Important Junction Between Tula And Orel

Capture Of Town In Leningrad Sector Also Included In Reports

DEC 22 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Dec. 21—The Soviet Information Bureau said Russian troops occupied a number of important localities in continued advances today in the Leningrad sector and on the fronts west, northwest and southwest of Moscow.

Bodgotsch, southwest of Tikhvin on the Leningrad front; Gruzino, near Chudovo, on the same front, and Krapivno, southwest of Tula, on the southwestern Moscow front, were mentioned as places taken by the striding Russian army.

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 21—The Russians have driven wedges into German positions which have made it impossible for the Germans to halt their retreat and have demolished the Hitler pretense that the Nazis are executing an orderly withdrawal to straighten their line, an authoritative military commentator said today.

This interpretation was placed on a Soviet communique, broadcast on the Moscow radio today, announcing that the Red army had recovered Plavsk, important junction on the highway between Tula and Orel, 100 and 200 miles south of Moscow, respectively.

Other points mentioned in Russian reports indicated that westward bulges were being made in the German front, the commentator said.

Continue Drive Past Ruza

A Moscow broadcast said Red army troops which on Friday captured Ruza, sixty miles due west of Moscow, broke through the German defenses the following day and were continuing a swift advance.

At least 127 villages were captured in the sector on Saturday, said the broadcast, and the Red air force is continuously blasting at the Germans rolled back by the thrust.

The Soviet communique reported the capture of 40 tanks, 135 trucks, 8 guns and other war booty in the same sector.

The communique also told of the occupation of a point in the Leningrad sector identified only as "K," and said much valuable war booty had been captured.

45 Miles Back From Tikhvin

Izvestia's special correspondent from that sector said the Germans had now been driven back forty-five miles from Tikhvin, the point of deepest German penetration southeast of Leningrad, and that more than one hundred villages had been freed from German occupation.

Izvestia said Plavsk was taken after a two-day battle in which the town was burned.

Giving details of the recapture of Volokolamsk, sixty-five miles northwest of Moscow, which was announced Saturday, Izvestia declared four German divisions, the Thirty-fifth, One Hundred and Sixth and Fifth Infantry divisions and the Eleventh Tank division, lost more than three fourths of their men.

Pursuing Remainder

The Russians are pursuing the remaining fourth, which is suffering badly from the cold, to the southwest of Volokolamsk.

Izvestia's correspondent said the first sight encountered by Red troops entering Volokolamsk was the gallows set up by the Germans from which eight persons had been hanged in November. The bodies, with nooses around their necks, still lay in the snow, he declared.

The townspeople reported to him, he said, that they were locked in the church and guarded by machine guns for a full day upon the Germans' arrival while Nazi squads looted the homes of food and clothing.

Russian Attacks Beaten Back, Germans Contend

Berlin, Dec. 21 (Official Broadcast Recorded by AP)—The German high command said today that many strong Russian attacks on the Eastern front were beaten back in fighting which continued with "undiminished vigor."

The Russians made violent attempts to break German lines holding Leningrad encircled, but their tanks and soldiers were repelled with heavy losses, the communique said.

Tanks Offensive Repelled, Berlin Broadcast Reports

DEC 22 1941

BERLIN, Dec. 21 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A. P.)—The German High Command announced today that fighting on the Russian front continued with undiminished violence.

The High Command said Russian attempts to break out on the Leningrad front with the support of tanks were repelled.

TANKS DESTROYED

German air raiders, a communique said, damaged a "large industrial factory" on the English East Coast with direct bomb hits.

The High Command said 20 Soviet tanks were destroyed in a sector held by one Army corps, while 19 Russian tanks were hit in the battling around Leningrad.

The Nazi air force bombed "with strong effect" Russian troop columns, vehicles, tanks, concentrations and earthworks, the communique added.

50 German Officers Lured To Death Blast

Russian Directs Group To "Best House In Town"—Mine Kills Them All

Moscow, Dec. 21 (AP)—A story of how fifty German officers were lured to their death in a mined house at Taganrog was circulated today by Tass, official news agency, and credited to a woman who escaped from the Sea of Azov city.

The woman, Olga Corodova, said a mild-mannered municipal bookkeeper volunteered to show the German commandant and his staff the best house in town where they might make their headquarters. This pleased the Germans.

They moved into the well-furnished house and on their first night there it was blown up. The fifty officers were buried in the wreckage, Tass said.

Red Booty: Iron Crosses 'For Capture Of Moscow'

Big Box Of Nazi Medals Found In Seized Staff Car, Russ News Agency Says

New York, Dec. 21 (AP)—The British radio quoted a correspondent of Tass, Russian news agency, as reporting today that among the German booty taken in the Russian counter-offensive was a big box of iron crosses, second class, which bore the tag:

"The be handed out for the capture of Moscow."

The Tass dispatch said that the medals were found in a large staff car seized in the Russian drive beyond Klin, northwest of Moscow. CBS recorded the Tass broadcast here.

Eyewitness: Wreckage Of A Nazi Army

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Correspondent

With the Red Army on the Moscow Front, Dec. 21—The steel skeletons of two German tank divisions lay along the Klin-Volokolamsk road, a narrow, tunnel-like path winding through a frosted pine forest, where they were overtaken and smashed by the Red army.

The ghastly graveyard of the Nazi Panzer forces was marked by masses of charred machines, piles of frozen bodies and a litter of personal belongings.

The German Sixth and Seventh tank divisions had passed this way. The vengeance visited on them by the Russians indicated that what had started as an orderly withdrawal on the northern flank of the Moscow front was turned into panicky flight and final disaster.

Through Chamber Of Horrors

I have just traveled this road through the cemetery of once-proud German armored columns.

It was a trip through a chamber of horrors depicting in panorama the tragic results of winter battle.

Riding over twenty-five miles of twisting road, I counted nearly 1,000 wrecked tanks, armored cars, troop carriers, trucks, automobiles and motorcycles.

More than one hundred soldiers who once manned those machines lay dead. Other hundreds were buried beneath the snowdrifts under white birch crosses marking mass graves.

Tanks Mark Last Stands

Approaching Klin from the east, there already were signs of the German retreat after their defeat in the battle of Moscow at the Volga Canal. Tanks had been left at intervals on rises and turns in the road to conduct a rear-guard action. Blackened groups of tanks and trucks indicated the spot where the machines stalled or were overtaken.

Civilians were returning to their homes there, digging in the ruins of burned houses and cleaning villages which had escaped the flames of war. Laundry hung from clotheslines. Children played with the hulks of German machines in back yards.

STALIN'S BIRTHDAY FINDS REDS WINNING

Premier Is 62; Daily Successes Boost Morale

By EDDY GILMORE

KUIBYSHEV, Dec. 21 (A.P.).—With the Red Army on the offensive on a 1600-mile front and supplies rolling up to the battle line from newly reorganized industries, the end of six months of war finds a wave of high optimism sweeping Soviet Russia.

Russia's successes made today a happy birthday for Josef Stalin, his sixty-second.

The lift in morale first became evident with the Russian counter-offensive which drove the Germans out of Rostov-on-Don Nov. 29. Spirits have mounted steadily everywhere since then, fed by continuous reports of Soviet successes and the gradual easing of pressure on embattled Moscow.

FRESH TRIUMPHS DAILY

Day in and day out, radio loudspeakers shout news of fresh triumphs. Grim looks are giving way to smiles and laughter.

Long lines form in snowy streets, in sub-zero weather, to buy newspapers as they arrive from the presses. One sees a middle-aged man scan a paper eagerly, shout with joy and then hurry away.

"His home town has just been recaptured from the Germans," a friend explains. "He's going to pack."

TURN THE TABLES

In six months the Russians have learned much about the art of modern war. United States observers here say Red Army leaders not only have learned how to meet Nazi tactics, but how to improve upon them and turn the tables on the invaders.

With the weather becoming more severe, Soviet ski troops and Cossacks are playing an increasingly important role in the campaign. In some quarters they are regarded as more effective than tanks.

GUERRILLAS EFFECTIVE

Russian guerrillas never have been more active than now. Stories from the front tell of audacious activities of men armed with odd weapons, women wielding pitchforks and boys hurling stolen German grenades.

Latest Russian estimates put the German dead, wounded and missing since the start of the war at 7,200,000. They say the Nazis have lost 18,000 tanks, 15,600 planes and 22,000 big guns.

OWN LOSSES 2,546,000

The Russians acknowledge losses of 2,546,000 in dead, wounded and missing. They also admit the loss of 9500 tanks, 7680 planes and 15,480 guns.

But to combat the Russian losses in equipment, more and more factories are being put into operation far from the battle front. I have personally seen dozens of factories operating behind the Volga, and their productive capacity is rising daily.

ROAD TO BERLIN?

Red Army successes have been a big tonic during the last few weeks for the average Russian, who was perplexed when the Army for which he had sacrificed so much was being driven back. Now all doubt seems erased from his mind.

"The road we're marching," he said, "leads westward to Smolensk and Minsk—why not to Berlin?"

You ask a Russian how big his country's war effort is now, and he is likely to answer in the terms of an old refrain:

"From Moscow to the very frontiers."

Birthday Felicitations For Stalin, This Time By Allies, Not Hitler

New York, Dec. 21 (AP)—Two years ago today Adolf Hitler sent this message to Joseph Stalin:

"Accept my most sincere congratulations on your sixtieth birthday, my best wishes for your personal well-being and a happy future for the Soviet people."

The British radio recalled that message today in announcing that in honor of the Russian leader's sixty-second birthday a special concert would be broadcast, and that while Stalin would get no felicitations from Hitler this year, he was receiving the birthday wishes of newly allied countries.

CBS recorded the BBC broadcast.

British Reds Felicitate Stalin

LONDON, Dec. 21 (AP)—"All mankind is indebted to your genius for leadership," the Central Committee of the British Communist party told Soviet Premier Joseph Stalin today in a telegram felicitating him on his sixty-second birthday. "We declare how proud we are to be members of the great international party of which you are the leader, and we pledge ourselves to be worthy of this honor," the message said.

Russian Press Accuses Germany Of New Plot

Tongue-In-Cheek Article Visions Sinking Incident To Be Engineered By Nazis

DEC 22 1941

Moscow, Dec. 21 (AP)—Izvestia, the Government newspaper, accused Germany today of attempting to provoke friction between Russia and Turkey with this tongue-in-cheek, presinking report of a mysterious submarine attack on a Turkish merchant ship:

"According to reliable information, the third case of the sinking of a Turkish merchant ship by a submarine of 'unknown' nationality will take place one of these days.

"The crew will be saved as it includes German agents who are going to figure as 'witnesses.'

"The crew of the submarine will wear Soviet identification marks so that this vile affair later could be attributed to the USSR. . . . German agents expect that after the sinking of the Turkish vessel, relations between the USSR and Turkey will be aggravated."

Gayda Says African Battle Will Decide Italy's Destiny

Declares "Almost Entire Mass" Of Fascist Sea And Air Forces Is Being Used To Stop Drive

DEC 22 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Bern, Dec. 21—Virginio Gayda declared in Il Giornale d'Italia today the fighting in Africa "will not only decide the destiny of Libya but of the whole of Italy. It is the battle of Italy."

The Italian high command acknowledged today that the British were exerting heavy pressure on Axis forces in Libya, and Il Giornale d'Italia said "almost the entire mass of Italian armed sea and air forces" is being used to stop the drive.

Admits Derna Is Taken

Rome's communique admitted that the British had taken Derna and said the fighting around cutoff Axis posts at Salum and Bardia near the Egyptian frontier was severe. The German communique described the African activity of Axis forces as "heroic."

Il Giornale's editorial said the African and Mediterranean campaign was of such importance that it could well mark the turning point of the war—"one of the greatest and most decisive imperial battles in British history," which might well decide Italian destiny for "several dozens of years."

Bright Axis Spot Seen

The paper emphasized that Britain was pouring large forces into the struggle, including men and equipment from Palestine, Syria, Iraq, and Iran as well as Egypt and the Sudan.

A bright spot for the Axis was seen, however, in the claim that the mass of German and Italian troops had been withdrawn intact.

The communique said German air formations made heavy bombing attacks Friday and Saturday nights on Tobruk.

Axis Seen Abandoning Bengasi

DEC 22 1941

Advancing British Closely Pursuing Shattered Army Of Gen. Rommel

BULLETIN!

NEW YORK, Dec. 21—(AP)—Some units of German General Erwin Rommel's African forces are abandoning Bengasi and retreating toward Tripoli, the British radio declared today. The broadcast was recorded by CBS.

CAIRO, Egypt, Dec. 21—(AP)—The Axis' shattered army in Libya, split and in headlong flight, was pictured by British headquarters tonight as too disorganized to collect its strength for an effective defense of Bengasi, the enemy's last major position east of Tripoli.

Nazi General Edwin Rommel's remaining armored forces had been driven to Soluch, about 35 miles south of Bengasi, and Italian infantry was declared virtually isolated northeast of the port.

More Tanks Destroyed

The rapid pace of the British pursuit, pressed despite severe dust storms, was indicated by the fact that Soluch, inland terminal of a spur railroad from Bengasi, is 160 miles southwest of Derna, whose capture the British announced only yesterday, and 280 miles west of the Egyptian frontier, starting point of the British offensive on November 18.

Thus, almost overnight, the British had more than doubled the depth of their penetration into Libya. But destruction of the Axis forces rather than conquest of ground remained their prime objective.

Exactly how far advanced British patrols had pushed, or whether there had been any further major contact with the retreating Germans and Italians was not disclosed.

The only hint of an encounter was the announcement in a singularly brief communique that "in the course of the present phase of our advance 12 German tanks were destroyed and eight Italian medium tanks captured intact."

Distant Air Bases Bombed

It appeared that the pursuit had become such a race there was no time to get messages back reporting its progress step by step.

Again, both the general headquarters and RAF communiques stressed the havoc inflicted on long exposed lines of Axis motorized transport by incessant air attack. The loss of 11 British planes was acknowledged but the RAF said that besides taking a heavy toll of machines and troops, Imperial air forces had struck far behind the fighting zone in air assaults on air bases, railroads and transports in the far western Libyan province of Tripolitania.

(British air superiority in North Africa is so firm, an air ministry news service report in London said, that bombers and fighters raked an Axis motor transport column "10 miles long" with bombs and machine-gun fire without interruption throughout yesterday.)

In a message of praise to his Mediterranean Fleet, Admiral Sir Andrew Browne Cunningham declared that "when the tale of the siege of Tobruk comes to be written, the part played by these craft will prove to be a story worthy of the highest traditions of our naval history."

Few Spoils Gathered In Libya

By PRESTON GROVER

[Associated Press Correspondent]

With Advanced British and Allied Forces at Derna, Libya, Dec. 19 (Delayed)—In a month of battle, British forces have reached this half-way point on a victorious march toward Bengasi and have rolled on through at full speed, trying to reach Germans and Italians retreating in haste.

The dribble of prisoners continues to come from forward patrols a few miles west of the city, but the British have no idea yet as to where the enemy plans to make a stand. In two days of pressing across the desert west of Tobruk only advance patrols came in touch with the Axis forces.

Retreat Called Orderly

The German withdrawal, while fast, is extremely orderly, and only at the airport on the plateau above this little Mediterranean city of white buildings were the Nazis overtaken.

[Dispatches from Berlin today, however, said the Nazi retreat now has become headlong, with the Germans too disorganised to make a stand.]

At that point a battery of British artillery reached the edge of the airport just as a number of big Junkers troop transports landed. The artillery immediately opened fire. None of the planes seemed to have been carrying troops, but their crews were killed or captured.

British Wounded There

Upward of sixty British wounded have been installed in the hospital here.

The mixed population of Derna lined the streets as their allies entered, trying to give the proper salute, but having been overrun three times in this war, the people hardly knew whether to heil Hitler or cheer Churchill.

The Germans retreated about 150 miles in two days. No sizable supply dumps were left and only a few scattered Italian prisoners have been taken. The British would much rather capture Germans.

No Fires At Night

The Germans are very careful in their retirement. They are unrelenting in precautions against raiding parties which in times past have proved so deadly.

They allow no campfires before sunrise nor after sunset. They keep a small armored patrol, even with command units, relatively to the rear.

Two hundred miles back when planes were heard overhead it could be assumed that they were British. But today more German planes than British were seen. They passed without gunning or bombing us, however.

The British now speak of spending Christmas in Bengasi.

Anxious About Vichy

The first British offensive into Libya went past Bengasi and was turned back only when the Germans put fast tank units across the Mediterranean to help the Italians.

At present the British have the advantage in tank strength, but they are looking with anxious eyes on the possibility that Vichy may permit the Germans to land troops in French North Africa. That might put a whole new face on this show.

BRITISH DESTROYER SUNK, ROME CLAIMS

Another Left In Ruins And Battleship Hit, Italians Claim

DEC 22 1941

Action In Mediterranean Said To Have Allowed Convoy To Arrive

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Dec. 21 (From an Official Broadcast)—Italian sources declared tonight that a British destroyer was sunk, another left in sinking condition, a battleship hit by shellfire and several other ships hit by bombs and torpedoes in a clash late Wednesday with an Italian navel force in the Gulf of Sirte.

They added that the British fled behind a smoke screen.

As a result, dispatches from Italy said today, an important Axis convoy was forced through to its destination.

Reporting the action previously mentioned in Rome's Saturday communique, these sources said the Italian high command had foreseen that the British would attempt to prevent passage of the convoy.

Detailed Planning Reported

Accordingly, the Italians sent out a naval squadron, posted submarines to watch British naval movements from Malta and Alexandria, and detached all the airplanes which could be spared from African operations.

The naval units intercepted a strong British naval squadron, escorted by air squadrons, about sunset, it was said.

With Italian warships and planes joining in the action, the two British destroyers were declared to have been sunk and put out of action by shellfire.

Say British Withdrew

The battleship, too, was hit by shells, while bombs and torpedoes from the planes hit several more of the British warships.

After only a few minutes of this action, it was said, the British squadron changed course and withdrew under the protection of falling dusk and an artificial fog.

Not a single Italian ship was damaged, it was reported here.

The Italian communique Saturday said a light British naval unit was sunk, and another hit probably fatally and a large ship damaged.

A British communique from Cairo said two transports, one of 8,000 tons, and another of 2,000 tons, were sunk from a heavily guarded convoy near Tripoli on Tuesday when naval aircraft shot torpedoes at four ships.

ITALY CALLS NEW CLASSES

Nationals Abroad and Students Are Affected, Swiss Report

BERNE, Switzerland, Dec. 21 (AP)—A Rome dispatch to the newspaper Basler Nachrichten today said that Italy is calling new military classes, including nationals living abroad and university students.

The same dispatch said many Italian passenger trains have been withdrawn, the only explanation being "the needs of the present circumstances."

The number of men affected by the new call-up was not disclosed but it was believed here to be considerable. They are to report Jan. 1 to 15.

Besides students and those living abroad, the order applies to soldiers formerly exempted, men excused heretofore because several members of their families already were doing military service, and numerous other categories.

5 French Jews Slain As Nazi Attackers

DEC 22 1941

NEW YORK, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—The Vichy radio said today that as a result of "renewed attacks" on the German army in occupied France five Jews have been executed.

Anti-Aircraft Fire In London

London, Dec. 21 (AP)—Heavy anti-aircraft fire and the sound of machine guns was heard tonight in the Thames estuary, but no bombing was reported.

YOUTHS TO BE TRAINED

British Plan Pre-Service Units For Those From 16 to 18

LONDON, Dec. 21 (AP)—Plans for giving youths from the ages of 16 to 18 their share in Britain's new maximum mobilization scheme were announced tonight by the Board of Education.

Pre-service units will fit boys to step directly into the Army, Navy and Air Force when they reach the age minimum.

The age minimum for the Home Guard will be lowered in some areas to 16 and boys will be assigned to special non-combatant duties.

Others will be guided toward the Air Training Corps, which already has 160,000 and needs a steady stream of entrants to maintain its strength, and still others to the sea cadets, from which they may graduate directly into the Royal Navy.

4 Laborites Given Peerages in London

LONDON, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—King George conferred peerages today upon four members of the Labor Party in a move which authorities said was designed to strengthen workingmen's representation in the House of Lords.

William Wedgewood Benn, M. P. and now a Royal Air Force squadron leader, was made a viscount. Baronies were conferred on Reginald Fletcher, Charles Latham and Josiah Wedgwood.

An informed source said the Government wanted the labor position strengthened in the House of Lords at a time when a coalition of three parties — Conservative, Labor and Liberal—is running the government.

Benn, 64, served in the last war in Palestine, Gallipoli and on the Italian front.

Norse Ship Losses Drop

November Sinkings by Axis Fewest Since September, 1939

LONDON, Dec. 21 (AP).—Norway's merchant marine losses last month were the smallest since September, 1939, the first month of the war, Arne Sunde, Minister of Shipping in the Norwegian government-in-exile, said today.

Speaking at a ship launching at a northern port, he said a rebuilding program had started to make up for Norway's losses. He said shipping losses for Norway's large merchant fleet, in the service of the Allies, had dropped from an average of 49,000 tons a month for the first five months of this year to an average of 17,000 tons a month for the last six months.

Army and Navy Communiques

WASHINGTON, Dec. 21 (AP).—A Navy Department communique:

ATLANTIC THEATER: There are indications of enemy submarine activities off the east coast of the United States.

EASTERN PACIFIC: Enemy submarines have been active along the west coast of the United States. The steamship Agwiworld was shelled by an enemy submarine.

The steamship Emidio was also shelled and then torpedoed. The crew abandoned ship and took to the lifeboats. Three lifeboats were destroyed by submarine gunfire. Thirty-two survivors have been rescued. There were fifty-four in the crew.

CENTRAL PACIFIC: Wake Island has sustained two additional attacks by enemy aircraft.

FAR EAST: The enemy made a light air attack on Cavite. Only slight damage resulted.

DEC 22 1941

A War Department communique:

1. PHILIPPINE THEATER: During the last twenty-four hours there were enemy air raids over the Islands of Luzon, Cebu and Mindanao.

Land fighting continues at Davao, on the Island of Mindanao. There was increased activity of enemy patrols in northern Luzon. Aggressive attempts at enemy infiltration are being made both in northern and southern Luzon. Indications point to Japanese efforts toward progressive augmentation of forces which have landed in the Philippines.

2. There is nothing to report from other areas.

MANILA, Dec. 21 (AP).—A summary of the second week of the war in the Philippines, issued by the headquarters of General Douglas MacArthur, commander of the United States Army of the Far East, follows:

Increasing activity on the northern and southern fronts marked the second week of the war in which Japan is seeking to gain a foothold on the Philippines Archipelago.

Ground and air command of the United States Army forces of the Far East struck back with increasing fury at the invaders, routing enemy patrols in the Vigan and Legaspi sectors, shooting down at least five Japanese planes in the air and destroying at least twenty-five on the ground.

The enemy launched twelve major air raids during the week, but for the most part damage was not serious and casualties were light.

Our air force landed telling blows on the invaders at Legaspi, where it bombed and seriously damaged two transports and shot down four enemy planes.

At Vigan, on the northern front, our airmen shot down one plane and destroyed at least twenty-five planes on the ground and set fuel supplies afire.

In Davao, on the extreme southern front, the enemy landed in force, and as the week came to a close heavy fighting progressed.

A morning communique from the same headquarters:

Fighting continued at Davao. No clear picture of exactly what is occurring there is available. Patrol activities continue to the north.

An afternoon communique from headquarters:

The situation in Davao remains obscure. The enemy has been active in the air in that section.

The enemy southward of Vigan has increased his action, but there are still limited skirmishes between patrols.

War Communiques

DEC 22 1941

British

SINGAPORE, Dec. 21 (AP).—A British communique:

There has been little activity in North Perak. Our troops successfully countered an enemy attack in the Lenggong area, south of Grik. Enemy aircraft raided Kuantan yesterday morning.

A subsequent British communique:

The Commander in Chief of the Eastern Fleet regrets to announce the loss of H. M. S. Banka, a small converted merchant ship. Six of her crew have been found, but it is regretted that four European officers and forty Malay ratings (enlisted men) remain unaccounted for. The next of kin have been informed.

There is nothing to report from the North Malayan fronts.

During the day Japanese aircraft raided the Kuala Lumpur area. They were successfully engaged by our anti-aircraft and fighter defenses, which shot down one enemy plane and probably destroyed another. One of our aircraft was lost, but the pilot is safe.

Another British communique:

Nothing to report from the Malayan fronts.

The Japanese lost at least one and probably another plane during a raid on Kuala Lumpur. One British aircraft was lost, but the pilot is safe.

RANGOON, Burma, Dec. 20 (delayed) (AP).—A British communique:

Air patrols to the east and south continue. There is nothing further to report.

CAIRO, Dec. 21 (AP).—A British Middle East headquarters communique:

Throughout yesterday, despite severe dust storms, our forces continued to press the withdrawing enemy.

In the course of the present phase of our advance, twelve German tanks were destroyed and eight Italian medium tanks were captured intact.

Our air forces yesterday were again presented with a succession of excellent targets, of which full advantage was taken.

Enemy columns retreating south of Bengasi were heavily and continuously attacked, numbers of lorries and trailers being destroyed or severely damaged.

All lorries were reported full of troops and a great many enemy casualties resulted.

A Royal Air Force communique:

Despite bad weather and heavy dust storms, sustained attacks on retreating motorized units of the enemy forces in Cyrenaica were maintained yesterday by R. A. F. and Free French bombers, which were particularly active in the Tarte-Tocra and El Abira areas.

The landing ground at Barce was effectively attacked and direct hits obtained on airdrome buildings where fires broke out. Three enemy fighters were shot down during these operations.

In Tripolitana our bombers raided the railroad station at Zuara and the crossing east of the town. Direct hits were scored on the goods shed and rolling stock, and the railway track was damaged. The motor transport station at Fort Artesian also was bombed, the results not being observed owing to bar weather conditions.

Fighter aircraft carried out a series of successful attacks on enemy fuel-carrying and other transports in the Jedya zone. A number of petrol tankers and lorries was destroyed, and considerable damange caused to enemy convoys. A CR-42 and a transport aircraft were shot down.

Over Malta fighter aircraft intercepted a force of enemy bombers escorted by Macchis and ME-109s. One JU-88 was shot down and other enemy bombers and fighters ewere severely damaged.

From these and other operations eleven of our aircraft are missing.

LONDON, Dec. 21 (AP).—An Air and Home Security Ministries communique:

There was a little enemy activity during the early part of last night, mainly over the English coastal districts.

Bombs dropped in northeast England caused some damage and injured one person. Elsewhere, very little damage and no casualties have been reported.

Russian

MOSCOW, Dec. 22 (Monday) (AP).—A Soviet Information Bureau communique:

During Dec. 21 our troops fought the enemy on all fronts.

In a number of sectors of the western, Kalinin, southwestern and Leningrad fronts our troops fought fierce engagements with the enemy and continued to advance, occupying a certain number of localities, among which are Boggotsch, Gruzino and Krapivno.

In the course of the period from Dec. 17 to Dec. 20 troops of the western front captured from the enemy 7 planes, 360 tanks, 519 guns, 161 mine throwers, 267 machine guns, 3,059 trucks, 28 armored cars and 35 tractors.

Of this total, in the fighting at the approaches to Volokolamsk and in the town itself, our troops captured 73 tanks, 91 guns, 31 machine guns, 577 trucks, 4 armored cars and 35 tractors.

In the period from Dec. 17 to Dec. 20, 10,090 German soldiers and officers have been annihilated on the western front.

MOSCOW, Dec. 21 (AP).—A Soviet Information Bureau communique broadcast today:

During the night of Dec. 20-21 our troops fought the enemy on all fronts.

Our units operating in one sector of the western front captured in one day's fighting forty tanks, eight guns, twenty-eight trench mortars, 135 lorries and a great quantity of other war materials.

In another sector of the front, our troops during the same period captured twenty-four guns, four machine guns, 35,000 rounds of ammunition and other booty.

As a result of fierce engagements in one sector of the Leningrad front, our troops occupied point "K," accounted for many Germans and captured fourteen machine guns, four guns, two trench mortars and much other booty.

DEC 22 1941

German

BERLIN, Dec. 21 (official broadcast recorded by AP).—A German high command communique:

Fighting in the central sector of the eastern front continues with undiminished vigor.

Several strong enemy attacks were beaten back. In one sector held by one army corps twenty Soviet tanks were destroyed.

Violent enemy attempts to break though the encirclement on the Leningrad front, supported by tanks, were repelled with heavy losses to the enemy.

Nineteen enemy tanks were hit.

The air force bombed with strong effect enemy columns, troops, vehicles, tanks, concentrations, battery and earthworks.

In the northern and Finnish sectors of the eastern front, enemy transport on the move was effectively disturbed by the destruction of supplies, railway trains and rail installations.

Last night the air force scored direct bomb hits on a large industrial works on the English coast.

Reconnaissance planes damaged two enemy ships by bomb hits in the waters around England.

In North Africa fighting is continuing with the heroic activity of all land and air forces of the Axis.

A German bomber unit destroyed several planes and numerous trucks in an attack on a British airdrome and on concentrations of enemy vehicles.

In the period from Dec. 13 to Dec. 19 the Soviet air force lost eighty-one planes, of which forty-five were shot down in air battles and by anti-aircraft fire, the rest being destroyed on the ground.

Finnish

HELSINKI, Dec. 21 (AP).—A Finnish communique:

There has been slight enemy artillery fire on the whole Karelian Isthmus, and our own artillery and trench mortars shelled enemy positions and silenced several of their guns and machine guns.

On the Svir front there has been slight artillery action on both sides.

On the eastern front the situation is unchanged. In some sectors there has been slight harassing artillery fire on both sides.

Italian

ROME, Dec. 21 (official broadcast recorded by AP).—An Italian high command communique:

To the west of Derna, which has been reoccupied by enemy forces, pressure continues against our divisions.

Around Salum (Sollum) and Bardia there has been severe local fighting.

German air formations carried out heavy bombing attacks during the night of Dec. 19-20 on military objectives at Tobruk, with success. An anti-aircraft battery was destroyed.

An Italian sea reconnaissance plane attacked by three Spitfires succeeded in shooting one down. A second enemy machine was hit. Our plane returned unscathed.

Two of our aircraft previously reported missing later landed at one of our bases after having shot down two enemy fighters.

MEXICO PUTS WATCH ON AXIS NATIONALS

Germans Eyed After U. S. Revelation of Suspicious Actions

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 21 (A. P.).—Axis nationals in general and Germans in particular have been put under close surveillance in Mexico as an upshot of Washington revelations that many of their number are engaged in suspicious activities throughout Latin America, it was learned today.

The Government itself has paved the way for putting Fifth Columnists away through recently enacted legislation providing long prison terms for those guilty of espionage and anti-democratic propaganda.

'RIGOROUSLY CORRECT'

The newspaper Novedades said today the disclosure by a Washington Congressional committee of widespread Axis activity in Latin America was "rigorously correct" and that prompt suppression in Mexico would be forthcoming.

Cuba Watching Aliens

Added Scouting for Axis Citizens Ordered at Cabinet Meeting

HAVANA, Dec. 21 (AP).—The Cuban Cabinet met in special session last night to study possible emergency measures to be adopted under the special powers recently accorded to President Fulgencio Batista by Congress. An announcement issued after the meeting said steps would be taken to place an added watch on the activities of foreigners, particularly Axis nationals.

At President Batista's recommendation, the Cabinet decided against compulsory military service at present, but authorized limited voluntary enlistments in the Army and Navy.

Madison, Fla., Offers Tribute To Colin Kelly

DEC 22 1941

Army Planes Circle Above as Hero's Home Town Holds Memorial Service

MADISON, Fla., Dec. 21 (AP).—In a simple, one-hour memorial service, Madison paid tribute today to its home town boy who became America's first hero of this war, Captain Colin P. Kelly jr.

"His praise will be sung as long as liberty lasts," said the Rev. H. R. Latham, as three Army planes circled overhead in a special salute to the twenty-seven-year-old Army pilot whose bomber sent the Japanese battleship Haruna to the bottom Dec. 8.

Hundreds were present at the services held in the little Presbyterian church where Captain Kelly worshiped before he went to West Point in 1933.

His widow, the former Marian Wick, and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Colin P. Kelly sr., were among those who heard the Rev. Mr. Latham also say that Captain Kelly "died that liberty and Christianity might live."

"Captain Kelly met the Great Commander in Chief up there in the air, and He said 'Well done, thou good and faithful servant,'" the minister added.

On behalf of the nation, Major C. F. Gilchrist, of MacDill Field at Tampa, gave Captain Kelly's widow the country's flag.

As the three Army planes flew back to their bases after the service, nineteen-month-old Colin P. Kelly 3d was at home, asleep. Corky, as he is known to America, may go to West Point, too. President Roosevelt has recommended his appointment by the President in 1956.

Tribute Paid in Defense Bond

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 21 (AP).—An unidentified man paid tribute—in cash—to the memory of Captain Colin P. Kelly jr. The man walked into a San Francisco post-office station, laid $75 on the counter and directed that it be used to buy a $100 defense bond for Colin P. Kelly 3d. Then he left without giving his name.

Postmaster William McCarthy forwarded the money to the Secretary of the Treasury with the request that the bond be turned over to the flyer's widow.

Captain Elliott Roosevelt Joining Air Force Patrol

Is Graduated From Kelly Field School for Navigators

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Dec. 20 (AP).—Captain Elliott Roosevelt, second son of the President, was en route Saturday night to join a unit of the Air Force Combat Command as a navigator. He was graduated Saturday from Kelly Field's Air Corps aerial navigators' school and departed by air for duty with a long-range ocean-going patrol unit.

Fourteen aviation cadets and one student officer, Captain Roosevelt, heard Brigadier General H. R. Harmon, training center commander, assert:

"As fighters of a people's war, your class shows democracy in action. Captain Roosevelt came here expecting no special consideration. He got none. I single him out simply as a symbol of democracy versus dictatorship.

"In the United States the President's son is one of us."

Classmates of Captain Roosevelt are expecting assignments to similar active units almost immediately.

First Lady Forecasts Raid On Some U. S. City

Effort To Slow Production And Break Civilian Morale Seen As Aim

New York, Dec. 21 (AP)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt predicted tonight the enemy would attempt a bombing raid on some United States city with a view to slowing industry and breaking civilian morale.

"An effort will, of course, be made by the enemy to take us again unawares, to raid some city where there is a big defense industry . . .," the First Lady declared in her regular weekly commercial broadcast.

She urged that all people keep on the alert and prepare for an attack. Mrs. Roosevelt declared that it was a part of tactics to wreck as many workers' homes as possible in order to slow production.

STIMSON STRESSES PLANES' VITAL ROLE

Report, Drawn Before Japanese Attack, Hints At Revolutionary Strategy

DEC 22 1941

Three Primary Needs For Large Army Cited By Secretary Of War

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 21—Secretary Stimson hinted today, in an annual report drafted on the eve of the Japanese attack, that "revolutionary" reliance was being placed on American long-range bombers for the defense of the Far East.

Noting that the vast expansion of the aviation industry was "now making possible a striking arm of extreme mobility and phenomenal range," the War Secretary said:

30.24 — 13689 30.24 — 13689

"The recently demonstrated effectiveness of air power as against sea power in the confined limits of the Mediterranean has suggested revolutionary possibilities for the defense of American interests in the similar seas of the southwestern Pacific.

DEC 22 1941

Powers Of Defense

"It has also suggested the enormous powers of a hemispheric defense which, radiating out from the manufacturers and training grounds of the United States and taking advantage of our now existing ocean and continental bases, may strike at and ward off aggressive hostile sea power long before it is able to approach our shores."

Since Secretary Stimson's report was drafted, war has broken out. Japanese airmen have scored notable successes against surface vessels. American pilots have sunk an enemy battleship and other craft. The United States' bomber production program has been doubled.

Defense Effort

Covering the nation's efforts to reinforce military defenses mainly during the twelve months up to last June 30, Stimson reported that the mounting importance of air power had "powerfully affected our plans and organizations."

With the admonition that "this is no time for the intervention of arbitrary or ill-advised experiments," he opposed such reorganization proposals as the creation of an independent air force. The experience of this war, he said, has demonstrated that a unity of command is necessary.

The acquisition of a new string of offshore Atlantic bases, the lease-lend arrangement and expansion of the army to more than 1,800,000 men, Stimson asserted, constituted a consistent, harmonious program of defense.

Expansion Of Army

The army was expanded, he said, for the primary purposes of preparing to beat off by air power any naval attack from overseas, to cope with any hostile expeditionary forces threatening the Western Continent and to save the United States from conquest by a mass invasion.

"Uninformed critics have suggested that the country could be protected by a naval and air effort alone," he said. "His is far from the fact.

"The garrisons alone of our foreign outposts and possessions require an aggregate of over 200,000 men; and this disregards entirely the mobile forces which must be immediately necessary to reinforce those garrisons or to defeat the possible blows of the veteran Axis armies aimed at us through other approaches to our continent."

Danger Areas Cited

And—writing his report before the Japanese attack—he had this to say:

Portions of the African and Asiatic continents have suddenly become possible bases from which landings may be made upon South America or Alaska or the Philippines.

"These last places are areas which we are under obligation, morally or legally, to defend, and an attack on any one would be a heavy blow at our continental safety and vital interests."

Just Treatment For Aliens Urged By Mayor LaGuardia

DEC 22 1941

President Of Conference Of Mayors Declares Good Will Be Protected But Bad Will Be Prosecuted

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 21—Mayor F. H. LaGuardia advised citizens today to leave "the task of apprehending enemy aliens entirely in the hands of the Department fo Justice" to avoid unjust discrimination.

Government officials, he said in a coast-to-coast broadcast, "will brook not the slightest act of disloyalty and will not countenance for a single second any abuse of hospitality or of our generosity."

"There will be no border line case—aliens will be divided only in two classes, good aliens and bad aliens," said the Mayor, who spoke in his capacity as president of the United States Conference of Mayors.

To Bar Injustices

"The good ones will be protected and free—the bad one will be prosecuted and confined. Above all, the American people can be certain that the Attorney General will cause no injustice and inflict no penalty for the sake of a headline."

La Guardia said the practice of some employers in discharging German and Italian aliens on the ground that they cannot become citizens and therefore have no place in their factories was based on a misunderstanding "and should not be permitted to go on."

"We cannot hold law-abiding Germans and Italians in this country responsible for what is happening in Europe,' 'he said.

Would Harm Defense

"We shall be harming the defense of the nation if we allow any unlawful treatment of our non-citizens. The Department of Justice believes that it will be possible to prevent hysteria if officials will cooperate in preventing any discrimination or abuse of aliens."

La Guardia, who said the majority of non-citizens here are peaceful, law-abiding and in sympathy with this country's form of government, asserted "we must make it clear that it is thepolicy of our Government that so long as aliens in this country conduct themselves in accordance with the law they need fear no interference in their normal pursuits of life."

La Guardia said he spoke at the request of Attorney General Francis Biddle.

Behind the War Scene

BY EDWARD E. BOMAR
Wide World War Analyst

The prompt initial steps taken by his foes toward a unified, world-wide strategy may well be of greater concern to Adolf Hitler than the course of the actual fighting just now in Russia or the far east.

CONTRAST WITH 1918

Two weeks after the United States was forced into the war, the Fuehrer's enemies appear to be well on the way toward translating their unity of purpose into unity of military action. It is not too much to hope that Axis divide and conquer tactics have lost their effectiveness.

By contrast, not until the last year of the 1914-1918 conflict was effective Allied co-ordination achieved by arming the supreme war council with more than advisory powers, Marshal Foch's appointment as generalissimo was made possible only by the imminent peril of defeat.

With President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill already in a close working relationship, the White House announced Saturday that American and British staff officers were in consultation in Washington and London, and that the scope of their joint planning was to be expanded to include Russia, China and the other governments. Left unanswered was whether an inter-Allied general staff was contemplated, a supreme war council with political as well as military powers, or a combination or variation of the two.

It may be that the war is approaching its "culminating and turning point", as Hitler told his troops yesterday on assuming supreme command of the army.

But, if so, it is likely to be the turning point of arrival at an understanding whereby the weight of the Allies' greater resources will be used to best advantage.

THE RUSSIAN NOON COMMUNIQUE ANNOUNCED THAT THE RUSSIANS ALSO HAD CAPTURED A POINT IDENTIFIED AS "K" AND MUCH EQUIPMENT AND MATERIAL FELL INTO THE RED ARMY'S HANDS.

THIS ACTION TOOK PLACE SOMEWHERE NEAR LENINGRAD, THE COMMUNIQUE DECLARED.

IN ANOTHER SECTOR WEST OF MOSCOW, THE BULLETIN SAID, RUSSIAN TROOPS CAPTURED IN A SINGLE DAY'S FIGHTING 40 TANKS, EIGHT GUNS, 28 TRENCH MORTARS, 136 TRUCKS AND LARGE QUANTITIES OF OTHER WAR MATERIALS.

MOSCOW, DEC. 21-(AP)-JOSEPH STALIN'S 62ND BIRTHDAY PASSED WITHOUT FORMAL OBSERVANCE IN THE SOVIET UNION TODAY.

IN CONTRAST TO PAST CELEBRATIONS, THERE WAS NO PUBLIC MENTION WHATEVER OF TODAY'S ANNIVERSARY.

IT WAS ASSUMED HE SPENT THE DAY IN THE KREMLIN CARRYING OUT HIS MANIFOLD DUTIES AS PREMIER, WAR COMMISSAR AND SECRETARY-GENERAL OF THE COMMUNIST PARTY.

LONDON, DEC. 21-(AP)-GERMAN ARMORED FORCES IN LIBYA HAVE BEEN DRIVEN SOUTH OF BENGASI TO SOLUCH WHILE ITALIAN INFANTRY IS ALMOST ISOLATED IN A DISORGANIZED CONDITION NORTHEAST OF BENGASI, SAID AN AUTHORITATIVE MILITARY COMMENTATOR TODAY.

"THE BULK OF THE GERMAN ARMORED FORCES WERE LAST LOCATED AT SOLUCH, CONSIDERABLY SOUTH OF BENGASI," THE COMMENTATOR SAID.

WHETHER OR NOT GERMAN GEN. ERWIN ROMMEL HAD INTENDED TO MAKE A STAND AT BENGASI WITH INFANTRY, THE COMMENTATOR SAID IT DID NOT NOW APPEAR LIKELY AXIS FORCES COULD BE EFFECTIVELY REORGANIZED TO FACE THE BRITISH PRESSURE.

IT APPEARED LIKELY, HE ADDED, THAT THE ITALIAN INFANTRY DIVISIONS WERE ALREADY TRAPPED NORTHEAST OF BENGASI.

"WE ARE PURSUING THE ENMY AT FULL SPEED AND THEREFORE HAVE HAD LITTLE TIME TO GET MESSAGES BACK ON EXACT PROGRESS," THE COMMENTATOR EXPLAINED.

BERLIN, DEC. 21-(OFFICIAL BROADCAST RECORDED BY AP)-FIGHTING IN NORTH AFRICA IS CONTINUING WITH "HEROIC ACTIVITY" BY ALL AXIS LAND AND AOR FPRCES, THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND REPORTED TODAY.

ROME, DEC. 21-(AP)-THE ITALIAN HIGH COMMAND SAID TODAY THAT BRITISH FORCES IN NORTH AFRICA WERE CONTINUING TO ADVANCE WESTWARD

30.24 — 13691

30.24 — 13691

AFTER OCCUPYING DERNA, ALMOST 200 MILES FROM THE EGYPTIAN FRONTIER.

AXIS GARRISONS STILL WERE REPORTED HOLDING OUT, HOWEVER, AROUND SALUM AND BARDIA IN THE FRONTIER ZONE, WHERE SEVERE LOCAL FIGHTING WAS SAID TO HAVE TAKEN PLACE YESTERDAY.

THE HIGH COMMAND GAVE NO OTHER DETAILS OF LAND OPERATIONS IN LIBYA, BUT SAID GERMAN PLANES HAD AGAIN HEAVILY BOMBED TOBRUK AND MALTA.

THE BULLETIN SAID THE HIGH COMMAND HAD BEEN ABLE TO VERIFY THE SINKING OF A BRITISH CRUISER IN THE EASTERN MEDITERRANEAN BY AN ITALIAN SUBMARINE IN A PREVIOUS COMMUNIQUE.

ROME, DEC. 21-(ANDI AGENCY TO AP)-EVERY ITALIAN AIRCRAFT NOT IN USE ELSEWHERE WAS SENT INTO ACTION RECENTLY AGAINST BRITISH WARSHIPS IN THE MEDITERRANEAN BETWEEN MALTA AND ALEXANDRIA, IT WAS DISCLOSED TODAY.

SUBMARINES ALSO LAY IN WAIT FOR THE BRITISH AND THE COMBINED ACTION WAS A COMPLETE SUCCESS, THE ITALIANS SAID. THEY CLAIMED THE BRITISH FORMATION RETIRED UNDER A SMOKESSCREEN WHEN BROUGHT UNDER "CONCENTRATED ATTACK."

(THIS SINGULAR ITALIAN CLAIM HAS FOUND NO CONFIRMATION EVEN IN THE COMMUNIQUES OF ITALY'S AXIS PARTNER, GERMANY).

CAIRO, EGYPT, DEC. 21-(AP)-THE BRITISH STATED TODAY THAT 10,000 PRISONERS, INCLUDING 4,000 GERMANS, HAVE REACHED PRISON CAMPS IN THE NILE VALLEY FROM THE LIBYAN BATTLEFIELDS.

MEXICO CITY, DEC.21-(AP)-THE MEXICAN GOVERNMENT FORMALLY NOTIFIED THE UNITED STATES EMBASSY TODAY OF ITS STRICT PATROL OF THE PACIFIC COAST AND ADDED THAT REPORTS OF A NAVAL BATTLE OF ACAPULCO WERE INCORRECT.

THE NAVY MINISTRY SAID ITS VIGILANCE WAS EXTENDING FROM THE GULF OF CALIFORNIA SOUTH TO THE LIMIT OF MEXICAN TERRITORIAL WATERS IN THE GULF OF TEHUANTEPEC AND THAT IT WAS THEREFORE PERFECTLY INFORMED ABOUT THE PRESENCE OF FOREIGN SHIPS, PARTICULARLY OF FOREIGN NATIONS.

THE MINISTRY SAID BLASTING FOR A NEW ROAD NEAR THE TOURIST CENTER OF ACAPULCO CAUSED THE REPORTS OF A NAVAL BATTLE AND THAT SMOKE SEEN ON THE HORIZON CAME FROM A MERCHANT SHIP.

NEW YORK, DEC. 21-(AP)-THE MOST REV. FRANCIS J. SPELLMAN, ARCHBISHOP OF NEW YORK, ASSERTED TODAY HE DID NOT BELIEVE AXIS LEADERS COULD SQUELCH THE THOUGHT AMONG THEIR PEOPLES THAT AMERICA WAS "ON THE LEVEL AND ON THE SQUARE" OR THAT THEY COULD "SUPPRESS THE KNOWLEDGE THAT AMERICA HAS BEEN INVARIABLY VICTORIOUS."

"AND WE SHALL BE VICTORIOUS AGAIN," HE SAID, "COST WHAT IT MAY, IN BLOOD, TEARS AND SWEAT."

ARCHBISHOP SPELLMAN, MILITARY VICAR OF THE NATION'S ARMED FORCES, SPOKE IN CONNECTION WITH HIS BLESSING OF THE NATIONAL CATHOLIC COMMUNITY SERVICE CLUBHOUSE HERE. HIS SPEECH WAS BROADCAST NATIONALLY BY THE COLUMBIA BROADCASTING SYSTEM (1:45 P.M., E.S.T.)

"THE CHIEF RESPONSIBILITY FOR VICTORY IS STILL ON OUR SOLDIERS, SAILORS, MARINES AND FLYING MEN, BUT ESSENTIAL RESPONSIBILITY IS ALSO ON ALL THE REST OF US," ARCHBISHOP SPELLMAN SAID.

DEC 22 1941

"WE SHALL NOT FORGET THE BLOOD THAT HAS BEEN SPILT BUT WE SHALL FORGET THE IRREMEDIABLE PAST AND THE FIFTEEN-MONTH LOSS OF OUR 24,000,000 MAN-DAYS OF DEFENSE EFFORT AND THE TEN THOUSAND UNPRODUCED PLANES. WE SHALL FORGET EVERYTHING ELSE BUT OUR HONORED DEAD AND THE PEACE WITH JUSTICE AFTER VICTORY."

ASSERTING THAT ALL MUST SACRIFICE, THE ARCHBISHOP SAID "ALL OUR MAN-POWER, MILITARY, INDUSTRIAL AND AGRICULTURAL, OUR RESOURCES AND OUR RESOURCEFULNESS, FUSED TOGETHER BY OUR MORAL POWER, WILL NOT FAIL, CAN NOT FAIL TO BRING US VICTORY."

DEC 22 1941

HE SAID, HOWEVER, THAT VICTORY IN WAR WOULD "PROFIT US NOTHING" IF THE IDEALS OF DEMOCRACY, SUPPORTED BY RELIGION AND MORALITY, WERE NOT PRESERVED AT HOME "BECAUSE DEMOCRACY WITHOUT THE PROPS OF RELIGION AND MORALITY COLLAPSES INTO ANARCHY AND TYRANNY."

"THUS IT IS ESSENTIAL," HE SAID, "THAT MEN AND WOMEN IN THE SERVICE OF THE COUNTRY, NOT ALONE IN THE ARMED FORCES BUT IN ALL BRANCHES OF THE GOVERNMENT, AND MEN, WOMEN AND CHILDREN IN CIVIL LIFE THINK OF GOD AND OBEY THE LAWS OF GOD."

THE WAR TODAY

BY DEWITT MACKENZIE

DEC 22 1941

WIDE WORLD WAR ANALYST

OUR DEFENDERS IN THE PHILIPPINES APPEAR TO BE IN THE THROES OF THE SUPREME TEST IN THE BLOODY FIGHTING WHICH HAS DEVELOPED AS THE RESULT OF JAPANESE LANDINGS IN FORCE FROM EIGHTY TRANSPORTS IN THE LINGAYEN GULF AREA, A BIT MORE THAN 100 MILES NORTHWEST OF MANILA ON LUZON ISLAND -- STRATEGIC HEART OF THESE STRAGGLING POSSESSIONS.

THE JAPS, ALREADY DELAYED IN THEIR SCHEDULE BY THE STRONG DEFENSE OF GENERAL MACARTHUR'S FORCES, HAVE STRUCK HEAVILY WITH THE PURPOSE OF GAINING POSSESSION BEFORE THE ARRIVAL OF AMERICAN REINFORCEMENTS ACROSS THE PACIFIC.

DETAILS OF THIS GREAT ENGAGEMENT ARE MEAGER, AND THIS IS NO TIME FOR SPECULATION. OBVIOUSLY THE POSITION IS SERIOUS FOR THE PHILIPPINES.

DEC 22 1941

THE NEWS THUS FAR IS A MIXTURE OF GOOD AND BAD. IT IS A MATTER OF CONCERN THAT THE JAPANESE SHOULD HAVE SUFFICIENT CONTROL OF THE WATERS ABOUT LUZON TO EFFECT SUCH A MASS LANDING. IT IS GRAND TO HEAR FROM GENERAL MACARTHUR IN AN EARLY REPORT OF THE FIGHTING THAT "OUR TROOPS ARE BEHAVING WELL."

NEXT TO THIS INVASION OF THE PHILIPPINES, THE GREAT SENSATION OF THE DAY IS HITLER'S ASSUMPTION OF SUPREME COMMAND OF HIS ARMIES, DISPLACING THE FAMOUS FIELD MARSHAL VON BRAUCHITSCH.

THE PRECISE MEANING OF THIS EXTRAORDINARY MOVE REMAINS OBSCURE, BUT I THINK WE ARE SAFE IN SAYING THAT IT WAS INSPIRED BY A GREAT EMERGENCY OF SOME SORT.

ONE DOESN'T OVERLOOK, OF COURSE, THAT THE FUEHRER HIMSELF HAS DECLARED HE IS DIVINELY ORDAINED TO CARRY OUT HIS PROGRAM FOR THE FATHERLAND. STILL, IT IS HARD TO BELIEVE THAT THIS IS THE EXPLANATION. ADMITTING HITLER'S GENIUS FOR LEADERSHIP, HE MIGHT BE EXPECTED TO BE THE LAST TO CLAIM THAT HIS TRAINING FITTED HIM FOR A POSITION DEMANDING THE HIGHEST TYPE OF MILITARY SKILL, AND TO

30.24— 13693

FEEL THAT THERE IS NO ONE ELSE CAPABLE OF LEADING HIS ARMIES.

RATHER, IT SEEMS TO ME, HE IS FACED WITH A GREAT CRISIS IN WHICH EITHER (1) HE IS FORCED TO DEPEND UPON THE PERSONAL HOLD WHICH HE HAS ON HIS PEOPLE OR (2) HE AND VON BRAUCHITSCH HAVE DISAGREED ON A VITAL MILITARY ISSUE.

DEC 22 1941

IT MAY BE THAT HERR HITLER IS COMPELLED TO USE ALL HIS POWER OF LEADERSHIP IN ORDER TO MEET THE REACTION OF HIS PEOPLE TO THE GREAT DEFEAT SUFFERED BY GERMAN ARMS IN RUSSIA. THAT OPERATION, WHICH IS STILL DEVELOPING DANGEROUSLY FOR THE NAZIS, CERTAINLY TAKES SOME EXPLAINING.

IT IS EQUALLY POSSIBLE THAT THE FUEHRER WANTS TO UNDERTAKE SOMETHING THAT HIS COMMANDER IN CHIEF FELT SUICIDAL. THERE ARE SEVERAL GUESSES ALONG THAT LINE. ABOUT THE WILDEST THING ONE COULD THINK OF WOULD BE AN ATTEMPT TO INVADE ENGLAND AT THIS TIME OF YEAR. THE GERMAN HIGH COMMAND UNDOUBTEDLY WOULD BALK AT SUCH A RASH ADVENTURE, BUT HITLER SAYS HE IS WORKING BY INTUITION AND MAYBE HIS INTUITION TELLS HIM THAT NOW IS THE APPOINTED HOUR FOR A DESPERATE BLOW.

UNDATED--FIRST ADD MACKENZIE'S THE WAR TODAY X X X BLOW.

PERHAPS THE CRISIS INVOLVES A MILITARY DISPUTE REGARDING RUSSIA. IT MIGHT RELATE TO A CHALLENGE TO TURKEY'S TWO MILLION BAYONETS IN AN EFFORT TO BREAK INTO THE MIDDLE EAST. IT MIGHT HAVE TO DO WITH A DRIVE THROUGH SPAIN TO BRING THAT COUNTRY INTO THE WAR AND TO OPEN UP NEW BASES FOR GERMANY IN NORTH AFRICA.

DEC 22 1941

BE THAT AS MAY, IT'S MY GUESS THAT HITLER IS A BADLY WORRIED MAN. THERE IS FURTHER EVIDENCE THAT ALL IS NOT WELL WITH GERMANY IN THE LANGUAGE EMPLOYED BY THE NAZI CHIEF AND PROPAGANDA MINISTER GOEBBELS IN THEIR URGENT WEEK-END APPEALS TO THE PUBLIC FOR WARM CLOTHING FOR GERMAN SOLDIERS CAUGHT IN THE TOILS OF THE KILLING RUSSIAN WINTER.

OSTENSIBLY THESE STATEMENTS WERE INTENDED TO RELIEVE SUFFERING. ANY DOUBT AS TO THE GRIM POSITION OF THE NAZIS ON THE FROZEN STEPPES OF RUSSIA MUST BE REMOVED BY GOEBBELS' BLUNT EDICT THAT "AS LONG AS A SINGLE OBJECT OF WINTER CLOTHING REMAINS STILL IN THE FATHERLAND, IT MUST GO TO THE FRONT." THINGS ARE DESPERATE WHEN YOU STRIP A NATION LIKE THAT IN WINTER.

BUT THE APPEALS ALSO WERE CALCULATED TO PREPARE THE PUBLIC FOR BAD NEWS OF THE TERRIBLE REVERSES INFLICTED ON GERMAN ARMS IN RUSSIA AND LIBYA. AT LONG LAST HITLER HAS ADMITTED THAT HE IS FACING "AN ENEMY WHO IS SUPERIOR IN NUMBERS AND IN MATERIAL ON THE FRONT." AND GOEBBELS HAS IMPRESSED THE PUBLIC WITH THE PROSPECT OF A LONG AND BITTER WAR, IN WHICH GERMANY CANNOT AVOID "CERTAIN REVERSES."

Churchill Meets Roosevelt In Washington. Tanks, Artillery Smash At Foe In Luzon

Trip Made In Secret By Premier

Unified Plans for Defeat of Hitlerism Throughout World to Be Discussed

DEC 23 1941

May Establish Supreme Command

Lord Beaverbrook and Technical Staff With Churchill; Other Allies to Be Represented

Washington, Dec. 22.—(AP.)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill, after a secret and history-making journey, arrived in Washington today, and tonight was closeted with President Roosevelt in the White House discussing unified war plans to encompass "the defeat of Hitlerism throughout the world."

The daring trip by Britain's rotund little fighting Premier was announced by the White House, which said that Lord Beaverbrook, minister of supply, and a technical staff accompanied him.

Just how he made the journey was a military secret, although it was revealed that the last leg, at least, was by air. He was met "at a nearby airport" by President Roosevelt, and in full wartime secrecy was conducted to the White House by the Chief Executive himself, there to be the guest of Mr. Roosevelt.

The Prime Minister, it was said, was wearing a reefer, presumably his familiar pea jacket, and a cap.

Parley Aims.

There was widespread speculation that the conferences would cover such questions as:

Establishment of a supreme command for the fighting forces of all of Hitler's opponents.

Establishment of a joint ministry of supply for all the armies.

In a statement, President Roosevelt said there was one primary objective, the defeat of Hitlerism throughout the world, in conversations to be held during the next few days between President and Prime Minister and the respective staffs of the two countries.

The statement said these conferences should be regarded as preliminary to further parleys which will officially include Russia, China, the Netherlands and the British dominions.

"It is expected," the President said, "that there will thus be evolved an over-all unity in the conduct of the war. Other nations will be asked to participate to the best of their ability in the over-all objective.

White House Announcement.

Here is the text of the White House announcement:

"There is, of course, one primary objective in the conversations to be held during the next few days between the President and the British Prime Minister and the respective staffs of the two countries. That purpose is the defeat of Hitlerism throughout the world.

"It should be remembered that many other nations are engaged today in this common task. Therefore, the present conferences in Washington should be regarded as preliminary to further conferences which will officially include Russia, China, the Netherlands and the Dominions. It is expected that there will thus be evolved an over-all unity in the conduct of the war. Other nations will be asked to participate to the best of their ability in the over-all objective.

"It is probable that no further announcements will be made until the end of the present conferences, but it may be assumed that the other interested nations will be kept in close touch with this preliminary planning."

Talk With Other Allies.

Earlier in the day, the Chief Executive had consulted in turn with the Russian and Chinese ambassadors to the United States and The Netherlands minister.

Stephen Early, presidential press secretary, gave out the dramatic news of the second meeting of the President and Prime Minister in less than six months. They conferred somewhere at sea last August, when they drew up an eight-point "Atlantic charter" outlining their objectives and post-war aims.

The entire personnel of the British mission was not immediately announced. Lord Beaverbrook, it was recalled, headed the British delegation in Moscow at which plans for Anglo-American aid to Russia were drafted this fall.

DEC 23 1941

Details of Trip Secret.

Whether Churchill and his party made the entire trip by plane also was not revealed. Early said merely that the Prime Minister had arrived in Washington by air and was met at a nearby airport by the President. This meeting apparently took place in mid-afternoon, as was indicated by activity around the White House.

But an announcement was withheld until tonight, when word of Churchill's arrival was released by Early in one White House office while Sir Gerald Campbell, director general of the British Information Service in the United States, in another White House office, was flashing word to London by transatlantic telephone.

The meetings between Mr. Roosevelt and the Prime Minister are expected to be the first step in drafting unified war strategy for the Allies battling the Axis powers.

The White House had announced Saturday that joint planning for unity of action had been underway for some time with the British and would be extended to Russia, China, the Netherlands and other governments engaged in the common cause of defeating the Axis.

Rumors had circulated for a week that the coordination of war efforts probably would bring Churchill and a staff of experts to Washington. The Prime Minister had been missing from London for some days, as he had been prior to his other momentous meeting with the President on American and British battleships last summer.

Throughout the day, an air of tension was apparent throughout the White House, and the press room and lobby were crowded with reporters, radiomen, and photographers.

Campbell and an assistant, Robin G. Cruikshank, had been in and out of the executive offices at least three times, giving a further clue to the imminence of a sizable news break.

White House Guest.

Tonight, Churchill was the guest of the President in the White House. It appeared likely that for the time being the chiefs of government of the two great English-speaking nations, allied in a war for the second time in a generation, would carry on their conversations alone. Just when their staffs would be brought in was not readily apparent.

During the Atlantic conferences last summer, American officials conferred individually and in groups with corresponding British officials, and it was considered likely a similar pattern might be followed again.

The way had been paved for Churchill's arrival in recent meetings between Mr. Roosevelt and the British ambassador, Lord Halifax. Yesterday and the preceding Sunday, the envoy came to the White House. Neither time was there an official announcement of his visit.

Many Questions.

Many questions of tremendous import, including the creation of a supreme war council representing nations battling the Axis, are believed certain to be discussed by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

Discussions designed to convene a conference of the anti-Axis powers here, to take effective steps to smash Axis aggression and provide "a better future for the world," have been under way since the day of Japan's treacherous attacks on American outposts in the Pacific.

While the United States, Great Britain and Soviet Russia are bearing the brunt of Axis attacks and must provide most of the offensive power now and in the future, all anti-Axis nations with independent fighting forces are expected to play important roles in the discussions.

China has valiantly battled against Japanese aggression for more than four years, forcing Japan to use up vital military supplies, taking a fearful toll of Jpanese dead and wounded, and making it impossible for substantial numbers of Japanese troops to be withdrawn from the China front.

The Netherlands, fighting to protect the rich East Indies, are a major factor in beating off Janesese attacks throughout the south Pacific.

Australia, India, New Zealand and Canada have all contributed liberally to the joint British empire war effort.

An urgent decision before the anti-Axis powers is coordination of their military, naval and economic strength, particularly in the Pacific, to achieve the greatest possible striking power to smash Japanese aggression.

World-Wide Strategy.

While the world-wide scale of Axis attacks will make it necessary for the conference to consider world-wide strategy it is expected that, in view of the immediate threat to the Philippines, Singapore, and the East Indies, the Pacific theater of war will play a major role in the deliberations.

Although the Soviet Union has not engaged in the Pacific sector, Ambassador Maxim Litvinoff has made Russia's position clear with his declaration that Japan is "the common enemy" belonging to "the same bunch of Axis gangsters."

That statement echoes the often expressed opinion of President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill.

Whether the Soviet should assume an active fighting role in the Pacific or concentrate on smashing Hitler's war machine on the Eastern Front is expected to be considered at the conferences.

Litvinoff has emphasized that with the world divided into many separate battlefields the anti-Axis powers will unquestionably reach an agreement as to where each should concentrate its striking power to smash Axis forces, the decision to be made in the interests of "the common cause."

Several other major questions of policy and strategy may be on the conference's agenda, including:

Advisability of establishing a unified war council to chart world-wide strategy.

Coordination of all economic affairs so as to insure maximum production of weapons and supplies and their efficient distribution.

Bulwarking of Turkey and other neutral nations which have, up to the present, successfully resisted Nazi pressure, the dangerous positions in which unoccupied France (with strategic bases in Africa) and Portugal (with strategic island colonies in the Atlantic and territory next door to belligerents in the Pacific) have been placed, may also become major topics.

Premier's Trip Is Big Surprise To Most Britons

Great Importance Given To Move To Strengthen Allied Command

London, Tuesday, Dec. 23 (AP)—Winston Churchill's presence in Washington to participate in unification of allied war strategy came as a bigger surprise today to most Britons than his Atlantic rendezvous with President Roosevelt—and it was considered much more important to the average man.

30.24 — 13695

Clamor for a full alliance and supreme war council among anti-Axis powers grew steadily in the British press after the Japanese attacks until editorial writers learned negotiations were in progress for just such action.

The tumult since has tapered off, but it is plain the British generally haven't changed their minds. There is no doubt that close integration of allied efforts at present is the most cherished of immediate war aims here.

The pressing need for joint and effective action against the Japanese in the Pacific is stressed emphatically in all quarters.

It is believed quick steps toward complete unified action in the Pacific might allay rising concern both in Britain and Australia over British withdrawal in Malaya.

DEC 23 1941

Caustic references to repeated official reports of big reinforcements reaching Singapore last autumn are appearing with greater frequency in British newspapers as the Japanese drive southward against retreating British forces.

British authorities were silent on the situation but many Englishmen feel the demands of the Libyan campaign, the Malayan retreat and the loss of the battleship Prince of Wales and the battle cruiser Repulse put Britain at such a disadvantage in the Pacific that she must rely upon the United States and the Dutch East Indies to carry a considerable part of the fighting there for a few weeks at least.

A big German air assault upon the Mediterranean fleet and more heavy fighting in North Africa—both freely predicted here—would tend to isolate Britain even more from her Far Eastern outposts, thus increasing the necessity for joint command of the Pacific theater virtually independent of controls from London.

German Guesses About Churchill Warm, Then Cool

New York, Dec. 22 (AP)—The Germans did considerable guessing and got pretty warm on the whereabouts of Prime Minister Churchill before his presence in Washington was announced by the White House. But their last guess was among the farthest afield, placing him down in the Middle East, thousands of miles from where he is tonight.

For three days the German radio has been throwing out broad reports concerning the whereabouts of Churchill and hinting that he was either in Washington or Moscow.

Apparently the Germans were not very sure of their information, however, and were chiefly hopeful of smoking out something definite, for at 3:15 p. m., E.S.T., today, they abandoned this story less than four hours before its confirmation in Washington, and reported from Stockholm that "diplomatic opinion is increasingly voiced that Churchill is in the Middle East."

This report, as well as most of those preceding it, were broadcasts of Transocean, German news agency, which cited Stockholm as the source.

A chronological account of these broadcasts follows:

Friday, Dec. 19, 8:14 a. m., E.S.T.: Transocean: "Parliamentary and political circles in London are asking themselves what Churchill is doing and where he is presently to be found. The last three days he has not been in the House of Commons and did not attend any of the debates, although some were of considerable importance. It is recalled in London that on a former occasion when he disappeared so mysteriously from London he had met Roosevelt somewhere on the Atlantic. It is asserted for instance that Churchill is not in England but somewhere abroad, either in Washington or Moscow."

The next day, Saturday, Dec. 20, the Tokyo radio and the French news agency Havas, contributed to the rumors.

A cable quoted a Havas "dispatch from Istanbul" as saying "it is reported in Turkey that Churchill shortly will go to Cairo to confer with United States Ambassador William C. Bullitt."

The Tokyo radio, which said its information came from Stockholm, said "reports arriving from London further revealed that Churchill's disappearance for the past four days has aroused a sensation with political circles opining Churchill probably is in Washington or Moscow."

Taking up today's theme that Churchill might be in Cairo, Transocean in its Stockholm report said that "it's also believed that General Wavell (British Commander in India) and Air Marshal Brooke Popham (Far Eastern Commander) have been called to Cairo to discuss further plans with Churchill. Ambassador Bullitt is taking part in these talks."

Churchill Wears Reefer And Cap to White House

Carries Blackout Stick on Arrival With Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (AP).—The President and the Prime Minister—the one in a grey business suit, the other in reefer and cap—walked together into the house the British once burned.

A little earlier, Mr. Roosevelt had met Mr. Churchill at a near-by airport and, accompanied by a Presidential naval aide and bodyguard, the two had motored to the White House.

The car slipped in through the gates on the south grounds, then rolled up at the entrance.

For a few minutes they posed there for photographers, and exchanged an occasional word as the President, grinning broadly, stood beside his naval aide, Captain John R. Beardall.

Mr. Churchill, shorter by almost a head than the President, stood at his right, his fingers firmly gripped on a walking stick to which (for purposes of London blackouts) was attached a flashlight.

He wore, as he has worn much of the time since Britain began its war more than two years ago, the coat and cap of the elder brothers of Trinity House, a semi-governmental organization concerned with life-saving and the operation of lighthouses. The coat is knee-length, double-breasted, buttoned high in seaman fashion. The cap bears the insignia of the organization.

The pictures taken, the two turned away, Mr. Churchill clamped his cigar back in his mouth and then trudged into the White House—painted white to cover up the marks of the fire when another British mission arrived for a different purpose in the War of 1812.

Churchill to Bear Out Words of '32 in Deeds

WASHINGTON, Dec. 22 (AP).—In February, 1932, Winston Churchill, British newspaper man and lecturer, was in Washington on a lecture tour of the United States.

In his talk here he asserted that "a financial, economic, military and political agreement between the United States and Great Britain is the best guaranty for a solidly established world peace."

Today the Right Honorable Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill, Prime Minister of Great Britain, came back to Washington to translate words into action.

President Holds Unity Talks

DEC 23 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 22—In conferences with the Russian, Chinese and Netherlands envoys to the United States, President Roosevelt today took preliminary steps in "joint planning for unity of action" by the countries combatting the Axis.

The President scheduled talks separately with Maxim Litvinoff, the Russian Ambassador; Dr. Hu Shih, the Chinese Ambassador, and A. Loudon, the Netherlands Minister.

He saw Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador, yesterday.

The White House said that all these conferences were in line with an announcement Saturday night that Britain and the United States already had taken steps toward coordination of the war effort and that joint planning for unity of action would be extended to Russia, China, the Netherlands and other governments engaged in the common cause of defeating the Axis.

Stephan Early, Presidential secretary, remarked of today's conferences, however, that they were of a "very preliminary" nature.

Litvinoff, first of the Allied diplomats on the White House engagement list, spent less than half an hour with Mr. Roosevelt and departed without divulging any information to reporters.

U.S. Tanks Attack Tokyo Force Put At 40,000

DEC 23 1941

By Clark Lee

Associated Press Foreign Correspondent

Manila, Dec. 22—Hard-fighting American and Filipino soldiers are more than holding their own against thousands of Japanese soldiers unloaded from eighty transports off the Lingayen gateway to Manila, it was announced officially today.

The Far Eastern command declared tanks were being used in the heavy and bloody fighting along a stretch of sheltered coastline some 100 miles northwest of the Philippine capital. The Americans had long anticipated that the Japanese would attempt a major landing there and were waiting for it.

Some Transports Reported Sunk

While the fighting went on unabated on the shore, a spokesman at Far Eastern command headquarters said rumors were heard of the sinking of some of the Japanese transports in Lingayen Gulf. He added, however, that the rumors had not been verified, and that there had been no new advices from the northern front.

It was announced officially that at one point the Japanese attempted to land forces from the transports under protection of the guns of destroyers, but were driven off by heavy guns of the United States Far Eastern Army and a landing prevented.

Text Of Communique

A communique issued at General MacArthur's headquarters at 4.50 P. M. said:

"This afternoon heavy fighting developed in the north, including tank combat.

"Our troops more than held their own.

"At one point Japanese destroyers and transports were driven off by our heavy guns and that landing was prevented.

"Our troops are behaving well."

Japanese "In Great Force"

At 4.25 P. M. a spokesman for MacArthur had announced that the Japanese had landed along the Gulf of Lingayen "in great force" and that heavy fighting was in progress.

It was reported unofficially that the action was centered between the port of Lingayen, 110 miles northwest of Manila, and the town of Agoo, twenty miles north of Lingayen.

The spokesman said the Japanese transports suddenly steamed up off the Gulf of Lingayen this morning.

Earlier Invasion Try Foiled

Military observers said they did not know the size of the transports, but they estimated that eighty ships could carry between 30,000 and 50,000 men.

Whether the Japanese succeeded in getting heavy equipment ashore was not known either.

Both American and Filipino troops were battling the invasion attempts. Some of these same Filipinos were in the division which wiped out a Japanese landing party in the same area during the first week of the war.

2 Possible Routes To Manila

(There are two possible routes from Lingayen to Manila. A railroad and highway network runs down the interior directly between the two cities. It is flanked on each side by rugged mountains.

(An alternate route is a coastal highwa yfrom Lingayen around the northern tip of mountains in western Luzon and thence down the shore to Manila.)

The Far Eastern command earlier had reported than the Japanese at Vigan, 200 miles north of Manila and up the western coast from Lingayen and Agoo, were thrusting southward. (This action apparently had been timed form a junction with the troops landing today.)

"Undoubtedly Major Drive"

The appearance of the Japanese in the Lingayen area was the closest to Manila that a large hostile force had penetreated since the United States won the Philippines at the turn of the century.

The United States Far Eastern command announced the presence of the force in this communique issued at 11.15 A. M.

"There was sighted this morning off Lingayen Gulf a huge enemy fleet estimated at eighty transports. Undoubtedly this is a major expeditionary drive being aimed at the Philippines."

Nichols Field Bombed Again

While the action off Lingayen was developing, and perhaps in concert with it, Japanese planes raided Manila twice today.

The first raider, six planes which ew in high at 7.42 A. M., dropped the heaviest bombs yet felt in the capital, but is was said that only slight damage was done. Most of the bombs fell harmlessly in the harbor.

The army announced that Nichols Field was bombed.

That raid lasted only thirty-two minutes and the raiders were greeted by a barrage of anti-aircraft fire.

Second Raid Brief

The second attack came at 1.20 P. M. Hhree bombers, flying so high that they could not be seen by the unaided eye, unloaded a few bombs and flew north toward Lingayen.

Military circles said the Japanese appeared to be using bombs three times the size of those dropped during the first two weeks of the war.

With at least three air bases now established on Luzon Island—presumably at Vigan, Aparri and Legaspi—the Japanese planes are able to carry bigger loads. The planes in today's first raid appeared to be three-engined bembers.

Davao Situation Uncertain

Meanwhile, the Japanese invaders at Vigan were said to be thrusting cautiously southward toward Manila, 200 miles away, and confused fighting continued on the shore of the Gulf of Davoa, on the southern edge of the Philippines.

General MacArthur's headquarters in a short morning communique said "there is continuing activity south of Vigan, but nothing serious has developed. Conflicting reports of enemy reinforcements have not yet been confirmed. No reliable information has been received from Davao."

"Open" City Attacked

MacArthur's headquarters also charged, for the first time, that the Japanese had attacked on open city from the air. It announced that the Japanese bombed Baler, on the east coast of Luzon, yesterday morning.

"Baler is an open city and there are absolutely no military objectives in that vicinity," the announcement said. "It was an inexcusable, unwarranted attack."

Newspaper dispatches said one person was killed and several wounded and several houses set on fire at Baler.

Filipino circles expressed the opinion that the attack on that town, President Quezon's birthplace, and a reported attack on Quezon's farm in Pampanga province were Japanese retaliation for recent speeches by the President reaffirming his country's loyalty to the United States.

Bitter Fighting Continues At Lingayen Gulf, Invasion Objective

DEC 23 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Manila, Tuesday, Dec. 23—A heavy force of Japanese sea-borne troops supported by airplanes landed yesterday at Santo Tomas on the Gulf of Lingayen, 110 miles northwest of here, but Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters announced that American defenders had the situation "well in hand."

American tanks and artillery immediately went into action between Santo Tomas and Damortis, a town several miles south of the landing place.

[Washington already had announced that the fighting centered in the twenty-mile coastal stretch along the gulf northward to Agoo, which is just north of Santo Tomas.]

Enemy Sinkings Reported

The army communique said:

"The engagement yesterday occurred in the vicinity of Santo Tomas, La Union province. Latest reports indicate our troops are holding a position north of Damortis. The enemy was very active in the air yesterday. Numerous places were bombed and the ground attack was supported by aircraft."

One unconfirmed report from Dagupan on the gulf said that at least three Japanese transports out of the eighty which had been sighted outside were sunk in the gulf itself.

Reliable sources said it was possible that many more had been destroyed by the American forces, who were using artillery and tanks against the landing parties.

U. S. Tanks In Action

It still was not known whether the Japanese had been able to bring any considerable amount of equipment ashore.

Although American tanks already had gone into action, it also was not clear whether the Japanese intended to unload all of the eighty transports in Lingayen Gulf, or try to shove shock forces ashore elsewhere during the night.

An army spokesman said no reports had been received from Davao on Mindanao Island about the progress of the hard fighting there.

The prolonged silence about the far southern theater indicated that communications may have been cut.

Some Casualties Reported

A score or more of Filipino army recruits under training at Camp Murphy were reported to have been killed by Japanese air bombs. Several score were injured, newspaper dispatches said.

General MacArthur's communique late yesterday said that the ground forces in the Lingayen area "more than held their own," and the general added, "Our troops are behaving well."

Long-Expected Effort

The struggle was joined in an area which MacArthur long had anticipated as the focal point of the major Japanese effort; for unofficially, the battle was reported as centered in the twenty-mile coastal stretch along the Gulf of Lingayen extending northward from the port of Lingayen to the town of Agoo.

The Lingayen coastal area commands two approaches to Manila—one, a flat interior corridor averaging some forty miles in width over which railroad and road communication runs down to Manila; the other an indirect highway from Lingayen which loops around the northern end of the mountains of western Luzon, then turns southward toward Manila.

Detailed Action Reported

General MacArthur's full communique of 4.50 P. M. yesterday thus told the story:

"This afternoon heavy fighting developed in the north, including tank combat.

"Our troops more than held their own.

"At one point Japanese destroyers and transports were driven off by our heavy guns and that landing was prevented."

One of the general's spokesmen remarked in supplement that the news at hand was "good news."

A Spectacular Test

The picture thus drawn, one of struggling men and charging tanks, was perhaps the most spectacular test of arms ever seen in a concentrated area in the Far East.

[In Washington the War Department's communique for Monday morning reported that the Japanese fleet of eighty transports had been under strong naval and air escort and had thrown forth a large number of 150-man barges. "Some of them," it added, "succeeded in getting ashore. The attempted invasion is being met with fierce resistance by American and Filipino troops."]

General MacArthur's morning communique announced that reliable information had not yet been received from the far southern Philippine sector of Davao, on Mindanao Island, more than 500 miles south of Manila.

Activity At Vigan

It stated also that while there was continuing activity south of Vigan, one of the three initial Japanese beachheads on northwestern Luzon, reports of enemy reinforcements were conflicting and had not been confirmed.

[The War Department's Monday morning communique said of Davao only that there was continued fighting and that in other sectors, aside from Lingayen, renewed patrol activity had been reported.]

Japanese bombers attacked Manila twice today, but only in small force. The first group numbered six raiders; the second only three.

Japanese Report Major Invasion Of Philippines

Tokyo, Dec. 22—(Official Broadcast Recorded by AP)—Japanese imperial headquarters declared today that large numbers of sea-borne Japanese troops had landed since early morning on Luzon with the support of the Japanese navy in a major invasion of the Philippines.

Domei reported that while military operations continued against the Philippines, battered Hongkong and Malaya, the Japanese army had undertaken a new offensive against the Chinese.

The attack, which Domei said was started Saturday night, was described as a general push against Chekiang, Anhwei, Kiangsi and Pukien provinces.

The Japanese said mopping-up operations had been completed on the island of Guam, captured from the United States in the first week of the war.

Heavy Fighting Rages On Gulf Of Lingayen

A map and a Behind-the-News story on the Philippine Islands will be found on Page 26. Another map on Page 2.

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 22—The War Department estimated today that from 80,000 to 100,000 Japanese troops, comprising six to eight divisions, were taking part in the new onslaught on the island of Luzon in the Philippines.

A communique reported heavy fighting on Lingayen Gulf, 150 miles north of Manila, where the Japanese are attempting a landing. After a fleet of about eighty troopships under strong naval and air escort appeared off Luzon's west coast, a large number of 150-man barges, attempting landings in the vicinity of Agoo, entered Lingayen Gulf.

"Some of them succeeded in getting ashore," the communique said, adding that "the attempted invasion is being met with fierce resistance by American and Filipino troops."

Fighting was reported to be continuing near Davao on the island of Mindanao more than 500 miles south of Manila.

All-Out Battle Foreseen

The huge Nipponese fleet meant only one thing to Washington—that Japan was in great haste to deliver a knockout blow, regardless of the cost.

The new move against Luzon caused a certain uneasiness here on more than one score, for it obviously indicated that the Japanese considered themselves more than equal to any naval or aerial opposition. Otherwise, service men here said, it would be suicidal to mass such an amount of shipping into a huge target for warships and planes.

A distinct possibility of an all-out land, sea and air battle was therefore envisaged. The United States Asiatic Fleet, which has been operating in Philippine waters, is believed to be intact and ready. Similarly, the air force is still in being. And Gen. Douglas A. MacArthur has long been confident of the ability of the land forces to repel a full-dress invasion attempt.

Previous Attempt Smashed

The Capital found some assurance in the fact that one previous Japanese attempt to land at Lingayen was hurled back into the South China Sea with heavy losses.

However, there were other things about the Philippine situation that were disquieting.

Advices from Manila indicated that the Japanese had been able to develop substantial airfields at the three beachheads they already hold on Luzon, for heavy bombers were now operating from them and dropping larger bombs on the Philippine capital than in earlier raids. The development of these fields, it was noted, promised the new invasion drive the support of land-based planes.

Uncertainty Over Davao

Then there was the uncertainty which shrouded the tide of battle on Mindanao Island, where Japanese landed from four transports Saturday. An army communique has described the Mindanao situation as "obscure," attributing the lack of information to communication difficulties.

Thus Christmas week opened for the nation with a grimness that was not diminished by the knowledge that Axis submarines were operating off both the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts.

Meanwhile, the durable United States marines on Wake Island stood their ground as firmly as ever. The island base underwent two more pastings from enemy aircraft, but the leathernecks still held out.

LINGAYEN CONSIDERED GOOD INVASION SPOT

This has Long been the Opinion of Military Men

Manila, Dec. 22—(AP)—The sheltered, rice-growing area of Lingayen, 110 miles northwest of Manila, long had been considered by military men as the most likely spot for an attempted major invasion effort of Luzon Island.

The port of Lingayen, with a population of approximately 23,000, is the area's chief city. It lies on the south shore of the gulf and on a low island in the delta of the Agno river.

The gulf is fairly shallow but has deep channels and a number of fine ports.

DEC 23 1941

Another important town on the gulf is Damortis, a railroad terminal with bus connections with the summer capital at Baguio. Damortis also controls rail lines leading north through the Ilocos region and south to Manila.

South of Lingayen the countryside is flat, and is devoted mostly to rice growing.

The farming country is flanked both westward and eastward by rugged mountains.

would come at Lingayen.

Likewise it was anticipated that an enemy might attempt a landing on the coast of Zambales province, northwest of Manila, and attempt to drive across the rugged Zambales Peninsula in the direction of town of Tarlic about 70 miles north of Manila.

Such a force serve as the other jaw of a pincers movement against MacArthur's forces defending the valley north of Manila which forms the main avenue of approach to the capital.

Soon after hostilities started, it was noted here, a large Japanese naval force appeared off the Zambales coast in the vicinity of the town of Iba, but withdrew without attempting to put troops ashore. Iba is about 80 miles northwest of Manila.

From the Iba vicinity, no main roads lead across rugged hill jungles to Tarlic but an improved highway extends southward to Subic Bay on which is situated Olongapo, a secondary base for Admiral Thomas C. Hart's Asiatic fleet.

With the Japanese apparently following closely pre-conceived American notions of what strategy an enemy would employ, the developing attack may be expected to test not only the mettle of the Philippine-American defenders but also well-prepared strategic plans for dealing with such assaults.

These plans are, naturally, secret as are the military resources available to General MacArthur.

The Japanese attack came before MacArthur had been able to complete long-range plans for defense of the islands, but it may not be amiss to recall an estimate he once made of what price an enemy would have to pay—once the defense program had been completed—to take the Philippines.

It would cost, he declared, half a million men, ten billion dollars, enormous casualties and three years' time.

MacArthur never had a chance to finish his program, but the belief here was that the price still was high—higher, in fact, than the Japanese have anticipated.

Strategists Say Japs Must Pay Dearly For Philippines

DEC 23 1941

Washington, Dec. 22 (AP) — The Japanese attack in force on the Gulf of Lingayen, 110 miles north of Manila, was regarded in military circles here as possibly the first prong of a powerful pincers attack on Gen. Douglas MacArthur's main defense Army.

"War."

U. S. Flyer Is Saved From Savages When They See His Hair

Manila, Tuesday, Dec. 23 (AP)—One American pilot who bailed out of his plane over the wild mountains of central Luzon, inhabited by fierce Kalinga tribesmen, literally escaped death by a hair—or rather a head of hair.

Floating to earth, the pilot saw a whole village of Kalinga tribesmen, who seldom are able to distinguish among foreigners, shouting and waving their spears and bolos.

The pilot didn't speak the dialect. Besides he knew there wouldn't be much chance for conversation, since Japanese air bombs already had killed several Kalingas.

But as he hit the ground the Kalingas lowered their spears. This intruder definitely was not a Japanese—he had a shock of flaming red hair.

U. S. Pilot Fired On By Jap Flyers While 'Chuting From Sky

DEC 23 1941

New York, Dec. 22 (AP)—Lieut. Walter Cross, a United States Army pilot, said tonight on a CBS broadcast from Manila that Japanese airmen, after crippling his pursuit plane over northern Luzon, continued to machine-gun him as he took to his parachute and even after he had landed in the middle of a river and was swimming ashore.

The aim of his assailants, however, was poor, said the pilot, and his only injury was a pair of blistered feet in an eight-day hike back to Manila through mountainous terrain inhabited only by savage tribesmen.

N. Y. Airport May Bear Name Of Hero In War

Capt. Colin Kelly, Jr., Who Sank Jap Battleship Haruna, May Be Memorialized

New York, Dec. 22 (AP)—The city may name its proposed municipal airport on Jamaica Bay Colin Kelly Airport in honor of Capt. Colin P. Kelly, Jr., army pilot who was killed while sinking the Japanese battleship Haruna.

Councilman Anthony J. Digiovanna said he would introduce such a resolution tomorrow.

The new airport will cover 1,200 acres, an area twice as large as La-Guardia Field.

BERLIN, Dec. 22 (Official broadcast recorded by AP)—Japanese newspaper Nichi Nichi was quoted tonight as saying that in one of the first Japanese attacks on Clark Field near Manila 17 American four-motored bombers were destroyed.

West Point Special Order Praises Kelly's Heroism

By The Associated Press.

WEST POINT, N. Y., Dec. 22—The United States Military Academy is "justly proud" of Captain Colin P. Kelly, an alumnus, who gave his life to destroy a Japanese battleship and thus became the first American hero of the war, Major Gen. Robert L. Eichelberger, academy superintendent, said today in a special order. The order said:

"In the performance of his heroic feat he went to his death buoyed up by that courage for which he had often prayed—courage that is born of loyalty to all that is noble and worthy and that knows no fear when truth and right are in jeopardy.

"His alma mater is justly proud of him for his supreme sacrifice, where, in the performance of his duty, he has maintained the highest traditions of the Military Academy and the United States Army.

"For those of us who live by the academy motto he has proven afresh the practical force of those ideals which prompted him: Duty, Honor, Country."

Americans Down 6 Japs In China

[By the Associated Press]

Chungking, Dec. 21 (Delayed)—Six out of ten Japanese planes engaged by flyers of the American volunteers group in their first battle were shot down, a communique issued in Kunming reported today.

The battle occurred Saturday. Previous reports had given four as the number of planes shot down. The defenders suffered no losses.

Twelve Missionaries In Pacific Area 'Safe'

Forty-Two Others Not Heard From Since Outbreak Of War

DEC 23 1941

Nashville, Tenn., Dec. 22 (AP)—Twelve Southern Presbyterian missionaries in the Philippines and Hawaii have reported they are safe, but forty-two in Japanese-dominated areas have not been heard from since the outbreak of war, the board of missions of the Presbyterian Church, United States, revealed today.

Dr. C. Darby Fulton, executive secretary of the board, said cable queries to the board's six missionaries in China, four in Korea and thirty-three in occupied China remained unanswered.

Reports relayed from other mission boards on general conditions in occupied China, however, were "rather reassuring" as to the safety of the Southern Presbyterian missionaries there, he added.

British Beat Off Part Of Japs At Hongkong, Says Chinese Report

Chungking, Tuesday, Dec. 23 (AP)—Chinese central headquarters on the Canton front reported today part of the Japanese troops which landed on Hongkong Island have been driven off by the British defenders.

London, Tuesday, Dec. 23 (AP)—Hongkong's beleaguered defenders were reported early today still to be maintaining communication twice a day with London and Chungking by means of hidden radio stations.

Besides the island's defenders, M. Chai, chief secretary of the Chinese Embassy, said there were 3,000 white women and children who stayed and are now living in caves burrowed deep in the sides of Victoria Peak. All, he said, are well supplied with food and water.

British Believed Still Holding Hongkong Peaks

DEC 23 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 22—Weary British Empire soldiers defending rock-hewn strongholds on the peaks of Hongkong were believed today still battling the heavy odds of Japanese land, air and naval power in the last bit of Britain in China.

A British military commentator at noon said "it is believed Hongkong still is holding out," but he said he lacked definite confirmation.

No Help Held

The last announced word from the Crown colony—received here yesterday—showed that the garrison was putting up a game and stubborn fight against the Japanese. But with all the resistance it could give, no hope was held here that the Japanese would be driven back and the Crown colony saved.

(The conquest ol Hongkong virtually has been completed, Domei, Japanese news agency, reported in a broadcast from Tokyo. It said British resistance now was confined chiefly to street fighting and guerrilla warfare.

King Sends Praise

("The wiping out of the last vestige of British imperialism in China is in its final stage," Domei said.

(The agency claimed the Japanese controlled the island's main communication center and all strategic military points.)

Messages of praise from King George VI, Colonial Secretary Lord Moyne and other officials were sent to Governor and Commander in Chief Sir Mark Young at Hongkong. The Governor himself exhorted his men to hold fast, saying "the eyes of the empire are upon you! Be strong! Be resolute and do your duty!"

Chinese Try To Help

(Chungking reported fierce fighting around Shumchun, on the outer mainland border of Hongkong colony, where the Japanese counter-attacked Chinese troops who have been trying to relieve the pressure on Hongkong.)

Meanwhile, the British, an an eight-point statement answering Portugese Premier Antonio De Oliveiro Salazar, said Australian and Dutch troops occupied the Portuguese section of Timor only after Japanese submarines were sighted in the immediate vicinity and Japanese attack appeared imminent.

British Defend Move

The Portuguese Premier told the national assembly Friday that Timor had been occupied before any threat of attack materialized and while Portugal was discussing a common defense.

The British said it has become clear from this war that "if defensive action is delayed until an attack has actually developed it is likely to be too late."

London, Dec. 22 (A. P.).—The Japanese were being held at Hongkong up to late afternoon Sunday despite furious assaults, the Colonial Office said today.

The brief announcement was based on a message from Sir Mark Young, Governor of Hongkong, which was issued in the embattled island at 5:30 P. M., Sunday, Hongkong time (4:30 A. M., Sunday, Eastern standard time).

The Colonial Office said its information was based on excerpts from this communique which said, "The enemy has been very active all day" but "is being held."

A Singapore broadcast said Hongkong's defenses apparently still were holding today.

Plucky Resistance.

With all the resistance that weary British Empire soldiers can put up against overwhelming odds, however, no hope was held here that the Crown Colony could be saved.

Messages of praise from King George VI, Colonial Secretary Lord Moyne and other officials were sent to Governor and Commander-in-Chief Sir Mark Young at Hongkong. The Governor himself exhorted his men to hold fast, saying "The eyes of the Empire are upon you! Be strong! Be resolute and do your duty!"

GRIM JUNGLE FIGHT LOOMS IN MALAYA

British Form New Lines For All-Out Protection Of Singapore

DEC 23 1941

Siege Of Hongkong Grows Stronger—Hope Lags Among Defenders

By Alfred Wall

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 22—The lines for a grim struggle for Singapore took shape tonight in the jungles of northern Malaya, but Britain's heart still was with the embattled defenders of Hongkong, sticking defiantly by their guns in the face of a seemingly hopeless fate.

The latest word from the island came from the enemy and these reports, from Tokyo by way of Berlin, admitted that the crown colony's garrison still was fighting late Monday and that there was no respite for the Japanese attackers.

20,000 Fight Stubbornly

Although almost every anti-aircraft battery was reported silenced as Japanese bombers methodically carried out their missions overhead and the Japanese navy had ringed the island, these reports acknowledged that a fighting garrison of 20,000 British Empire troops remained to be subdued.

Japanese land and naval artillery, they declared, have kept parts of the island coast under constant fire.

British sources expressed belief that Hongkong still was in the throes of a last-ditch fight, but they said disrupted communications blacked the island out after receipt of fragments of a communique which said the Japanese were "being held" up to late Sunday afternoon.

British Are Doubtful

This report from Sir Mark Young, Hongkong's Governor, declared the Japanese were "very active all day," but British sources were doubtful that the defense could last long.

The Governor's words, some Britons thought, may have meant that the invaders were being made to pay dearly. But others said the Japanese merely may have been proceeding cautiously to win the island at a minimum cost.

A Domei broadcast from Tokyo said British resistance now was limited mostly to street fighting and guerrilla warfare, and that "the wiping out of the last vestige of British imperialism in China is in its final stage."

Air War Stepped Up

Stepped-up air activity on both sides marked the start of a new phase of the Malayan struggle as the British, having absorbed the first impact of the enemy thrust, straightened a cross-peninsula line about 300 miles north of Singapore.

An RAF attack Sunday on a Japanese air base in eastern Thailand, it was announced, was delivered from treetop heights and not one Japanese plane on the field escaped destruction.

A Singapore communique said six other Japanese planes were put out of commission in a raid on a Japanese-occupied airfield in northern Malaya.

Losses About Even

It acknowledged that three British planes were missing and said also the Japanese had lost three, shot down by British fighters and anti-aircraft fire, over Kuala Lumpur, midway between Singapore and the fighting front.

At one point on the new British line imperial forces were said to have recoiled in a heavy smash at Japanese forces massing somewhere on the highway leading south from Grik for a push toward the important, tin-mining center of Ioph.

British sources said withdrawal to the line, which apparently stretches eastward to Kuala Krai from the region of Kuala Kangsar, about twenty miles north of Ipoh on the west side of the peninsula, was accomplished successfully.

Scorched-Earth Policy

Before the Japanese occupied Penang Island, British evacuating the island outpost off the Malayan west coast destroyed the tin smelting works and powerhouse, an authoritative source said, and "completely applied" the scorched-earth policy to anything else the Japanese might have found useful.

This information, which he said came from Singapore, followed publication in London of Singapore dispatches asserting that valuable works were left untouched.

Severe Blows Delivered On Foe, Dutch Chief Says

Batavia, Dec. 22 (AP)—Lieut. Gen. Hein Ter Poorten, commander in chief of the Netherlands' Indies army, told his troops today that "we already have inflicted severe blows upon the enemy."

He declared the army was prepared for any eventuality and felt "a certain relief that we are now able to proceed into action."

In his first address of the war to the army, the commander cited German reverses in Russia and Libya as evidence that "already the tide in Europe is turning" and told his forces, "Men! The East Indies are relying on you!"

He particularly praised the work of Netherlands forces against the Japanese invaders of Miri, Sarawak, in the British portion of the island of Borneo, and warned that "we cannot cherish any illusion for the future" if the Japanese realize their "new-order" ambitions.

Assault Made As Japs Prepared Their Attack

DEC 23 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Singapore, Dec. 22—British forces, drawn up on a new line across the Malay Peninsula about 300 miles north of Singapore, were reported today to have smashed heavily at Japanese forces gathering for a push toward the important tin-mining center of Ipoh.

The battle, a communique said, took place somewhere on the main highway leading south from Grik, where the Japanese had been using the Perak river to move up reinforcements by raft.

"Our troops engaged the enemy and inflicted heavily casualties," the bulletin declared.

330 Miles From City

It indicated that the new British line was anchored on the west side of the peninsula in the vicinity of Kuala Kangsar, about twenty miles north of Ipoh and approximately 330 miles from Singapore.

From Kuala Kangsar the front apparently extended eastward through Kuala Krai, which is situated on the central Malayan railroad about forty-five miles south of Kota Bharu, where the Japanese made their initial landing on the coast December 8.

Withdrawal to this line, the British said, was effected successfully despite attempted Japanese interference in the air and on the land, the "greater part of the British forces and the majority of stores and equipment" being brought out in a series of night movements.

Converted Ship Lost

"Loss of airdrome facilities in northern Kelantan and the vulnerbility of communications" prompted a decision several days ago to make this withdrawal, an announcement yesterday said.

The British thus htd surrendered Perak State, Wellesley Province and the off-shore island of Penang to the invaders.

A communique yesterday disclosed loss of the 623-ton converted merchantman Banka somewhere off Malaya, with four officers and forty Malayan crewmen, but did not say how the vessel was sunk. Six of the crew were saved.

Malayan Troops Take Heavy Toll Of Jap Invaders

Singapore, Dec. 22 (AP)—British Malayan troops inflicted heavy casualties on the Japanese in another sharp jungle fight about 330 miles above Singapore, and the R.A.F. smashed nine Japanese planes in two air actions, it was announced officially tonight.

The British were said to be holding firmly in new positions anchored apparently in the west at Kuala Kangsar, 20 miles north of the tin mining center of Ipoh, and extending eastward to a point some 45 miles south of Kota Bharu where the Japanese made their first landing on the peninsula Dec. 8.

The new engagement occurred yesterday on the Grik-Kuala Kangsar Highway in an area where the British said the Japanese were using rafts to ferry reinforcements down the Perak River from the north.

British defenses apparently ran irregularly through the swamps south of the Perak River and over the mountains to the east.

While Ipoh is only about 20 air miles from Kuala Kangsar, the road and rail route between the two points is 50 miles.

British planes attacking a Japanese airfield in the north were said to have put six enemy aircraft out of commission.

Three other planes were shot down in a Japanese attack on Kuala Lumpur, a railway point between Ipoh and Singapore.

The British lost three planes in this second fight, the communique said.

Singapore had a short alert tonight with some searchlight activity and a few anti-aircraft bursts but apparently no bombs were dropped.

Batavia dispatches said that Dutch Army planes were supporting the R.A.F. in Malaya, and Lieut.-Gen. Hein Ter Poorten, Commander-In-Chief of The Netherlands Indies Army, told his troops that "we already have inflicted severe blows upon the enemy."

The commander praised particularly the effective Dutch blows against the Japanese invaders of Miri, Sarawak, on Borneo Island, and pointed to German reverses in Russia and Libya as proof that "already the tide in Europe is turning" against the Axis.

Royal Engineers Ruined Pipe Lines, Refineries And Burned Fuel

Troops Held Off Enemy Until All Damage Had Been Done

[By the Associated Press]

Singapore, Dec. 22—Brawny demolitionists who scorched the earth and burned the oil of Sarawak and Brunei arrived today from the Japanese-invaded Borneo states with a stirring account of their escape under air attack.

These men of the Royal Engineers said they began putting the torch to wells, pipe lines, pumping stations and refineries a few days after war broke out.

Troops Held Off Foe

While they were systematically destroying the oil, British and Indian troops, barefoot native volunteers and rangers, manned defenses against the anticipated Japanese assault.

When satisfied that the Japanese would get no oil from the Miri area, the British units embarked aboard three small vessels, one of them the White Rajah's own yacht.

That was a few hours before the Japanese got there, but Nipponese airmen spotted them and kept them under attack for two days. No bombs hit their targets but the British commander was killed by machine-gunning.

Batavia, Dutch East Indies, Dec. 22.—(AP)—Lt. Gen. Hein Ter Poorten, commander in chief of the Netherlands Indies Army, told his troops today that "we already have inflicted severe blows upon the enemy."

Term 'China' Offends Japs

Tokyo, Dec. 22 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A. P.)—The term "China" will be deleted from the Japanese language if the "Society for Middle Kingdom Good Will" has its way, Domei said in a broadcast.

Leaders of the society have visited the Foreign, Education and six other Ministries to present their contention that the name "China" should be replaced by "Middle Kingdom."

Termed A Disgrace

The current Japanese word for China, they said, "is derived from the Anglo-American term for chinaware, and it is truly disgraceful that such a great nation should be called by such a name."

Actually, the English word "China" is believed to be an Occidental corruption of the name of the Chin Dynasty which ruled in the third century B. C., and whose outstanding member built the Great Wall.

It is true that the current Japanese word for China—Shina, pronounced Shee-nah—is a Japanese adaptation of the English word. Generations of Chinese have called their country the Middle Kingdom — Chung-kuo — and the Japanese proposal to change the name of China is an apparent gesture seeking Chinese sympathy.

Dutch Flyers Aiding Singapore

Batavia, Dutch East Indies, Dec. 22 (AP)—The Dutch command announced today that planes of the Dutch East Indies Army had taken part in operations over Malaya, supporting British forces battling to stem the Japanese advance toward Singapore. A communique said one Dutch plane had been shot down over Malaya, but that the pilot, although wounded, had escaped.

Red Ship Sunk By British, Japs Say

Tokyo, Dec. 22 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A. P.)—The Japanese alleged today that the 2,282-ton Russian passenger liner Krecht, formerly the Polaris, had been sunk by British gunfire from Hongkong.

A spokesman said three other Soviet vessels—one of them believed to be the 2,696-ton passenger liner Simferopol—had taken refuge in the Japanese-won harbor at Kowloon, opposite Hongkong, and were undamaged.

Canberra Doubts New Guinea Attack

London, Dec. 22 (AP)—An Exchange Telegraph Agency dispatch from Canberra today said that the Australian Government, which was in constant touch with the territory of New Guinea, had no information of a purported Japanese attack there. The Rome radio had reported that Japan seized that half-Dutch, half-Australian island to compensate for the occupation of Portuguese Timor by Netherlands and Australian troops.

Domei Claims Huge Allied Ship Losses

London, Dec. 22 (AP)—Domei, Japanese news agency, asserted today in a broadcast heard here by Reuters that since the start of the war in the Pacific the Japanese Navy had sunk, damaged or seized 47 enemy warships, captured 38 merchant vessels and more than 380 smaller craft and shot down 114 planes.

Japanese naval losses, Domei said, included one light cruiser slightly damaged, one destroyer sunk, one minesweeper sunk and another severely damaged, five submarines missing and 72 planes lost.

Heroism at Hawaii Described

Three Officers, Survivors of Pearl Harbor, Tell of Individual Exploits of Others.

DEC 23 1941

By JAS. YARBROUGH

Honolulu, Dec. 22 (A. P.).—Graphic first-hand narratives of what happened at Pearl Harbor December 7 were told with dramatic coolness today by three naval officers who had leading parts in the titanic defense of giant warships against a sky full of Japanese planes that pounced on them suddenly from out of nowhere.

These are some highlights of the stories they told:

Divebombers, contested only by anti-aircraft fire, pulled out of their dives as low as 300 feet and dropped bombs that ripped men's uniforms from their bodies with blasts that swished like stiff wind through foliage.

Men shielded ammunition with their bodies when the heat from many fires became perilously intense.

Hurt But Back on Job.

During the early morning attack a marine said to an officer: "Pull this piece of metal out of my back."

It was a bomb splinter so hot the officer had to use a rag to remove it. The marine returned to his machine and remained on duty until late that afternoon.

One captain, horribly wounded, refused to leave the bridge of his ship and commanded the burning vessel until he died. Then the other officers who had remained with him swung hand over hand on a rope to another ship.

A Lieutenant-Commander who took charge of his ship after the executive officer was knocked overboard by a blast, said:

"We were just finishing breakfast at 7:55 when the alarm sounded over the loud speaker:

"'Japanese planes are attacking us. To your battle stations.'

"I went toward the bridge. The Captain was just ahead of me. Very heavy explosions were soon shaking the ship and she started taking a list. Communications were disrupted and we established a messenger service.

Torpedoes Effective.

"Bombs were coming down. The Captain groaned and said, 'I've been hit.' He staggered a few seconds and dropped to his knees. I asked, 'Where are you hit?' and he said, 'In the stomach.' I saw he was mortally wounded, but sent for the pharmacist's mate to give first aid.

"By this time fires had broken out in various parts of the ship. I was concerned for the safety of the magazines and had some plugged and some flooded.

"Searching parties were organized and the wounded were put into small boats. Practically all of the wounded were taken off.

"I was anxious to get the captain to a hospital and got a stretcher and lines. The captain emphatically refused. He said he wanted to stay where he was.

"There were huge oil fires on the water and it was a dangerous situation for surface ships.

"All this time the ship was subjected to aerial torpedoing, heavy dive bombing and also to high horizontal bombing and machine gun strafing.

DEC 23 1941

"We were under constant attack until 9:15 in the morning. There must have been a total of seventy planes.

"The aerial torpedoes were most effective. The pilots came in very close—about 30 or 40 feet above the water—and were very skillful. They didn't care much, just so they got their attack in, but I didn't see a single so-called suicide pilot deliberately fly into the ship."

"Two officers stayed with the captain. Finally the pharmacist's mate could detect no sign of life. The body was placed in the chart house on the bridge.

"Flames cut off others from the fo'castle, where people were being evacuated, and they went hand over hand on a line about twenty feet to another ship. The last just made it as the line began to scorch.

Burns Chief Affliction.

"All enlisted men and officers were wonderful. They stayed with their guns until all available ammunition was exhausted."

The senior medical officer, who attended the wounded all day Sunday and Sunday night, said:

"Burns caused more than 60 per cent of the casualties.

"There were many drownings because the oil on the water made it almost impossible to swim. Lots of men were blown overboard.

"More than 1,000 wounded were treated ashore not far from their ships. They got ashore any way they could and were picked up in trucks, ambulances and automobiles—everything available.

"We worked that night with flashlights. . . . No, we didn't have time to put blue covers on them.

"All the Japanese I saw were dead. I examined seventeen bodies. They wore new dark blue navy uniforms and their heads were nearly shaved around the sides—bowl fashion.

"Many of our men had their clothes blown off by the blasts. We worked all night and the next day. About 200 slightly wounded were able to return to their ships."

Young Officer Commands Ship.

A 37-year-old officer who found himself in command of a major ship said he was in the officers' lounge awaiting 8 o'clock mass when he heard machine gun fire.

"We saw twenty-five or thirty torpedo planes approaching," said the officer. "One dropped a 'fish' and it came toward our ship. About a hundred feet from our stern one of the raiders burst into flame. We were more or less stunned by the horror of it.

"Pretty soon the air seemed literally filled with planes. Dive-bombers came over in two flights of five each and our anti-aircraft shells burst right around them. I felt sure they were hit but they never broke formation.

"When I got to my ship all the guns were going and the bombs made a terrific blast—a swish like a stiff wind blowing through foliage. Flames were rising several hundred feet in the air and fire was spreading over the water toward our bow.

"We had our lines cut with axes and started working the bow out. We cleared the Arizona (battleship) by about forty feet and as we were going down the channel we were dive bombed and hit several times. The ship shivered and shook violently from near misses as well as hits. Our anti-aircraft and machine guns were pouring it into them all the time.

"We got the signal to stop and that interrupted our whole aim—which was to get out to sea and have a crack at them."

Officers related these thrilling stories to reporters at Pearl Harbor Naval Base, the first such conference since the raid. Details of damage to ships were not shown to the news men, but the officers reconstructed many of the details for them.

GUAM'S LAST WORD TELLS OF ATTACK

DEC 23 1941

Civilians Machine-gunned in Streets and Hospital.

Washington, Dec. 22 (A. P.).—The navy said today its last message from the island of Guam—received two days after the attack on Pearl Harbor—reported that civilians in the streets and a native hospital in Agana—the capital—had been machine-gunned by enemy planes.

Since December 13, the capture of the island by the Japanese has been considered "probable."

The navy said at that time it had been unable to contact the Pacific outpost, 1,600 miles east of the Philippines and 1,500 miles west of Wake. Four hundred navy men and 155 Marines were stationed on Guam.

[An official broadcast from Tokio today said that "peace and order had been restored throughout the island" of Guam with completion of mopping up operations.]

The navy's last word from Guam (3:30 P. M., December 10, island time and date, 8:30 P. M., Eastern standard time, December 9, here) was:

"Last attack centered at Agana. Civilians machine-gunned in streets. Two native wards of hospital and hospital compound machine-gunned. Building in which Japanese nationals are confined bombed."

JAPANESE AIR-RAID VICTIM

Alien First Man Killed In Shelter On Oahu Island

Honolulu, Dec. 22 (AP)—Oahu Island's first air-raid shelter victim was a Japanese alien.

Motor Patrolman Edward Puulei said Susumu Katamaya, 40, was crushed to death yesterday by a 300-pound stone which rolled into the cave he and a neighbor, Tetsusaku Koizumi, were digging out of a hillside as a refuge from air attack. Koizumi, 45, was seriously injured.

EMMONS ASKS CIVILIANS' AID

DEC 23 1941

Broadcasts to Hawaiians on Martial Law.

Honolulu, Dec. 22 (A. P.).—Lieut.-Gen. Delos C. Emmons, in his first broadcast as commander of the Hawaiian Department, today praised Hawaii's morale, stressed the necessity of censorship because of the potential threat of enemy raiders and urged everybody to work together.

He disclosed that the distribution of foods, drugs, gasoline and other essentials had been placed under a single jurisdiction. Pointing out that some confusion was unavoidable, he said this would be remedied as soon as additional supplies were received from the mainland.

"These precautions are being taken for your protection," he said to Hawaiians.

He cited the necessity of control over distribution of buckets, water, sand and other equipment necessary for fighting incendiary bombs.

"The army and navy are operating as one and you can be confident that they will be employed effectively, and with your help, successfully," Gen. Emmons said.

"If the courage of the people in the islands is to be maintained and the morale sustained, we cannot afford unnecessarily and indiscriminately to keep any number of loyal workers from useful employment."

Few Sabotage Cases.

Gen. Emmons suggested that if any employer doubted the loyalty of any employee, he should check immediately with constituted authorities before taking any action.

"There have been very few cases of actual sabotage," the General said. "This does not mean that you can relax. Both the constituted authorities and the public generally must continue to be alert against possible saboteurs."

Pointing out that friends and relatives need not fear that arrested persons will be mistreated, he said.

"These people are not prisoners of war and will not be treated as such. I intend very shortly to permit the inspection of detained aliens by representative citizens and aliens in order that the public may be reassured as to the treatment they are receiving."

Emmons cautioned against believing and repeating rumors. By so doing you are playing into the enemy's hands, he told his listeners. It is a time-worn trick of dictators, aggressors and saboteurs to undermine the confidence of civilians, he related.

"The army believes the strongest defender is an intelligent defender," he said.

Will Give Out Information.

Adding that the army will keep the public informed of the facts, he said:

"Let me reiterate the necessity for pulling together. We must remember that this is America and we must not knowingly and deliberately deny any loyal citizen the opportunity of exercising or demonstrating his loyalty in a concrete way."

U. S. PLANES BOMB ENEMY SUBMARINE

Tanker Skipper Says Flyers May Have Sunk Craft With Depth Bombs

DEC 23 1941

Two Other Attacks On American Ships Off West Coast Fail

[By the Associated Press]

Eureka, Cal., Dec. 22 — Two big United States bombing planes dropped depth charges on the enemy submarine which torpedoed the tanker Emidio, and possibly hit the undersea craft, Capt. Clark A. Farrow of the Emidio disclosed upon his arrival today with thirty-one survivors of his ship.

"It may have been ten or fifteen minutes after our SOS that two big United States bombing planes came roaring overhead from the coast," Captain Farrow said. "To us in the lifeboats that was a mighty welcome sight.

"The sub submerged. One of the two planes, circling where the sub had gone down, dropped a depth charge.

Torpedo Is Fired

"But later as the planes were still circling, the periscope of the sub came slowly up to the surface 200 yards away and, while still partially submerged, fired a torpedo.

"We saw the torpedo's trail as it headed for the tanker. There was a loud explosion as it struck.

"Back came the planes as the sub sank out of sight again.

"One of the planes dropped another depth charge. There was a big blast and plenty of smoke.

"That may have hit her, we figured, for we didn't see her again."

American Tanker Escapes Axis Submarine Attack

Santa Barbara, Cal., Dec. 22 (AP)—An enemy submarine launched three torpedoes at the Standard Oil tanker H. M. Storey today, but the American ship escaped damage by clever maneuvering.

The Coast Guard said this attack, the fifth by Axis sub-surface craft off the California coast since December 11, took place about two miles out from Point Arguello, rocky promontory forty-five miles north of Santa Barbara.

With field glasses several persons were able to watch the attempt of the submarine to scuttle the 10,000-ton tanker, southbound on its normal run.

Smoke Screen Sent Up

When the submarine unleashed its first torpedo and missed its mark, the tanker sent up a heavy smok screen and started a zigzag course behind the dense curtain. Shore watchers, seeing the Storey under forced draft, at first believed she had been hit.

Navy planes soon appeared in response to an SOS and dropped depth charges that shook the nearby coast. A seaplane alighted within a short time at the side of the tanker. Later, with her aerial escorts, she proceeded toward her unannounced destination.

Giant Sub Fired 5 Times At Schooner, Skipper Says

San Diego, Cal., Dec. 22 (AP)—Capt. Nels A. Sinnes of the lumber schooner Samoa said today a giant submarine, presumably Japanese, fired five shells at the 2,000-ton vessel off the central California coast just before dawn on December 18 and that a torpedo went directly under the ship.

The Samoa, steaming at forced draft, arrived in San Diego harbor last night. Navay officers immediately removed several shell and torpedo fragments which failed to find their mark, but exploded near enough for shrapnel to drop on deck of the Samoa.

"Five shells were fired at us," Captain Sinnes said. "One apparently aimed at our radio antenna burst in the air above the stern. Fragments fell to the deck.

DEC 23 1941

"Then we saw the tell-tale wake of a torpedo coming directly at us amidships. It was too late to do more than just wait for our destiny.

"The miracle happend. The torpedo went directly beneath us, didn't touch the hull and continued beyond. Evidently it struck some object in the water, because while the torpedo was still at a comparatively short distance from the Samoa, it exploded. There was a huge shower accompanied by smoke and flame, and possibly some of the fragments from the torpedo also fell on our deck.

"Shortly after the attack, the submarine hove to about forty feet away. Visibility was extremely poor, and I couldn't make out the flag or anybody on board.

Close Enough For Shouts

"There was a shout, 'Hey!' from the submarine. I replied, 'What do you want of us?' There was no answer and the submarine disappeared."

In Captain Sinnes' log appears the following notation:

"The sub then disappeared, evidently thinking that we were sinking on account of our heavy port list."

The Samoa's list was due, Captain Sinnes explained, to the way in which the oil tanks happened to be trimmed at that time, and represented no danger to the ship.

Washington Believes Jap Subs Have 'Buck Fever'

Washington, Dec. 22 (AP)—The fact that enemy submarines have missed three merchant ships off California in the last three days, while hitting one, led to unofficial speculation today that the Japanese underseas skippers have "buck fever."

Some navy officers said the Japanese, far from their home bases, apparently were too fearful of prowling United States destroyers to take enough time to aim carefully.

Tanker Captain Tells Of Escaping Attacker

DEC 23 1941

[By the Associated Press]

San Francisco, Dec. 22—Far-ranging Axis submarines, that drew American blood in smashing attacks at shipping in the crowded steamship lanes off California during the week end, were hunted along the length of the Pacific Coast today.

One submarine, attacking without warning, torpedoed and shelled the large American oil tanker Emidio Saturday afternoon twenty miles off Blunt's Reef, 200 miles north of San Francisco.

Three of the Emidio's lifeboats were destroyed by gunfire, the navy said.

Latest Report Has Two Killed

The navy's latest information, still incomplete today, was that two of her crew men were killed, five were missing and five others were injured. The five injured and twenty-six others were rescued.

Several hours before the Emidio was fired upon another American tanker, the Agwiworld, escaped from a submarine off Cypress Point, one hundred miles south of San Francisco.

Although eight shells were hurled at the Agwiworld from the attacker's deck gun the tanker, maneuvered by a submarine-wise skipper, zigzagged its way to safety in a thirty-minute chase. This attack also was only twenty miles offshore.

Those Listed As Missing

Upon reaching San Francisco the next morning the single reaction of the Agwiworld's crew was:

"If we'd only had a gun."

A naval vessel went to the rescue of the men on the Emidio, which was reported still afloat in a rough sea off Cape Mendocino.

Emidio crew members listed as missing were:

Third Assistant Engineer B. A. Winters, San Pedro, Cal.

Stuart McGillivray, 17, West Seattle high school boy.

R. W. Pennington, Los Angeles.

Kenneth Kimes, San Pedro.

Fred Potts, Los Angeles.

Southbound Without Cargo

The rescue vessel that took aboard the Emidio's survivors found it impossible to reach anchorage yesterday and efforts to determine identities of the two men reported killed and of those saved were unsuccessful.

The Emidio, captained by Clark A. Farrow, of Long Beach, Cal., was southbound without cargo. She is a 6,912-ton craft owned by the Cocony-Vacuum Oil Company.

Captain Goncalves, of the Agwiworld, interviewed in San Francisco, modestly attributed to luck his vessel's escape, but other officers of the ship and crew members spoke admiringly of the skipper's coolness and seamanship under fire.

Goncalves described the submarine as an unusually large one, which broke the surface nearby as the Agwiworld plowed northward about twenty miles from the shore outside of Monterey Bay.

"I cannot understant the submarine being so close and still missing us," the captain said.

"We are close to even a poor shot with a rifle standing on our deck could have wiped out the submarine's gun crew."

Goncalves, Brazilian-born American citizen from Port Arthur, Texas, told this story:

It was early Saturday afternoon. The captain was in his quarters. Unaccountably he glanced out of a porthole just as the submarinr surfaced off the port quarter.

Avoids Presenting Broadside

Rushing immediately on deck, the captain ordered the ship turned to keep from presenting a broadside target. He told his radio operator to wireless the navy.

The turn brought the prow of the Agwiworld directly in line with the submarine and the tanker bore down upon the raider as if to ram it.

"The submarine was lying about 500 yards due west of us in the path of the sun," Goncalves re'ated. "I put the helf hard to port and headed straight for the sub.

"When the second shot came, I put the helm hard over to starboard and then presented the stern to the sub. There was a heavy groundswell which kept the sub's gun deck awash."

One Shell Sniped Hawser

A shell came within ten feet of the tanker as the submarine fired from a deck gun. The tanker headed shoreward, zigzagging and causing the submarine to roll heavily in the swells left in the tanker's wake.

Another shell sniped a hawser. That was the only damage to the Agwiworld, although the submarine fired eight shots.

After a thirty-minute chase, the submarine submerged. The Agwiworld lay close off Santa Cruz until dark, then steamed northward to San Francisco.

No Panic, Says First Mate

First Mate Edward Crabtree observed:

"Funny thing, I transferred to this run eight months ago from a New York-Dutch West Indies run to get away from the trouble zone. Now I'm all around it. But it's all right this time. This is our scrap. Eight months ago it was a foreign affair.

"No, there was no panic. Every man went to his boat station, and the 'old man' knew what he was doing all the time."

The Agwiworld, of 6,661 tons, is owned by the Richfield Oil Corporation.

U. S. Damage To Subs Exceeds Rate In War 1

DEC 23 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 22—United States naval forces were credited today with sinking or hitting fourteen German and several Japanese submarines thus far—a rate of damage to undersea craft four times as great as the navy reached in the World War.

As Axis submarines hunted American shipping off both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts Secretary Frank Knox issued the announcement of German and Japanese losses to "assure the public that the navy has already adequately dealt with more than one submarine."

One Hit, One Escapes

Twenty miles off California the Japanese torpedoed the tanker Emidio and shelled three of its lifeboats. The tanker Agwiworld escaped without damage from another because of the poor marksmanship of Japanese gunners.

The navy, meanwhile, said enemy submarines also were believed to be operating near the American Atlantic shore.

The Secretary declared that United States forces "have up to the present time probably sunk or damaged at least fourteen enemy submarines" in the Atlantic and added that, "in the Pacific, our naval forces have already effectively dealt with several Japanese submarines."

Bitter Weather Stressed

The naval action and "the prevalence of the bitter North Atlantic winter weather which the Germans do not seem to like, may account for the recent comparative security of the North Atlantic convoy routes," he said.

Apparently covering three months of shoot-on-sight patrol in the Atlantic and two weeks of declared warfare in both oceans, the announcement of damage to possibly seventeen or eighteen submarines compared with World War records crediting United States naval forces with twenty-four successful attacks on German U-boats in nineteen months of hostilities.

256 Attacks Were Listed

From April, 1917, to the Armistice, United States vessels made 256 attacks on German submarines. Of the twenty-four "successful" attacks, only three were known to have sunk undersea craft and two were listed as "possibly sunk."

Prime Minister Churchill said on December 11 that Allied shipping losses in the Atlantic had dropped to one-fifth the previous rate in the five months ending in November, but Knox's statement gave first official word of successful American action against German submarines since the shoot-on-sight order became effective September 16.

Previous Losses Put At 140

Previous unofficial estimates had placed German submarine losses since the war started as totaling about 140. Before reverting to the World War policy of not disclosing destruction of enemy submarines, the British claimed to have sunk 50 up to April, 1940.

Available information indicates that Japan has about forty submarines with a range permitting operations off the United States West Coast. Some are believed to be as large as 2,700 tons, including big undersea minelayers able to travel 14,000 miles without refueling and sow as many as sixty mines.

Supply Ships Possible

Smaller Japanese submarines might raid Pacific coastal shipping lanes from bases in the Caroline or Marshall Islands or with the aid of supply ships such as the fishing vessel Alert which wa seized at Costa Rica December 12 with seven Japanese and 10,000 gallons of fuel oil aboard.

Gen. Brauchitsch Blames His Heart

DEC 23 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Berlin, Dec. 22 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A. P.)—Field Marshal General Walther von Brauchitsch, who has been relieved of his command of the Nazi armies by Adolf Hitler, issued an order of the day tonight saying he asked for his dismissal "on account of heart trouble."

A belated order of the day dated December 19 and appearing over von Brauchitsch's signature said:

"Soldiers!

"The Führer has personally taken over the leadership of the army as of today.

At His Request

"He has at the same time complied with my request which I submitted to him some time ago, to relieve me of the leadership of the army on account of a heart ailment.

"Soldiers!

"Nearly four years I have, as your commander in chief, led the best army of the world.

"These years comprise for Germany a multitude of the greatest historical events and for the army the greatest military successes.

"With Pride And Gratitude"

"I look back upon this period with pride and gratitude. I am proud of your achievements and thankful for your faith.

"Great tasks have been solved, great and difficult tasks still are ahead of us.

"I am convinced that you will solve these also.

"The Führer will lead us to victory. Let your determination be as hard as steel and look forward.

"Everything for Germany!"

[When Hitler announced yesterday that he was taking personal command of the armies as of last Friday he made no mention of the deposed field marshal's "heart trouble."]

Brauchitsch's Ouster Tricks One View

DEC 23 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 22—Field General Walther von Brauchitsch, who led the German armies victoriously through France, across the Balkans and into Russia, was tumbled from a hero's pedestal today by Adolf Hitler's momentous decision to assume personal command of his legions.

The Führer's stroke, coming at an hour when he himself declared Germany's battle was fast approaching its "culminating and turning point," created a sensation when it was disclosed last night in dispatches from Berlin.

Three Possible Reasons

Observers in this neutral capital, seeking an explanation of the move, which they believed must have not only profound causes but vital consequences, saw these possibilities:

1. That the German reverses in Russia—which Berlin has discounted as a trategic withdrawal to winter holding positions—actually are so serious that Hitler has lost faith in his army command.

2. That a serious rift has developed between German Army leaders and Nazi party chieftains over a question of strategy.

3. That the whole maneuver is a feint—a piece of trickery designed to distract the attention of Germany's enemies from some new move now in the making, such as an invasion of England, an attack on Turkey or a thrust through Spain toward Gibraltar.

Hitler's Cryptic Explanation

Hitler himself gave no clue to the real reasons for his move, though some quarters attached significance to his prefatory statement that "the campaign in the East has assumed proportions which exceeded all past notions."

In announcing that he had replaced Brauchitsch, Hitler gave only this cryptic explanation:

"The vastness of the theater of war, the close connection of the conduct of land operations with the political and economic war aims, and also the numerical size of the army compared with other parts of the armed forces, have induced the Führer to follow his intuitions and to influence in the strongest possible manner the operation and equipment to the army and to reserve to himself personally all essential decisions in this sphere."

No Hint Of Brauchitsch Role

Recalling that he had answered an "inward call" when he became his "own generalissimo" and took charge of all the German armed forces early in 1938, Hitler said that now he must take personal direction of the army.

Hitler said he was replacing Brauchitsch "while fully recognizing his merits," but gave no hint of the position to which he had been relegated.

After announcing the change in leadership, Hitler addressed a personal message to the army, appealing for fanatical courage and loyalty.

Brauchitsch's Career

Announcement of Brauchitsch's ouster came six months to the day after he led the German armies across the Russian border in what the Germans called a crusade against Communism.

Born in Berlin in 1881, Brauchitsch was the son of a German cavalary general, Bernhard von Brauchitsch. He entered the World War as a captain of artillery and by 1928 had reached the rank of colonel. In 1931 he became a major general and four years later was elevated to lieutenant general. Hitler intrusted him with the supreme command of the army on February 4, 1938.

Berlin Calls War at Its Crux With Hitler Surprise Due

Fuehrer's Taking Supreme Command Linked With Big Things in Offing—Germans Finally Told About Russia.

DEC 23 1941

Berlin, Dec. 22 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A. P.).—The war is approaching its decisive phase and it is therefore understandable that Adolf Hitler should now take over supreme command of the army to achieve even greater concentration of German forces, said a German military spokesman today.

This comment was made in connection with Hitler's announcement yesterday of the dismissal of Field Marshal Gen. Walther von Brauchitsch from his post as commander in chief and the Fuehrer's proclamation to his soldiers and S. S. troops to hold fast in a war of defense in the East until spring.

The speaker said the winter rest, mentioned in Hitler's appeal, referred merely to the East front and declared that there were various other battlefields where it was believed big things are in the offing soon.

There is no rift between Hitler and Brauchitsch, the spokesman emphasized, and the army has received a strong impulse through Hitler's taking full powers of command.

Hard Times Admitted.

The German radio today broadcast the following dispatch:

"In hard times the hardiest man must be in command. This is briefly said to be the view heard everywhere in Berlin with regard to the announcement that the Fuehrer has taken over chief command of the army.

"The parting of the Fuehrer and Field Marshal Gen. von Brauchitsch was solemn and dignified, so it was learned from military quarters. Field Marshal von Brauchitsch has not been dismissed from service or placed at disposal (on the reserve list).

"According to Prussian tradition, field marshals are always on active service and therefore also retain their adjutants. Whether von Brauchitsch will be employed in some other capacity cannot be said at present.

"In Berlin no one is inclined to see in the change of the High Command anything which is quite outside the development of the war.

Political Leader in National War.

"It is stressed that a limit of nerve power of a general must be reached some day—a general who in the hardest work lived through years of quick building up of German armed forces and after that for two and a quarter years has stood at the head of the army.

"The greatest energy and nerve power and naturally also robust health are necessary for fulfilling tasks which are extremely hard. Now new military tasks are before us, so the Fuehrer declared in his statement, and therefore the present has been considered perhaps the right moment for a change in the High Command of the army.

"It is quite likely that stronger than ever before the war now is developing into a German national war to conduct which a political leader is the most suitable person.

"Today Germany is in a fortunate position that her political leader is at the same time also a military genius. What was divined in the Polish campaign of 1939 became clear to the whole world by the revolutionary conduct of the war in Norway and in the west, which was directly due to the Fuehrer."

Germans Told Of Tough Task Of Russ Front

DEC 23 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 22—The German people were permitted to read today a story of fierce Russian onsets and the terrible hardships German troops suffered in frozen forests—a story which said fresh Red army reserves wrested the offensive from exhausted German soldiers, who were so hard pressed they had no time to eat or sleep.

An article from the front by the editor in chief of the Koelnische Zeitung, of Cologne, acting as a German war correspondent, said the German offensive finally came to a standstill under the weight of Russia's supplies of men and material.

Battered Night And Day

He reported that the Russians poured tanks and artillery into the fight unceasingly, suffered less the rigors of winter than the Germans, and passed from the defensive to an offensive, in which Siberian reserves, well clothed and equipped, battered at the Germans day and night.

His article, quoted by the Neue Zuercher Zeitung, said the initial German offensive met "great success" until the Germans won Borodino, where the Russians in 1812 vainly tried to stop Napoleon.

"From that moment," he declared, "the attack became more and more difficult."

Weather Blamed

The big rains of October created "unimaginable difficulties," he said. Meanwhile a rest had to be given the German shock forces, and the Russians "succeeded in establishing a new continuous defense system and brought up new forces, especially units from Siberia."

"The enemy suffered less than we from unfavorable weather," he related. "Bases of his supplies were near. He could still use roads and railways to Moscow despite destruction caused by the Luftwaffe. The civil population cooperated in building the defense system. But the greatest advantage to the enemy was the weather." . . .

Result of Fiasco, Says Moscow.

Moscow, Dec. 22 (A. P.).—Adolf Hitler's ouster of Field Marshal Walther von Brauchitsch and his own assumption of full command of the German Army was interpreted in the Russian press today as "direct result of the fiasco of Fascist German plans on the Soviet-German front."

A Tass dispatch under Stockholm date said "the defeat of the Germans by the Red army brought a serious crisis in the German command and sharp discord within the German leadership as well as between Nazis and the command."

The official news agency report said that Hitler risked weakening the authority of his generals in making Brauchitsch responsible, but that "symptoms of foment and a breakdown of the German Army" had created "animal fear among the Hitlerites.'

It foresaw the possibility that other generals also may be removed.

Hitler's Moves Predicted.

London, Dec. 22 (A. P.).—A source which often has had remarkably accurate behind-the-scenes information said today that Adolf Hitler's assumption of full command of the German Army and new Axis movements indicated the Germans were preparing for a swift attack to close the Mediterranean.

The object, he said, would be to salvage the Libyan campaign and offset the retreat in Russia.

The campaign which obviously is in the making, this source said, may take the form of a slash through Spain and Portugal, a drive through Turkey at Suez, or both, or it may be a combined air and sea jump into North Africa from Greece and Italy like that made into Crete.

Six Factors Listed.

These factors were pointed to as supporting the belief that a new campaign is about to start:

1. Hitler's warning that Germans are facing a decision of worldwide importance, his favorite phrase in heralding action.

2. His declaration that the difficulties of organizing communications in Europe and stretching as far as North Africa must be overcome.

3. His further declaration that other defensive war measures are about to be taken.

4. The recent withdrawal of at least 500 airplanes from the Russian front.

5. Reports of increasing air re-enfor-cements in Sicily, troop movements through Southern Italy and the Peloponnesus of Greece, and Italy's reported declaration of a state of emergency in southern provinces.

6. Persistent reports of new staff talks between Germans and Spaniards.

DEC 23 1941

Italy Calls More Men.

Italy also has announced the summoning of more men to the colors.

If Hitler chooses to move through Turkey, this source said, he might be able to cut Britain's and the United States' Red Sea supply line to Egypt or their Persian Gulf supply line to Russia. He would also be in a position to strike again for the oil of the Caucasus and Iraq after having been balked at Rostov, gateway to the Caucasus.

If Spain is selected for the route, he might be able to plug the Mediterranean at the other end, seize the Azores and gain important bases for the battle of the Atlantic, the informant said.

The privately published Spanish News Letter declared today that "if Adolf Hitler is not to be defeated in North Africa, Spain must come into the war." It added that "plans are now mature and all that remains is for the button to be pressed."

The publication said that German military and air missions had been busy with conferences with officials in Madrid for two weeks.

The News Letter is a mimeographed weekly edited by Charles Duff, a Spanish Loyalist sympathizer and widely recognized expert on Spanish affairs.

Brauchitsch Made Scapegoat: London

Berlin, Dec. 22 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A. P.)—Adolf Hitler's assumption of full command of his armies, replacing Field Marshal General Walther von Brauchitsch, was announced in the newspapers today without comment.

DEC 23 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 22—A foreign commentator declared today Adolf Hitler "has found it expedient to provide a scapegoat for the fact that his 1941 campaign has not ended in the way he intended and the way he forecast it would."

Discussing the Füehrer's assumption of the German army command in place of Field Marshal Gen. Walter Von Brauchitsch, the commentator said Hitler has found that "scapegoat not among politicans but among soldiers."

"Hitler evidently is relying on that curious and rather mystic reputation which he hitherto has enjoyed in Germany as a means of restoring confidence and contentment of the German people and the German armed forces," he said.

"How far he will succeed remains to be seen," he continued.

"In an ordinary country, ordinarily intelligent people in searching about for the man or men responsible would have been more inclined to fasten upon politicians who conceived and gave the orders for such a campaign arther than the wretched individuals who have had the task of carrying out those orders.

"How far the spark of ordinary intelligence survives among the German people remains to be seen. We should not jump at conclusions. The Germans will see through this.

Germans May Accept It

"If Hitler things his mystic reputation will carry him through we must not be too ready to think it won't. Hitler again places reliance on his intuition. He apparently did so because it is supposed in Germany that he instinctively makes the right decision.

The commentator said doubts over Hitler's instinct might arise reasonably from "the direction which the German army is moving, which certainly isn't eastward, and the unfortunate things happening to one of his high-powered generals in Libya.

"But that remains to be seen and we are not disposed to make unduly optimistic prophecy on the subject."

Nobody Left To Sack

One British commentator, asked if he could distinguish between the German terms "supreme command" and "supreme leadership" in connection with Adolf Hitler's assumption of full army command, replied:

"It means there's nobody left to sack."

The British press speculated that Hitler's action indicated a schism in the Nazi leadership but warned the public against rejoicing at unwarranted conclusions.

The Daily Express suggested by way of explanation that Hitler, attempting to retrieve setbacks in Russia, might have proposed a "new campaign so reckless that some of his generals refused to carry it out."

The paper added cautiously, however:

"Nothing has yet happened to Germany which gives the workers of Allied countries leave to relax one ounce of their effort."

Herald Also Cautious

The Daily Herald took a similar cautious attitude, but declared that Hitler, by his action, "had openly confessed the deterioration of his fortunes on the Eastern front."

"By taking over command himself he shows that he fears for the morale of his troops," the Herald added.

Commenting upon Hitler's references to the resumptino of German offensive operations against Russia in the spring, some British quarters expressed belief a defensive winter war might prove too costly for him to carry out this design.

Removal Of Von Brauchitsch Ranks With Flight Of Hess

News Of Shift In Top Command Gives Germany Its Saddest Day Since War Began Two Years Ago

DEC 23 1941

By BARNETT BILDERSEE

New York, Dec. 22 (AP) — The German nation heard its most grievous news since Adolf Hitler put on his field gray uniform Sept. 1, 1939, to wear to victory or death, when i twas told last night that it's Fuehrer had cast aside the man to whom he had given command of his Armies.

Field Marshal General Walther von Brauchitsch, Commander-in-Chief of the German Army, has been fired while the Gray Legions are on the run for the first time in more than two years of war—both in Russia and Libya.

The implications of his displacement—by Hitler himself—are inescapable.

In German minds, this sudden shift of topmost command at such a moment may rank even with the mysterious flight of Rudolf Hess, Hitler's deputy Fuehrer, as a sign of trouble in the nation's leadership.

Rumors had been current in the past week that such a shake-up was imminent. They said Von Brauchitsch had been seen in civilian clothes in Vienna and that Gen. Feodor von Bock, Commander of German forces in Southern Russia, also had been relieved of his command.

One of the last reports of Von Brauchitsch in the field was that he had been sent early this month to try to bolster the stalled and repulsed German offensive on the Black Sea coast.

Only yesterday Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels, speaking for Hitler, told Germany candidly that her Army in Russia is up against "an enemy superior in men and materials."

Nazi Germany never heard that before.

Since Nov. 29, when the Red Army recaptured Rostov-on-Don, whose capture the Germans exultantly had announced as opening the spigot to the Caucasus' oil, Russian forces have risen in a general counter-offensive from Finland to the Black Sea.

The Germans had explained that their receding line, once within telescope range of Moscow, was only a tactical operation to shorten and straighten the invasion line to wait out the winter.

The Germans were not told of the Russian reports of Germans dying on snow-banked battlefields by tens of thousands, or of the tanks and cannon which they had bought dearly instead of butter being smashed or captured, or of whole Nazi divisions wiped out as the Russians took their vengeance.

Even if the Germans did start falling back on a prepared winter position, it was said in London today, the Red Army now has punched salients through that "straightened" line and the withdawal has become a disastrous rout.

And tonight, Hitler announces that Brauchitsch is through—removed from his command while the Russians are erasing the German Army's hard-earned conquests in the east and a driving British Army is chasing on the heels of a once-feared German armored Army fleeing across the wastelands of North Africa.

Only last August, the German embassy in Washington wrote this blurb about the 60-year-old Commander-in-Chief of Hitler's Armies:

"Accomplishment and character alone determine the worthiness of an officer to himself and the world, and both of these factors mark to a particularly high degree the career of the Commander-in-Chief of the Army, Field Marshal General Walther von Brauchitsch.

"The glorious achievements of the German Armies during the renascence of the German nation are particularly connected with his name."

Now his name is particularly connected with those Armies' first debacle.

Brauchitsch, born in Berlin in 1881, is the son of a German cavalry General, Bernhard von Brauchitsch, who was once director of the Academy of War.

The younger Von Brauchitsch rose as an artillery officer. Trained in his own home and in the Cadet Corps, he was made a Lieutenant and entered the first World War as a Captain.

He held staff positions on the Western Front and distinguished himself by personal participation in front line actions.

After the war he served with various regiments and as Chief of Staff of the Sixth Division.

He became a Colonel in 1928 and two years later was appointed chief of the Department in the Ministry of War.

In 1931, then raised to the rank of Major-General, he was inspector of artillery and later became Commander of the First Division.

When the German Army was reorganized in 1935, Von Brauchitsch, by now a Lieutenant-General, became successively Commander of the First Army Corps, Commander of the First Military District and, in 1936, General of Artillery.

Hitler united the highest command of Germany's armed forces in the then Colonel-General Von Brauchitsch on Feb. 4, 1938, and entrusted to him leadership of the Army.

"In all military events which have led to the foundation of the greater Germany," said the embassy's tribute, "the Army and its Commander-in-Chief had a decisive share.

"Under his command German troops went on to win back German territories in Austria, in the Sudeten, in Bohemia and in Memel.

"Under his leadership, the German Army destroyed the Polish Armies in hard, fast battles. The campaign in the west in 1940 proved again his extraordinary capability which can master even the most difficult task of our days."

The publication said German military and air missions had been busy with conferences with officials in Madrid for two weeks.

Other Objectives Might Be Turkey And Egypt To Get Iraq Oil

By Thomas Hawkins
[By the Associated Press]

Madrid, Dec. 22—The military expert of the official EFE news agency said tonight that Hitler's assumption of the German military command foreshadowed "very important events" among which he listed "defense of western Europe against Yankee attack" as an alternative possibility. Other alternatives included a German landing attempt on England or an attack on Turkey. Berlin dispatches in the Spanish evening press generally forecast "startling" military actions would be forthcoming shortly.

[By the Associated Press]

Bern, Dec. 22—Suggestions that Adolf Hitler was planning to lunge out soon in new or currently inactive theaters, perhaps in the Near East or in the west, now that he has grasped personal supreme command of the German armed forces were strong today in official Berlin broadcasts.

What was really in view remained, of course, in doubt.

Following up Hitler's ouster of Field Marshal General Walther von Brauchitsch and his appeal to his soldiers and Nazi troops in Russia to hold fast during the winter in a mere war of defense, DNB declared that the war was "now approaching its decisive stage."

A Familiar Line

This, the familiar phraseology employed by Hitler or in his behalf when he is contemplating some new adventure, was accompanied by the statement:

"It is therefore understandable that the Führer should now take over supreme command of the army, upon whom (Hitler) the main burden of operations will in future largely rest, in order to achieve even greater concentrations of German forces than hitherto."

Other broadcasts were at pains to assert that there had been no rift at all between Hitler and von Brauchitsch; that they had parted "in the most dignified manner," and that in any event the dismissal of the highest officer of the German army had been simply a case of the "omission" of an intermediary.

Hitler, it was added, now planned to execute for himself all campaigns "like those of France, Norway and Crete."

Called A Genius

One broadcast summed up with the declaration that Hitler was not simply a political leader but "also a military genius," and that the successful German campaigns in Norway and in the west were "directly due to the Führer."

A German spokesman explained that when Hitler talked about a winter "rest" he was talking only of the Russian front; there were, he added, various other battlefields where big things might be in the offing.

The Swedish newspaper Dagens Nyheter expressed the belief that Hitler's decision to take everything over meant that "the center of gravity of military operations will be shifted from east to west."

The Basel newspaper Nachrichten commented that every German, at home or at the front, must now realize that the whole responsibility was on Hitler alone.

African Drive Foreseen

A London informant with a good record for accuracy in the past predicted that Hitler was preparing for a swift attempt to close the Mediterranean, thus to try to salvage the Libyan campaign and if possible to offset the retreat in Russia.

This, he added, might take the form of a drive through Spain and Portugal, a thrust through Turkey at Suez, or an attempted air-sea jump into North Africa from Greece and Italy.

A move through Turkey presumably would be intended to cut the British-American Red Sea line to Egypt or their Persian Gulf line to Russia, and to gain position for another German effort to get at the oil of the Caucasus and Iraq.

The official Soviet news agency Tass commented that the fall of von Brauchitsch manifested a crisis in the German command, sharp discord between the Nazis and that command, and that the symptoms of a "breakdown in the German army" had been followed by "animal fear among the Hitlerites."

LISBON FAVORS TIE TO BRITAIN

Portuguese Adhere to Pact Despite Timor Move.

Lisbon, Dec. 22 (A. P.).—The tone of the Portuguese press today favored continued friendship with Great Britain despite the seizure of Portuguese Timor by Australian and Netherlands Indies troops. Newspapers said editorially that Portugal's feelings were deeply hurt by the act, which they regarded as aggression, but said that Portugal's centuries-old pact with Britain, dating back to the days of the Crusades, must not be prejudiced by any misunderstanding.

British Explain Action.

London, Dec. 22 (A. P.).—The British, in an eight-point statement answering Portuguese Premier Antonio de Oliveiro Salazar, said that Australian and Dutch troops occupied the Portuguese part of Timor only after Japanese submarines were sighted in the immediate vicinity and a Japanese attack appeared imminent. The Portuguese Premier told the National Assembly on Friday that Timor had been occupied before any threat of attack materialized and while Portugal was discussing a common defense.

The British said that it had become clear from this war that "if defensive action is delayed until an attack was actually developed, it is likely to be too late."

OLAV SAYS NORWAY CAN SEE WAR'S END

Crown Prince Asserts Underground Unrest Is Growing In His Country

Declares His People Will Not Starve Despite Scarcity Of Many Foods

DEC 23 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 22—Crown Prince Olav of Norway said today that, because of military reverses in Russia and Libya, Germany was pulling troops out of occupied Norway and that underground unrest among loyal Norwegians was growing day by day.

The Crown Prince had just arrived here from London, where he has been with the Norwegian Government in exile. He told a press conference that with the entrance of all great world powers into the war Axis members were going to find that the way of the aggressor "doesn't pay."

Expects End Fairly Soon

"I feel more convinced than ever that the war will end fairly soon," he said. "For the first time we Norwegians can see the end—that the free peoples of the earth are going to prove that aggression doesn't pay. Now that all great powers are in the war it will conclude more quickly."

Explaining that it was impossible for Norway to declare war on Japan "because we can't get a Parliament together to do it," the Crown Prince said the Norwegian charge d'affaires in Tokyo had been instructed to leave Japan with the British Embassy staff.

Gives Thumbnail Sketch

He gave a thumbnail sketch of Norwegian affairs, internally and in the world situation, making these points:

Germany is removing occupationary troops from the interior of Norway and sending them to aid Nazi armies in Russia and Libya.

There is a "great deal of unrest" in Norway in an "underground sort of way" and loyal Norwegians "are quite excited about what might happen."

There is "great satisfaction" in London about developments in Russia and the entrance of the United States into the war.

Food Situation Difficult

The food situation in Norway "is very difficult," particularly the shortage of meats, fats and grains, "but there is no particular danger of the people starving to death."

More and more loyal Norwegians are sneaking away to England with the result that the movements of Norway's fishing fleet have been restricted and their fuel consumption cut thirty-three per cent.

Norway's great merchant fleet is doing a "titanic" task. Norway is training troops in England and Canada "primarily for eventual use as an expeditionary force to regain our soil."

DEC 23 1941

Have No Quarrel With Finns

Norway will not declare war on Finland because "we have no quarrel with them and we hope to be neighbors again."

The Crown Prince said he would remain in the United States and Canada for the next two months.

Crown Princess Martha and their children have been living in Washington for the past year.

Offer Of German Legion To Aid U. S. Is Reported

Dr. Otto Strasser Has Suggested Free Forces To Fight With Army, Congressman Says

Washington, Dec. 22 (AP)—Representative Thom (Dem., Ohio) said in a statement today that Dr. Otto Strasser, German refugee now in Montreal, had sent an offer to form a Free German Legion to fight with the American army.

Thom, who said he would send the proposal to Col. William J. Donovan, information coordinator, said Strasser believed such a group would have "a deep phychological effect on the German people."

Thom said Strasser, who has been warring on Hitler since 1930, and on whose head there has been set a price of $500,000 by the German Gestapo, believes that "Germany's downfall will come through internal uprising, and this would be encouraged . . . by the spectacle of German-born citizens taking the field against Hitler."

Blows Imperil Germans At Tula, Reds Say

DEC 23 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Dec. 22—Russian armies slashing at the heels of retreating German forces claimed today that a series of week-end successes had seriously imperiled the Nazi position in the Tula sector below Moscow and further relieved pressure in the Leningrad area.

The outstanding success reported by the Russians was recapture of the important highway junction of Plavsk, between Tula and Orel, which was said to have served the Germans as a supply base and concentration point. Tula is about one hundred miles from the capital and Orel approximately the same distance farther south.

3 Forces Reported Destroyed

Krapvino, a town southwest of Tula, also was officially reported in Russian hands.

Recapture of Plavsk was announced twenty-four hours after reports that Russian troops had reoccupied Volokolamsk, sixty-five miles northwest of Moscow, after destroying the better part of three German infantry divisions and one armored division.

Foreign correspondents who visited the front said that the Klinvolokolamsk road was littered with German bodies and wrecked equipment. They said the scene indicated that what started as an orderly German withdrawal had turned into a disastrous, panicky flight.

Orderly Retreat Prevented

(London observers said the Russians had driven wedges into the German positions which had made it impossible for the Germans to halt their retreat and thus had demolished Hitler's pretense that the Nazis merely were making an orderly withdrawal to straighten their lines.)

On the Leningrad front the Russians declared their troops battling southwest from Tikhvin had captured the towns of Bogotsch and Gruzino. The latter is not far from Chudovo, on the Leningrad-Moscow railway, and the Russian thrust thus seemed to be weakening the German grip on this important communication line.

Road Reported Cleared

A Tass news agency dispatch declared that the highway between Tikhvin and Volkhov, fifty miles to the west and north and about seventy miles from Leningrad, had been cleared of German troops.

In this operation, Tass said, the Russians recaptured twelve villages, routed the Twenty-first German Division and killed thousands of retreating Nazis.

Russian ski troops, skimming swiftly across snow in which the Germans floundered up to their knees, were reported to have taken an important part in the fighting. Tass said the Russian success had thwarted a German attempt to make a stand on a new line behind "complicated obstacles."

(The British radio reported last night that the Russian defenders of Sevastopol, on the Crimea, also had counter-attacked successfully, driving the Germans from several important positions.)

Stalin Has Birthday

News of the latest Russian successes yesterday came as Premier Josef Stalin observed his sixty-second anniversary. In contrast to previous years, there was no public demonstration, and it was assumed he spent the day at the Kremlin busy with official duties.

In a communigue today on the course of the fighting, the Soviet Information Bureau said that forces under General Bondarex in two weeks of battle "liberated 720 settlements and captured or destroyed 13 German planes, 143 tanks, 660 motor vehicles, 383 motorcicles, 101 guns, 222 machine-guns, 84 mortars and a large quantity of other equipment."

Heavy Fighting Before Key Points Reported As Russians Declare Certainty Of Winning

DEC 23 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Tuesday, Dec. 23—Reoccupation of a number of populated points by Red army forces steadily advancing in fierce fighting was announced by the Soviet Information Bureau today.

The communique said the gains were registered all the way from Leningrad in the north to the Sea of Azov in the south. It mentioned specifically heavy fighting in the sectors before Leningrad, Moscow and Kalinin.

The accounts of continued Soviet gains were accompanied by the exultant declaration that after six months of war Russia "has begun to win, and will continue to win."

Guerrillas Are Active

Even guerrillas have come out into the open now and are mowing down the floundering Nazis from fixed positions, a Soviet announcemnt said.

In one section of the Kalinin front, ninety miles northwest of Moscow, a guerrilla unit was credited with killing 223 German officers and men with machine guns and trench mortars set up on the Nazi line of retreat.

"The Fascists, falling back under blows of Soviet troops, scattered in panic when the guerrillas opened fire and were unable to put up any organized resistance," the official account said.

On the Northern front, the Russians reported clearing a fifty-mile stretch of highway between Tikhvin and Volkhov, southeast of Leningrad, by wading knee-deep in snow through a swampy forest and encircling the Twenty-first German Infantry Division.

Thousands of Germans were killed and twelve villages were recaptured in the encirclement, dispatches from the front said.

On the Moscow front the Germans were reported being hurled back eigh to twelve miles a day west of Klin and beyond Volokolamsk.

Tass declared that the Red army was encountering stubborn German resistance near Maloyaroslavets, sixty-five miles southwest of the capital, where it said "the enemy has gathered all his forces in order to repel our attacks and is holding strongly fortified positions."

Tass said, however, that Russian attacks had pierced the German defenses, driving from two and a half to four miles into the German lines.

Pravda reported that on the bitterly contested Moscow front alone the Germans lost more than 117,000 dead from November 16 to December 20. In addition, the Communist party newspaper said, the Russians captured 2,113 tanks, 12,204 automobiles and trucks, 1,578 field guns and vast quantities of other war material there.

More And More Successes

Dispatches from the Tula sector south of Moscow said thirty-five settlements were recaptured there in a single day by the Red army.

Farther to the south the Russians claimed the recapture of one hundred more settlements, also in a single day. and said a vast encircling movement was under way against Axis forces on that flank of the battlefront.

Pravda declared that "as a result of the six-months-long war Germany has become weaker and our reserves continue to expand."

"We are winning, and will continue to win," Pravda asserted, attributing the Red army's victories in large measure to its vast trained reserves.

Reds Claim Foe's Line Pierced

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 22—Russian reports declared today that Soviet forces, overcoming stubborn Nazi resistance from strongly fortified positions, had smashed German fortifications and hammered wedges as deep as four miles into the enemy line in the region of Maloyaroslavets, about seventy miles southwest of Moscow.

The Germans had massed their forces there to try to stem the Red army asaults in that vital region between Moscow and Kaluga, one anchor of the capital's defense arc, these reports said.

As a result of German reversals in Russia, it was said also, Spanish captives have informed Red army questioners that Spain's "Blue Legion" forces fighting with the Germans are being called back to Madrid.

Full Chase Only Begun: Reds

By Henry C. Cassidy

Associated Press Foreign Correspondent

DEC 23 1941

With the Red Army on the Moscow Front, Dec. 21 (Delayed)—Lieut. Gen. Vassily Ivanovich Kuznetzov, commanding the Russian Army in the Klin sector northwest of Moscow, declared today that the full force pursuit of Adolf Titler's armies had just begun.

"We still consider the Hitler army powerful, and there still are serious battles ahead," he added, "but the beginning of the rout of this entire army has been started. . . ."

On the entire Moscow front the Red army's westward surge seemed gaining momentum. The Russians executed a new pincer movement west of Volokolamsk, sixty-five miles northwest of Moscow, where the Nazis had made one of their most dangerous stabs toward the Soviet capital.

Flank Threatened

The Russians recaptured Yaropoletz, eight miles northwest of Volokolamsk, and continued to shove the Germans back, threatening their left flank along the Moscow-Rzhev railroad.

General Kuznetzov estimated that the Germans were falling back at a rate of eight to twelve miles a day in this sector.

Also regained by the Red army were the towns of Borgorod, Souvorovo and Tervayeva-Sloboda.

General Kuznetzov, small and fair-haired, reviewed the counter-offensive in an interview with foreign correspondents at his headquarters, a log cabin in the single-street village of Nogornoye.

Decisive Pursuit Claimed

"Our troops," he asserted, "have begun to pursue the enemy decisively."

He said the break in the Nazi advance came late in November, when the Germans were repulsed at Dmitrov, barely forty miles north of the capital and east of Klin.

Thus, he said, was frustrated the big German plan for outflanking Moscow from the north; and then began the Red army's counter-drive.

At Klin the Germans tried to stop the Red army and wrest back the initiative, the general related. This failed, he said, when the Russians encircled the town, then captured it December 14, killing 3,000 Germans.

That was only one tenth o fthe total German dead in the Klin sector, he asserted.

General Kuznetzov estimated that the front now was twenty-five miles west of his headquarters.

1812 Lesson Missed

Since the start of the German retreat from Dmitrov and the Moscow-Volga canal the Russians have captured 299 German tanks, nearly 3,000 vehicles and more than 150 field guns, he said.

"The Germans," the general declared, "did no ttake into consideration the lesson of 1812 on the power of the Russian Army and its reserves.

"Englis hand American aid, together with these mistakes, made the Russian attack possible."

Nazis Report Counter-Blows

DEC 23 1941

Berlin, Dec. 22 (Official Broadcast Recorded by AP)—Stubborn German resistance broke down numerous Soviet attacks on the central sector of the Eastern front, the German high command said in a communique today.

The bulletin gave no details of these engagements, in which it said the German air force "supported the hard fighting of the army by strong attacks on enemy field position, tank concentrations, motorized columns and railway lines."

CRACK GERMAN BATTLESHIPS REPORTED HIT

RAF Claims Scharnhorst And Gneisenau Damaged In Raid

Direct Hit On Dry Dock Holding Craft May Have Trapped Them

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 22—A direct bomb hit on the gates of the dry dock at Brest, France, in an RAF daylight raid December 18 is believed to have trapped the 26,000-ton German battleships Scharnhorst and Gneisenau in the docks and damaged them anew, the Air Ministry news service reported tonight.

It said aerial photographs taken during the raid also gave reason to believe, "although the confusion of smoke precludes a certainty, that a heavy bomb had fallen amidship and penetrated the deck of the Scharnhorst."

Heavy Bombs Dropped

In addition, the service announced, it is "quite certain that a heavy armor-piercing bomb" fell between the stern on the Gneisenau and the side of the dry dock and another similarly between the Scharnhorst and her dock.

The news service said neither battleship probably could be moved until the damaged gates are repaired. Moreover, it added, "a great number of bombs" have fallen close to them although "how much damage these have done can only be conjectured at the moment."

"Important s bmarine pens at Brest also were heavily bombed during the attack and received one certain and two probable hits," it reported.

Buildings Demolished

"Buildings, possibly workshops, behind the submarine pen have been demolished."

Although the attack was made from "great height in order to enable the bombs to penetrate the ship's armor," the Ministry said photographs showed such extreme accuracy that "not a single bomb fell into the civil town or in the commercial port of Brest."

Nazis Report Raid On Malta

Berlin, Dec. 22 (Official Broadcast Recorded by the AP.)—The German high command announced today that seven British fighter planes were shot down in combats on the Libyan front yesterday, but dismissed land operations in that zone by declaring briefly that "no operations took place."

The Germans also reported their planes had raided the British Mediterranean base of Mayta durin gthe night, attacking shipping and supply dumps with heavy bombs and shooting down four enemy fighters without a single loss.

Berlin Belittles British Raids

Berlin, Dec. 22 (Official Broadcast Recorded by (AP)—Two British bombers were shot down last night during the course of raids on Helgoland Bight and German-occupied regions along the English Channel, the German high command announced today.

The British attacks, carried out by lone-wolf raiders, proved ineffective, a communique said.

German night raiders were reported to have attacked port installations on the British southeast coast.

RAF Pounds French Port

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 22—An attack on St. Nazaire, French Atlantic port held by the Germans, was made by British aircraft last night, the Air Ministry said today.

It reported one plane missing from the attack, and another plane missing from an offensive patrol yesterday, but said one hostile bomber was destroyed over Britain during the night.

British Troops Push 150 Miles Into Libya

DEC 23 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Egypt, Dec. 22—A patrol far out in front of Britain's rapidly advancing army in Libya has made a bold, surprise stab against an Axis garrison 150 miles into Tripolitania, British general headquarters disclosed today in a communique which, for the third successive day, indicated that the main British forces were pressing westward at top speed.

The exact site of the daring swoop, where an entire garrison was said to have been "accounted for" although it outnumbered the attackers six to one, and at least twenty-four German and Italian planes destroyed on the ground, was not given.

Pass Previous Penetration Point

That it was 150 miles inside the western section of Libya, however, meant that Britain's vanguards have pierced beyond the high-water mark of the first big westward push at Agedabia, on the Gulf of Sirte, near Tripolitania's eastern border with Cirenaica.

(In Rome, the leading Italian commentator, Virginio Gyda, said in Il Giornale d'Italia that "almost the entire mass of Italian armed sea and air farces" was being thrown in to stop the drive of British troops, heavily reinforced from elsewhere in the Middle East. Gayda declared the battle being fought would decide the fate of the whole of Italy.)

Expect Hard Fight

British officials said they expected a hard fight for Bengasi, but believed Rommel had decided not to risk the best of his infantry in a stand there, a sindicated by columns of Axis trucks sighted bearing infantry south from Bengasi.

It was not clear wheher pursuing British had made contact with Rommel's retreating forces, but a brief communique said twelve German tanks had been destroyed in the course of the advance an deight medium Italian tanks captured.

Both General Headquarters and the R. A. F. here stressed savage R. A. F. and Free French air force raids far behind the Axis lines.

(An Air Ministry report in London said British air superiority in North Africa was great enough to permit an R. A. F. attack on an Axis motor column "ten miles long" with out interruption all day Saturday, but a German dispatch from an Associated Press correspondent at Lerna said bore German planes than British were seen overhead there.)

AXIS IN LIBYA SPEEDS FLIGHT, FACES A TRAP

British Patrol Plunges 150 Miles Into Tripolitania Sector

Brilliant Move To Encircle Foe Near Bengasi Is Reported

By Edward Kennedy

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Dec. 22—A British desert patrol plunging 150 miles westward into Tripolitania was reported officially tonight to have wiped out an Axis garrison and air base in a brilliant move to trap the main German and Italian forces in flight near Bengasi, far to the east.

Gen. Erwin von Rommel's main Panzer troops were reported beating a hasty retreat toward Agedabia south of Bengasi, with British troops at their heels, while Italian rear guards tried to check the British only twenty-five miles east of Bengasi at El Abiar. These rear guards were being pressed back, the British said.

Called Daring Thrust

The brief British account of the daring thrust into Tripolitania said:

"A few days ago one of our mechanized patrols operating over 150 miles into Tripolitania carried out a brilliant surprise against an enemy airdrome which had just been taken into use.

"No less than twenty-four German and Italian aircraft were destroyed on the ground, dumps of petrol and bombs were demolished, and the entire garrison, which outnumbered the raiders by six to one, was accounted for."

DEC 23 1941

Halfway To Tripoli

This action put the British 450 miles beyond the Egyptian frontier and almost halfway to Tripoli, the main Axis Libyan base, whose capture would be a death blow to Premier Mussolini's shattered empire, and would place Allied forces in contact with French North Africa.

The British did not name the site of the demolished base, but the distance suggested that it was at Sirte or near by on the Bengasi-Tripoli coastal highway.

This advance force apparently was the one which early in this offensive cut straight across the Libyan desert to the Gulf of Sirte. The British have not mentioned it for weeks.

Signs Of Desperation

The dispatches indicated that the talians in Cirenaica were doing nearly all the rear-guard fighting, with the Germans desperately trying to salvage their mechanized equipment in a retreat into Tripolitania, where the advance British patrol now stands.

These main British units now were more than 280 miles inside Cirenaica, the eastern division of Libya, and their tactics consisted of a swift series of encirclement efforts.

Northeast of Bengasi British units swept into Cirene and Appolonia, about fifty miles west of Derna on the coast. Axis troops also were said to be retiring toward Bengasi along the coastal road from those points, while other units were pocketed in the intervening mountain regions.

10,000 Axis Prisoners

The British already have taken more than 10,000 Axis prisoners in the five-week-old push, 4,000 of them Germans.

Big quantities of armament and mechanized equipment also fell into their hands along the littered desert roads.

Despite bad flying weather the RAF also was reported "reaping a rich reward" in low-level attacks on the fleeing Axis concentrations.

Hundreds of trucks and other motorized equipment which the Axis need for the withdrawal [illegible] reported smashed.

DEC 23 1941

The penetration into Tripolitania was the first for the British. Last winter's offensive had carried the British to El Agheila, about ten miles short of Tripolitania, before an Axis counter-offensive pushed them back to Egypt.

Italians Show Concern

Berlin dismissed the African operations by declaring "no major operations took place," but the Italians showed open concern.

Virginio Gayda, Italian commentator, said nearly all of Italy's armed forces had been thrown into the conflict in an effort to stop the British. The battle would decide all Italy's fate, he said bluntly.

The Italian high command acknowledged the fighting now was in the mountains of northern Cirenaica. Widespread British air attacks on Tripoli, Bengasi, Barce and Derna caused no serious damage, the communique said.

British attacks on the isolated garrison of Bardia, near the Egyptian frontier far behind the British advance, were said to have been repulsed.

Ex-Golf Champ Is Missing In Libya

London, Dec. 22 (AP)—Count John Bendern, 34, who, as John de Forest, won the British amateur golf championship in 1932, was reported missing today, and is believed to be a prisoner in Libya.

A lieutenant in the Yeomanry regiment, he changed his name four years ago when his father, Millionaire Baron de Forest, became a citizen of the principality of Liechenstein and adopted the title of count.

Germans Report Stiff Resistance

Berlin, Dec. 22 (Official Broadcast Recorded by the AP.)—The German high command announced today that seven British fighter planes were shot down in combats on the Libyan front yesterday, but dismissed land operations in that zone by declaring briefly that "no major operations took place."

Italians Move To New Points

Rome, Dec. 22 (Official Broadcast Recorded by AP)—British attacks on the port of Bardia have been repulsed and local fighting is taking place in the mountains of northern Cirenaica, the high command reported today.

The communique said Italian troops were moving to new positions.

An advanced post taken by the British was recaptured, the Italians added, but did not give the location.

Troops Machine-Gunned

Axis planes bombed British rearguards and carried out low-level machine-gun attacks on troops on the march and on concentrations of mechanized units, the communique added.

The Italians claimed eleven British planes were shot down, ten of them by German fighters. British raids on Derna, Tripoli, Bengasi and Brace were said to have caused no serious damage.

DUTCH WAR ON ITALY

Formal Declaration Ascribed to Jap-German Tie.

London, Dec. 22 (A. P.).—The Netherlands Government-in-exile announced today it has declared war on Italy because of Italian participation with Germany and Japan in the new Axis war treaty.

DEC 23 1941

The Netherlands had been at war with Germany since the Nazi invasion of Holland in 1940 and with Japan since the outbreak of hostilities in the Far East.

The communique simply said: "The Netherlands Government, taking note of the agreement concluded on December 11, 1941, among Germany, Japan and Italy, and observing that Italy has thereby expressly taken the side, not only of Germany but also of Japan, Powers with whom the Netherlands Kingdom is at war, consider the Netherlands Kingdom at war with Italy as from December 11, 1941.

"The Italian Government accordingly has been informed."

EARLE AND STAFF DUE AT ISTANBUL FRIDAY

Dozen other Americans are Unaccounted for

Instanbul, Dec. 20—(Delayed)—(AP)—Advices from Sofia today said United States Minister to Bulgaria George H. Earle, 3d, and a party of nine Americans, mostly members of his legation staff, would arrive here Friday.

Unaccounted for since Bulgaria declared war against the United States were about a dozen other Americans including teachers in the American College in Sofia, missionaries and some oil and tobacco men. The Bulgarian Government was believed to be urging some of these people to carry on their work in Bulgaria.

Some Americans arriving in Sofia from Rumania were turned back to Bucharest, the advices said, including the Y. M. C. A. director of Bucharest.

Negotiations are proceeding for exit visas for all these Americans.

IRANIAN ACCORD READY

Treaty with Britain and Russia Placed before Persian Parliament

Teheran, Iran, Dec. 21—(Delayed)—(AP) — A British-Soviet-Iranian alliance treaty was placed before Parliament today and observers expected it to be approved by the end of the week.

Under the pact, Britain and Russia undertake to defend Iran from aggression and to withdraw their troops from Iran six months after the end of the war. The two nations are granted unrestricted right to guard, use, or control all means of communications, railways, roads, ports, airdromes and oil pipelines.

All parties agre to follow the spirit of the treaty in their foreign relations, and this was inetrpreted as indicating that Iran would sever diplomatic relations with countries at war with Britain and Russia.

FOUR LABORITES ELEVATED

Go to House of Lords to give Party more Strength there

London, Dec. 22— (AP) —The elevation of four Laborites to the House of Lords to strengthen the Labor Party in the Upper House was announced formally today.

Their addition swells to 17 the number of Labor peers.

King George VI conferred a viscountcy on William Wedgwood Benn, R. A. F. squadron leader, and baronies on Reginald Fletcher, Charles Latham and Josiah Wedgwood.

It was pointed out that with a coalition of Conservatives, Liberals and Laborities running the government it was considered necessary to strengthen the Laborites in the Upper House. In this connection, it was stressed that the new peers were created as a special measure of state policy, not as a matter of political honors or awards.

BRITISH DOMINIONS RAISING 1,500,000

All Are On Complete Conscription Basis For Home Defense, London Says

DEC 23 1941

Half Of Those Eligible Reported To Have Volunteered For Service Abroad

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 22—The British domiions are now on a complete conscription basis for home defense and are expected by military authorities to bolster the empire's force with approximately 1,500,000 men at home and abroad.

All able-bodied males are being compelled to take some part in home defense, and it is estimated that nearly half of these have volunteered for service abroad.

500,000 In Canada

In Australia part-time militia training has been extended to full-time, and the country has about half a million men in service or training at home and overseas. A volunteer Women's Army Corps has just been enrolled to release men for the fighting services.

Canadians also have about 500,000 men under arms, undergoing training or filling home defense roles. Half of the total is reported here to have volunteered for fighting overseas.

Out of South Africa's 2,000,000 European population, about ten per cent. have been called up under the militia ordinances of 1912 and 1922 under which all males from 17 to 60 are liable to service, those between 17 and 25 being given training during four consecutive years.

New Zealand has just finished a lottery for conscription of single men and now is combing through the married men up to 40. The country has about a third of its male population of 600,000 either fighting or getting ready to fight.

ROOSEVELT SIGNS BIGGER DRAFT BILL

DEC 23 1941

Selective Service Officials Start Plans To Register 23,500,000 Men

Listing May Be By Age Groups Between 18 And 64, Rather Than En Masse

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 22—The draft expansion bill was signed into law by President Roosevelt today, and selective service officials began laying plans for registering the 23,500,000 men between 18 and 64, inclusive.

They said the men may be registered on several dates, by age groups, rather than en masse. It was believed the first registration might be next month. Registrants between the ages of 20 and 44, inclusive, will be liable to military service.

Already local boards have been advised by Brig. Gen. Lewis M. Hershey, national draft director, to prepare for the task of classifying the vast additional man power made available by the measure.

To Use Present Machinery

Existing machinery, used to register and classify according to eligibility for military service the 17,500,000 men between 21 and 35 already enrolled, is to be employed and expanded as required.

No hint has been given by the War Department as to how fast the armed forces are to be expanded to meet war requirements. Secretary Stimson has said only that strategic considerations would dicate the expansion, that no ceiling would be set, and that the draft would be relied on to the exclusion of voluntary enlistments which are to be discontinued "as soon as the present rush subsides."

Some officials thought, however, the armed forces might be increased at a maximum rate of 200,000 a month, beginning in January, until additional mobilization and training camps are provided.

Reservoir Of 1,000,000

A reservoir of approximately 1,600,000 Class 1-A men under 28 already is on call from the previous two registrations.

DEC 23 1941

The army now totals nearly 2,000,000 men. Official plans submitted to Congress before the war emergency contemplated expansion to some 3,000,000 as the next stage of building up ground forces and appropriations for "critical" weapons were voted with this plan in view.

The Senate today passed and sent to the House a bill to increase the authorized enlisted strength of the navy from 300,000 to 500,000 men. The measure would also raise the limit on Marine Corps from 60,000 to 104,000

Martinique Neutrality Pact Indicated By Hull

DEC 23 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 22—Secretary of State Cordell Hull indicated today that an agreement had been reached with French authorities of Martinique assuring the neutralization of that strategic Caribbean island.

Hull conferred for an hour with Rear Admiral Frederick J. Horne, who last week was reported to have reached an agreement with Admiral Georges Robert, French high commissioner, after lengthy secret conversations at Martinique.

Status Quo Obtained

The secretary told his press conference later that the result of the admiral's mission was simply a continuance of the status quo. This was interpreted to mean that French authorities on the island were in accord with precautionary measures taken by the United States to prevent Axis seizure of the colony and at the same time were satisfied that this country had no desire to infringe on the sovereignty of the island.

While Martinique is strategically located athwart the approaches to the Panama Canal area, there is no military air field there. The French aircraft carrier Bearn, a cruiser and a training ship are anchored off Fort de France and about one hundred American-made short-range fighter planes originally destined for France are lying idle there.

Told To Shun Uruguay

Buenos Aires, Dec. 22 (AP)—The German consulate was reported today to have advised its nationals not to visit Uruguay's popular summer resorts until after the Pan-American conference at Rio de Janeiro next month, possibly because of a belief that Uruguay may break off relations with Germany soon.

French Ship Afire At Buenos Aires

Buenos Aires, Dec. 22 (AP).—Fire broke out in a hold of the French refrigerator ship Aurigny today and it was feared the 9,589-ton vessel would be a total loss. The Aurigny has been in refuge here since the war started in 1939.

Chambermaid In King Carol's Household Turns 'Officer' Over To Mexico Police

DEC 23 1941

Mexico City, Dec. 22 (AP)—A chambermaid in the household-in-exile of former King Carol of Rumania was credited with an assist today in the arrest of a Mexican who allegedly presented himself as an "official lieutenant of German militia organized in Mexico."

After being turned over to military police by his erstwhile girl friend, Hernan Farrigno Garza, a 21-year-old tourist guide from Monterrey, declared he had found a "German militia" card in a hotel room, imposed his own picture on it and flashed it to impress his friends.

The newspaper Ultimas Noticias reported he admitted Nazi leanings, but he denied belonging to any German organization in Mexico or knowing one existed.

Mexico Puts 30,000 To Guarding Coasts

Not Taking Any Chances On Attack, Member Of Cabinet Indicates

Miami Beach, Fla., Dec. 22 (AP)—Mexico has mobilized 30,000 men to guard her coasts, Javier Gomez, member of the Cabinet and chief of the Central Department, said today.

"While we are far from the center of operations, we believe there is a remote possibility that Mexico will be attacked," he explained.

Gomez asserted that, while Mexico is standing solidly beside the United States against the Axis, "we have not declared war because no purpose would be served at the moment by it."

Gomez, his wife and their four children are spending a short vacation here. They will fly back to Mexico City Wednesday.

New York Police Commissioner Says Crowds Will Be Allowed To Gather As In Past

New York, Dec. 22 (AP)—Lewis J. Valentine, police commissioner, set at rest today fears that the war would prohibit the traditional gathering in Times Square on New Year's eve.

After consulting with army officials, Valentine said crowds would be permitted to gather in the famous theater district as before.

Roosevelt Proclaims Day Of Prayer New Year's Day

DEC 23 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 22—Following is the text of the proclamation issued by President Roosevelt today appointing New Year's Day as a day of prayer:

The year 1941 has brought upon our nation a war of aggression by powers dominated by arrogant rulers whose selfish purpose is to destroy free institutions. They would thereby take from the freedom-loving peoples of the earth the hard-won liberties gained over many centuries.

The new year of 1942 calls for the courage and the resolution of old and young to help win a world struggle in order that we may preserve all we hold dear.

We are confident in our devotion to country, in our love of freedom, in our inheritance of courage. But our strength, as the strength of all men everywhere, is of greater avail as God upholds us.

Therefore, I Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, do hereby appoint the first day of the year 1942 as a day of prayer, of asking forgiveness for our shortcomings of the past, of consecration to the tasks of the present, of asking God's help in days to come.

We need His guidance that this people may be humble in spirit but strong in the conviction of the right; steadfast to endure sacrifices and brave to achieve a victory of liberty and peace.

In witness whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States of America to be affixed. FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

DOESN'T KNOW OF SON YET

Franklin Roosevelt, Jr., Now On Duty At Sea

Washington, Dec. 22 (AP)—Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., an ensign on duty somewhere at sea, has not yet learned that he is the father of a second son, born yesterday in Philadelphia.

The ensign's mother disclosed this today. She said she planned to go see her latest grandchild within a few days.

production of munitions no matter what sacrifices may be required, that we raise as fast as possible an overwhelming army, air power, mechanized striking forces and vast reserves.

"First Things First"

"For every man, woman and child first things must come first. And the first and foremost requirement now is the winning of this war.

"Let there be no talk of holding back supplies from our fighting partners—this is all one war, and the strategists must decide where each ounce of energy can be best applied. Aid to Russia and aid to England are now part and parcel of our own war effort."

In asserting that "if more guns and planes are required at Manila and Singapore, we should be willing to strip the defenses of non-military objectives in San Francisco, Boston and New York," Dr. Conant said it would be better for American cities to take occasional bombings "than deprive men on the fighting fronts of what they need."

Dr. Conant listed as a second war aim the readiness of the free countries, and particularly the United States, "to formulate plans to carry out the responsibilities of the victors and to shoulder our share of the load of a difficult and thankless task."

"We shall have to insist that the final international order will be based on freedom," he said, adding that to protect freedom "an armed alliance of free societies must stand ready, once this war is over, to serve together if need be, not for the purpose of imposing their form of government on other people, but protectively against the growth of other challenges to their freedom."

Nation Must Learn To Think Offensively, Dr. Conant Says

Defensive Psychology Won't Win War, President Of Harvard Warns In New York Address

DEC 23 1941

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 22—James B. Conant, president of Harvard University, said tonight United States citizens "must learn to think offensively, not defensively, if we will win this struggle."

Warning that "the first surge of patriotic feeling that sweeps a nation at the outbreak of hostilities is soon followed by a more critical frame of mind," and that there would be periods when doubt would creep into the minds of loyal men, Mr. Conant said in a speech prepared for the annual dinner of the New England Society of New York:

"We must consciously develop the psychology of attack. Public opinion must be loud in demanding that we face the offense whenever and wherever possible, that we increase our

Peace Conditions

The Harvard president said the "first principle of our war aims" was the conditions under which the United States would make peace.

There might be overtures for a negotiated peace, he said, but he declared that until the United States was certain that Germany and Japan had been transformed by "hard circumstances" into nations with small industrial resources or with a will to peace, "there can be no hope of eventual disarmament of other countries, or of any enduring peace."

"Grim necessity," he said, "requires that unconditional surrender of the Axis powers be the first war aim of the United States."

NAVY YARD WORKER HELD IN SABOTAGE

DEC 23 1941

42-Year-Old American-Born Prisoner Held In Bail Of $10,000

Accused Trying To Blow Up Naval Construction Shop In Boston

[By the Associated Press]

Boston, Dec. 22—A 42-year-old American-born navy yard worker was arrested today by Federal agents on charges of sabotage, including the cutting of a power cable by means of which, a United States attorney said, he hoped to "blow up" a shop in which naval construction was taking place.

The prisoner, William Patrick Collins, who said he was a native of Cleveland, Ohio, and had been working in the navy yard here for sixteen years, first pleaded guilty to a charge of "injuring, interfering with and obstructing the national defense by cutting a cable used in connection with the operation of an acetylene cutting machine being used in the (Boston) navy yard."

Bail Set At $10,000

However, Edward Donovan, United States Commissioner, ordered him to change his plea to innocent. He set bail at $10,000 and continued the hearing until January 6.

Charging that the alleged cutting of the cable had taken place on December 8—the day the United States declared war on Japan—Edmund J. Brandon, United States Attorney, urged the court to set the highest possible bail on Collins, who was arrested today while he was at work.

"While we do not want to create a wave of hysteria," he said, "we are determined to make an example of this case, which is the first of its kind in this section."

Oil Cans Punctured

The United States Attorney said he expected to show that Collins had punctured holes in huge oil cans and had left oil spigots open, thus wasting "thousands of gallons" of the fuel.

He contended that Collins had loosened bolts on machinery so that gears would fly off when the apparatus was started, and that he had burned identification numbers off key parts used in naval construction.

In the past, Brandon said, the arrested man had committed acts effective enough to delay work for at least a week on naval vessels now in service.

Collins testified he had worked in the postoffice at Cleveland for three years before coming to Boston.

Japanese aliens are now interned. Out of a total population of 425,000 in the Hawaiian islands, 160,000 are of Japanese ancestry. Of these 35,000 are aliens.

For the most part, the Japanese population of Hawaii has given no evidence of disloyalty. However, as was reported by Secretary Knox on his return from his recent trip to Hawaii, there is strong evidence to support the belief that some Japanese were engaged in fifth-column activity and provided the enemy with valuable military information prior to the surprise attack on Pearl Harbor.

Confined To Japanese

These activities were entirely confined to Japanese residents, all other elements of the population, as well as the great majority of the Japanese, remaining loyal to the United States. There were no fifth columnists among the members of the armed services in Hawaii. The military authorities have imprisoned all known Japanese leaders of subversive activities.

Federal and territorial law enforcement agencies are cooperating with the army in detecting and suppressing enemy fifth-column activities among the Japanese residents of the islands.

SINGAPORE, Dec. 22 (AP).—A British communique:

There is nothing to report from the northern (Malaya) front.

There was some air activity over Kuala Lumpur this morning. Fighting took place between enemy aircraft and our own planes, and our anti-aircraft guns also were active. Three enemy aircraft were seen to have been destroyed. We lost three fighter aircraft.

It is further reported that during a offensive air patrol by our aircraft on an airfield in the north occupied by the Japanese, six enemy planes were put out of commission.

A British communique:

Our troops continued to hold their position around Kuala Kangsar.

There was a further battle yesterday on the Grik Road, where the enemy has been using the Perak River to bring up reinforcements by raft. Our troops engaged the enemy and inflicted heavy casualties.

There was no enemy air activity last night.

CAIRO, Dec. 22 (AP).—A Middle East headquarters communique:

By yesterday evening our mobile columns which had advanced through and south of the Jebel Akhdar were pressing back the enemy holding covering positions east of Bengasi, while further columns were operating against enemy forces which were withdrawing southward toward Agedabia.

Severe weather conditions again hampered movements on both sides, particularly in the air. Nevertheless, our air forces again reaped a rich reward from intensive action against concentrations of enemy mechanical transports on roads and tracks alongside the seaboard of the Gulf of Sidra.

A few days ago one of our mechanized patrols operating over 150 miles into Tripolitania carried out a brilliant surprise against an enemy airdrome which had just been taken into use. No less than twenty-four German and Italian aircraft were destroyed on the ground, dumps of petrol and bombs were demolished, and the entire garrison, which outnumbered the raiders by six to one, was accounted for.

LONDON, Dec. 22 (AP).—A Air Ministry communique:

Hudson aircraft of the Coastal Command operating off the coast of Norway this morning attacked a large enemy tanker and a smaller supply ship. Each ship was hit by bombs.

An Air Ministry communique:

Aircraft of the Coastal Command last night attacked objectives at St. Nazaire. One of these aircraft is missing.

An aircraft of the Bomber Command is missing from an offensive patrol yesterday.

An enemy bomber was destroyed over this country last night.

German

BERLIN, Dec. 22 (Official broadcast recorded by (AP)).—A special high command communique:

A submarine operating in the Atlantic under the command of Captian Bigalk torpedoed a British aircraft carrier. The ship sank.

The regular high command communique:

On the central sector of the eastern front numerous Soviet attacks broke down against the stubborn resistance of our troops.

The German air force supported hard fighting of the army by strong attacks on enemy field positions, tank concentrations, motorized columns and railway lines.

On the English southeast coast our bombers attacked port installations last night.

In North Africa no major operations took place. Seven British fighters were shot down in air combats.

German air formations attacked shipping and fuel and munitions dumps in the Port of Valletta, Malta, by day and night with bombs of the heaviest caliber. Four enemy fighters were shot down without loss to ourselves.

During ineffective raids by single British bombers in the Channel area and Helgoland Bight, the enemy lost two bombers.

DEC 23 1941

Italian

ROME, Dec. 22 (Official broadcast recorded by (AP)).—A high command communique.

Local actions continue in the Cyrenaican Jebel. Our troops are proceeding to new positions. The enemy has attacked Bardia and made an attack on Sollum without results. An advanced post previously occupied by the enemy was recaptured by our troops.

Italian and allied planes carried out relentless operations, bombing enemy rear guards and carrying out low-level machine-gun attacks on troops on the march and concentrations of mechanized units. Eleven planes were shot down in aerial combat, ten of these by German fighters.

There were enemy raids on Tripoli, Bengasi and Barce. Several persons were injured but the damage caused was not serious. A plane hit by anti-air craft fire at Bengasi crashed in flames.

Large formations of German planes successfully carried out day and night attacks on shipping and port installations and airports at Malta.

Finnish

HELSINKI, Dec. 22 (AP).—A war communique:

KARELIAN ISTHMUS: Enemy artillery fire was mild on the whole front. Our artillery and trench mortars scored hits on enemy artillery positions, long bunkers and construction sites.

SVIR FRONT: Usual local harassing artillery and trench mortar fire from both sides. Our own artillery destroyed numerous enemy log bunkers and machine-gun nests. In a certain sector our troops attacked and bettered their positions. Enemy patrol sallies were repulsed. Many prisoners were taken.

EAST FRONT: The situation is unchanged. Mild artillery and trench mortar fire as well as patrol activity from both sides in different sectors.

Generals and Admirals Are Japan's Rulers

They are Responsible for the most Desperate Gamble Ever taken by Heads of a Modern State, Expert on Orient Declares

DEC 23 1941

Glenn Babb calls upon the experiences and observations of his many years as an Associated Press correspondent in the Orient in analyzing the character of Japan's leadership.

By GLENN BABB

New York, Dec. 22.—The most desperate gamble, the most terrific responsibility ever taken by the heads of a modern State, undoubtedly was that made known to the world by the crash of Japanese bombs at Pearl Harbor. But we never may know the individuals who really made the decision.

Hitler has no counterparts in Japan. Leadership there has a baffling anonymous quality. Real power is held usually anywhere except among those who seem to hold it.

Japan is ruled by a group of generals and admirals. It is hard to say that any individual is any more the leader than a score of his fellows.

Of course we can identify the figureheads. At the top is Emperor Hirohito, 124th occupant of the august high seat in the line unbroken for ages. But the Mikado would be a figurehead even if the present occupant were a man of real parts—which he is not.

Premier Also a Figurehead

Then there is the premier, a general, Hideki Tojo, but essentially a figurehead nevertheless. His cabinet has been reduced to an office for routine functions. His foreign minister is little more than director of the farce which is all that remains of civilian control of foreign policy.

The focal point of authority is known as Imperial Headquarters, an instrument fashioned and developed by the military clique for its own purposes. It towers above the cabinet and all civilian agencies and has drawn to itself all the awe-inspiring prestige of the throne itself. The generals and admirals run it.

It was founded early in the China war, ostensibly to permit the Emperor to take all the reins of command into his own hands. The announcement of its establishment on November 20, 1937, said it was taken "to concentrate the military forces for so-called long-term hostilities," to be "the organ of supreme command under direct jurisdiction of the Emperor."

Its power has grown steadily from that day. From directing a comparatively minor-league war in China, it has turned to directing preparation for the far greater adventure of a war for control of Asia and the Pacific—the greatest of the continent and oceans. It has seized control of foreign policy and recast the whole economic, social and political structure of the nation for total war—war that risks everything.

Proclaimed War

And finally—as Winston Churchill noted on the morrow of Pearl Harbor—it was Imperial Headquarters, not the Emperor or the cabinet, that proclaimed a state of war with the United States and Britain.

So far does it overshadow the cabinet that the role of Hideki Tojo, full general, premier, war minister and home minister though he be, is of much less importance than most of the world believes. Tojo is in fact a comparatively junior partner, assigned the duty of "front man" for the opening phases of the conflict. The question of war or peace was not his to decide.

Who then are the men who manipulate this machine of ultimate decision and command, Imperial Headquarters? Names can be named but with no guarantee that any one or half a dozen belong ahead of the others.

At the top, ostensibly just below the throne, are the chiefs of the army and navy general staffs, respectively General Gen Sugiyama and Admiral Osami Nagano, two 60-year-old, tough, single-purposed professional fighting men.

30.24— 13709

They occupy these high posts largely because of seniority—which counts tremendously in Japan—because they have outlasted most of their contemporaries and not necessarily because of superiority over their fellows. Both came to the top by the path of high command—Sugiyama led all the armies in China for two years and Nagano commanded the combined fleets—and the political posts of minister of war and navy.

DEC 23 1941

Three Powerful Viceroys

Close behind came the three powerful viceroys of the overseas empire—General Jiro Minami, Governor General of Korea; Admiral Kiyoshi Hasegawa, Governor General of Formosa, and General Yoshijiri Umezu, the real ruler of Manchukuo although his title is ambassador to the court of puppet Emperor Kang Teh.

There are many others who share in the high councils, notably the members of the Supreme War Council, but a full catalog would serve only to confuse. In the coming months, however, we may expect to hear more of some of the following:

Admirals Nobumasa Suyetsugu and Sankichi Takahashi, former commanders-in-chief of the combined fleets; Admirals Koshiro Oikawa and Masazo Sakonji, former cabinet ministers; Admiral Shigetaro Shimada, the current navy minister; General Juzo Nishio and Kuniaki Koiso, former commanders in China and Korea, respectively; the directing geniuses of the Manchurian and China conquests, Generals Kenji Doihara, Seishiro Itagaki and Rensuke Isogai.

This is an incomplete list of the elders of the war councils, the men whose votes were weightiest when the decision was in the balance. Some of them are on the retired list, many are in the nominal semi-retirement of the Supreme War Council only a few in active service. Notable among them as advocates of the "South Seas policy"—the expansion in the southwestern Pacific that presupposes seizure of the Philippines and the knocking out of Singapore, the policy which has been chosen in preference to the northern thrust into Siberia—are Admiral Takahashi and Suyetsugu and General Koiso.

Active Command Is Younger

Active command for the most part rests in younger hands, men with reputations yet to make. But already the fortnight-old war has given the Japanese one fame-spangled name, Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto, Commander-in-chief of the combined fleets, whom the Emperor lauded for the sinking of the Prince of Wales and the Repulse, and whose planes and submarines probably delivered the sneak-punch that wounded the American fleet at Pearl Harbor.

General Shunroku Hata is known to be the leader of the armies in China, and the commanders of the land and sea forces which pounced on Hongkong have been identified—by the British governor's announcement he had rejected their demands for surrender—as Lieutenant-General Takashi Sakai and Vice Admiral Masaichi Niimi. The names of other commanders, including those assaulting the Philippines and Malaya, have not been disclosed.

The Japanese fiction is, of course, that all command centers in the Imperial Palace within its placid moats and gray stone walls in the heart of Tokyo. But the real seat of power is the group of dilapidated structures just outside the moat which house the general staffs of the fighting services.

These were badly shaken in the great earthquake of 18 years ago, but were given only the most necessary repairs. Japan has been spending her money for battleships, torpedo planes, submarines and tanks.

Plot Hatched There

But in these dingy offices has been hatched the most ambitious plot against western civilization ever conceived, barring perhaps that of Adolf Hitler—plans for the conquest of half a world or more.

The Japanese as a race distrust individual leadership; as individuals they shy away from direct responsibility. The man of real power likes to remain in the shadows, to manipulate the puppets the public sees. Ambition that leans to personal glory usually leads to disaster. They do their planning as a headless board of directors, their best fighting in the mass.

For all the impersonal character of this leadership, the Japanese military caste makes a formidable adversary.

The sailors and soldiers are of somewhat different types. The admirals are more polished and more widely traveled, less insular than the generals, but match them in intense loyalty to the throne and their caste and hatred of the white peoples who stand in the way of what they consider Japan's proper destiny, domination of the eastern world.

The soldiers for the most part are almost unbelievably fanatic in their patriotism, with a singleness of purpose unmatched in the western world. They are competent professionally, combining primitive beliefs with mastery of the latest military weapons and tactics.

This close-knit clique is in full control of Japan. There is no real opposition, no civilian or liberal elements to dispute its authority. It has taken an all-or-nothing gamble. Its members know that they cannot expect to survive failure in this great trial of strength with the Anglo-Saxon powers.

Their power today is rooted deep in the support of the masses, fostered by a generation of propaganda and organization.

Interpreting The War News

DEC 23 1941

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

The first crucial battle in the Pacific theater is raging amid the rice paddies of West-Central Luzon and is gripping American hearts with anxious suspense; but elsewhere, half way round the world, even more momentous developments hint at internal disintegration in Germany.

A frantic effort by Hitler to bolster German morale against defeats in Russia and impending doom of the Axis Army in Libya might prove more significant than any territory lost or taken by either side, or any sea battle. If it means that Hitler fears a crackup within Germany under the war strain, as it might, none can say how soon this war may end in utter disaster for the Axis.

DEBACLE IN RUSSIA

Whatever his underlying reason, Hitler has displaced his boasted great captain, Gen. Field Marshal Walther von Brauchitsch, to take personal command of his winter-logged Armies, presumably because of the Nazi military debacle in Russia. And to disguise a little from his people that first smashing German defeat of the war, the announcement of Von Brauchitsch's removal contained this revealing statement:

"With the amazingly rapid annihilation (by Japan) of the American Pacific fleet and the British forces at Singapore and the occupation of numerous British and American bases in East Asia by Japanese forces, the war now is entering on a new phase favorable to us."

It is devoutly to be hoped that Hitler himself believes that to be a true picture of the war scene in the Pacific. His awakening will be all the more rude when the truth dawns upon him.

STILL POWERFUL FORCE

For the fact is that the American Pacific fleet, wherever it is and whatever its immediate mission, still is the most powerful offensive force in the Pacific. The fact is that no vital American or British base about the China Sea has been occupied by the Japanese. Hongkong, even tiny Wake Island with its American devil-dog garrison, still were holding out at last accounts.

Nor is it yet certain that a Japanese blood-bath attempt to take Manila by its military front door, the Lingayen Bay route, can achieve its objective. First terse reports from General MacArthur's headquarters are definitely encouraging.

PREPARED FOR DRIVE

Steeped in strategy and tactics by generations of soldiers from whom he springs and geared to his present task by years of intimate study of the problem of Manila's defense, MacArthur appears to have been fully prepared for the Lingayen attack. He knew the main thrust much come there, not around the northern tip of Luzon or on its southern extremities.

There is no other short and direct road to Manila. There is ample evidence that the main body of American-Filipino defenders is between the Japanese at Lingayen, and Manila, not dispersed to deal with remote threats elsewhere.

BLOWS CLEARLY TIMED

German, rather than Japanese, necessities clearly timed the blows at both Singapore and Luzon. In Manila the tropical rains are now due to start. They could swamp the Nipponese attack as Russian cold and snows, coupled with the astonishing recuperative powers of the Red Army, blasted the German "victory" drive.

December rains are normally frequent and heavy in Central Luzon. January, however, is relatively dry because the torrential downpours of the Philippine rainy season come a little later in the year.

Nevertheless, the rice paddies of the Lingayen hinterland and coastal area with their low irrigation dykes permit widespread flooding to confine the attack to roads that can be defended or dynamited to slow up enemy advances. Time is what counts in this struggle. The size of the Japanese invasion fleet, estimated to carry from 80,000 to 100,000 troops, shows that Tokyo is prepared to flood those beaches with Japanese blood to gain a foothold and save time.

JAPAN RISKING MUCH

Another element in this first crucial clash in the Philippines should be recalled. The Lingayen approach as the probable scene of a major invasion effort was as clearly indicated to American naval authorities on the island as to the Army. With 80 Japanese troop transports and their naval escorts concentrated in that area, a terrible toll could be taken if American submarines are in that vicinity — or if they reach the scene in time.

Japan is risking much to strike at Manila before American reinforcements arrive. It savors of desperation, unless Tokyo believes Hitler's version of American naval disasters in the Pacific.

In the War Zone

Luzon Situation Crucial— Hitler as a Military Mystic

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

DEC 23 1941

Our defenders in the Philippines appear to be in the throes of the supreme test in the bloody fighting which has developed as the result of Japanese landings in force from eighty transports in the Lingayen Gulf area, a bit more than 100 miles northwest of Manila on Luzon Island—strategic heart of these straggling possessions.

The Japs, already delayed in their schedule by the strong defense of Gen. MacArthur's forces, have struck heavily to gain possession before the arrival of American re-enforcements across the Pacific.

Details of this great engagement are meager, and this is no time for speculation. Obviously the position is serious for the Philippines.

The news thus far is a mixture of good and bad. It is a matter of concern if the Japanese have sufficient control of the waters about Luzon to effect a mass landing. It is grand to hear from Gen. MacArthur in an early report of the fighting that "our troops are behaving well."

Hitler Seen in Crisis.

Next to this invasion of the Philippines, the great sensation of the day is Hitler's assumption of supreme command of his armies, displacing the famous Field Marshal von Brauchitsch.

The precise meaning of this extraordinary move remains obscure, but I think we are safe in saying that it was inspired by a great emergency.

One doesn't overlook, of course, that the Fuehrer himself has declared he is divinely ordained to carry out his program for the fatherland. Still, it is hard to believe that this is the explanation. Admitting Hitler's genius for leadership, he might be expected to be the last to claim that his training fitted him for a position demanding the highest type of military skill, and to feel that there is no one else capable of leading his armies.

Rather, it seems to me, he is faced with a great crisis in which either (1) he is forced to depend upon the personal hold which he has on his people or (2) he and Von Brauchitsch have disagreed on a vital military issue.

Possibilities Considered.

It may be that Herr Hitler is compelled to use all his power of leadership to meet the reaction of his people to the great defeat suffered by German arms in Russia. That operation, which is still developing dangerously for the Nazis, certainly takes some explaining.

It is equally possible that the Fuehrer wants to undertake something that his commander in chief felt suicidal. There are several guesses along that line. About the wildest thing one could think of would be an attempt to invade England at this time of year. The German High Command undoubtedly would balk at such a rash adventure, but Hitler says he is working by intuition and maybe his intuition tells him that now is the appointed hour for a desperate blow.

Perhaps the crisis involves a military dispute regarding Russia. It might relate to a challenge to Turkey's two million bayonets in an effort to break into the Middle East. It might have to do with a drive through Spain to bring that country into the war and to open up new bases for Germany in North Africa.

Be that as it may, it's my guess that Hitler is a badly worried man.

DEC 23 1941

There is further evidence that all is not well with Germany in the language employed by the Nazi chief and Propaganda Minister Goebbels in their urgent week-end appeals to the public for warm clothing for German soldiers caught in the toils of the killing Russian winter.

Ostensibly these statements were intended to relieve suffering. Any doubt as to the grim position of the Nazis on the frozen steppes of Russia must be removed by Goebbels's blunt edict that "as long as a single object of winter clothing remains still in the Fatherland, it must go to the front." Things are desperate when you strip a nation like that in winter.

But the appeals also were calculated to prepare the public for bad news of the terrible reverses inflicted on German arms in Russia and Libya. At long last Hitler has admitted that he is facing "an enemy who is superior in numbers and in material on the front." And Goebbels has impressed the public with the prospect of a long and bitter war, in which Germany cannot avoid "certain reverses."

Sits Beside President For Dramatic Press Conference

DEC 24 1941

BY RICHARD L. TURNER

Washington, Dec. 23 (AP) — Winston Churchill, Prime Minister of Great Britain, seated at the side of President Roosevelt, told American newsmen today that recent events—the German defeat in Russia and America's entry into the war—had produced a turning point in the tide of world-wide conflict.

It was impossible to describe his feeling of relief, he slowly said, to find Russia victorious and the United States and Great Britain standing side by side. It was incredible, he added, and anyone who had been through the lonely months of 1940 must thank God fervently.

It was such a press conference as could happen only at a time of grave international crisis, the chief executives of the two great English speaking peoples, side by side, answering the eager questions of an electrified group of newspapermen, reporters who had lustily cheered the British statesman when he was introduced to them.

It was followed by the first of series of staff meetings, as President Roosevelt called them, which brought together the commanding officers of the armed forces of the United States and Britain in an effort to work out a unified strategy for a war that is spread to the ends of the globe.

The whole was set against a military situation which found most of the news good news—Axis forces continuing their Russian and Libyan retreats and at a standstill on the approaches to Singapore, but increasing the vigor of their attacks on the Philippines. There was however, bad news from Wake Island, word that a Japanese force had landed there, but no information as to whether the gallant Marine garrison defending that coral pin point had been forced to surrender.

Mr. Churchill, provided with a comfortable working space at the White House, had spent the day in a bustle of activity, which included a conference with Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador here, and diplomatic representatives of the British dominions.

He came to the President's regular Tuesday press conference, his peajacket and other nautical garb replaced by a black coat, striped trousers, white shirt and a perky blue polkadot bow tie. He sat talking solemnly to the President as the reporters slowly filed in. Mr. Roosevelt made a few announcements, and then presented him, with an admonition that English newsmen were lambs as compared, with the wolves of the American press.

Reporters Cheer Him

At Mr. Roosevelt's suggestion, Mr. Churchill climbed upon his chair so that those in the rear might get a glimpse of his round, ruddy and grinning face. As he did so, the reporters first began clapping, then a cheer started which grew in vigor, and subsided long after it had started.

Mr. Churchill delighted the newsmen with his amiability, his quick answers, and his occasional quips, some of which involved an uncertain use of the American vernacular.

He was asked "what about Singapore?"

We are going to do our utmost, the reply was, to defend Singapore and its approaches until the situation becomes such that it is feasible to resume the general offensive in the South Pacific. Whom he meant by we, whether the British alone or the British and Americans in combination, was not made clear.

However, he said soon afterward that the key to the situation was the resolute manner in which the American and British people are going to throw themselves into the conflict.

As for the question of public morale in Germany:

He had always felt that the Allies might get a windfall from that direction. They should, however, not count upon it, but go right along as they had been, depending not on internal collapse but on an external knockout blow.

Rebuff For Nazis In Russia

As for the situation in Russia: The Nazis have received a heavy rebuff, they are rapidly retreating over an immense front, seeking to find a place to winter. It would not, he added, be a comfortable place.

How long would the war take?

If we manage it well it will only take half as long as if we manage it badly.

Would he favor a conference involving himself, Mr. Roosevelt, Stalin and Chiang Kai-Shek?

In principle, yes.

Could American munitions be sent to the Middle East under the new situation in the Pacific?

The military power and munitions producing power of the United States will develop on such a scale that the question will not be of choosing which theater of war supplies will be sent to, but of how to get supplies to their destination.

Did he add America's entry into the war to his previously spoken list of the climactic events of this conflict?

He thought, he said, he could almost say he sure did.

Post War Problems Later

Would post war problems be involved in the current conversations?

He hoped not. The present emergency came first.

Did he favor the appointment of a general High Command for all Allied fighting forces?

Such a post would be difficult to arrange, he thought. The situation was more in need of a broad blocking out, where strategy was concerned, with the execution of that strategy left to the military authorities of the various countries involved in the war. The war was of such world-wide scope, he added, that no man born could assume responsibility for the associated powers.

As for allocation of supplies among the Allies, should there be a directing head for that?

There was good liaison on that already.

What would Hitler do next?

If the reporters had any information on that point he would be very glad to have it. Something probably would come, however, he said, of the current reports of Nazi invasion attempts in various directions.

German Supplies Large

Had Germany lost too many supplies in Russia to be able to replace them by spring?

The Nazis have vast accumulations of material. There was no question as to its quantity, but there was a question as to its quality. There might be a German shortage of oil.

Did he have any doubt as to the outcome of the war.

Absolutely and emphatically not.

Before the questioning turned to Mr. Churchill, President Roosevelt said he wished to emphasize that the talks with the British were preliminary, and did not mean that any country battling the Axis would be excluded from consultation.

Mr. Churchill had been in touch with representatives of British dominions during the day and that was important because New Zealand and Australia were in the danger zone. Churchill put in at this point that Canada was also. Unity of action in the South Pacific, Mr. Roosevelt resumed, was being worked out.

Other Nations To Confer

Not only would the nations actively engaged in the war be invited into the consultations, he continued, but the governments, (presumably the exiled governments), of the countries that have been overrun by the Nazis. This would apply, too, he indicated, to numerous Latin American nations which are following a policy of what he called active non-belligerency.

The broad geographical scope of the fighting emphasized the difficult problem facing the war council as it sought to work out a unified strategy.

Presumably Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchil went exhaustively into its many complicated but interlocking phases in a lengthy and intimate discussion last night, a discussion which began soon after the British Prime Minister's surprise arrival in the capital of England's great Ally.

The two were together in Abraham Lincoln's oval study, a White House announcement today said, from early evening until 1 a. m. for the most part, they were alone.

Staffs Join Conference

In effect the war council meeting was a continuation of what was said last night.

For America, its members include: Secretary of War Stimson; Gen. George C. Marshall, chief of staff; Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of staff for air; Secretary of the Navy Knox; Adm. Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations; Adm. Ernest J. King, commander-in-chief of the fleet, and Harry L. Hopkins, special assistant to the Persident on the Lease-Lend program.

For Britain, the participants were Lord Beaverbrook, supply minister; Admiral of the Fleet Sir Dudley Pound; Air Chief Marshal Sir Charles Portal and Field Marshal Sir John Dill, who retires Dec. 25 as Chief of the Imperial General Staff.

As the British-American conferences progress, other nations involved in the war against the Axis will be kept informed of what is being done. The plan is eventually to bring all these nations into the council, including Russia, if and when the Soviet Union is ready to take that step.

Problems Facing Them

The problems confronting the conferees were many, but in general terms, and as a matter of long range strategic planning, they seemed to present these in particular:

Obtaining full Russian co-operation in the Pacific.

Steps to avert any seizure of the French fleet or French African bases by the Axis through force or treachery.

Joint Allied action to prevent an Axis drive through Turkey or Spain.

Maintenance of a strong front in Africa to divert Axis strength to that region.

Consolidation of England's Libyan victories as a threat to Italy herself.

Helping Russia consolidate her recent extensive victories, and preventing a renewed Nazi drive toward Moscow or the oil fields of the Caucasus.

The possible creation of a joint Ministry of Supply.

Keeping the Atlantic route to England open.

To Plan Worldwide Strategy.

Mr. Early, in response to questions, said the army and navy and British groups were to compose the British-American War Council. This leaves the door open for additions to the group when Russia, China, the Netherlands and others are brought within the scope of the unified Inter-Allied war command.

Sir Gerald Campbell, Director-General of the British Information Service in the United States, announced after meeting with the Prime Minister that Mr. Churchill would meet today with all the British Dominion Ministers to the United States.

A brief talk with Mr. Churchill, Sir Gerald added, conveyed to him the impression that the White House conferences would strike this single purpose: "Worldwide strategy and world wide supply leading to worldwide victory."

Then he added: "Nobody's going to prophesy when victory will come—the sooner, the better."

Diplomatic phases of the war effort also might be discussed, said Sir Gerald, and as other Allies enter the discussions, other phases, perhaps including post-war considerations, might also be considered.

Churchhill Here for 'Work.'

Sir Gerald said that to almost every question he asked the Prime Minister, there was shot back this one-word reply: "Work!" This reply, said Sir Gerald, was made when the Briton asked Mr. Churchill what he was going to do here, who he would see, whether he would have any press conferences, and whether he would have any social engagements.

The list of British visitors included thirty-four naval officers, five army officers, three air corps officers, and four executives of the Ministry of Defense Office. Technical experts and aids included eight private secretaries, six stenographers, two detectives, the Prime Minister's personal physician, secretary, messenger, and valet, naval writers, and six photographers.

In the House of Representatives, Representative Kefauver, Democrat, of Tennessee, commented that the nation welcomed Mr. Churchill and his aids.

Arrival of Prime Minister.

Britain's Prime Minister, wearing the familiar nautical cap and the high-buttoned seaman's jacket, stepped from a plane late yesterday at a nearby airport and found President Roosevelt waiting for him. A presidential limousine whisked them away to the White House.

Full wartime secrecy surrounded the manner in which Mr. Churchill made his trip to the North American continent. The only information the White House vouchsafed was that the last leg was made by air. There was a belief, however, that one of His Majesty's warships had carried him part of the way.

From early last evening until 1 o'clock this morning the President and the British Prime Minister conferred in the oval study in the White House once used by another war President—Abraham Lincoln—for his office. For most of the time the two were alone.

Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill have arranged to attend interdenominational church services here on Christmas Day, but other details of their program were withheld.

Production Changes Due.

Washington, Dec. 23.—(AP.)—A reliable Government source said today that a propable result of Prime Minister Churchill's conferences with President Roosevelt would be to give the little businessman the job of pushing United States war production up to top speed.

The Briton's immediate major purpose in the meetings, this source asserted, was to emphasize the need for "all out" production of war materials, which in England was attained only by spreading contracts to the little fellow and using fountain pen and sewing machine plants to make guns and shells.

The informant described President Roosevelt as "sympathetic" to this objective, and said an announcement of production policy changes was hoped for after Christmas.

British Spirits Soar At News of Talks At White House

Leaders' Second Meeting Is Regarded as More Important Than First

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—British spirits soared today at the news that Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt were conferring in Washington. Prompt development of a master plan of anti-Axis strategy was forecast.

Newspaper commentators generally agreed that the second meeting of the President and the Prime Minister was of much greater import than the sea rendezvous in August from which developed the eight-point Atlantic charter.

The conference was disclosed at a time of speculation over Adolf Hitler's assumption of the German military command.

Important Moves Hinted.

Field Marshall Gen. Walter Von Brauchitsch, whom Hitler relieved, was represented in a Berlin broadcast last night as saying he had asked for dismissal some time ago "on account of a heart aliment"—a matter not touched upon by Hitler in his announcement of the shake-up Sunday.

The broadcast quoted an order of the day by the field marshal dated Friday, Dec. 19, which said "the Fuehrer will lead us to victory."

Berlin and Rome hinted that important military developments were in the offing, commentators in both capitals using the word "decisive." The Stockholm newspaper Dagens Nyheter predicted that Axis operations would be "moved from East to West."

The military expert of the official Spanish news agency Efe said Hitler's action possibly foreshadowed German developments for "defense of western Europe against a Yankee attack," an invasion thrust against England, or an attack upon Turkey, which lies between the Axis-occupied Balkans and the British-held Middle East.

MIGHT ATTACK GIBRALTAR

British observers took cognizance also of the possibility that Hitler might order an attack upon Gibraltar through Spain, hoping to neutralize this stronghold at the western end of the Mediterranean to offset reverses in Russia and provide a route for reinforceing Gen. Edwin Rommel in Libya.

(The Argentine news agency Andi quoted DNB in a dispatch from Berlin as saying the new battle of Libya had cost the British 12,000 prisoners, 1,100 tanks and 271 planes, while their "territorial gains are of subordinate importance.")

Of the Roosevelt-Churchill meeting, the Daily Telegraph said:

"The personal contact in this emergency of the two leading figures in embattled resistance to tyranny, perfidy, cruelty and greed will further that cause as nothing else could do."

The Daily Express declared planning at Washington to upset the Axis' one-by-one technique of conquest was "as vital a part of the war effort as munitions making."

For strategical reasons, said the Daily Mail, the world "may have to be divided into a number of regions, each with its own high command, linked by a supreme council."

ALLIED OFFENSIVE SOUGHT

Sir Earle Page Voices Hope for Quick use of Resources

London, Dec. 23—(AP)—Sir Earle Page, special Australian Minister to London, urged an offensive strategy for the Allies against the Axis in a broadcast home today, saying great progress was made this week toward full co-operation.

"Every month our position will improve if we use time and our resources quickly and wisely," the Australian said.

He said the Allied organization need not, nor should it, follow the defensive strategy of the past, but should be able to take the offensive.

Berlin Not Surprised At Visit, Agency Says

BERLIN, Dec. 23 (Official Broadcast) (AP).—A news broadcast of Transocean News Agency said today that British Prime Minister Churchill's visit to Washington "surprised no one here."

"The news of recent days which had reached Berlin left no doubt that discussions about joint conduct of the war between England and the United States * * * had either already begun or were about to begin," said the broadcast.

(Beginning last Friday, Transocean reported at intervals, usually from Stockholm, that it was rumored Mr. Churchill had gone either to "Washington or Moscow." Apparently Transocean was not sure of its facts, however, and issued the reports partly for the purpose of smoking out more definite information. Yesterday, for example, less than four hours before Mr. Churchill's arrival was announced in Washington, Transocean said opinion in Stockholm was increasingly confident that the British Prime Minister had gone to the Near East.)

The news agency said it was evident from the conference that Britain hopes for United States aid at Singapore, while the United States hopes for Britain's help in the Pacific.

Prime Minister King Coming This Week

Ottawa, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—Official Canadian spokesmen said today that Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King was expected to leave for Washington later this week in response to an invitation from President Roosevelt to visit the capital during Winston Churchill's stay at the White House.

His exact plans were not announced, but it was said that Munitions Minister C. D. Howe would accompany him.

Australia's Position Outlined to Conferees

CANBERRA, Australia, Dec. 23 (AP).—Prime Minister John Curtin dispatched a cable today to President Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Churchill outlining Australia's conception of the whole strategic problem in the Pacific as it affects her.

Introducing Mr. Churchill

DEC 24 1941

Statesman Leads British Contemporaries In War Service and Office Holding

WASHINGTON—Dec. 23

By LLOYD LEHRBAS.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Introducing the Right Hon. Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill, Prime Minister of Great Britain, now the guest of President Roosevelt at the White House:

Soldier, newspaperman, adventurer, author, lecturer, artist, bricklayer, politician and statesman, Mr. Churchill has served in more wars, held more offices and practiced more arts than any man of his time in the British Empire.

Since his graduation from Sandhurst, Britain's exclusive military school, wherever there has been a war Mr. Churchill has been there either as a war correspondent or a soldier—and between times has run for Parliament (often unsuccessfully) or held high office.

Americans boast that his aggressive, up-and-at-'em policies and activities came from his American mother (the former Miss Jennie Jerome of New York) and his political enemies in England invariably blamed all these things they didn't like about him on his American blood.

If Mrs. Roosevelt hasn't made arrangements for a White House Santa Claus Wednesday night she has a guest who—with a few false whiskers and the traditional costume—would look and act the part second to none.

DEC 24 1941

When he was in Washington in February, 1932, on a lecture tour, he advocated "a financial, economic, military and political agreement" between the United States and Great Britain.

During the World War, when he was serving as a colonel of a British regiment, shells fell around Mr. Churchill's dugout and an inspecting general urged him to move.

"I tell you," the general protested, "this is a very dangerous place."

"Yes, sir," Mr. Churchill agreed, "but after all this is a very dangerous war."

The Prime Minister is famous for the hats he wears. Most famous was the clergyman's hat under which he escaped from the Boers (when serving as a war correspondent). Other favorites have been silk toppers of odd shape, soft felts of no shape, a beret, and nowadays a naval cap or a John Bull stiff black felt.

When defeated for Parliament in 1923 he took his brushes and palette and went to Egypt to paint pictures—he'd been there before, fighting on the Nile in 1898.

When in New York in 1931 he was knocked down by a taxicab, hospitalized, and ill for some time with pleurisy. He apologized to the taxi driver and sent him tickets for his next lecture.

Mr. Churchill was one of the few prominent British politicans who openly supported Edward VIII (now the Duke of Windsor) before his abdication and one of the last to bid him good-by when he sailed from England on December 11, 1936.

Mr. Churchill won medals for bravery aiding the Cubans against the Spanish in 1895; on India's northwestern frontier in 1897; on the Nile in 1898; against the Boers in South Africa in 1899-1900, and on the western front in France in 1916. He thumbed his nose at Nazi submarines to meet President Roosevelt "somewhere in the North Atlantic," and now he's back again.

Fate of Marine Garrison on Little Island Not Told—Enemy Pours Troops on Lingayen Gulf Beach.

DEC 24 1941

Washington, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—The Japanese have landed at last on Wake Island, at a cost known only to themselves and the marines who fought off attack after attack in a style that has thrilled the nation. In fact, since the Navy Department communique telling of the landing today gave no details, there was still hope that the tiny Pacific island was not lost entirely.

This hope was not inspired by Wake's importance, for it has little, but by the almost incredible exploits of men who battled against overwhelming strength and refused to give up.

In communique after communique the navy has issued the familiar six-word report: "Wake and Midway continue to resist."

The line was missing today, and officials declined to answer questions as to whether this meant that the leather-neck garrison had finally been pounded to helplessness.

There was no mention of Midway in the navy communique today.

Japs Pour Troops Onto Luzon.

The army said earlier in a communique that Japanese were continuing to pour in troops on the Lingayen Gulf coast north of Manila in the Philippines. Fighting was continuing with increasing intensity, it said.

The communique said that the invader's landing operations were being supported by increasing numbers of bombing and attack planes.

Defending American and Philippine troops gained some initial successes, it was reported, in a major engagement fought in the vicinity of Santo Tomas, in the Lingayen Gulf area some 120 air miles from Manila.

The Japanese onslaught has centered in the area around Santo Tomas, with other landings having been made or attempted previously at nearby Agoo and Damortis.

a tiny sand-speck in the Pacific.

On the face of it, that line in the Navy's sixteenth communique of a 16-day-old war, seemed to bode ill for a handful of United States marines whose defense of Wake Island has contributed to World War II one of its brightest hero stories.

This was the reason for pessimism: Navy sources have freely admitted in recent days that Wake could not be held against any full dress naval assault.

But there was reason for optimism, too. The Navy did not concede that Wake was lost and her defenders beaten—and the Navy had been quick to acknowledge the probable loss of Guam when that distant possession, almost under the guns of Japanese mandated islands, could not be reached by wireless or cable.

So the hope remained that the tired, sweat-stained marines were still fighting on the few hundred acres of brush-clad upland on the three isles which together make up Wake Island, and that they still had a fighting chance to drive the invaders back into the sea.

Navy men knew, further, that if Wake was lost, its capture had cost the Mikado's Navy more than it was worth in lives, planes and warships.

The sleepless marines had fought off 13 aerial assaults in the 16 days of war; they had brought down an unknown number of hostile war planes, and sent to the bottom two Japanese warships, a destroyer and a light cruiser.

And even when Navy men conceded days ago that Wake must eventually fall if Adm. Isoroku Yamamoto was willing to devote enough planes and ships to the task, they pointed out that it could be recaptured whenever the Pacific fleet might later make the same effort. Wake, they said, might change hands several times before the war's end.

The marines have had to fight without help and in full knowledge that help would not come. It would have been foolhardy, Navy sources pointed out, to divert war vessels to the relief of tiny Wake, Midway or even Guam, when it was evident that these Pacific outposts were merely diversions in the main Japanese assaults on the Philippines and Malaya, and that any ships sent to their rescue would be heading into almost certain nests of submarines and the prospect of enormous loss in men and ships.

Day after day, the terse summation, "Wake and Midway continue to resist," thrilled Americans who knew the apparent hopelessness of the fight and knew that the marines must become constantly weaker as they lost men and planes and spent ammunition. That six-word reassurance was missing from today's communique.

There was reason to believe that the Japanese had essayed a previous landing effort and met a furious and shocking resistance. This hint was contained in the communique of Dec. 11, when after beating off four bombing attacks and a naval assault in 48 hours, the devil dogs reported that "a probable landing attempt is expected."

This indicated that the Japanese came prepared for a landing, but upon losing two naval units and meeting a withering barrage from the supposedly helpless garrison, had withdrawn to return later in force.

Between that naval assault and the one disclosed in today's communique, Wake's defenders underwent nine bombing assaults and beat each one off. Although garrisoned with a somewhat greater force than Guam, low-lying Wake Island has virtually no natural defenses. The fighting area is small, the three islands which make up the Wake group consisting of only 2,600 acres in all. Partly enclosing a lagoon, the groups extend four and one-half miles long by one and one-half miles wide.

Besides the marines, it is reported that a number of construction workers are on Wake, and that they have borne themselves manfully through the ordeal. They were there to complete a $7,000,000 seaplane base intended to supplement the clipper base which has been in service for several years as a stopping point on Pan American Airways' transpacific flying route.

Hopes High For Success Of Philippine Defenders

DEC 24 1941

By EDWARD E. BOMAR

Washington, Dec. 23 (AP)—With the Japanese invaders pouring ashore in Luzon under cover of bombing and fighting planes, Gen. Douglas MacArthur's forces are fighting against odds to defend the Philippines, in the view of competent authorities here.

Heavy casualties and initial losses of important territory en route to Manila were considered inevitable in the present stage of the desperate struggle. High hopes were retained, nevertheless, that the first thrust would be foiled and the invaders eventually crushed.

The expedition attempting to seize the Lingayen Gulf coast line, estimated by the War Department to number upwards of 100,000 troops, may be larger than the force available for its defense at the moment, authorities said.

And the new Japanese landing in force on the neck of Tayabas lengthens the odds against the Philippine defenders. This landing, southeastward from Manila, could form the lower prong of a pincers movement against the capital and the nearby naval base of Cavite, in conjunction with the invasion from Lingayen to the northwest. Or, at the least, it would constitute a diversion attack in an effort to draw away some of MacArthur's forces from the Northern front.

The Japanese are veterans of years of war, inured to hardship and keyed to the hope of winning an historic triumph. Both American and Filipino troops are largely untried, the latter only partially trained and incompletely mobilized. They have been officially commended, however, for "behaving well" in their initial baptism of fire.

The reported main invasion fleet of 80 troopships has been able for two days to put men ashore in barges with relative impunity. Meanwhile Japanese Naval Command of the China seas and the Western Pacific serves to deny to the defenders any reinforcements except by air in the present stage.

Japanese ability to fly short range pursuit planes from Formosa, only 220 miles north of Luzon; from carriers offshore; and from fields set up on Luzon soil at such outlying points as Aparri, was believed responsible for their initial successes.

Expert observers said it was obvious that if MacArthur were fully able to safeguard the Philippine air fields, his bombers might make it suicidal to mass any invasion fleet.

Speculation over his chances of obtaining air reinforcements falls under the ban on military secrets. Some long range considerations favorable to the defense were thus authoritatively listed:

The Japanese, with their forces spread over thousands of miles, are limited in the strength they can bring to bear at any one point.

Transports and ships to keep up a line of supply for overseas expeditionary forces are notoriously vulnerable to submarines as well as bombers. Slow-moving American and Allied submarines have yet to be heard from, presumably because they were not at battle stations when the surprise attacks were launched.

Japanese aerial resources, though overwhelming at the outset, are limited.

American and Philippine forces were fast being reinforced when the test of war came and their weapons include tanks which already have seen action and other modern products of United States arsenals.

A definite defense advantage is complete familiarity with terrain and perfection of plans to cope with just such an invasion as is now in progress.

JAP SUBMARINE SINKS TANKER, ATTACKS CREW

Torpedoes Vessel Off West Coast, Then Machine-Guns Survivors

Another American Ship Is Shelled By Undersea Craft Near By

DEC 24 1941

[By the Associated Press]

San Francisco, Dec. 23—A marauding Japanese submarine sank an American tanker off the coast today, machine-gunned its sailors as they took to lifeboats and shelled another tanker.

All forty men in the crew of the sunken Union Oil tanker Montebello reached shore safely. A few were injured, but none from rifle or machine-gun fire.

The Richfield tanker Larry Doheny, evidently fired upon by the same marauder, fled to the shelter of a cove without being damaged.

Hits Empty Hold

The torpedo which sank the Montebello hit the forward hold, only compartment not loaded with gasoline. The men aboard wouldn't have had a chance if any other hold had been hit.

As it was, the explosion was so terrific it awakened residents on shore six miles away.

"There was a hell of an explosion," said Bill Srez, of Westville, Mass., one of the rescued seamen. "I know they fired on us from the deck. The fellows in the other boats were subjected to machine-gun fire."

2 Others Hit—5 Escaped

But the marksmanship of the Japanese seemingly was as bad as in most of their other attacks on American shipping off the California coast. Two tankers have been hit, but five escaped.

The crew of the 440-foot Montebello escaped the rifle and machine-gun fire only to run into a heavy surf as they reached shore at points scattered over one hundred miles of coastline. Some did not land until noon, more than eight hours after the tanker went down.

Men jumped overboard from several lifeboats when the rocky shore prevented them from reaching land. They were pulled from the boiling surf by watchers awakened by the explosion and spasmodic gunfire, audible from 3 A. M. until after 6 o'clock.

Austin Waltz, a rescuer who stood on a huge rock in the breakers trying to throw a rope to one of the boats, described one rescue:

"A large swell lifted the boat in closer and most of the fellows made a jump for it.

Full Of Hands And Arms

"In another minute the waters boiling around the rock seemed full of hands and arms and heads. They were all in the water, clinging to the rope or rock or threshing to get a hold.

"We climbed down the rock and got ropes around the men bobbing in the water, sort of like a cauldron, and hauled them up."

The Montebello, built in 1921 by the Southwestern Shipbuilding Company of San Diego, was a 5,107-ton craft.

The only previous casualty off the coast was the tanker Emidio, torpedoed last Saturday. Five of her crew were lost and five injuried. Lifeboats of the Emidio were shelled before the torpedo was fired.

Flying Crosses For 75

DEC 24 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 23—Seventy-five men—the memory of one of them already enshrined in the history of the army—have been recommended for the Distinguished Flying Cross in recognition of a transpacific flight of great American bombers just three months before Japan struck at Hawaii.

One of the pilots on the flight—September 5 to 12—was Capt. Colin P. Kelly, Jr., who knocked out the Japanese battleship Haruna in the first week of the war. He lost his life in the bombing of the warship.

Flew Uncharted Route

Even as early as the first week of September, the War Department announcement said, it was necessary to "aboid Japanese patrols." Because of them the bomberst—he number undisclosed for military reasons—had to fly an "uncharted and circuitous route" into the South Pacific.

Each citation said:

"Due to the efficient efforts of the crew, the flight from Honolulu to Fort Stotsenburg (north of Manila) was completed without accident or injury to any of the crew or passengers."

The flight was commanded by 35-year-old Major Emmett O'Donnell, Jr., of Brooklyn, N. Y.

PACIFIC DEFENDERS PRAISED BY HOUSE

Message of Congratulation Is Sent to Fighters.

DEC 24 1941

Washington, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—The House of Representatives today sent a congratulatory message to the defenders of the United States in the Pacific. Representative Rankin, Democrat, of Mississippi, proposed it, saying that such a communication should be forwarded to Gen. Douglas MacArthur, in charge of the Philippine defenses, for his "wonderful showing" and "to those holding out" at Midway and Wake.

Representative Voorhis, Democrat, of California, said that all through the country there was "buoyant resolution and confidence in the American cause," but warned that "we must be prepared for the tomorrows that are ahead."

Representative Merritt, Democrat, of New York cautioned against relaxing vigilance during the holiday season lest a crafty foe take advantage of the nation's preoccupation with Yuletide festivities to strike without warning.

THE ARIZONA SANK WITH FLAG FLYING

Washington, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—The navy released today a photograph of the ravaged battleship Arizona, hit by bombs and aerial torpedoes, showing that the dreadnaught sank to the bottom of Pearl Harbor with flag flying and anti-aircraft guns turned aloft.

Although Secretary of the Navy Knox listed the 32,000-ton battle wagon as "destroyed" and therefore presumably beyond salvage, the photograph showed the deck was about one foot above the surface and much of the stern superstructure to outward appearances undamaged.

The photograph apparently was taken within a day or so after the devastating Japanese onslaught of December 7, since smoke still poured from the blaze which gutted the Arizona amidships, and a rescue and salvage tug was moored at the stern of the warship.

Heavy Fighting Continues In Northern Sector Of Island—Aerial Activity Strong, Vital Bridge On Manila Road Being Bombed

[By the Associated Press]

Manila, Wednesday, Dec. 24—A new Japanese landing in heavy force near Atimonan, on the east coast of Luzon, was announced today by United States Army headquarters.

The scene is in Tayabas province, across the narrow land arm which connects the main portion of Luzon with the southern bulge.

"Heavy fighting continues in the north," said the communique from Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters, referring to the Lingayen Gulf area where the Japanese for the last two days have been engaged in a major push on the beaches against American and Filipino troops, who were declared to be holding them firmly.

Great Enemy Pressure Admitted

"The enemy is exerting great pressure," an army spokesman said of the Lingayen battle.

"The enemy is particularly active aerially at many points throughout the bay."

Atimonan is a small seacoast town known chiefly as a rendezvous for deep-sea fishermen.

The region has foothills reaching almost down to the sea and is sparsely populated.

Rugged mountains block the path to Manila.

No Known Military Objectives

There are no known military objectives in the immediate vicinity of Atimonan, but in pre-war strategy, its was considered a possible invasion point and therefore probably is adequately prepared for such an eventuality.

There is just one mountain highway, easily blocked, which leads directly from Atimonan to Manila.

MacArthur's headquarters announcement that a heavy force of invaders had landed at the town indicated that there were sufficient Japanese troops to afford a real striking power and probably a considerably greater number than has yet landed anywhere except on the Lingayen Gulf and at Davao, on the island of Mindanao.

No Contact Indicated

There was no indication as to whether there had been any contact between the invaders and the American-Philippine defenders at Atimonan.

One Japanese aerial blow of late Tuesday was the heavy damaging of the big steel bridge at Villasis.

The bridge, the longest in the Philippines, is a vital link in the highway from the Lingayen area.

Damage Being Repaired

A United States Army spokesman said the damage already was being repaired.

It was the first Japanese hit on any of the innumerable bridges they have sought to smash in these islands.

There were no official reports from the Davao area, where the Japanese landed on the southern island of Mindanao, but press reports quoted refugees from other Mindanao points as saying seven Japanese troopships were sunk in Davao harbor and that defense forces were taking a heavy toll of the Japanese who got ashore.

Sixth Attempted Landing

Another press report said four Japanese members of a patrol were killed in the Legaspi sector on the extreme south of Luzon Island.

The landing at Atimonan is the sixth the Japanese have attempted in these islands.

The army spokesman declined to estimate the total force involved, but said several transports were sighted yesterday off Batangas provinice and that these might have reached the Tayabas coast duriing the night.

Travelers said the Japanese were forcing Filipinos into labor service at Albay in Camarines Sur province for rebuilding railroad bridges and digging trenches.

Tells Of Being Forced

Alfred Moreno, who came from Legaspi, told Manila reporters he was forced to held unload machine guns and munitions from a Japanese troopship for two days.

He said he was paid in Japanese currency, but the Japanese took his watch, baggage and money before letting him go.

He said he saw about 5,000 Japanese soldiers at Legaspi and counted 300 Japanese in Naga, capital of the province, nine miles inland. Chinese shops were being looted, but Filipino stores were untouched, he asserted.

Lingayen Fighting Continues

Meanwhile, the big Japanese push continued along Lingayen Gulf, with United States headquarters announcing last night there was "no material change in positions."

How many Japanese troops actually had been able to get ashore at Santo Tomas, in the Lingayen Gulf sector, from among the eighty transports that originally appeared off the coast, had not been determined.

There were persistent reports, for which headquarters stated there was no confirmation, that forty-seven Japanese troopships had been sunk off the town of Lingayen itself. (There had been no previous mention of such reports, and their source was not indicated.)

Still Obscure In South

On the far southern island of Mindanao, General MacArthur reported, the situation about the town of Davao remained obscure. The Netherlands East Indies forces officially announced, however, that Dutch naval aircraft had heavily assaulted Japanese ships in Davao harbor.

A 10,000-ton Japanese tanker, hit squarely by a 440-pound Dutch bomb, exploded in flames. The attack, delivered in strong force, was extended to an undetermined number of other Japanese vessels.

In its Tuesday morning communique, the War Department in Washinton stated that fighting still was in progress around Davao.

Landings Continue

As to the Lingayen area, it reported a struggle of increasing intensity, and stated that the American and Filipino defenders had gained some initial successes.

Japanese troops, it was added, were continuing to land between Agoo and San Fernando, in operations supported by "increasing numbers of bombing and attack planes."

Japanese air activity over the Lingayen Gulf was heavy, but American counter-action likewise was strong, according to independent and unofficial accounts. Once, American flyers were said to have beaten off an attempted Japanese landing supported by Japanese destroyers.

DEC 24 1941

Two Raid Alarms

Twice during the day Manila had raid alarms, but on neither occasion did the aerial invader reach the city.

In the afternoon, however, three Japanese planes bombed a center reserved for evacuees from Manila and other towns and casualties were heavy.

It was the first evacuation center hit.

President Quezon today called a special session of Congress for December 30 to consider special legislation of undlisclosed types.

Bomb Hits Evacuation Center.

Manila, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—Heavy casualties resulted this afternoon when three Japanese planes bombed a center which had been reserved for persons evacuated from Manila and other towns. The planes apparently were aiming at the nearby gasoline stores of a private company. The attack was the first affecting any of the numerous evacuation centers to which residents of crowded districts had been taken under Red Cross supervision.

Meanwhile United States Army Headquarters announced that sharp fighting was continuing in northern Luzon, but said there had been no change in positions since yesterday, when the Japanese landed strong forces at Santo Tomas, approximately 125 miles from Manila.

Observers here interpreted the announcement as indicating that American and Filipino troops, reported earlier to be holding a line north of Damortis, four miles below Santo Tomas, had checked Japanese efforts to advance southward.

Headquarters said that reports up to 9 P. M. (7 A. M., New York time) were not sufficient to warrant a special communique here. In the absence of further official word, it was believed here that heavy fighting would continue through the night on the flat plain bordering the Gulf of Lingayen.

United States Far Eastern Army Headquarters said at 9 o'clock tonight that there was no confirmation of persistent reports that forty-seven Japanese transports had been sunk at Lingayen in northern Luzon.

[There has been no mention in previous Manila dispatches of such reports and this message did not even indicate their source.]

The morning communique said the invaders had been very active in the air, but independent reports said that they were being hammered hard by American airmen, who were reported to have beaten off one attempted landing under the guns of Japanese destroyers.

DEC 24 1941

Large Landing by Foe.

An army spokesman said it had not been determined exactly how many troops the Japanese had been able to land at Santo Tomas. Although the number was believed large, the spokesman said he was certain it was below Washington estimates on the number of troops involved in the invasion attempt.

The War Department in Washington figured between 80,000 and 100,000 Japanese troops were aboard a fleet of eighty transports which had been sighted off the Luzon coast.

The situation in the Davao area on Mindanao Island, south of Luzon, where American troops have been engaged in sharp fighting with a Japanese landing force, was described here officially as "obscure."

A United States Army spokesman declared that the fighting was very heavy and accompanied by considerable air activity, but gave no indication of the direction it was taking.

Earlier, headquarters had described the situation there as "well in hand."

The main Japanese landing apparently was effected in the vicinity of Santo Tomas, where the heaviest fighting was reported yesterday.

It still was not clear here whether the Japanese had attempted to unload all their transports.

It likewise was uncertain whether the Japanese had been able to land any equipment to cope with the mechanized forces the defenders were said to be throwing against them.

Manila itself was quiet during the morning except for an uneventful air raid alarm which lasted twenty-five minutes.

Army officials said later that two waves of Japanese planes had been sighted heading toward the city from the south. Their failure to reach Manila was taken as an indication that they had been intercepted by American fighters and driven off.

In the afternoon Manila had a second alarm but again hostile planes failed to appear over the city and the all clear was sounded after twenty-nine minutes.

The double failure of the Japanese to carry out their usual daily attacks heartened Manila residents, who felt the vigilance of the American Air Force was responsible.

American pilots have been predicting that Japanese airmen trying to attack targets on Luzon would find the going increasingly tough.

"Just watch us shortly," said one American flyer a few days ago. "These Japanese have been coming on in perfect formation, but we intend to break them up and give them more than they can take."

New Yorker Shoots Down Four.

News of the situation in Southern Luzon, where the Japanese effected a landing last week at Legaspi, 250 miles from Manila was limited to an official announcement that eight Japanese planes had been shot down in air engagements during the last few days.

Maj. Emmett O'Donnell, jr., whose home is in New York City, was credited with shooting down four planes, while Lt. Jack Adams of Anadarko, Okla., and his crew were credited with three. A Filipino pilot, Lt. Jose Kare, accounted for the eighth enemy plane.

The Philippine commonwealth, meanwhile, took additional measures to perfect its wartime organization on a long-range basis.

The Government designated provincial treasurers throughout the archipelago as deputy emergency control officials with authority to commandeer essential foodstuffs, fuel, building materials and other supplies to prevent hoarding and profiteering. District school superintendents were designated to head local anti-profiteering committees.

Commandeered goods will be inventoried and sold directly to the public.

President Manuel Quezon ordered immediate extension of relief facilities to care for Manila's poorer families, and arranged for distribution of Christmas presents to the destitute from personal funds.

At the same time he directed that strict measures be taken to guard against looting in bombed or evacuated districts.

Philippine Army headquarters ordered all Reserve officers in the infantry, artillery and engineers not already called up to report for immediate field training. They will be utilized later as instructors for thousands of Filipino volunteers who are flocking to the colors.

The secretary of public instruction, Jorge Bocobo, urged school teachers who now are idle because of the closing of schools to volunteer for service in various emergency organizations. Many teachers already have been assigned to civilian emergency work in various provincial centers.

Authorized to Take Over Land.

In an executive order President Quezon authorized the commonwealth food administrator to take over cultivated or uncultivated lands and put them to productive use. The order required all able-bodied citizens not engaged in other occupations to work on farms or in some productive capacity under penalty of prison sentences.

President Quezon said the order was designed to assure an adequate food supply.

The President named Maj. Gen. Basilio Valdes, chief of staff of the Philippine Army, to be secretary for national defense, succeeding Presidential Secretary Jorge Vargas, who has held the post temporarily.

Japs Report Complete Occupation of Davao

TOKIO, Dec. 23 (Official Broadcast) (A).—Japanese imperial headquarters announced today the complete occupation of Davao at 5 p.m. Saturday by Japanese forces which had landed on Mindanao Island at dawn the same day, Domei reported.

"Enemy casualties revealed up to Sunday include 200 killed and 600 made prisoners," the announcement added.

It said naval units co-operated closely wtih the landing and subsequent operations.

(The Berlin radio reported the Japanese had landed troops on Luzon Island in sufficient numbers to start a full-fledged offensive and were driving American and Filipino forces southward in severe fighting.)

The Minister of Finance was authorized to assume control of all enemy assets in Japan under a bill passed at the last session of the Diet and published for the first time today.

New Landings Reported.

Berlin, Dec. 23 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A. P.).—New Japanese troop landings were carried out early today at several points on the Island of Luzon in the Philippines, Japanese Imperial Headquarters said today. The claim was reported here by Transocean in a dispatch from Tokio.

Filipinos 'Plenty Mad,' Declares Witness Of Lingayen Battle

Morale Excellent; Aerial Activity Intense on Both Sides, Says Newsman

By the Associated Press.

MANILA, Dec. 23.—"The Filipinos are plenty mad and morale is excellent among troops and civilians," Melville Jacoby, correspondent for Time and Life magazines, declared today when he brought back the first eyewitness story from the Lingayen invasion front.

Civilians as well as troops are high in spirit, Mr. Jacoby said and, although villages in the battle zones have been evacuated, farmers in the region are going on with their rice harvesting.

A mist overhung the coast, Mr. Jacoby said, but he could discern a long line of Japanese ships some of which appeared to be warships. Visibility was too poor to permit an accurate count.

The thunder of heavy artillery fire rolled incessantly across the countryside and aerial activity was intense on both sides, Mr. Jacoby related.

He said American flyers attacking offshore vessels encountered "extremely heavy" anti-aircraft fire. Most of the Japanese planes ranging deep inland were reconnoitering, and Mr. Jacoby said he experienced no machine-gunning, although he leaped from his car for safety in roadside ditches several times.

He said he saw American mechanized forces heading toward the tank battle on the Luzon coast, but that the movements of forces on both sides were so swift and the terrain was so flat he could not size up the situation accurately.

As the battle raged he was forced to shift rapidly to safer areas to avoid any possibility of being caught behind the Japanese lines.

Although only one highway connects the battle front with the interior, he said, American communications lines are fluid and unbroken.

JAPS BATTLED TO STANDSTILL AT HONGKONG

DEC 24 1941

Desperate British, Canadian And Indian Forces Take Part

Dominion Commander And Staff Officer Are Reported Killed

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 23—Desperate bands of British, Canadian and Indian troops battled the Japanese to a standstill at Mount Cameron near the center of Hongkong Island and still held positions on Victoria Peak to the west, an official Hongkong dispatch said tonight.

"Fighting continues along last night's line with undiminished intensity," the communique said.

"There has been a light enemy penetration in the central sector in the direction of Mount Cameron, but this penetration been contained by our troops since early this morning.

"Briefly, the situation is substantially unchanged."

Heavy Jap Losses

Other official dispatches said the last-ditch stand of the imperial soldiers was costing the Japanese heavily in their fourth full day of fighting.

But the hopelessly outnumbered defenders also were losing heavily and their situation was acknowledged to be critical.

DEC 24 1941

An Ottawa announcement said the Canadian commander, Brig. J. K. Lawson, was believed to have been killed, as was his senior staff officer, Col. Patrick Hennessy. Both were seasoned officers, veterans of the first World War.

Fresh Enemy Forces

The Japanese hurled fresh forces against the British and blasted their positions with heavy explosives.

A Domei report from Tokyo earlier had declared that the Japanese overpowered the Mount Cameron defenders last night, capturing 1,119 prisoners. British resistance was collapsing, the agency asserted.

But the Berlin radio quoted a Japanese army spokesman as saying that the defenders still held seven forts, and that fierce fighting raged on the fields of the Happy Valley recreation area east of Victoria City.

Canadians In Action

Mount Cameron is a 1,430-foot peak near the center of the thirty-two-square-mile island; Victoria Peak, several miles to the west, is 1,770 feet high, overlooking Victoria City opposite the Japanese-occupied mainland.

The Royal Rifles of Canada, whose regimental motto is "Willing and able," are participating in the heroic stand, and Canadian troops even counter-attacked at some points, the Ottawa statement said.

Although these attacks failed, they ripped additional holes in the invaders' man power, the announcement said.

Guerrillas Attack

A dispatch from Singapore, which said the Malayan front relatively was quiet, reported that the Hongkong garrison even gained "a local success in the south of the island."

Chinese guerrillas were attacking the Japanese at points from fourteen to forty miles from the besieged garrison, but the British said only a major offensive would relieve their trapped troops.

If the British have to give up, one informant said, they will carry out "a complete immobilization" of everything useful to the Japanese.

In that event, this authority continued, the island's recapture "would be essential to our future plans," and that it would require Allied superiority in both sea and air power.

Two Jap Planes Downed

In Malaya the British command reported the situation was unchanged in the jungles 330 miles above Singapore.

Two Japanese planes were declared officially to have been shot down in the Kuala Lumpur region, and two others badly damaged. The RAF also attacked Sungei Patani airdrome, in southern Thailand.

"Owing to poor visibility the results could not be ascertained," the communique said.

Losses Explained

Diversion of planes and other war equipment to Russia and Libya were the reasons why the Japanese have been able to penetrate deep into northern Malaya, Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, British Far Eastern commander, said today.

"We've lost a large part of northern Malaya, but for a time only," he told leaders of the British, Chinese, Malayan and Indian communities at Singapore.

"Every effort is being made elsewhere to provide us with the help of which we now stand in need."

Japanese Reports Advance

LONDON, Dec. 23 (AP).—A report from Domei, Japanese official news agency, said Japanese forces had overpowered the defenders of Mt. Cameron last night, capturing 1,119 priscners. British resistance was collapsing, the agency said.

But the Berlin radio quoted a Japanese Army spokesman as saying the defenders still held seven forts and that fierce fighting raged on the fields of the Happy Valley recreation area east of Victoria City.

The Berlin radio was heard broadcasting a Japanese announcement that the Japanese air force had carried out attacks on fortified positions in the eastern part of Hongkong today for twelve hours.

"Great destruction of enemy positions could be observed," said the announcement. "Japanese pressure on Victoria and south of the town continues."

Invaders Hurled Back, Hongkong Force Says

DEC 24 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 23—Despite repeated Japanese assertions that Hongkong is on the verge of capture Britain's flag still flew today over its resolute defenders, who apparently had even smashed back their far more numerous foes and regained some positions.

As the stubborn fight went on—against hopeless odds, it was conceded here—a British authority declared that the island's recapture "would be essential to our future plans" if it fell to the Japanese.

The invaders now have had four full days to wrest the last, thirty-two-square-mile bit of territory of Britain's Hongkong Crown Colony. They first won a foothold on its shores Friday night, aided by naval siege and heavy air and artillery bombardment.

Chinese Move Nearer

Reports from the Far East, however, indicated that the crown colony's garrison of Britons, Canadians, Indians and other imperial troops still was holding a firm defense line and, at some points, even pushing the invaders back.

(A communique issued in Singapore said Chinese were striking at the Japanese rear at points from fourteen to forty miles from Hongkong.

("Guerrilla fighting [by the Chinese] is reported to have broken out at a point only fourteen miles from the island," the British announced.

(The advanced guard of regular Chinese troops moving to the relief of Hongkong was said to have reached Tamsuo and Shamuchung, respectively forty and twenty-seven miles away.)

The Japanese apparently were in command of eastern portion of the island, and the main British stronghold was said to be in the west, the region of "the Peak," the towering heights along the Hongkong ridge overlooking Victoria, the capital city.

Direct word from Hongkong said fighting "continues all along the lines held yesterday." This fragmentary report mentioned one successful, local counter-blow by the British forces, but details were lacking.

Seven Forts In British Hands

Even in Japanese areas, it was said, some isolated British strong points still are unconquered.

The Berlin radio, quoting a Japanese army spokesman in Nanking, said that seven Hongkong forts remained in British hands today, and that fierce fighting still was being waged on the broad playing fields of the Happy Valley recreation area east of Victoria.

According to a Domei report from Tokyo, the invaders took the British fort on Mount Cameron, in Mid-Island, last night, capturing 1,119 prisoners.

Although the Japanese news agency report said British resistance had collapsed, the British informant declared the island fortress still was holding out according to advices here just before noon.

The London commentator, in his survey of the situation, said that a successful defense of Hongkong would have required submarines, ships and aircraft operating in and over surrounding waters to prevent landings on the island.

"The Japanese had almost a free movement over the sea in that area," he commented, adding it was "remarkable" that the Japanese had not succeeded in taking Hongkong already.

Hongkong in Japanese hands would give them a good naval and air base, making its recapture necessary for the anti-Axis allies, he said.

He asserted the island forces now "really lacked the essentials of defense" because the colony's defenses were built up during a priod when there was a heavy demand upon Britain for material for many areas.

Domei Claims Near-Victory

(In Tokyo, Domei reported that Japanese forces were attacking the last British strongholds on the island).

Reuters quoted a Domei dispatch saying Japanese troops had captured 118 British troops, 814 Indians and 187 Chinese in Hongkong operations through Monday.

The colony's defense forces were reported maintaining communication twice a day with London and Chungking, by means of broadcasting equipment hidden in caves.

A Chinese Embassy official said there were 3,000 white women and children living in caves burrowed deep into the rocks of Victoria peak. He said they are well supplied with food and water.

CANADIANS' CHIEF REPORTED KILLED

DEC 24 1941

Brigadier Lawton Headed Hard-pressed Troops.

Ottawa, Ont., Dec. 23 (A. P.).—Canadian and other British troops are stubbornly holding three positions at Hongkong, but the Canadians have suffered heavy casualties and their commander, Brig. J. K. Lawson, is believed to have been killed, Canadian defense headquarters announced today.

The senior staff officer, Col. Patrick Hennessy, has been killed by shell fire, said the announcement, issued by Defense Minister J. L. Ralston.

He said two Canadian counter-attacks had failed to make progress and that the situation as disclosed in reports up to 6 P. M. yesterday was critical despite heavy losses inflicted on the enemy.

The Japanese have landed reenforcements and are attacking continuously, he added.

Lawson led his Canadians into the Oriental outpost in mid-Novembe to take part in the first real fighting Canadian forces have seen in this war.

Under Brig. Lawson were men from two battalions—the Winnipeg Grenadiers and the Quebec Royal Rifles.

As director of military training before he was sent to the Far East, he had traveled from coast to coast to supervise the building of Canada's new army.

A Yorkshireman who was educated in England, Mr. Lawson was stationed at Edmonton with the Hudson's Bay Company in 1912 and enlisted as a private in the first world war.

After the war he attended the staff college at Quetta, India, then went to London in an exchange of staff officers with the British War Office.

Defenders Stall Attack.

Hongkong, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—Hongkong's defenders have contained—halted and perhaps surrounded—Japanese forces who made a light penetration in their lines on Mount Cameron on Hongkong island, the British command announced today. There was no let-up in the fighting, with British troops holding on to the line previously established.

In the past twenty-four hours there has been little change in the position of the hard-fighting garrison.

DEC 24 1941

Guerrilla Fighting Told.

Singapore, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—British defenders of Hongkong have made a slight gain from firmly held lines, the British command said today.

While Chinese were reported be striking at the Japanese rea at points from 14 to 40 miles away, a communique said fighting for Hongkong continued all along the lines held yesterday, with a local success in the south of the island.

"Guerrilla fighting (by the Chinese) is reported to have broken out at a point only 14 miles from the island," the British announced.

The main British garrison was said to be in the western part of the island, "resisting Japanese attempts at further penetration."

[By the Associated Press]

Chungking, Dec. 23—A Chinese communique tonight announced:

"The British Embassy was in touch with Hongkong at midday today. The defenders are still fighting valiantly."

The communique said two Japanese vessels were destroyed by motor torpedo boats Monday and that the Hongkong population was taking the situation calmly despite the dropping of about one hundred Japanese bombs on the island Monday.

It added that a message from Borneo reported direct hits by Dutch bombers on a cruiser and another large ship, probably an aircraft carrier, on Monday.

Motor Torpedo Boats Sink Two Jap Ships

New York, Dec. 23 (AP)—The British radio broadcast a Chungking communique today saying radio contact between Hongkong and Chungking was made at midday and that the colony's defenders are "still fighting valiantly."

The broadcast heard by CBS said two Japanese vessels were destroyed by motor torpedo boats yesterday.

"The civil population is taking the situation calmly," it said.

Dutch Planes And Subs Sink Five Jap Ships

Three Big Transports, Two Tankers Bring Total To 17

DEC 24 1941

Indies Hit By Raiders

Batavia, N. E. I., Dec. 23 (AP)—Three big Japanese transports and a tanker have been sunk west of Borneo by a Netherlands submarine, the Commander of The Netherlands Navy was informed tonight.

(British broadcast received in New York on Sunday night quoted Batavia sources as saying Dutch naval forces had sunk two Japanese transports off Borneo and that a Dutch torpedo plane had sunk a third, bringing destruction of Japanese troop or supply ships by American and Dutch forces to a total of 13.

(These were not confirmed by Batavia. If the newest announcement is additional, it brings the total to 17).

Strong forces of Dutch naval planes swept over Davao Harbor today and aided the American and Filipino forces resisting Japanese invasion of that Mindanao Island point by pressing home a heavy attack upon enemy vessels.

A 400-pound bomb squarely hit a 10,000-ton Japanese tanker and left her exploding in flames, it was announced. Other ships in the Southern Philippine post also were attacked.

Japanese raids on a Dutch airdrome on one of the outlying islands of the Dutch East Indies also were reported.

An enemy bombing attack on Sorong, on the west coast of New Guinea, was beaten back by Dutch aircraft, however, and Sorong suffered no damage.

One of the flying boats participating in the Davao attack did not return.

Official informants in Batavia estimated that about 500 civilian casualties had been caused thus far in Japanese air raids on Netherlands Indies cities and villages.

In Tarempa, in the Ananibas Islands, the dead in enemy raids of Dec. 17 were put at 100; about 80 were killed in a raid on Pontianak and 300 were injured.

Japanese Ships at Davao Attacked by Dutch Planes

By the Associated Press.

BATAVIA, Netherlands Indies, Dec. 23.—Dutch naval aircraft attacked Japanese ships in the Philippine harbor of Davao today, aiding United States forces battling against the invasion of Mindanao Island, a Netherlands Indies communique announced.

One Japanese tanker of about 10,000 tons was hit squarely with a 400-pound bomb and burst instantly into flame, the communique said, and other enemy transports also were attacked.

Tokyo Claims City

(The Japanese landed in considerable force at Davao, on the southern island of Mindanao, last Saturday. Tokyo claimed today that occupation of the city of Davao, at the head of the bay of the same name, had been completed. Manila said little was known of the situation there, probably because communications with the American-Filipino defending force had been broken.)

The communique said:

"This morning our naval aircraft attacked enemy ships in the Bay of Davao.

"With one bomb of 200 kilograms (440 pounds) a direct hit was scored on the largest ship. This ship, a tanker of about 10,000 tons, immediately caught fire.

Dutch Airdrome Attacked

"This morning a strong formation of Japanese aircraft carried out a strong attack on one of our airdromes in the outer possessions (outlying islands of the Dutch East Indies). Damage was done.

"Furthermore an enemy bombing attack took place at Sorong, on the west coast of New Guinea. Approaching aircraft of the Royal Netherlands Navy drove off the enemy. No damage was done.

"A naval flying boat has not returned from a bombing raid."

The communique did not tell from what bases the Dutch planes attacked the Japanese at Davao.

Japanese Bomb Rangoon

Tokyo, Dec. 23 (Official Broadcast Recorded By AP)—Japanese planes made a mass raid on Rangoon this afternoon, bombing the airdrome, hangars, wharves, railway station, Government offices and barracks, it was announced here today.

Several British combat planes were reported shot down and a number of planes destroyed on the ground.

The Japanese planes all "returned unscathed after witnessing the destruction of part of the city," the announcement said.

DEC 24 1941

Japs Lose in Rangoon Raid

RANGOON, Burma, Dec. 23 (AP)—R. A. F. defenders of Burma destroyed at least ten Japanese warplanes—nine bombers and one fighter—during a short mass assault on this city this morning.

(An expansive Japanese communique said the raiders, Japanese army planes, concentrated on the Rangoon airdrome, hangers, wharves, railway station, government offices and barracks.

It added that "several" out of 25 British planes were shot down, others destroyed on the ground, and boasted "all Japanese planes returned unscathed after witnessing destruction of part of the city."

(The bulk of the R. A. F. reserve strength in the Far East probably is in Burma. Considerable air reinforcements have reached there in recent months. Likewise Burma is the supply base for both British and American material moving to Free China over the Burmo Road.)

Air Battle Over Rangoon.

Rangoon, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—Nine Japanese bombers and one fighter were destroyed and several others seriously damaged in an air battle this morning over Rangoon, a communique said. Three British fighters were lost in battling a large Japanese force raiding this British stronghold.

nine Nipponese planes were smashed by the RAF yesterday.

Further air victories were announced today.

Two Japanese planes were declared officially to have been destroyed by British fighter craft protecting the Kuala Lumpur airdrome against an attempted raid and two others were said to have been so badly damaged "it is improbable that they reached their base."

"Last night our aircraft raided Sungei Patani airdrome, but owing to poor visibility results could not be ascertained," the British communique said. "There was no enemy opposition."

Half Of Hongkong Still Held

Singapore had a short raid alarm last night. The communique said no bombs were dropped.

Kuching, principal port of Sarawak, British Borneo, was attacked by fifteen Japanees planes last Friday morning, the British reported, and some damage was done to houses by bombs and machine-gun bullets.

"Casualties were not heavy," the communique reported.

"The situation at Honkgonk at 6 P. M. local time December 22 was that the Japanese were in possession of the eastern half of the island, although even in this position isolated British posts were holding out."

Russ, Libyan Fronts Cited

Meanwhile, Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, British commander in chief in the Far East, declared that British withdrawals in northern Malaya "might never have become necessary had we had larger forces out here—and especially more military equipment."

Addressing leaders of the British, Chinese, Malayan and Indian communities, Sir Robert asserted that much aviation equipment and other material which might have come to Malaya had been sent to Russia and Libya.

"Without that equipment," he said, "we don't know what the result of the battle in Russia might have been, and the battle in Libya might not have been the success it now is."

He declared Malaya had suffered because it was not a war theater until two weeks ago and supplies were sent where they were needed most urgently, but he asked community leaders to retain confidence that those responsible for distribution of troops and equipment would make adjustments necessary to meet the problem.

"We've lost a large part of Northern Malaya but for a time only," he said. "For every effort is being made elsewhere to provide us with the help of which we now stand in need."

British Announce New Malaya Air Successes

DEC 24 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Singapore, Dec. 23—The Malayan situation is unchanged aside from aerial action in which two Japanese planes were destroyed and two badly damaged, the British command said today.

British Malayan troops were reported to have inflicted heavy casualties on the Japanese in a sharp jungle fight about 330 miles above Singapore, while Australian Council Disappointed.

Canberra, Australia, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—Members of Australia's advisory war council, at a meeting to discuss the Pacific situation today, expressed disappointment over indications that British air strength in Malaya had proved inadequate to meet the Japanese invasion.

Air Chief Marshal Sir Robert Brooke-Popham, British commander-in-chief in the Far East, was quoted as saying much of the needed war material had gone to Russia and Libya.

The council members said that they believed the air power of Japan had been seriously underestimated and that they wondered how Alfred Duff Cooper, British Minister in the Far East, could have allowed himself to be misled. During a recent visit to Australia the Minister gave no inkling of the grave position in the Far East, they said.

Australia goes on daylight saving time January 1, making the eastern Australian time zone sixteen hours ahead of eastern standard time in the United States.

Decree Power For Chiang

[By the Associated Press]

Chungking, Dec. 23—The central executive committee of the Kuomintang today conferred special wartime powers upon Generalisimo Chiang Kai-shek which will permit him virtually to govern by decree "until the final goal of victory and world peace is attained."

Specifically the executive body provided that its standing committee, acting "under the guidance of Chiang, could amend existing laws and enact new ones as deemed expedient.

Indictment Charges Pasay With Aiding Japan.

Manila, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—An indictment charging violation of the espionage act was returned today against Andres Villaran y Pasay, president of the Sampaloc chapter of the Radical Ganap party.

The prosecution charged him with pro-Japanese activity and making remarks tending to foment insubordination and disloyalty. Bail was fixed at $10,000.

DR. SOONG NAMED FOREIGN MINISTER

Chiang's Brother-in-law Is Now in Washington.

DEC 24 1941

Chungking, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—T. V. Soong, now in Washington as Chinese representative for lease-lend aid to his country, today was appointed Foreign Minister of China.

His appointment came as Winston Churchill and President Roosevelt began conversations on Allied co-operation and it was believed here that Mr. Soong, a brother-in-law of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, could represent China better as Foreign Minister when the American-British talks were expanded to include the other allies.

Mr. Soong, who is chairman of the board of directors of the Bank of China, has been in Washington since 1939 as Chief of China Defense Supplies Inc.

He replaces Quo Tai-chi, who was named chairman of the Foreign Affairs Association of the Supreme National Defense Council.

Dr. Soong, 47 years old, is a 1915 graduate of Harvard University and a brother of both Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, wife of the Chinese generalissimo, and Mme. Sun Yat-sen, widow of the father of the Chinese republic.

Graduate studies at Columbia University and work in New York banking houses also helped him prepare for a notable career in the Orient.

He has served as Minister of Finance of China and, during the period from June, 1932, until June, 1933, was acting president of the executive Yuan. He made modern Chinese history when he balanced the government budget in 1933 without recourse to loans.

Chairman of the Bank of China's Board of Directors since 1935, he has been a leading figure in lease-lend transactions with the United States.

Dr. Soong replaced Mme. Chiang as head of the Chinese air force in the war against Japan on March 2, 1938.

Dutch East Indies Speeds War Export

New Licensing System Established To Get More Supplies To Allies

DEC 24 1941

Batavia, Dutch East Indies, Dec. 23 (AP)—The export of important defense materials from the Dutch East Indies to the United States and the British Empire has been speeded up by placing them under a general export permit instead of individual licenses.

Aneta Agency said the new law chiefly concerns rubber, which since last February 4 has been exported under strict license regulations to prevent enemy purchases, especially by way of Japan.

Countries to benefit included Canada, Australia, New Zealand, British India and South Africa, as well as the United States and England.

American Woman In Hongkong Killed By Shell Splinters

Defenders Still Holding; Singapore Front Is Quiet

Washington, Dec. 23 (AP)—The American Consul General at Hongkong reported to the State Department today that Miss Florence Webb, a United States citizen, was killed there Dec. 14 by shell splinters.

State Department records show Miss Webb was born in Shanghai June 15, 1908. Her father, Percy Dickinson Webb, was an American citizen born in Orange, N. J.

Previously, in a message dated Dec. 19 but received by the State Department only this morning, the Consul General, Addison L. Southard, reported that none of the members of the staff of the consulate had been injured.

Lisbon, Dec. 23—(AP)—Anti-British feelings among the Portuguese people were demonstrated yesterday when several motion picture theaters in Lisbon were forced to halt the screening of views of Sydney, Australia, because of roaring protests and demonstrations in the audience.

This was in variance to the press, which displayed a favorable tone to Great Britan despite the seizure of Portuguese Timor by British, Australian and Netherlands Indies troops.

Winston Churchill in news-reels had often been cheered despite the Government ban against demonstrations in the theaters.

Pearl Harbor Probers Arrive in Honolulu

By the Associated Press.

HONOLULU, Dec. 22 (Delayed).—The commission appointed by President Roosevelt to investigate the surprise Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor December 7 has arrived in Honolulu, it was officially announced tonight.

Justice Owen J. Roberts of the Supreme Court, who heads the group, said no statement could be issued at this time owing to the nature of the inquiry.

The announcement said that following completion of the investigation the commission would return to Washington to report to the President, "who will at that time issue such a statement as he deems fitting."

Moscow, Dec. 23 — Moscow had an air-raid alert tonight, which passed without incident.

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Correspondent

Moscow, Wednesday, Dec. 24—Red Army troops, swiftly reestablishing direct communications with the Donets Basin and Leningrad in their big winter offensive, today announced the recapture of Gorbachevo, 150 miles south of here, and the withdrawal of the Nazis across the Volkhov river in the northwest.

A Soviet communique told of the retaking of Gorbachevo, an important railway juction midway between Tula and Orel on the Moscow-Kharkov railway. Other near-by points, including Odoev, farther to the west, also were reoccupied.

Great Gains Made

In the northwest, dispatches said, the German troops who had been trying since October to throttle Leningrad had been pushed back to the Volkhov, and at some points beyond it, and were facing annihilation. This river is southeast of Leningrad and that action represented a Soviet gain of more than fifty miles.

The seizure of Gorbachevo likewise represented a gain of more than fifty miles for the Soviets, because at one time the German armies had penetrated far east of that point in their efforts to encircle Moscow.

Fierce fighting rolled all along the front, the Soviets said.

The Red army of the northwest, led by Gen. Kirkill Meretzkov, had raged westward for fifty miles from Tikhvin, its starting place, despite cruel blizzards and temperatures 22 degrees below zero.

"Enemy Is Routed"

"The enemy is routed, his communications cut, and panic has been caused in his rear by the Red army forces which continue to advance," said one official survey.

The network of Russian communications southeast of Leningrad was free from enemy occupation and private letters were arriving in Moscow from the old Czarist capital.

In spite of the long siege there, Lehingrad's food situation was reported improved, some supplies apparently having arrived from the United States and England (presumably via Archangel).

Big Retreat Claimed

The Volkhov, where the Germans now are being battered, connects Lakes Ilmen and Ladoga and is the main water barrier on this front. It is crossed by the principal Leningrad-Moscow rail line.

A correspondent of Pravda, the Communist newspaper, said the main force of Germans in this sector had begun a rapid retreat and, to facilitate disengagement, tried an offensive stab at one point.

DEC 24 1941

Crushing Rebuff

"Here they encountered a crushing rebuff," the dispatch added. "Of sixteen enemy tanks, seven were destroyed. The German infantry was compelled to entrench and was completely annihilated. Eight hundred dead Germans were left on the field. Defeated German divisions in small and isolated groups are scattering in forests and also are being annihilated there by Soviet troops."

Meanwhile the German lines on the Moscow front were bending farther backward, their flanks broken in the Kalinin and Tula sectors above and below the capital.

The Russians were advancing in the direction of Maloyaroslavets, sixty-five miles southwest of Moscow, taking three villages there. Due west of Moscow about the same distance, seventy villages were captured in the last ten days around Mozhaisk. On the Tula front, one hundred miles and more south of Moscow, twenty-five settlements were reported taken in a day and night of fighting.

Heavy Fighting In South

Maloyaroslavets saw the heavies fighting. Here the Germans were trying to make a stand in many newly built blockhouses and in tanks which had been sunk into the earth.

On the southwestern front, above the Sea of Azov, villages were reported liberated. In the Crimea, however, the Germans persisted in their pressure on the besieged naval port of Sevastopol and the position of the city was admittedly serious.

But stiff Russian resistance continued, and one Red army force retook a hill overlooking Sevastopol in a sharp counter-attack.

Red Army Advances 50 Miles West of Tikhvin in Cold

Pushes On to Volkhov River, Southeast Of Leningrad

By the Associated Press.

MOSCOW, Dec. 23.—The Red Army, pressing relentlessly its general counteroffensive, was reported today to have driven the Germans back to the Volkhov River, southeast of Leningrad, and in some places to have thrown them across the river.

While blizzards raged in a temperature of 22 degrees below zero (Fahrenheit), Russian troops advanced 50 miles west of Tikhvin, jumping-off place for the push in the northwest front and 110 miles east of Leningrad.

(In London a British commentator said the significant feature of the Russian advance today was the Soviet threat from Tikhvin to the rear of German forces around Leningrad.)

Leningrad Gets Supplies

Private letters arriving in Moscow from Leningrad were cited as proof that communications southeast of Leningrad had been reopened. Writers said that the food situation in the Baltic city had improved and they expressed the belief that supplies had arrived there from the United States and England.

Continue to Bend Back.

Military dispatches said the German lines at the heart of the Moscow front also continued to bend back after having been broken at the flanks in the Kalinin and Tula sectors.

Pravda, the Communist Party newspaper, reported Soviet troops bursting from Leningrad had routed the Germans on that front. In one sector where the Germans sought to impede the Russian pursuit by a counteroffensive, Pravda said, 800 Germans were slain by the Russians and the remaining forces were scattered floundering through forests where Soviet ski troops were hunting them down.

The government newspaper Izvestia said Russian units were rooting out Germans by flank attacks following the recapture of Tikhvin, 110 miles east of Leningrad, and forcing them to withdraw in some places even beyond the Volkhov River, which links Lake Ilmen and Lake Ladoga.

Nazis Resist Stubbornly.

Pravda's correspondent on the Tula front, south of Moscow, said Gen. Boldin's troops had recaptured 25 populated places in a day and a night of fighting. He added, however, that the Germans were resisting stubbornly and counterattacking.

From the southwestern front, where the Red Army has been driving the Germans back from the Caucasus gateway and out of the Donets iron and coal basin, came a Tass agency report telling of the capture of 46 villages and new positions.

Heavy fighting was going on around Maloyaroslavets, 65 miles southwest of Moscow. A Tass dispatch indicated the Russians were trying desperately to root the Nazis out of strong positions established by the Germans two months ago. The Germans were said to have built numerous blockhouses and sunk medium tanks into the earth for use as firing pits, all behind forest barricades of barged wire. Despite these defenses the Russians took three villages, Tass said.

Most tenacious German force was that besieging the Crimean naval base of Sevastopol. Russian dispatches said the city's situation remained serious as the Germans launched attack after attack at the Red Army lines.

Hit-Run Tactics Abandoned.

"In fighting on the western, Kalinin, southwestern and Leningrad fronts," an army morning communique said, "we engaged the enemy in fierce fighting and advanced, occupying a number of populated points."

An official announcement implied that many Russian irregulars operating behind the invasion front had abandoned hit-and-run tactics to stand firmly in paths of the German retreat.

Machine guns and mortars of a guerrilla detachment emplaced on the line of a German withdrawal from Kalinin, 95 miles northwest of Moscow, were said to have killed 223 men.

The remaining Germans "scattered in panic," the announcement said.

Of the 750,000-man army which Adolf Hitler sent against Moscow, Pravda declared more than 117,000 were slain in the five weeks ending December 20.

Heavy Fighting Continues In Russia, Nazis Say

BERLIN, Dec. 23 (Official Broadcast) (A. P.).—The German high command declared today that heavy fighting continues on the central Russian front.

"At several points our troops successfully repulsed heavy enemy attacks and destroyed 19 Soviet tanks," the high command said.

It asserted that the German air force had damaged a Soviet warship off the Crimean naval base of Sevastopol, scoring direct hits on the vessel.

Bombers and dive bomber formations were reported also to have supported the land fighting, inflicting "heavy and bloody losses on the enemy," the war bulletin said.

On the Arctic air front, the communique said, German bombers sank one merchantman east of the Rybachi Peninsula and damaged another in Kola Bay.

New day and night air raids on Britain's much-bombed Mediterranean island base of Malta were reported and the communique said German fighters downed two British planes.

Leningrad Hero Made Reds' Far East Chief

DEC 24 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 23—A London authority said today that Marshal Klementi Voroshilov, who organized the all-out defense of Leningrad last August as commander of the northern Russian front, had been appointed commander of Soviet forces in the Far East.

The appointment does not necessarily mean that the Russians are contemplating action against Japan, the informant stated, though he said such action was a possibility.

Information received here, he added, was that the Russians "wanted the front well protected."

—DASH—

Headed All Russ Forces

Voroshilov, who will be 61 on February 5, is the former commander in chief of the Soviet army, navy and air force who is probably responsible more than any man in Russia except Stalin himself for the mighty organization of the present Red army.

He commanded the Russian troops which divided Poland with Germany in 1939, and directed the 1939-40 war on Finland. The new Russian frontier fortifications built after Finland's defeat were called the Voroshilov Line.

Raised People's Army

Voroshilov was shifted to the post of chairman of the Committee of Defense in May, 1940, when Marshal Semeon Timoshenko replaced him as Defense Commissar. He remained a popular figure in Moscow and was intrusted with the important defense of Leningrad when Germany invaded Russia.

An early Bolshevik agitator as well as a self-made soldier, Voroshilov brought his oratory to bear in rousing a people's army to the successful defense of Leningrad, which at the height of the German attack he threatened to blow up rather than surrender.

Last October when Stalin reorganized Russia's western front command, Voroshilov and Marshal Semeon Budenny were given the task of forming new fighting forces.

French Legion Taken Out of War in Russia

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 23 (Official Broadcast).—Transocean, in a dispatch from Vichy, said today that the French Legion which had been fighting in Soviet Russia had been withdrawn from the firing line.

It said the official reason given was that the legion was being taken back for a rest.

Latvians Fight Beside Reds.

London, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—Latvian soldiers and officers are fighting with the Red Army near Moscow, a Pravda dispatch broadcast by Moscow radio said today.

The Communist newspaper said the Latvians escaped from German-occupied towns and villages to join the Latvian division formed in the Soviet Union.

AT LEAST 37 PLANES GROUND UP ON FIELD

DEC 24 1941

Imperial Troops Now Have Advanced At Least 300 Miles

Rommel's Forces Believed Cut Off From Tripolitanian Bases

By Edward Kennedy

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Dec. 23—British tanks deployed tonight along the coastal plain of the blue Gulf of Sirte, on the Axis line of retreat more than 300 miles inside Libya, and the odds mounted hourly against the battered forces of Nazi Gen. Erwin Rommel ever reaching their Tripolitanian bases.

The forward imperial units which have been astride of the coastal road at some points along the gulf and the troops now effecting a link across the plain were expected to be an effective stopper to any Axis attempt to leave the highway and try to escape westward by desert trails.

Pressure Steadily Increased

A headquarters communique put it this way:

"Thoroughout yesterday the pressure upon the enemy holdings covering Bengasi was steadily increased by the arrival of reinforcements, while our mobile columns had reached the coastal plain of the Gulf of Sirte south of Bengasi.

"It is now reported that along the whole line of the enemy's retreat west of Mekili the countryside is littered with abandoned material.

"Many Germans and Italians have been overtaken by our pursuing troops. . . .

37 Planes Destroyed

"During the night of December 21-22, one of our mobile columns carried out a daring raid on an advanced enemy landing ground at Agedabia, destroying no less than thirty-seven aircraft on the ground."

This was more proof of how far the British advance striking columns were operating in front of the retreating German main forces. Agedabia is eighty miles south of Bengasi, where Rommel may have to make a stand simply because his retreat south and west is being cut off.

Previously, another British armored column penetrated 150 miles inside Tripolitania, sweeping down on a new airfield and grinding up at least twenty-four planes.

Toward Main Bases

Thus the scope of the British drive may soon bring the Eighth Army within effective striking distance of the main Axis bases in Tripolitania.

Military experts believe the Axis is in no position to reinforce the German forces in Tripolitania unless the Vichy Government makes available French North Africa territory as a channel.

Some sources professed to believe, however, that the Axis Armistice Commission is so much in control of Tunisia already that that country, which should have been a wall against which the Germans and Italians might have had to fight, would provide at least an escape route for them and possibly even a base for continuation of the enemy's African campaign.

Growing Toll Cited

Nevertheless, military observers considered the growing toll of Axis aircraft in Libya to be one of the most favorable factors for continued advance into Tripolitania when Rommel's army, now caught on the Libyan hump, is smashed.

Approximately 650 enemy planes have been reported destroyed in the air and on the ground since the advance began from the Egyptian frontier in November. Each airdrome taken boosts the total.

Seventy-four planes have been captured at Derna airdrome, the RAF said today. Six gliders were found there. Apparently they had been used either to transport ground crews or equipment for air reinforcements which were sent to help Rommel several weeks ago.

Despite bad weather, the RAF raided Tripoli, set off violent explosions and fires in the motor transport dispersal area of the city in persistent attacks on retreating motor columns and the few remaining Axis airports. An especially successful attack was reported on a line of one hundred troop-carrying trucks.

British Cutting Route of Axis Retreat in Libya

DEC 24 1941

Final Stand in Area Of Bengasi Thus May Be Forced on Rommel

By the Associated Press.

CAIRO, Dec. 23.—British speed columns have reached the coastal plain south of the Gulf of Sirte, far behind Bengasi, and other such forces are slashing freely into the areas through which Germans and Italians must retreat if they are to reach Tripoli safely, the British said today.

(The remnants of the Axis armies probably will attempt a final stand in the region of Bengasi, because German Gen. Edwin Rommel "cannot help it," said an authoritative military commentator in London.

(The number of British columns operating south of Bengasi would appear to make a wholesale withdrawal into Tripolitania impossible, he said. Thus the Germans and Italians have no choice but to fight.)

One column carried out a destructive raid on an advanced Axis landing ground at Agedabia, 100 miles south of Bengasi, two nights ago and wiped out no fewer than 37 planes parked on the field, said a communique.

British Increase Pressure on Bengasi.

These swift operations threatening and nipping at the Axis line of retreat followed the announcement yesterday that another such column had swooped on a newly established airfield 150 miles inside Tripolitania, far to the west, and destroyed at least 24 planes.

Meanwhile hurriedly reinforced troops were said in the communique to be steadily increasing their pressure on Bengasi. The Italian forces still east of that second most important Axis base in North Africa were said to be only rearguards.

The communique said the relentlessly grinding British pursuit of routed Germans and Italians had left in its wake a great mass of wrecked war material—tanks, planes, trucks and guns—which was found scattered far and wide over the countryside all the way from the inland strongpoint of Mekili to Bengasi.

R. A. F. Attacks Supply Columns.

Despite sandstorms and other unfavorable weather British airmen attacking columns of troops and supplies were reported incessantly adding to the war wreckage.

These attacks were reported especially severe to the south and west of Agedabia.

It was in this general area, south of Bengasi, that a flying column of tanks in Britain's offensive a year ago encountered and defeated large Italian tank forces. By that action the Italians in Bengasi were cut off and the port later was captured, only to be lost to the subsequent Axis counteroffensive.

Capture of 74 Axis Planes Claimed.

An R. A. F. communique said 74 Axis planes had been captured at Derna Airdrome.

Planes harried retreating Axis forces, causing heavy casualties among enemy troops and great damage to motorized convoys on the El Agheila road, the communique said.

In one attack more than 100 trucks, most of them full of troops, were successfully attacked, with many trucks and trailers destroyed.

Planes ranged as far west as Tripoli, where an airport was reported attacked and at least seven planes destroyed by fire and buildings hit. Bombs were dropped in the motor transport dispersal area of the city and pilots said there were violent explosions and fires.

Many German and Italian troops have been overtaken by the British, but so furious is the pursuit, the communique said, that it is not yet possible to indicate the number of prisoners taken.

Italians Report Heavy Bombardment by British

ROME, Dec. 23 (Official Broadcast) (A.P.).—The Italian high command reorted today that British artillery was subjecting Axis positions at Salum and Bardia in the Libyan-Egytian frontier zone to a steadily increasing bombardment, but declared the military situation farther west was unchanged.

Air activity on the North African front has been hampered by bad weather, but German flyers again bombed British troops at Tobruk and Derna, said an unusually brief war bulletin.

Axis air squadrons also were reported to have repeatedly bombed the British Mediterranean base of Malta, scoring hits on targets despite violent anti-aircraft defense.

ITALIAN GENERAL DIES

Wounds Received in Libya Are Fatal.

Berne, Switzerland, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—Gen. Giulio Borsarelli di Refreddo, commander of the Italian Trento Division, died in a Naples hospital of wounds received in battle in Libya, an official announcement in Rome said today.

He is Italy's seventh general to be killed in the war.

6 Axis Ships In Mediterranean Are Claimed By British Subs

Transports, Supply Craft And Merchant Cruiser Er Route To African Front Reported Destroyed

DEC 24 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 23—Six Axis ships—transports, supply craft and possibly one armed merchant cruiser—have been smashed by submarines of the British Mediterranean fleet blockading the crumbling German-Italian armies of Africa, the Admiralty announced tonight.

This meant that since the British army began its advance into the desert November 18 that the navy and RAF had sunk or damaged 53 Axis supply ships or transports in the Mediterranean. The navy has sunk or damaged 25 such vessels in addition to 4 cruisers, 2 destroyers and 3 submarines. The RAF has accounted for 23 supply ships.

At least two convoys were riddled by the latest undersea assault on what appeared to be an eleventh-hour attempt by the enemy to break through to Libya with reinforcements and supplies for a last Axis stand in Tripolitania.

These were the craft destroyed:

A large supply ship, already seriously damaged by a torpedo, which had been beached, presumably on the African coast. The crew was trying to salvage something of the vessel when a British submarine slipped closed to shore and let fly another torpedo which blew up the ship.

Another submarine assaulted an enemy convoy "consisting of two large supply ships or transports with destroyer escort. Both large ships were sunk."

"One large ship out of another convoy which was escorted by a cruiser and destroyers was hit by a torpedo. The explosion was followed by a second much heavier explosion."

"Another of our submarines torpedoed a large tanker. It is considered that this ship also was sunk."

A medium-sized ship, which "may have been an armed merchant cruiser" was torpedoed and set afire. When last seen she was listing ominously.

The Admiralty told how crews of one submarine, which had just sent torpedoes into two big supply ships or transports in a convoy, "heard further explosions and the noise of the ships breaking up as they sank."

One of the ships was a large supply ship which had already been seriously damaged by a torpedo from a submarine, the Admiralty communique said. The ship had been beached and Axis sailors were trying to carry out salvage operations when she was hit again by a torpedo and this time destroyed.

An authoritative spokesman said today that a torpedo attack has been made on one of Britain's auxiliaries which was carrying out air protection duties with a convoy, but denied that a British aircraft carrier has even been attacked.

The German communique claiming to have sunk an aircraft carrier of the Formidable class in the Atlantic possibly referred to the attack on the auxiliary vessel, the announcement said.

Authorities did not say what was the result of the attack on the auxiliary.

Earlier an authoritative commentator announced that the battle of the Atlantic is going pretty well and gave considerable credit to catapult fighter planes based on ships converted to auxiliaries for protection of convoys against Germany's long-range planes. The fighters are commonly called suicide planes because their short range often makes it impossible to reach a land base after they take off.

BRITISH WRECK SIX MORE SHIPS

DEC 24 1941

Submarines in New Raids on Axis Vessels.

London, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—The Admiralty announced today that British submarines had destroyed six more Axis transports or supply ships in the Mediterranean.

Berlin Repeats Claim.

Berlin, Dec. 23 (Official Broadcast recorded by A. P.).—The German High Command reiterated today in its daily communique the claim made in a special announcement yesterday that a British aircraft carrier had been sunk in the Atlantic.

"As already announced in a special communique," it said, "a U-boat commanded by Lieut.-Capt. Bigalk attacked a British aircraft carrier in the Atlantic which was protecting a convoy.

"The U-boat rendered the aircraft carrier incapable of maneuvering by torpedo hits on a propeller.

"After two further torpedo hits on the bow and amidships, the aircraft carrier went down by the bow."

(In London, a British official, in comment on the German claim, said: "It is no use to feel that Mr. Gobbels, German propaganda minister, is any more correct this time than he has been in the past.")

15 NAZI DIVISIONS SAID TO BE MOVING ON SPAIN; PETAIN REPORTED OUT

DEC 24 1941

Long-Anticipated Nazi Push Into N. Africa Is Expected Soon

Vichy Marshal Believed To Have Quit In Protest Against Move

[By the Associated Press]

London, Wednesday, Dec. 24—The long-expected German push into French North Africa over the protesting but prostrate figure of Marshal Petain is imminent or already in progress, a variety of reports from the Continent of Europe indicated strongly today.

A Reuters dispatch from "somewhere in Europe" said Petain had resigned in angry but futile protest against German pressure.

His pro-Nazi "heir," Admiral Jean Darlan, was reported to have taken over the rule of the enfeebled and internally torn remains of France.

[The German radio carried an official announcement tonight declaring Marshal Petain, the Vichy French chief of state, conferred today with the French writer and lecturer, George Claude, "who also is a sponsor of Franco-German collaboration."

[The broadcast was heard in New York by NBC.]

Already Moving Over Border

Competent informants in Switzerland said even prior to this report that fresh German troops already were moving down to the Spanish border across the Atlantic coastal strip of occupied France.

Quantities of German military equipment have been piled up near the Spanish frontier ever since the fall of France, and the movement of troops was reported soon after Adolf Hitler ousted his chief general and announced Sunday his assumption of personal command of the German army in the midst of the crisis in Russia.

Hitler at that time made references to big actions. Questioned about those references and about foreign reports of possible German action in the Mediterranean or North Africa, a German army spokesman in Berlin said yesterday there were "many possibilities still open for German military action," but that "obviously Axis plans could not be revealed."

French Africa Seen Goal

All the vague little scraps of information from the German-dominated continent, however, came together in a pattern indicating the likelihood of the Nazis trying to take what they wanted from French Africa.

(The Free French radio at Brazzaville, in equatorial Africa, reported there was increased German pressure on Vichy for further collaboration but did not mention Petain. Its broadcast was heard in New York by NBC.)

(NBC and CBS heard a Rome radio report saying Petain would make a radio speech Wednesday night (3 p. m., E. S. T.) and also that he had discussed Moroccan affairs at a cabinet meeting Tuesday.)

The Reuters dispatch said specifically that the Germans were demanding immediate effectiveness for the agreement Petain was said to have made at a meeting with No. 2 Nazi Goering on Dec. 1.

It was reported at the time that Petain had agreed to let the Germans have all the bases they wanted in French Africa provided they could get to them without using the interned remnants of the French fleet.

In the ensuing three weeks, Petain is reported to have used all sorts of excuses to avoid making good on this extorted promise, because the condition of public opinion in French Africa was not ripe for such a step and because he wanted to see how the British made out in their drive against German-Italian armored forces in Libya.

Looks Like Victory

After considerable delay, that British drive today looked more and more like a total victory, with the Germans facing death or surrender to the last man unless they could flee into French Tunisia from Italian Tripolitania.

Hence the urgency of the German demands for open entry into French Africa, even aside from the longer-range importance of the move.

It was reported in diplomatic circles that Gen. Alphonse Juin, the man who succeeded Maxime Weygand as commander in chief of French North Africa in November, had been summoned to Vichy along with Gen. Auguste Nogues, commander of Morocco, in connection with the determined German demands.

Free French quarters at the time of Weygand's ouster predicted all this, saying Weygand's policy was to protest and then bow to superior pressure. Now, apparently, Petain has done the same and Spain and the narrow waters of Gibraltar Strait are the only barriers to a German plunge into the French dominions.

Spain has declared her non-belligerency, but ever since German arms gave Franco his bitter victory in the civil war, Spain has been regarded as a puppet of the Nazi master.

The Swiss reports of German troops pressing down to the Pyrenees said most of them appeared to be veterans sent to a quiet zone—ostensibly to rest.

That was the same story that lulled the Netherlands in May, 1940.

That the Germans now must make some new move, if only to divert attention from their defeats in Russia, was conceded in many parts of Europe.

DEC 24 1941

May Make Two Moves

The Stockholm paper Svenska Bagbladet said the German offensives might be twins—through Turkey toward Suez and into French Africa simultaneously.

German sources asserted that the United States and Britain had designs on Spain and Turkey and were responsible for the "unfounded rumors" of Nazi plans in those two countries.

("The Anglo-Saxon technique lately shown in Portuguese Timor," they said, "always is aimed to divert suspicions from themselves while preparing a further expansion of the war.")

Berlin sources scoffed at the suggestion of a dual offensive, but admitted that Otto Abetz, Hitler's personal emissary to France, was in Berlin to discuss French-German relations.

A report from Rome to Switzerland said the Rome end of the Axis finally had decided to send an envoy to Paris, too. The Italians heretofore have not followed the German policy of buttering up France, but apparently, if Germany is going into French Africa, with or without French consent, Italy wants to be in on the deal.

Petain, Claude Confer, Report

Petain Broadcasts To His People Today

New York, Dec. 23 (AP) — The Rome radio said tonight Marshal Petain will broadcast a speech at 9 p. m. tomorrow French time (3 p. m., Eastern Standard Time).

The Rome broadcast here declared the information was based on Vichy dispatches and that the aged Chief-of-State had presided over a Cabinet meeting today at which French Morocco was discussed.

The British radio earlier had said Petain "is to broadcast a Christmas Eve message to children and prisoners of war."

By FRANK BRUTTO

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 23 (AP).—Fresh German troops are moving down through the west of occupied France to the Spanish border, competent informants said tonight.

The movement, so far not large, is the first in this direction since the fall of France. However, considerable German military equipment has been piling up on the Spanish border for several months.

Significantly, the movement southward was noted just after Adolf Hitler, placing himself in command of the Nazi land forces, had declared only last Sunday that the German front from Norway to the Spanish border—and beyond to North Africa—must be made secure.

(In Berlin, according to an Andi Agency dispatch to the Associated Press, German sources asserted that the United States and Britain had designs on Spain and Turkey and were responsible for the "unfounded rumors" in those two countries.

Nazis Cite Timor.

("The Anglo-Saxon technique lately shown in (Portuguese) Timor," they said, "always is aimed to divert suspicions from themselves while preparing a further expansion of the war."

(The German statement is similar to announcements made in conjunction with the Nazi invasions of Norway and the neutral Low Countries in 1940.)

It was not yet known whether the troops now being sent to the border were intended for service in Spain—perhaps involving an attack on Gibraltar—or for shipment to North Africa, where the German-Italian armies are on the verge of complete defeat.

Travelers from France have reported a recent influx of German troops into the occupied zone from the east, but most of these appeared to be in the category of soldiers being sent to rest areas.

How Dutch Were Lulled.

(This may be deceptive, however. For months before the assault on the Netherlands in May, 1940, the Dutch were lulled by reports that German troops concentrating on their eastern frontier were merely "resting" after duty in other sectors.)

New German Offensives Planned, Swiss Assert

BERN, Switzerland, Dec. 23 (AP).—Adolf Hitler's assumption of the army high command is a sign that new offensives are being prepared, the Swedish newspaper Svenska Dagbladet said today.

The newspaper, quoted by the Stockholm correspondent of the Basler National Zeitung, said the probable offensives were from Bulgaria through Turkey, Asia Minor, Palestine and the Suez Canal and from Sicily to Tunis and Tripoli to take British forces "from both sides" and drive the British out of the Mediterranean.

The Basel newspaper's Berlin correspondent quoted Dienst aus Deutschland, authoritative commentary, as saying the change of command in the German Army is "a sign that a critical part of the war situation has been reached and that necessary new measures must be taken in view of the extension of the war in the Far East."

RAF Attacks French Coast As Germans Drop Bombs On Britain

London, Dec. 23 (AP)—Bombs dropped on southeastern England districts by low-flying German raiders caused several casualties and slight damage tonight while the RAF was attacking the French coastal regions of Calais and Boulogne in bright moonlight.

A German raider also showered incendiaries on an East Anglian town, and British AA guns on the Thames estuary fired on other planes crossing the coast.

From the Kentish cliffs anti-aircraft shells could be seen bursting along the French side of the Channel, and German searchlights shone far out to sea.

German long-range guns in the Cap Griz Nez area also were reported to have fired across the strait.

The Government dismissed German air activities overnight with a curt "Nothing to report."

March First Noted After Hitler Took Full Command—Nazi Supplies Pile Up on Spanish Frontier.

DEC 24 1941

Berne, Switzerland, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—German troops were reported authoritatively tonight to be moving through western occupied France to the Spanish frontier.

The movement was noted after Hitler's Sunday proclamation, upon assuming command of the German land forces, to the effect that the German front from Norway to the Spanish border must be consolidated.

So far the number of troops moving southward is reported not large and it was not apparent whether they were equipped for a siege of Gibraltar or for shipment from Spain to North Africa, where the Axis armies are in dire straits. It was, however, the first sizable addition to German forces in the French-Spanish border area since the fall of France.

Considerable German army equipment has been piling up on the Spanish-French border for several months.

Observers here saw further evidence of French cooperation with the Axis in the appointment of an Italian Ambassador to Paris.

Berlin, Dec. 23 (Andi Agency to AP)—German forces asserted tonight that the United States and Britain had designs of Spain and Turkey and were responsible for the "unfounded rumors" of Nazi plans in those two countries.

"The Anglo-Saxon technique lately shown in (Portuguese) Timor," they said, "always is aimed to divert suspicions from themselves while preparing a further expansion of the war."

Varna, Constanta Reported In Complete Nazi Control

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—The Bulgarian port of Varna and the Rumanian port of Constanta, on the Black Sea, were reported today by the Moscow radio to be in complete German control. The radio quoted Istanbul sources.

Announcement of Bulgarian mobilization was expected shortly as Bulgarian war preparations were reported increasing, particularly along the Turkish border, the radio said.

Many Possibilities Still Open

Berlin, Dec. 23—(Through Andi, Argentine news agency, to AP)—A German army spokesman said today there were "many possibilities still open for German military action."

Questioned about Hitler's references to big actions and foreign rumors about North Africa and the Mediterranean, the spokesman said that "obviously Axis plans could not be revealed."

Otto Abetz, German Ambassador to Paris, now is in Berlin for talks on German-French relations, it was revealed.

Italians Send Envoy To Serve in Paris

Rome, Dec. 23 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A. P.).—Italy announced today that Gino Buti, former director of the political section of the Foreign Ministry, has been named as her representative at Paris with plenipotentiary powers.

It said that the appointment was made in agreement with the German Government and that Vichy had been informed.

NAZI 'NERVE WAR' BEGINS IN TURKEY

Notice to German Merchants In Istanbul on Closing Is Called a Bluff to Cause Fear

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Dec. 23 (AP)—Germans in Istanbul have been told by a German embassy spokesman to "be ready toward the end of January to close up your businesses for a short time," a customarily reliable source reported today.

This word was reported to have been passed out at the time Hitler assumed command of the army last Sunday, but British circles here said they thought the warning was a bluff: An attempt to arouse fear in Turkey of a German army drive in this direction.

A British observer said there were indications that the Germans might soon want new economic, political, and even possibly military favors from Turkey and thus were starting their usual "war of nerves" before making any demands.

One indication that this might be true is the rapid increase in the number of Germans in Turkey, rather than a decrease such as might be expected if invasion were contemplated soon.

A new German propaganda office, established at an Istanbul hotel, is believed to be directing attempts to create anti-Semitism in Turkey. Because of the small Jewish population here, this has never before been an evident issue.

Now prominent Jewish business men say they have received telephoned warnings to leave Turkey and Turkish merchants report calls demanding to know why they tolerate Jewish competition.

The government is known to be combatting this propaganda. Turkey has no anti-Jewish laws.

It was believed here the Germans might request discrimination against Jews and demand supplies of grain and immediate delivery of Turkish chrome ore which has been promised for two years in the future. They might also include a demand for transit of troops to Iraq and Iran. In any event, all such demands were expected to meet a blunt refusal.

Hitler Reported Beset By Nerve and Eye Trouble

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—The Moscow radio said today in a broadcast heard here that Adolf Hitler recently had consulted "the famous German Dr. Schuster" and was told he was suffering severe nervous exhaustion and inflammation of the eyes.

Hitler's eyes have troubled him since he was gassed in the first World War.

Hitler Decrees Death For Profiteering

London, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—The Berlin radio announced issuance of an order by Adolf Hitler today making punishable by death any profiteering on articles of winter equipment for the front. Reuter's news agency reported the broadcast.

Under The Nazis

I

Holland

London, Dec. 23 (AP)—The Netherlands East Indies news agency Aneta said today that four Dutchmen had been executed by German troops in Holland for assisting British aviators.

The men were the first executed since September, when five persons were shot for a like offense and three others for leading a sabotage organization.

There were reports that anti-Nazi sabotage in Holland had increased since the German defeat in Russia, Aneta said. The agency said a Russian communique reported that a German trooptrain was recently derailed, killing and wounding fifty men, and other railway accidents, including one outside the Amsterdam central station, were reported by Dutch newspapers. Explosives have been planted in the mail boxes of Dutch Nazis, one Dutch Nazi paper admitted.

Norway

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 23 (AP)—The city of Stavanger, Norway, was fined 2,000,000 kroner by occupation authorities who confiscated all radio sets for the duration of the war, the Stockholm correspondent of the Basler Natinal Zeitung said today. (The kroner is no longer quoted in New York.)

The Germans said it was punishment for continuous telephone cable sabotage and hostility to German troops. The city was previously fined 1,000,000 kroner, the report said.

Tension was reported especially sharp, compelling the sending of German troops who are now camped outside the city but ready to enter at the first sign of trouble.

DEC 24 1941

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 23—The British radio said today the Germans had announced officially the execution of three more Frenchmen in Paris "for activity in favor of the enemy" and possession of arms. The broadcast was recorded by CBS.

Sabotage in Denmark

London, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—A broadcast from Denmark said that police blamed saboteurs for an explosion in a chemical warehouse in Copenhagen early today.

Portugal Sends More Troops to Azores

Lisbon, Portugal, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—Another of numerous contingents of troops sailed from Lisbon today to re-enforce the Azores.

TYPHUS SPREADING

Epidemic Reported to Be Approaching Berlin.

London, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—The Polish Telegraphic Agency said today an epidemic of typhus was spreading through Eastern Europe and was reported approaching Berlin.

DEC 24 1941

It quoted the Berlin correspondent of the Stockholm newspaper Tidningen as saying that women employed in German labor camps in the Brandenburg Forests near Berlin had ceased helping local farmers because of typhus in neighboring villages.

GANDHI CONFERS ON WAR

Congress Party Opens Parley To Determine Its Attitude

Bombay, India, Dec. 23 (AP)—Mohandas K. Gandhi and members of the working committee of the India Congress party opened a three-day conference today in Bardoli, Bombay province, to determine the party's attitude toward the war.

Informed sources expressed belief that the party would support the allied cause only if the British made concessions such as a ppromise of dominion status and immediate establishment of a completely Indian executive council.

Goebbels to Broadcast Christmas Eve Message

Berlin, Dec. 23 (Andi Agency to A. P.).—Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels is to broadcast his traditional Christmas Eve address to Germans throughout the world at 9 P. M. (2 P. M., Eastern standard time) tomorrow.

To Celebrate Mass In Moscow Christmas

Rev. Leopold Braun, Formerly Of Massachusetts, Will Officiate In Catholic Church

Moscow, Dec. 23 (AP)—Christmas mass will be celebrated in Moscow by the Rev. Leopold Braun, formerly of Worcester, Mass., who remained here throughout the German siege.

Father Braun has made all preparations for the mass in St. Louis Des Francais Church, and later in the day, the growing American colony, including six American newspaper correspondents, will attend a Christmas party at the United States Embassy.

There will be no Russian celebration of the day, since the Orthodox Church, under the Gregorian calendar, observes Christmas on January 7. Newspapers already are advertising New Year trees and ornaments.

Texan In RCAF Injured

Ottawa, Dec. 23 (AP)—The Royal Canadian Air Force reported today that Leading Aircraftman Riley R. Jennings, Fort Worth, Texas, was dangerously injured while on active service in Canada.

Parents Learn Missing Son Is Captive of Nazis

N. Y. Family Gets News R.C.A.F. Pilot, Believed Killed, Is in War Prison

LONDON, Dec. 23 (AP).—Royal Canadian Air Force Pilot Wingfield Louis Johnson, twenty-seven years old, who gave his next of kin as Wilbur E. Johnson, of 2 West Sixty-seventh Street, New York City, was listed today as a German prisoner of war.

"Best Christmas Present"

Mr. Wilbur Johnson, who is vice-president of Marschalk & Pratt, advertising agency, of 535 Fifth Avenue, disclosed last night that he and his family are celebrating a unique Christmas present—the knowledge that his son, Wingfield Louis Johnson, is a prisoner of war and not dead, as was believed two weeks ago.

30.24 — 13723

Mr. Johnson said that his son enlisted in the R. C. A. F. two years ago and went abroad to join the Royal Air Force after a training period near Toronto. Mr. Johnson said he was informed on Dec. 2 by the R. C. A. F. that his son was missing in action over Germany. Until Monday afternoon, Mr. Johnson said, he and his wife and their other son, Edwin, twenty-two years old, had little hope that Windfield Louis was alive.

When Mr. Johnson returned from his office on Monday he found a cablegram from the commander of the 101st Squadron of the R. A. F. which stated that his son had not reported after flight action over Germany during the night of Nov. 30-Dec. 1. The message added that Pilot Johnson had done exemplary work. Pinned to the message was a postscript: "Just got message from aircraft. He was forced down at sea near the German coast."

Half an hour later came another cablegram from the R. C. A. F. informing Mr. Johnson his son was a German war prisoner.

AIR RAID HAVENS FOR PETS ONLY

London, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—Dogs, cats and other pets which are barred from rest centers for air raid victims are being provided with special refuges to which they may be sent if injured or made homeless by bombings.

More than 100 animal centers already have been set up by local authorities in co-operation with the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

URUGUAYANS TO AID IN WAR

Move Started To Send Fifty To Serve In U. S. Air Forces

Montevideo, Uruguay, Dec. 23 (AP)—A subscription was launched today to equip and send fifty Uruguayan airmen to serve in the United States air forces.

Uruguayan cattle raisers also have begun a fund-raising campaign to buy an ambulance as a gift for the United States Army. They previously had bought one for Britain.

Draws Line On Persons From Axis Countries

Mexico Reported To Be Suspending Naturalization Of Axis

DEC 24 1941

Mexico City, Dec. 23 (AP)—Mexico was reported today to be suspending naturalization of persons from Axis countries, retroactive to January 1, 1939, and has completed plans to sever diplomatic relations with three Axis satellite states, none of which is represented in the diplomatic corps here.

Mexico's break with one of these, Rumania, was particularly interesting, for this is the home-in-exile of the abdicated King Carol, whose Axis-dominated former kingdom never had a Minister to Mexico or a treaty providing for representation here.

The Foreign Ministry announcement said Mexico was breaking with Rumania, Bulgaria and Hungary because they declared war on the United States.

United States

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23—War Department Communiqué No. 24, outlining the military situation as of 9:30 A. M., follows:

1. Philippine theatre:

Combat operations are continuing with increasing intensity along the eastern shore of Lingayen Gulf, north of Damortis. A major engagement is being fought in the vicinity of Santo Tomas, where defending American Philippine troops have attained some initial successes.

Japanese troops are continuing to land between Agoo and San Fernando. Landing operations are being supported by increasing numbers of bombing and attack planes.

There were air raids of a minor character over other portions of Luzon.

Fighting is continuing in the vicinity of Davao on the island of Mindanao.

2. There is nothing to report from other areas.

War Department Communiqué No. 25, outlining the military situation as of 5 P. M., follows:

1. Philippine theatre:

The commanding general of the United States Army forces in the Far East reports that fighting on the eastern shore of Lingayen Gulf is increasing in intensity. Japanese invaders are using light tanks in vigorous attacks south of Agoo. Enemy airplanes have been particularly active in supporting landing and shore operations.

American Army bombing planes attacked several enemy troop ships off Davao with undetermined results.

2. There is nothing to report from other areas.

Navy Communiqué No. 16, covering the situation up to 9 A. M., follows:

Atlantic Theatre—There are no new developments to report.

Pacific Theatre—Two United States merchant ships were attacked by enemy submarines off the Pacific Coast. Both attacks were unsuccessful.

Central Pacific—Wake Island sustained another strong air attack in the forenoon of the 22d. Several enemy planes were shot down. An enemy force effected a landing on Wake the morning of the 23d.

Far East—Japanese claims of seizure of a large number of American merchant vessels are without foundation. The only United States merchant vessel known to have been seized by the Japanese is the steamship President Harrison.

MANILA, Dec. 23 (AP)—Army Headquarters issued this communiqué at 4:19 P. M. today:

Fighting continues on the Northern Front, but there has been no material change in positions. The enemy has been very active in the air. The situation of Davao is still obscure.

DEC 24 1941

SINGAPORE, Dec. 23 (AP)—The British Headquarters communiqué said today:

There has been no further change in the military situation in Northern Malaya.

There was a short air raid alert in Singapore last night. No bombs were dropped.

Yesterday morning Japanese fighter aircraft attempted to raid the Kuala Lumpur Airdrome. They were immediately engaged by our fighters, who shot down two of the enemy for certain and so damaged two others that it is improbable they reached their base.

Last night our aircraft raided Sungei Patani Airdrome, but, owing to poor visibility, results could not be observed. There was no enemy opposition.

Kuching [in Sarawak] was attacked by fifteen Japanese planes on the morning of Dec. 19. Some damage was done to property. Enemy planes bombed and machine-gunned houses and streets. Casualties were not heavy. The chief secretary reports that all departmental services and communities behaved well.

The situation at Hong Kong at 6 P. M. local time, Dec. 22, was that Japanese were in possession of the eastern half of the island, although even in this position isolated British posts were still holding out.

The main British garrison in the western half of the island is resisting Japanese attempts at further penetration westward.

In the meantime the advanced guard of Chinese forces which are moving to the relief of Hong Kong has reached Tamshui and Shumchun, distant respectively forty and twenty-seven miles from Hong Kong, while guerrilla fighting is reported to have broken out at a point only fourteen miles from the island.

HONG KONG, Dec. 23 (AP)—The British Command in Hong Kong issued this communiqué today:

Fighting continues along last night's line with undiminished intensity.

There has been a light enemy penetration in the central sector in the direction of Mount Cameron, but this penetration has been restrained by our troops since early this morning.

Briefly, the situation is substantially unchanged.

CAIRO, Egypt, Dec. 23 (AP)—The British Middle East General Headquarters communiqué said today:

Throughout yesterday the pressure upon the enemy holdings covering Bengazi was steadily increased by the arrival of reinforcements, while our mobile columns had reached the coastal plain of the Gulf of Sidra south of Bengazi.

It is now reported that along the whole line of the enemy's retreat west of Mekili the countryside is littered with abandoned material.

Many Germans and Italians have been overtaken by our pursuing troops, but with every attention concentrated upon the pursuit and destruction of enemy forces still in front of us details of the captures are not yet available.

Owing to extremely bad weather conditions operations of our air forces were severely hampered. Nevertheless, transport moving south and west of Agedabia was successfully attacked, many vehicles being destroyed and considerable casualties caused the enemy.

During the night of Dec. 21-22 one of our mobile columns carried out a daring raid on an advanced enemy landing ground at Agedabia, destroying no less than thirty-seven aircraft on the ground.

CAIRO, Dec. 23 (AP)—The R. A. F. Middle East Command issued this communiqué today:

During Sunday and Monday retreating enemy forces in Libya were constantly attacked by our aircraft, particularly in the region of Agedabia.

Heavy casualties were caused among enemy troops and great damage was done to enemy motorized convoys on the El Agheila road.

One attack on more than 100 lorries, most of them full of troops, was particularly successful. Many lorries and trailers were completely destroyed.

The landing ground at Sidi Magrun was subjected to a series of intensive attacks. Bomber aircraft of the S. A. A. F. [South African Air Force] destroyed at least four enemy aircraft on the ground.

Subsequently R. A. F. bombers destroyed two JU-52's and damaged a number of others.

Then, finally, a large force of S. A. A. F. and R. A. F. fighters attacked an airdrome just as 25 enemy aircraft were taking off. Fighters destroyed 4 JU-87's, 2 JU-52's, 1 JU-88, 1 Macchi-202, 1 ME-109 and severely damaged many other enemy aircraft.

Elsewhere 2 JU-88's were intercepted over the Gulf of Bomba, one of the German bombers being shot down into the sea.

Sunday night our bombers successfully attacked the airdrome at Castel Benito, south of Tripoli. Direct hits were obtained on dispersed aircraft. At least seven were destroyed by fire and others were severely damaged. Airdrome buildings and hangars were also hit. At Tripoli itself bombs were dropped in a motor transport dispersal area, causing violent explosions and fires.

It is now established that 74 Axis aircraft were captured at Derna airdrome in various stages of unserviceability. These aircraft included 18 JU-52's, seven of which were destroyed on landing after our land forces captured the airdrome; 11 ME-109's, 8 ME-110's, 3 HE-111's, 7 JU-87's, 4 JU-88's, 6 Fieseler Storchs, 2 S-79's, 5 Macchis, 3 G-50's, 6 gliders and one other aircraft.

All enemy aircraft had been made unserviceable by attacks on the airdrome or in aerial combats from which they returned in badly damaged condition.

Enemy aircraft made a number of attempts to raid Malta Dec. 21. Raiding formations were intercepted by our fighters, which destroyed one enemy fighter and damaged others.

From these and other operations three of our aircraft are missing.

LONDON, Dec. 23 (AP)—An Admiralty communiqué said today:

Six more enemy transports or supply ships have been accounted for by submarines of the Mediterranean fleet.

DEC 24 1941

One of these was a large supply ship which already had been seriously damaged by a torpedo from one of our submarines. The ship had been beached and the enemy was endeavoring to carry out salvage operations when she again was torpedoed and this time destroyed.

Another of our submarines carried out a most successful attack on an enemy convoy consisting of two large supply ships or transports with a destroyer escort. Both large ships were sunk.

After the explosion of the torpedoes, the submarine heard further explosions and the noise of the ships breaking up as they sank.

One large ship out of another convoy, which was escorted by a cruiser and destroyers, was hit by a torpedo. The explosion was followed by a second much heavier explosion.

Another of our submarines torpedoed a large tanker. It is considered that this ship also was sunk.

A medium-sized ship also has been torpedoed. This ship may have been an armed merchant cruiser. After having been torpedoed she was seen to be on fire and to have a severe list.

The Air Ministry issued this communiqué today:

Aircraft of the Bomber Command attacked the naval base at Wilhelmshaven last night.

No aircraft are missing from the operation, but one aircraft of the Coastal Command and one of the Fighter Command are missing from patrol yesterday.

OTTAWA, Dec. 23 (AP)—J. L. Ralston, Canadian Minister of Defense, issued this communiqué today:

A situation report from Hong Kong up to 6 P. M. yesterday, received through the British Admiralty, indicates that the force generally has suffered heavy casualties.

The only particulars given of casualties was the regrettable news that the Canadian commander, Brigadier J. K. Lawson, was believed to have been killed, and that the senior staff officer, Colonel P. Hennessy, had been killed by shell fire.

The enemy has succeeded in landing fresh forces and has been attacking our positions continuously.

Two Canadian counter-attacks had not succeeded in making progress. They had, however, killed a number of the enemy at some cost to ourselves.

It would appear that the garrison is stubbornly holding out in three main positions.

The report states that the situation is critical.

CHUNGKING, China, Wednesday, Dec. 24 (Reuter)—The British Embassy issued the following communiqué:

The British Embassy was in touch with Hong Kong at midday today and states that the defenders are still fighting valiantly. Two enemy motor torpedo-boats were destroyed yesterday and the population is taking the attack calmly, although about 100 bombs were dropped yesterday.

Netherland

BATAVIA, Netherlands Indies, Dec. 23 (AP)—Today Netherlands Indies communiqué said:

This morning our naval aircraft attacked enemy ships in the Bay of Davao.

With one bomb of 200 kilograms [440 pounds] a direct hit was scored on the largest ship. This ship, a tanker of about 10,000 tons, immediately caught fire.

This morning a strong formation of Japanese aircraft carried out a strong attack on one of our airdromes in the Outer Possessions. Damage was done.

Furthermore, an enemy bombing attack took place at Sorong on the west coast of New Guinea. Approaching aircraft of the Royal Netherland Navy drove off the enemy. No damage was done.

A naval flying boat has not returned from a bombing raid.

Russian

MOSCOW, Dec. 23 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau's midday communiqué said:

During the night of Dec. 22-23 our troops fought the enemy on all fronts.

MOSCOW, Wednesday, Dec. 24 (AP)—The Soviet Information Bureau issued this communiqué early today:

In a number of sectors of the Western [Moscow], Kalinin and Southwestern Fronts our troops fought fierce engagements with the enemy and continued to advance, occupying a certain number of localities, including the important railway junction of Gorbachevo and the town of Odoev.

Japanese

TOKYO, Wednesday, Dec. 24 (From Japanese broadcast recorded by The United Press)—The navy section of Imperial Headquarters issued the following:

The Japanese naval landing party on the night of Dec. 22 succeeded in landing on Wake Island in defiance of stormy weather, and completely occupied it at 10:30 A. M. the following morning.

The Japanese Navy lost two destroyers in this operation.

German

BERLIN, Dec. 23 (From German broadcasts recorded by The Associated Press)—The German High Command communiqué said today:

Heavy battles in the central sector of the Eastern Front are continuing.

At several points our troops successfully repulsed heavy enemy attacks and destroyed nineteen Soviet tanks.

Bomber and dive-bomber formations supported the land fighting. They inflicted heavy and bloody losses on the enemy, destroyed numerous tanks and vehicles of all kinds and put several batteries out of action.

In waters off Sevastopol the German air force damaged a Soviet warship with direct hits.

East of Fishermen's [Rybachi] Peninsula fighters sank a medium-sized freighter.

Another merchant ship was damaged by bomb hits in Kola Bay.

As already announced in a special communiqué, a U-boat commanded by Lieut. Capt. Bigalk attacked a British aircraft carrier in the Atlantic which was protecting a convoy.

The U-boat rendered the aircraft carrier incapable of manoeuvring by torpedo hits on the propeller. After two further torpedo hits on the bow and amidships the aircraft carrier went down by the bow.

In North Africa battles developed yesterday east of Bengazi which still are in progress.

German fighters dispersed British troop concentrations and columns of motor trucks in Western Cyrenaica.

Military installations on the Island of Malta were bombed day and night. German fighters shot down two British planes.

Minor forces of the British Air Force last night dropped a small number of bombs on residential quarters of some places in the German Reich. Naval artillery shot down an enemy bomber.

Italian

ROME, Dec. 23 (From Italian broadcasts recorded by The Associated Press)—The Italian High Command issued this communiqué today:

The situation on the Cyrenaican highland is unaltered. Patrol activity continues. Increased artillery activity continues against our lines at Bardia and Solum.

Bad weather has hampered activity of the air force. German fliers have successfully bombed Tobruk and Derna.

Italian and German formations have repeatedly bombed Malta in spite of severe anti-aircraft defenses, scoring hits on their targets.

Finnish

HELSINKI, Finland, Dec. 23 (AP)—The Finnish military communiqué today said:

Karelian Isthmus—Artillery and trench mortor harassing fire on both sides.

Svir River Front—Local artillery and trench mortar fire both sides, as well as patrol activity.

East Front — Situation unchanged. Local artillery and trench mortar harassing fire, as well as infantry fire.

LABOR, CAPITAL BAR STRIKES FOR DURATION

New Board Will Handle Closed Shop Disputes, Davis Says; Lockouts Also are Prohibited

All Controversies Must Be Settled Peacefully, 3-Point Program Adds; President Brings Agreement by Letter

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23—President Roosevelt brought a labor-management conference to an abrupt close today by accepting the points on which the conferees were in agreement, including a pledge to refrain from strikes or lockouts for the duration.

As for the controversial closed shop question, a letter the President sent to the conference did not mention it specifically, but William H. Davis, moderator of the conference, interpreted the letter as meaning that a new war labor board would have jurisdiction over issues involving the closed shop.

Employer representatives in the conference had taken the position that disputes arising from campaigns for closed shops should not be submitted to the board.

The points on which the conference agreed were:

1. There shall be no strikes or lockouts during the war.
2. All disputes shall be settled by peaceful means.
3. The President shall set up a war labor board to handle disputes.

This formula designed to guarantee uninterrupted war-time industrial production was submitted by Senator Thomas (D-Utah), associate moderator. It was accepted unqualifiedly by the six C. I. O. and six A. F. L. officials representing labor, but the 12 men from industry had insisted that the proposed war labor board have no jurisdiction in cases in which the closed or union shop was an issue.

Accept President's Direction

Tonight they issued a statement saying they accepted "The President's direction for a peaceful settlement of disputes and the establishment of a war labor board" but strongly urged that the board "should not accept for arbitration or consideration the issue of the closed shop, requiring that a person become or remain a member of a labor organization if he is to get or hold a job."

"We recommend," the employes' representatives added, "that for the duration of the war, employers shall not attempt to change the terms, in present contracts, which provide for the closed shop. Where a closed shop contract does not now exist, it may under the law be arrived at by voluntary negotiation. We endorse without reservation the right of labor to organize and bargain collectively." But it would be a serious mistake to abandon the principle that the right to work should not be infringed by government through requirement of membership in any organization, whether union or otherwise.

Roosevelt Letter Read

"The closed shop is the most highly controversial and emotional question in industrial relations today. To accept it as an issue for government arbitration would intensify agitation, increase labor disputes, and divert the energy of both labor and management from the vital job of production."

Davis and Senator Thomas had reported to the President the results of the conferees' discussions in which the two sides were in general agreement on all except the closed or union shop issue.

When the conference reconvened today, Davis read a letter from the President. A motion that the conference adjourn carried.

The industry group, Davis explained later, had remained insistent that the closed shop be ruled out of any arbitration proceedings that might arise in future disputes, but had agreed to accept any decision of the President. Asked if this could be considered a complete agreement, Davis replied that the area of agreement was wider than the area of disagreement.

Without mentioning the closed shop issue, Mr. Roosevelt took cognizance of the employers' stand when he said in his letter:

"I accept without reservation your covenants that there shall be no strikes or lockouts and all disputes shall be settled by peaceful means. I shall proceed at once to act on your third point," (establishment of a war labor board).

Cover All Disputes

"Government must act in general. The three points agreed upon cover of necessity all disputes that may arise between labor and management.

"The particular disputes must be left to the consideration of those who can study the particular differences and who are thereby prepared by knowledge to pass judgment in the particular case. I have full faith that no group in our national life will take undue advantage while we are faced by common enemies.

In other words, Davis told reporters, "Each dispute will be settled on its individual facts, not on its merits, but on its wisdom."

Mr. Roosevelt, he said, had deleted all reservations from the three-point agreement.

The President's action was "hailed with delight" by C. I. O. President Philip Murray, and William Green, A. F. L. president, said he was "overjoyed at the glorious outcome."

The new war labor board, Davis declared, would supersede the Defense Mediation Board, of which he is chairman. He added that the conferees had left entirely to the President the question of size and personnel.

Thomas indicated that he would do all he could as chairman of the Senate Labor Committee to prevent anti-strike legislation from being enacted until the agreement had been tested.

F. D. Creates Transportation Defense Post

New Board Will Help Facilitate Prosecution Of War

DEC 24 1941

Eastman Put In Charge

Washington, Dec. 23 (AP)—To assure the most efficient use of domestic transportation facilities for successful prosecution of the war, President Roosevelt established today an Office of Defense Transportation.

He told a press conference he had asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to grant a leave of absence to its chairman, Joseph B. Eastman, who will be director of the new agency.

The new office will deal with rail, motor, inland waterway, pipeline and air transport and with coastwise and inter-coastal shipping.

The agency will determine how existing facilities may best be used in handling an increased volume of traffic due to the war effort and will stimulate the provision of any additional facilities and equipment which may be needed.

It is charged with preventing traffic congestion and assuring orderly and prompt movement of men, materials and supplies to the points where they are needed. It must co-ordinate domestic traffic with ocean shipping to avoid congestion at ports and maintain a maximum flow of traffic.

Another problem within its jurisdiction is that of adequate storage and warehouse space. Furthermore, it will represent the defense interest of the government in negotiating rates with domestic carriers.

Priority orders of the OPM will be taken into consideration by the new office in considering the relative importance of deliveries of defense supplies.

Appoints Mellett As Federal Film Czar During War

F. D. Opposed To Censorship Of Motion Pictures

DEC 24 1941

New York, Dec. 23 (AP)—President Roosevelt has appointed Lowell Mellett, director of the Office of Government Reports, as co-ordinator of government films during the war emergency with the statement that he wants no censorship of motion pictures, it was disclosed tonight.

The President's selection was made public in a letter from Mellett to George J. Schaefer, chairman of the War Activities Committee of the motion picture industry. Schaefer added that Francis S. Harmon, committee vice-chairman, had been named to represent all branches of the motion picture industry in dealing with the government.

In his letter to Mellett, the Chief Executive said:

"The American motion picture is one of our most effective media in informing and entertaining our citizens. The motion picture must remain free insofar as national security will permit. I want no censorship of the motion picture; I want no restrictions placed thereon which will impair the usefulness of the film other than those very necessary restrictions which the dictates of safety make imperative.

"The motion picture, especially as used by the Federal government, has a very useful contribution to make during the war emergency. In order that the Federal government's efforts in the field of motion picture production and distribution may serve most effectively and efficiently, it is desirable that all activities of the Federal government be co-ordinated under the direction of one central office."

The film committee recently pledged full support to the war effort and recommended that a single agency or an individual be designated by the government to handle requests from all governmental departments and bureaus which are made upon the industry in connection with production, distribution and exhibition of pictures.

Harmon will open offices here Jan. 1.

CIVILIAN WAR BOARD OPPOSED BY ARMY

DEC 24 1941

Under Secretary Patterson Says Social Problems Are Out Unless Vital

Tells House Group Armed Forces Are Better Equipped To Handle Procurement

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 23—The War Department served emphatic notice today that the problems of spreading war work, preventing labor migration and relieving civilian distress could be considered "only to the extent that the military objective makes this possible."

Robert P. Patterson, Under Secretary of War, brought that message to the special House committee investigating the war-created migration of workers, and flatly opposed the committee's recommendation to shift the responsibility for war production from the armed forces to a civilian board.

"If the military objective is disregarded and the war is lost," he asserted, "all industry, whether large or small; all labor, whether migratory or not, and whether employed or not, and whether employed in munitions manufacture or not, will be destroyed."

Armed Forces Better

He insisted that the armed forces, by experience and training, were better equipped to handle the problems of war production procurement and

30.24 — 13725

30.24 — 13725

planning than would be the members of a civilian board, and that every effort now was being concentrated on full utilization of the nation's man power and machines.

Plans to speed conversion of plant facilities on an industry-wide basis through conferences and panel discussions of industrial engineers were reported by Walter Wheeler, deputy director of the OPM's contract division.

He reported that a survey of fifteen major industries had shown that a fifty per cent. curtailment of their 1939 civilian output would permit them, if converted for war-goods production, to turn out munitions materiel worth $3,910,000,000 annually.

He advanced "as my own personal opinion" a suggestion for an excess profits tax to recapture all corporate profits above the 1941 level, declaring it was a "fundamental method" for eliminating delays in spreading out the work through subcontracts.

Reasons For Slowing Program

Wheeler told the committee that fear of financial loss on the part of small concerns and the desire of some manufacturers for "unreasonable" profits had slowed down the subcontracting program.

Earlier, the committee, concentrating its immediate attention on disruptions in the automotive industry and the possibilities for greater conversion, heard the United Automobile Workers, a CIO affiliate, back the proposal for a new central board for war procurement.

R. J. Thomas, president of the organization, said the tooling capacity of the industry was not now working "at even fifty per cent. of capacity," and declared that "the continued refusal of certain manufacturers . . . to prepare for war work is a crime against the nation which must no longer be tolerated."

WILLSON MADE ADMIRAL KING'S CHIEF OF STAFF

DEC 24 1941

Naval Academy Superintendent To Assume New Post Next Month

Athletic Director To Be Annapolis Head Pending Further Action

[By the Associated Press]

Annapolis, Dec. 23—Rear Admiral Russell Willson, superintendent of the United States Naval Academy since last February, will become chief of staff to Admiral Ernest J. King, commander in chief of the United States Fleet, about January 1, it was announced today.

Capt. T. Starr King, academy athletic director, will act as academy superintendent until Admiral Willson's successor is appointed, the Navy Department said.

Admiral Willson, who succeeded Rear Admiral Wilson Brown as academy superintendent, reported here a few days before the first early graduation last February, necessitated by the demand for more naval officers for America's two-ocean navy.

Crowded Tour Of Duty

During his eleven-month tour of duty the academy launched an expansion program, trained the largest midshipman regiment in its history and several naval reservist groups, reduced its course from four to three years, and this month had its second early graduation of the year.

Admiral Willson's son, Russell Willson, Jr., was among those midshipmen graduated last February. Admiral Wilson also has two daughters, Mrs. Robert H. Rice, of Washington, and Mrs. Thomas Cunningham, both wives of naval officers.

Admiral King's new chief of staff is well liked by his academy subordinates and by Annapolitans.

His specialties are naval tactics and communications.

He was awarded the Navy Cross and substantial compensation for organizing and developing the code and signal section of the Navy Department during the World War I. He also wears the Vera Cruz and Victory medals.

Born at Fredonia, N. Y., December 27, 1883, Admiral Willson spent his childhood at Washington, D. C. After graduating from high school there he entered the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and studied engineering a year before his appointment to the academy.

He was graduated in 1906 and, as an ensign, served on armored cruisers of the Asiatic station and went around the world on a battleship in 1907.

Wed Baltimore Woman

Four years later he married Miss Eunice M. Westcott, of Baltimore.

Admiral Willson subsequently joined the staffs of Rear Admiral Vreeland and Rear Admiral Ward in the Atlantic.

He was aboard the New York at Vera Cruz, Mexico, in 1914, and later was flag lieutenant to Admiral Henry T. Mayo, then commander in chief of the Atlantic Fleet.

At the end of World War I he was serving in the Sixth Battle Squadron of the grand fleet.

After the war he commanded the destroyers Southard, Cole and Mason.

He completed a course at the Naval War College in 1924, and the same year commanded destroyers at Greenland and Labrador in connection with the army's round-the-world flight.

He later served as executive officer on the Florida and the Pennsylvania, and from 1927 to 1930 was a member of the United States naval mission to Brazil.

He commanded a division of destroyers in the battle force before a tour of duty here from 1932 to 1935 as head of the academy's department of seamanship and navigation.

Then Admiral Willson commanded the Pennsylvania, flagship of the fleet, and served as naval attache at the American Embassy in London in 1937 and 1938.

The following year, as a rear admiral, he commanded Battleship Division 1 in the Pacific until he was named academy superintendent.

WELLES TO BE U. S. CHIEF AT RIO TALKS

To Represent Nation At American Foreign Ministers' Parley On Defense

Pressure Of Official Duties Keeps Hull In Washington. Advisers Are Named

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 23—Sumner Welles, Under Secretary of State, will represent the United States at the conference of American Foreign Ministers at Rio de Janeiro January 15.

Secretary Hull found it impossible to go to Rio de Janeiro at this time, the State Department said, because of the pressure of official duties in Washington, and President Roosevelt appointed Welles today.

To Study Defense Steps

The conference was called to consider methods of Pan-American defense under the new war conditions.

The advisers to Welles will be:

WAYNE C. TAYLOR, Under Secretary of Commerce.

CAPT. EDWARD MACAULEY, N. S. N. (retired), vice-chairman of the Maritime Commission.

WARREN LEE PIERSON, president, Export-Import Bank of Washington, Federal loan agency.

CARL SPAETH, assistant coordinator of inter-American affairs and chief of American hemisphere division, Board of Economic Warfare.

HARRY D WHITE, director of monetary research, Treasury Department.

LAWRENCE M. C. SMITH, chief, special defense unit, Justice Department.

LESLIE A. WHEELER, director, office of foreign agricultural relations, Agriculture Department.

EMILIO G. COLLADO, special assistant to the Under Secretary of State.

MISS MARJORIE M. WHITEMAN, assistant to the legal adviser, State Department.

DR. WARREN KELCHNER, chief, division of international conferences, State Department, will act as secretary.

Paul C. Daniels, assistant chief, division of the American republics, State Department, will serve as secretary of the United States representative.

DEC 24 1941

Assistant Advisers

Assistant advisers will be Robert G. Hooper, Jr., assistant to the vice-chairman of the Maritime Commission, and Howard J. Trueblood, State Department.

Sheldon Thomas, second secretary of the American Embassy in Buenos Aires, and formerly on duty with the press relations division in the State Department here, will serve as press officer. William A. Wieland, press relatoins officer at the American Embassy in Rio de Janeiro, will serve as his assistant.

Miss Anna L. Clarkson, assistant to Welles, will accompany the delegation as his assistant.

The secretarial staff will consist of Guillermo Suro, chief, central translating office, State Department; Philip P. Williams, third secretary, American Embassy, Rio de Janeiro, and Edward R. Pierce, State Department.

New Trade Agreement Signed By U. S. And Cuba

[By the Associated Press]

Havana, Dec. 23 — Cuba and the United States signed a new commercial treaty today whereby the Washington Government reduced the tariff on Cuban sugar and tobacco, and Cuba made concessions on thirty - eight products.

It was learned authoritatively, however, that the tariff on sugar had been reduced from 90 to 75 cents per one hundred pounds.

Molasses Included

Also granted lower tariffs by the United States were Cuban molasses, chilled or frozen beef and veal, frog legs, fruit pastes or pulps, marble chip or granite, drugs of animal origin and mangoes.

The sugar duty reduction was the item of greatest interest, since any decrease had been fought at hearings here last September by domestic beet and cane producers and by Puerto Rican interests.

"In an exchange of notes which constitutes an integral part of the agreement," the State Department said, "this Government gives assurances to the Cuban Government that it will exert every appropriate effort to safeguard the position of Cuba as a supplier of sugar for the United States market as compared with its position under the Sugar Act of 1937."

Messersmith Given Ovation

Ambassador George Messersmith signed the agreement for the United States and Dr. Jose Cortina, Secretary of State, for Cuba.

Messersmith, who is to leave Cuba next month to take up his new post as Ambassador to Mexico, was given an ovation as he predicted the treaty would serve "in the lasting benefit" of the peoples of the two nations.

U. S. AND CUBA SIGN WARTIME TRADE TREATY

DEC 24 1941

Supplementary Agreement Cuts Sugar Tariff to 75 Cents.

OTHER BARRIERS LOWERED

State Department Declares Axis-made Emergency Calls for Such Action.

Washington, Dec. 23 (A. P.).—Two provisions of special importance to a world at war were included in a supplemental trade agreement signed at Havana today between the United States and Cuba.

One brought the Cuban-American agreement up to date to include "a specific reservation regarding measures adopted for the protection of . . . essential interests in time of war or other national emergency." The second reduced the duty on Cuban sugar from 90 cents a hundred pounds to 75 cents because of what the State Department termed "the desirability, particularly in the light of the emergency situation created by the Axis Powers, of maintaining Cuba's position as a supplier of sugar to the United States market."

Cuba Grants Concession.

Cuba granted concessions of thirty-eight American products. The United States granted duty concessions on a variety of Cuban products, the principal ones being sugar, molasses, tobacco, cigars, fresh, chilled or frozen beef and veal.

The agreement was signed by Jose Manuel Cortina, Minister of State of Cuba, and George S. Messersmith, the American Ambassador. It supplements the trade agreement signed by Cuba and the United States in 1934 and amended in 1939.

The sugar duty reduction was the item of greatest interest since any decrease had been fought, at hearings last September, by domestic beet and cane producers and by Puerto Rican interests. The 75-cent sugar tariff is equivalent to about 43 per cent ad valorem, according to the State Department announcement on the signing of the agreement.

Originally $2 a Hundred.

Under the tariff act of 1930 the Cuban sugar duty was $2 a hundred pounds. That rate was reduced to $1.50 by presidential proclamation in 1934 under the flexible provisions of the tariff act in connection with the sugar-marketing restrictions imposed under provisions of the Jones-Costigan act. The rate was further reduced to 90 cents a hundred pounds under the original reciprocal trade agreement signed with Cuba in 1934.

"In an exchange of notes which constitutes an integral part of the agreement," the State Department said, "this Government gives assurances to the Cuban Government that it will exert every appropriate effort to safeguard the position of Cuba as a supplier of sugar for the United States market as compared with its position under the Sugar act of 1937."

The new agreement provides rates of duty 50 per cent below those applicable to molasses and sugar sirups under the tariff act of 1930. Based on average 1940 imports of the various types, the new rates will be equivalent to about 40 per cent ad valorem for edible molasses, 19 per cent for liquid sugar and 2 per cent for industrial molasses.

Reduced duties have also been granted on mangoes, fresh and preserved fruits not specially provided for, marble chip or granite, drugs of animal origin, frog legs, and fruit pastes or pulps.

J. S.-CANADA TARIFF SUSPENSION URGED

Joint War-Production Committee Presents 7-Point Policy Statement

Roosevelt Indorses Program Calling For Speed Without Regard To Cost

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 23—Removal of all tariff and other barriers which might impede the flow of war supplies between the United States and Canada and an "all-out war production effort" was recommended today by the joint war-production committees of the two countries and was indorsed by President Roosevelt.

In a seven-point statement of policy made public by the White House, the joint committees first urged speed without regard to cost as a requirement for victory.

Through "Free Consent"

"Through brute force and enslavement," said the President's accompanying statement, "Hitler has secured a measure of integration and coordination of the production resources of a large part of the continent of Europe.

"We must demonstrate that integration and coordination of the productive resources of the continent of America is possible through democratic process and free consent."

The following policy was recommended:

Speed and volume of war output, not monetary cost, must be primary objectives.

Maximum use of labor, materials and facilities.

Integrated production for the common program.

Production of war goods in maximum quantities in minimum time.

Division of scarce materials to achieve quickest maximum output of needed goods.

Legislative and administrative barriers, including tariffs, import duties, customs and other regulations which prohibit, prevent, or delay the free flow of war supplies between the two countries should be suspended for the duration.

The two Governments should take all measures necessary for the fullest implementation of the foregoing principles.

Study To Be Made

To implement the committees' statement of policy, the Chief Executive said he had asked all departments and agencies of the Government "to abide by its letter and spirit, so far as lies within their power.

He added that a study would be made of tariff revision and other legislative measures required to further the program.

The statement of policy by the joint committee was made public by President Roosevelt in the following announcement:

"The joint war production committees of Canada and the United States have unanimously adopted a declaration of policy calling for a combined all-out war production effort and the removal of any barriers standing in the way of such a combined effort. This declaration has met the approval of the Canadian War Cabinet. It has my full approval.

"To further its implementation, I have asked the affected departments and agencies in our Government to abide by its letter and spirit, so far as lies within their power. I have further requested Mr. Milo Perkins, the chairman of the American committee, to investigate, with the aid of the Tariff Commission and other interested agencies, the extent to which legislative changes will be necessary to give full effect to the declaration.

"Through brute force and enslavement, Hitler has secured a measure of intergration and coordination of the productive resources of a large part of the Continent of Europe. We must demonstrate that intregration and co-ordination of the productive resources of the Continent of America is possible through democratic process and free consent.

Text of Policy Statement.

"Having regard to the fact that Canada and the United States are engaged in a war with common enemies, the joint war production committee of Canada and the United States recommends to the President of the United States and the Prime Minister of Canada the following statement of policy for the war production of the two countries:

"1. Victory will require the maximum war production in both countries in the shortest possible time; speed and volume of war output, rather than monetary cost, are the primary objectives.

"2. An all-out war production effort in both countries requires the maximum use of the labor, raw materials and facilities in each country.

"3. Achievement of maximum volume and speed of war output requires that the production and resources of both countries should be effectively integrated, and directed toward a common program of requirements for the total war effort.

"4. Each country should produce those articles in an integrated program of requirements which will result in maximum joint output of war goods in the minimum time.

"5. Scarce raw materials and goods which one country requires from the other in order to carry out the joint program of war production should be so allocated between the two countries that such materials and goods will make the maximum contribution toward the output of the most necessary articles in the shortest period of time.

Would Abolish Barriers.

"6. Legislative and administrative barriers, including tariffs, import duties, customs and other regulations or restrictions of any character which prohibit, prevent, delay or otherwise impede the free flow of necessary munitions and war supplies between the two countries should be suspended or otherwise eliminated for the duration of the war.

"7. The two governments should take all measures necessary for the fullest implementation of the foregoing principles."

Formation of the joint production committees was announced by the White House on November 6 after consultations between the President and the Canadian Prime Minister at Hyde Park. Previously, in April, the two countries had agreed "as a general principle" that each should provide the other with the defense articles which it is best able to produce.

As United States members President Roosevelt named Milo Perkins, executive director of the Economic Defense Board, chairman; J. V. Forrestal, Under-Secretary of the Navy; W. H. Harrison, director of OPM's Production Division; Robert P. Patterson, Under-Secretary of War; Edward R. Stettinius Jr., head of the office of Lease-Lend Administration, and H. L. Vickery, vice-chairman of the Maritime Commission.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King appointed G. K. Sheils, Deputy Minister of the Department of Munitions and Supply, chairman; J. R. Donald, director general of the chemicals and explosives branch of the Department of Munitions and Supply; H. K. Carmichael, director general of the munitions production branch; R. P. Bell, director-general of the aircraft branch; H. R. MacMillan, president of War Time Merchant Shipping, Lt., and Walter Gordon of the Departmetn of Finance.

Cattle Import Quotas Fixed By President

Washington, Dec. 23 (AP)—President Roosevelt signed a proclamation today allocating among foreign countries for the calendar year 1942 the tariff quota applicable to cattle weighing 700 pounds or more (other than cows imported for dairy purposes).

This quota was established in the trade agreement with Canada signed November 17, 1938. It provides that not more than 225,000 head of such cattle may be imported in any calendar year at a rate of duty of 1½ cents a pound, and that not more than 60,000 head of this quantity may be imported in any quarter year. Imports above these amounts are dutiable at 3 cents a pound.

In today's proclamation, 86.2 per cent. of the quota is allocated to Canada and 13.8 per cent. to other foreign countries.

Sees Way To Block Nazi Propaganda In Latin America

New York, Dec. 23 (AP)—A two-edged blow to crush Axis propaganda in Latin America by supplanting its commercial aviation and drug trade there was urged today by a United States business executive who said $300,000 loads of German drugs were being shuttled into South America by Italian planes.

Earl I. McClintock, vice-president of Sterling Products, Inc., said upon his return from a tour of 17 Central and South American republics:

"Control of the remaining German and Italian air lines in South America would end importation by air of German drug products and dry up the principal source of funds for Nazi propaganda in Latin America.

"The Nazis have long concentrated on the drug trade to supply funds for propaganda.

"Drugs produce the highest revenue per pound of anything they (Nazis) have been able to ship out of Germany. Italian planes from Dakar are still landing Nazi drug products and Nazi agents in Natal, Brazil, are carrying them on to Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires."

Each of these Italian planes, McClintock said, carries a cargo of drugs valued up to $300,000. He estimated the total stocks of German drugs in Latin America now at $30,000,000—enough for two years' supply.

425 Persons And Firms Added To U. S. Blacklist

Group Alleged To Be Trading Or Acting For Enemy In Other American Republics

Washington, Dec. 23 (AP)—The United States today added 425 names to its "blacklist" of firms and individuals alleged to be trading with or acting for the enemy in other American republics.

More than half—250—of the new names are Japanese. The previous supplemental list, issued December 9, already had placed approximately 500 Japanees firms and persons on the blacklist.

In issuing the new list today the State Department said that a number of the additions were made because the firm or individual in question was acting as a "cloak"; that is, carrying on disguised transactions for or on the part of firms on the blacklist. Persons or firms which lend themselves to such "cloaking" activities will continue to be summarily included on the list, officials said.

Action Finished On Law To Protect U. S. Ships

Measure Bans Persons From Bringing Explosives Or Weapons Aboard

Washington, Dec. 23 (AP)—The Senate completed Congressional action today on legislation intended to protect all vessels of this country against sabotage by prohibiting the carrying of explosives or dangerous weapons aboard.

The measure, which now goes to the White House for expected Presidential approval, was requested by the Justice Department.

It prohibits any person from bringing or possessing these explosives or weapons aboard any United States vessel under penalty of $1,000 fine and a year in jail.

At the same time he signed a joint resolution authorizing the committee investigating the Japanese attack on Hawaii to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of papers and other documents.

Marshall Expresses Confidence In Troops

Chief Of Staff Sends Christmas Greetings To Armed Forces Of United States

Washington, Dec. 23 (AP)—Faith in the future and confidence in the courage and devotion of American troops were expressed today by Gen. George C. Marshall, army chief of staff, in his Christmas greetings to the armed forces.

"This year," said the general, "my Christmas greetings to the armed forces of the United States are dispatched with a deep appreciaton of the splendid manner in which all are meeting the grave responsibilities of the present crisis.

"Confidence in the devotion, the initiative, and the high courage of our troops gives us complete faith in the future."

Wire-Control Plans Cited

DEC 24 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 23—Chairman James L. Fly, of the Federal Communications Commission, said today the army and navy might—and probably would—take over certain specific communication facilities for military purposes.

The Administration has no plan to take over communications generally, he added in testifying before the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee in support of legislation which would give the President the same war-time power to take over or control wire communications that he now has with respect to radio facilities.

The FCC chairman told the committee that there was no intention to take over any communication facilities permanently or to exercise censorship of communications under the proposed authority.

Whereas in the last war, Fly said, the Government took control of the entire telephone system of the nation, he did not believe the same decision would be made again under the same circumstances.

The committee received a letter from Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, saying that "it is my considered opinion that the passage of this proposed legislation will have an unsettling effect that may react on the service at a time when, above any other, the best possible service is required."

Justice Department Says She Worked Under Nazi Embassy Official

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 23—A Federal grand jury today indicted Laura Ingalls, 38, of New York, one of the nation's best-known women pilots, on a charge of failing to register as a foreign agent.

The indictment charged she had been paid as a publicity agent by Baron Ulrich von Gienanth, second secretary of the German Embassy.

Long Service Charged

Miss Ingalls was arrested last Wednesday. She was released from jail under $7,500 bond on Sunday, but will be required to appear in court and have new bond fixed under the indictment.

The indictment charged, the Justice Department said, that between March 1 and December 18 Miss Ingalls had "acted as public relations counsel, publicity agent, and representative for the German Government through its accredited representative and diplomatic officer, Baron von Gienanth second secretary of the German Embassy, in matters pertaining to political interest, public relations and public policy."

It charged also, the department said, that she had "received various sums of money from the German Government through Baron von Gienanth for the purpose of influencing, persuading and molding American public opinion by means of numerous speeches and talks delivered in various cities of the United States under the sponsorship of various organizations and committees."

Miss Ingalls was described as a "feature speaker" for the America First Committee.

Roosevelt-Churchill Meeting Boosts Allied Morale at Critical Moment

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

DEC 24 1941

Typically Churchillian is the British Prime Minister's risky crossing of a wartime Atlantic in the interests of Allied unity, for he always has been a direct actionist and has courted adventure ever since the days when he was graduated from Sandhurst, England's West Point, and started hunting trouble under gunfire.

His devotion to duty has served the cause well, for this demonstration of solidarity and determination in Washington already is having its beneficial effect on the morale of the Allied peoples at a highly critical moment. And let none doubt that the Axis isn't overlooking a historic meeting which so patently means business.

From the military standpoint this conference is vital for the co-ordination of Allied efforts. Momentous questions must be settled in such manner as will give the greatest efficiency. And since this is a war of resources and production, there must be co-ordination in this field as well.

Fighting at Disadvantage.

The matter of immediate urgency is, of course, the battle of the Pacific, in which the Allies are fighting at a disadvantage because of the nature of the Japanese blow in the dark. Perhaps it is a good omen that as Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Churchill get down to cases in Washington the news from the Far East is not unfavorable.

The Yanks and Filipinos are reported to have fought the invading Japs to a standstill. The British are holding their own on the Malayan Peninsula above Singapore. Even gallant Hongkong is hanging on by its teeth in the face of tremendous odds.

Still, we can not blink the fact that the Allied bases are in great danger. At any moment the defense may be called upon to decide whether American reserves shall be thrown to the support of the vital base of Singapore with the risk of losing the Philippines temporarily. Then, too, the question of whether Russia shall join the Allies against Japan is likely to become a burning issue. All these problems must be pooled and settled in the interest of the common good, namely the winning of the war as a whole.

Notable Step Toward Victory.

The Washington conference looking to the establishment of unified control is a notable step towards victory. Obviously it couldn't be held before, because America wasn't in the war, but it means much that the Allies are acting promptly in concert at the earliest possible moment.

It would be worth a bit to know what emotion stirs the minds of the Japs as they view this Washington conference. It would be especially worth while to learn what they are thinking as they see the Germans doing a Napoleonic retreat from Moscow just after Nippon has come into the war with the idea (or so one supposes) that Hitler was about to put his foot on the Muscovite neck.

It looks very much to me as though Der Feuhrer sold the men of the island empire a bill of goods. There he was, poised in the stance of victory before a doomed Moscow. Certainly the Red capital would fall just as Japan launched her attack against America and Britain, and then the Axis would romp home to a grand triumph.

Held Until Japs Took Leap.

Only Hitler could have held that stance long enough to entice Nippon into the war, for his weary and shattered troops even then were fighting on sheer nerve as they flung themselves against the enemy. But the Nazi chief hung on with that amazing aplomb which has marked all his leadership. He hung on until he had the Japs signed up and already steaming out across the Pacific. Then, with the Japanese holding the sack for him, he allowed the retirement which the Russians hope to turn into a debacle.

This position on the Russian front is another vital problem for the Allied Council—how best to take advantage of it. Then, too, Hitler undoubtedly is getting ready to strike elsewhere in an effort to repair his fortunes, and this must be dealt with.

Spanish Said Fearful Of Typhus, Want

Reported Also to Believe Nazi Army Will Accompany Hunger and Pestilence

DEC 24 1941

(Editor's note: Lynn Heinzerling, who tells for Wide World what the people in Spain expect in the new year, has just returned from a tour of duty as a correspondent in Spain and Portugal.)

BY LYNN HEINZERLING.

New York, Dec. 23.—(Wide World)—Three things many Spaniards expect the new year to bring them are a number of German army divisions, a serious epidemic of typhus and a winter and spring of distressing hunger.

When I left Madrid six weeks ago, you could hear more German spoken in the large hotels than English. German diplomatic cars, bearing the Nazi swastika, were far more numerous than normally would be expected in Madrid.

Delegations of Germans seemed to be arriving almost weekly, and the planes from Berlin were doing a thriving business. But German uniforms had not appeared there in any number.

When a group of Hitler youth arrived some weeks ago, their leaders were wearing the usual brown suit with the red swastika armband. The sight was unusual enough to cause Spaniards sitting around their coffee tables in the Palace Hotel to nod toward them and whisper.

A number of members of the Spanish Blue Legion, which is helping the Germans in Soviet Russia, had returned wearing the regulation German army uniform with only a shoulder tab to mark their nationality, but they had not been numerous enough to make the sight commonplace.

Heavy Casualties.

The returning members of the Legion had either been wounded or ill or, as one said, simply incapable of keeping up with the strenuous marching program practiced by the Germans. One of the Legionnaires said that of the 20,000 Spaniards who set out to help Hitler last summer, 500 were killed by snipers before they even reached the front.

The Spanish press is closely controlled. In the newspapers generally the German victories are headlined and the British communiques usually are added without comment. The Spanish censorship is probably the most severe in all Europe.

German agents are much in evidence in the places where foreigners gather and Spaniards freely point them out to you. One diplomat told me his baggage was opened and examined in a Spanish hotel before he had a chance to spend the night in the room.

British and American citizens and diplomats still move about freely and by some miracle of protocol avoid contact with the enemy.

The Japanese Ambassador Yakichiro Suma is a much mentioned member of the diplomatic corps, prominent at Spanish functions of state. He spent some time in Washington earlier and is an ardent baseball fan.

Before the hostilities between Japan and the United States, he said one day that he had stayed up until 4 a. m. to hear one of President Roosevelt's addresses, in which Roosevelt's criticism of Hitler was particularly strong. Asked how he liked the speech, Suma said: "I thought it was splendid."

Epidemic Menace.

Public health experts who have investigated in Spain say that only the most stringent measures would prevent a major and tragic typhus epidemic if the disease already present in some areas is permitted to spread.

These physicians said there were an unusually large number of cases for the summer season in northeastern Spain. The disease does its deadliest work in the winter and could sweep the country and even far into the continent, they said, if it once gains headway.

Many residents in Spain refuse to ride in cabs, street cars or trains, when it is at all possible to avoid it, in order to escape the fleas which carry the disease. In its present impoverished condition, the nation would be hard put to cope with the disease in epidemic proportions.

To face the bitter Madrid winter, many Spaniards are wearing clothing which they stored up in civil war days. Prices have risen to the point where many will be without sufficiently warm clothing. Spanish army conscripts are still wearing rope-soled sandals.

The average wage for a Spanish worker is about nine pesetas (about 76 cents) a day. A package of American cigarettes, bought on the black market, costs 15 pesetas. A pair of shoes which before the civil war cost the Spanish workman 16 pesetas now costs 125 pesetas. A ready made suit which formerly cost 125 pesetas, now sells for 350 pesetas, overcoats have risen in the same period from 125 to 400 pesetas.

Bullfights Cost More.

The Spaniards who provided these figures has a comparatively well-paying job in an office. He earns 750 pesetas a month or $60 at the official rate of exchange.

Meals which formerly brought a check of five to 15 pesetas now cost between 25 and 40 pesetas. A shirt which formerly sold for 10 pesetas now costs between 40 and 60 pesetas. A seat at the movies once obtained for three pesetas now requires 15. Before the war, you could get a seat in the shade at the bullfights for six pesetas. The same seats now sell for between 14 and 25 pesetas.

Franco's government is making wage readjustments, but the increases are still far below the increases in prices.

Even the bulls are tired of it all in Spain. Bullfighting experts in Madrid, and that covers a lot of bullfight fanciers, say the 1941 season was the worst in years. Some of them say the bulls were to blame, too small and undernourished.

COSSACKS CAPTURE RUSSIAN LIMELIGHT

Horses Gallop Dramatically Into Highly Mechanized Warfare

DEC 24 1941

Cavalryman Has Changed Little Since First Used By Czars

By EDDY GILMORE

Associated Press Correspondent

Kuibyshev, Dec. 23—Against the background of the most highly mechanized warfare in history, horses and Cossacks have galloped dramatically into the center of the picture.

At the start of this war, many military authorities regarded them as romantic figures of the past, wholly unfit for battle with machines.

Then came the Red army's stubborn resistance, its stand, its advance. And up there in front, across Russia's snowy, wind-swept plains and hills charged the Don Cossacks of old.

Actually he hasn't changed much since the czars first employed him in frontier guards in the early nineteenth century. He has the same forelock, his hair hanging shaggylike beneath his gay hat, which looks strangely like something out of a musical comedy; the same Turkish trousers, the same high boots.

Saber Is Terrifying

His saber—a weapon discarded by some armies—has made him not only a good fighter but a terrifying opponent to the Nazis. In some cases he still is carrying the old-time lance and putting it to plenty of use.

Now a big Cossack army estimated at 100,000 is operating brilliantly against the retreating Germans.

Twenty-three years under the Soviets have seen the Cossack undergo many changes, although he strangely seems the same, possibly because he is above all a fighter who loves battle as some men love home and peace.

Early Dread Of Revolution

The Cossacks were one of the earliest dreads of the revolutionaries. They were deprived of time-old privileges, and for a period served neither as a separate mounted group nor in any phase of Red army service.

In 1936, however, they got their own squadrons.

The Cossacks have been highly praised by United States military observers in Russia, particularly Lieut. Col. Kent C. Lambert, cavalryman.

"It's really a return of the horse," he said.

Although the Cossack nowadays carries grenades, a pistol and sometimes a machine gun, he never puts down his saber.

There's an old cavalry saying: "A saber is always loaded."

The Cossacks proved it again.

Streamlined Army Transforms U. S. Non-coms in Far East

Top Sergeant of Today Is Serious-minded Young Man Interested in Mechanics and Firing Power of Tanks.

DEC 24 1941

By RUSSELL BRINES.

Manila, Dec. 23 (Wide World).—They've streamlined Uncle Sam's Far Eastern army—both in anatomy and organization.

You'd have to look hard to find the beloved bulbous top-kick of the first world war. Hours of conditioning under the broiling tropical sun and endless preparations for quick mental and physical mobilization have worn off the extra poundage.

Sergt. Joe Smith looks like a halfback compared to the traditional lineman of twenty-four years ago.

There really is a Sergt. Joe Smith here, a tanned, snub-nosed lad from Carlsbad, N. M., and he's typical of the army's modern non-coms—men in their early twenties who, a few weeks ago, were playing football and baseball in off-duty hours.

But they can reel off the style and performances of leading combat planes and bombers of any nation; they're intrigued by the mechanics of their guns and like to talk about the fire power of tanks.

Song of Tailless Monkeys.

Sergt. Joe and his mates are mostly a serious-minded lot, and strenuous pre-war training and constant hippety-hop warfare so far have prevented them from producing any masterpiece equivalent to "Mademoiselle From Armentieres." But they are resurrecting old army songs like "The Monkeys Have No Tails in Zamboango."

These men are products of a generation dramatized by mechanical advance and in general had more educational privileges than their dads. Old-time army non-coms are forced to step lively to keep pace with the constant talk about mechanics.

But they all realize that some buck private somewhere may save hundreds of lives by the ability to recognize the differences in design between American and Japanese planes which, from 20,000 feet, appear only as large as a thumbnail.

Many enlisted men are still hoping to get a crack at the air corps, if only as ground crew men, despite the fact that the first heavy crash of bombs usually comes on the airdromes.

One night a private on a routine assignment stopped to talk to me about Heinkels, Messerschmitts and P-40s.

"The day war started," he said, "I was at Nichols Field taking my medical examination for enlisted pilot. All I got out of it was a tin hat some one shoved into my hand, but I sure would like to get in the air corps."

Training Courses Speeded.

The army has capitalized on this interest and better education on the part of the men, speeding up courses of instruction in classrooms and afield.

Sergt. Joe and his pals mostly had training only as National Guardsmen before coming to the Philippines. Once here, they received intensified courses of study, plus constant training hikes which whipped them into hard-muscled condition emphasized by consistent 90 degree temperature and humidity.

They learned how to march across mountains and rice paddies and through narrow jungle paths.

In a comparatively brief time they were given the theoretical outline of modern warfare and conditioned to meet its rigors.

Japanese bombers did the rest. In that first day of attack, youngsters' hair figuratively stood up and their faces seemed lined with age. Many admit they were scared to death but after the first wave of jitters they went back for more.

Then training plus experience told, and increased efficiency shows the results.

The Filipinos likewise bore up amazingly under the first blows.

Many of the enlisted men had a maximum of five and a half months' training in streamlined courses outlined by General Douglas MacArthur, but they lacked the Americans' educational preparation.

Loin Cloths From Mountains.

Hundreds came from the mountains, some still wearing loin cloths, and saw their first artillery. Their average schooling was through the fourth grade, their average combat experience only with knives.

In that brief time in camp these Filipinos had to learn English and discipline, what they would be fighting for in the event of war, and the entire preparatory range of military science.

They took to guns eagerly, many becoming expert marksmen. Bayonets were a cinch to boys who customarily carry bolos from their first school days on, and they snapped beautifully in parade ground drills.

But no one knew how they would react to bombs and bullets and whether discipline would hold them in the face of enemy fire.

They surprised even many of their officers. They were more curious than cautious or afraid during the first bombings. They fought savagely—and bolo-wielding townsmen supported them—against Japanese landing forces in the northern areas.

Aviators Excellent, Too.

Filipino aviators already are writing tradition. Capt. Jesus A. Villamor was decorated for "extraordinary heroism" on December 10 and was awarded the Oak Leaf Cluster, to be worn with the Distinguished Service Cross, for another act of heroism two days later—both times for leading small groups of pursuit planes against swarms of attacking Japanese planes.

One Filipino pilot summed up the situation:

"Boy, we sure learned a lot in a few hours."

FRENCH COLONIES IN STRATEGIC SPOT

Islands Form Part Of Chain At Gateway To Caribbean And Canal

Vichy Possessions In America Lack Value As Source Of Vital Material

By GAYLE TALBOT
(Wide World)

[Special Dispatch to The Sun]

New York, Dec. 23—The United States' interest in France's tattered string of colonial possessions in this part of the world is due to the strategic importance of the group, rather than their value as a source of vital raw material, as was the case in our recent occupation of Dutch Guiana.

Except for their vast production of sugar and rum (there were 286 distilleries in Martinique and Guadeloupe alone at last count), the ten islands and one piece of mainland that make up Vichy's remaining colonies in the Western Hemisphere are comparatively poor and overcrowded. But they occupy locations that scarcely can be ignored.

Mark Caribbean Gateway

Martinique and Guadeloupe and five smaller islands lie along a great curving chain of islands that mark the eastern gateway to the Caribbean Sea and the approaches to the Panama Canal. St. Lucia, site of one of the United States' new leased defense bases, is almost in sight of Martinique.

French Guiana, which includes the notorious Devil's Island penal colony, is on the northeast coast of South America, adjoining Dutch Guiana, which we occupied with consent of the Netherlands Government to guard our supply of bauxite. Its occupation by an enemy would present an obvious menace.

Far up in the north, off the bleak, fog-shrouded shores of Greenland and, incidentally, near another United States defense base, lie the two barren, poverty-ridden little islands of Miquelon and St. Pierre. Their combined area of ninety-three square miles is inhabited by fewer than 5,000 hardy souls, who make their living chiefly from the fishing industries.

Prohibition Prosperity

St. Pierre knew years of prosperity and high jinks back in the prohibition era, when it made a convenient transshipment point for liquor being smuggled in from the other side, but when that ended the little island settled back into its exile.

Up to the time of France's capitulation in the present war, Martinique was a depot for war supplies en route from this country to French ports.

The armistice caught several units of the French fleet in port at Martinique, including the aircraft carrier Bearn, and they have been there ever since.

Under a special agreement made with the United States last year and which Secretary Hull indicated this week is to be continued, the warships were immobilized and the islands permitted to continue their commercial relations.

Planes Revert To Junk

Several hundred American-made military planes, meantime, have sat out in the Martinique weather and slowly reverted to junk.

The total population of the Vichy possessions was 591,872 at the last census in 1936, with an area of 66,790 square miles. On rocky, volcanic Martinique's 385 square miles were crowded 246,712 inhabitants and 192 distilleries. The pre-war military force comprised one company of infantry and a battery of field artillery.

Both Guadeloupe and Martinique are essentially agricultural. A third of Guadeloupe's 1,271 square miles are under production, principally of sugar, bananas, coffee and cacao.

Sugar is the leading export; rum second. Before the war France took nearly all of both crops, and with the cutting off of that market Guadeloupe is estimated to have lost ninety-nine per cent. of its external trade.

Christmas in England: 'Thank God It's No Worse'

DEC 24 1941

By RUSSELL LANDSTROM
(Wide World)

LONDON.—(The Jersey Journal Special News Service)—Britain's third Christmas of this war is so far removed from the holiday traditions of this land that everything Dickens wrote about the season seems wishful romancing.

But if the season is not what it used to be, the people at least join wryly with Dickens—whose name is so closely identified with Christmas in England — and say they might as well "put a good face on the matter. Thank God it's no worse."

This is a Christmas of deep concern over the future, or anxieties over absent ones, of seemingly interminable sacrifices and curtailments — at least on the part of many.

It is a Christmas of clothes-rationing; of shortages of food and liquor and other things; of the black market; of exhortations not to travel, not to smoke too much, not to give tobacco for Christmas, not to burn too much fuel.

PAPER SHORTAGE

Because of the paper shortage, most shoppers have been obliged to set out with a suitcase or a big handbag, and gifts cannot be wrapped as they were in other days.

There has been a dearth even of artificial Christmas trees and decorations.

You can no longer go blithely to Smithfield Market and get an enormous turkey and load up with the trimmin's.

Candy and oranges for the children are carefully apportioned; housewives have been guarding portions of mincemeat and fruit in order to make pies, cakes and puddings' yet for all the saving and scheming and improvising, it can't be the same—what about flavoring rum and brandy, eggs and sugar and cream?

Turkeys cost $6 to $12, considerably more than twice what prices used to be. Grapes—among the few fruits on sale — cost $3 a pound.

All along the line you need twice as much money as before—for such things as leather cases, purses, umbrellas, writing sets and sewing outfits.

The better type of cigaret case costs $10 to $15.

Toys are scarce and expensive. Except for nondescript specimens, dolls start at $4 and rise fast to the stratosphere. A medium-sized teddybear is marked $6.25.

A toy army truck—wooden, because the government has other use for metals—is priced at $4.40; a wooden locomotive about three feet long is tagged $8.25. Tiny tin soldiers cost 20 to 50 cents each. A papier-mache fort costs $7.25.

PETS IN DEMAND

Pets have been in great demand, but there has been a shortage of dogs and cats. Dealers say mongrel puppies have been selling freely at $6 each.

But there will be Christmas parties, of course, even though the institution of the family gathering has been hard hit by war separations of families and by restrictions of food and gifts.

Some of the parties are to be held in air raid shelters. Throughout England and Wales parties have been planned for children evacuated from the capital.

The army is trying to brighten up the season, with troops rehearsing pantomines and other shows and arranging dances to be held between Christmas and New Year's. The air force, navy and other services have arranged celebrations consistent with far-flung assignments.

Farmers, munitions workers and others engaged in the most vital war work will continue production during the holiday season with not more than one day's break.

Nor will there be any special dispensation from the ministry of food. Lord Woolton has announced there will be no additional release of rations.

The customary pantomines are being held in several theaters, and a season of Shakespeare is opening in the West End on Christmas Eve. Persons seeking stage entertainment will find a striking variety to choose from, including a number of new musicals.

The Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret are appearing with the children of a village in a pantomine for service men.

Few London churches plan midnight services Christmas Eve, as most of them lack necessary blackout equipment. But services in the dark will be held in Westminster Abbey.

Principal Attack Believed Coming From Lingayen Gulf Area, Where Enemy Force Is Heavier Than Expected — Foe Enlarging Beachheads

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 24 — The War Department said today Gen. Douglas MacArthur had reported Japanese troops had landed in two additional areas on the island of Luzon and consideration was being given to the withdrawal of the Commonwealth Government and military forces from Manila.

One landing, the communique said, was near Nasugbu, about fifteen miles south of the entrance to Manila Bay and fifty miles southeast of the city itself.

The other was near Mauban, about thirty miles north of Antimonan, on Lamon Bay, where landings were reported last night. Mauban is fifty-five miles southeast of Manila.

100 Jap Transports Around Islands

"It is estimated that at least one hundred enemy transports, in several convoys, are now in waters around the Philippine Islands," the army said.

"Each of these fleets of troopships is accompanied by strong naval and air escort."

The War Department said the withdrawal of the island Government and military forces from the capital city of the Philippines would make it possible to declare Manila an open city and thus spare the civilian residents from aerial bombardment.

General MacArthur And His Staff Take To Field To Direct Giant Battle For Manila

DEC 25 1941

By R. P. CRONIN, JR.

Manila, Thursday, Dec. 25 (AP)—United States Army forces with Gen. Douglas MacArthur personally in the field staved off Japanese advances toward Manila from both the north and south this Christmas Day, but the invaders continued to land in such numbers that they felt no doubt that the battle for this Philippine capital itself now is on.

Bitter fighting occurred throughout yesterday in both the Lingayen sector, about 125 miles north and west of Manila, and in the Atimonan area, 75 miles to the southeast.

Only minor skirmishes occurred during the night, however, the Army Command announced in a communique issued shortly before 8 a. m. today (6 p. m. Wednesday, E.S.T.), and a spokesman added that there were no important changes in the front line positions overnight.

The command left no doubt, however, that the Japanese pressure continued. The statement said:

"It was a very quiet night, but there still was Japanese pressure both north and south. Practically the only activity overnight was small skirmishes by patrols."

Earlier it was disclosed that Japanese reinforcements continued landing in the Lingayen and Atimonan sectors as their advance forces battled their way toward Manila.

Yesterday General MacArthur and his aides disclosed they were considering declaring Manila an open city, in which case it would not be defended and the Japanese would be expected to spare it from attack.

This morning a spokesman said that no final decision had as yet been made on this point.

Manila had an air raid warning at 1:40 a. m., but the spokesman said it was believed to have been a false alarm.

The main thrust apparently was coming from the Lingayen region.

In both the Lingayen and Atimonan sectors the defenders were opposing numerically superior forces.

Although the Atimonan region was nearer Manila, the Japanese were believed to have landed there only as a supplemental threat to the main drive from the north. Because of the rugged terrain about Atimonan the peril was not as great from that sector.

As this dispatch was filed at 1:30 a. m. (11:30 a. m. Wednesday, E.S.T.) there remained complete silence about the situation at Davao, port on the big southern island of Mindanao where the Japanese landed in force last week.

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, the Commander-In-Chief of the United

30.24 — 13733

30.24 — 13733

States armed forces of the Far East, personally took the field last night along with his staff, and he and his aides announced they were considering declaring Manila an open city.

Consistent Japanese aerial activity in the provinces obviously was designed to disrupt communications and prevent American and Filipino reinforcements from reaching the battle zones.

The complete silence regarding the Davao situation was inexplicable except as evidence that all communications were cut. The Mindanao campaign is a battle for short-cut sea lanes leading to Borneo.

A landing attempt by light Japanese forces was repulsed yesterday at Mauban.

(The War Department in Washington announced late Thursday, in advices that apparently covered later developments, that a landing had in fact been made at Mauban, which is about 30 miles above Atimonan and some 45 miles southeast of Manila.)

DEC 25 1941

Fourteen towns were reported bombed in widespread Japanese air raids. Among those attacked were the railroad centers of Cabanatuan, Nueva Ecija Province, and Calamba in Laguna Province. Other strategic points were bombed in Pangasian, Tarlac and Tayabas provinces. Scores were killed or wounded, including more than 20 known dead in Manila.

During yesterday a total of five Japanese planes were shot down, thus bringing the known total since the start of the invasion to 83. The figure is undoubtedly higher than that.

Despite everything the raiders could do, the crowds completed their Christmas shopping here in Manila, ducking from stores to shelters during the alerts, and then returned to their blacked-out homes. Food was still plentiful, but there was no light after nightfall.

Four air raid alarms shrilled over Manila before dusk—the fourth Japanese raid setting in the Fort McKinley district one of the greatest fires yet seen in the Manila area.

This fourth visitation was only of nine minutes duration, but during those minutes a cloud of dense black smoke miles wide arose from the McKinley vicinity. Twenty United States fighter planes swept southward in pursuit of the raiders.

Emilio Quinton, an Associated Press office boy, thus described the attack as an eye witness:

"Many Japanese planes flew over. They were high up. About 15 American planes were in the air and two of them started a dog fight. The two Americans, roaring very loudly, went up under some of the Japanese. They curved and twisted quickly. Three Japanese bombing planes came tumbling down to the ground. When the Japanese planes hit, the fire started."

An Associated Press photographer reported in from the scene that some buildings were burning.

The first of the day's raids was by nine Japanese bombers which hit the port area with heavy bombs and left black smoke rising. There was an explosion that shook the city, but American anti-aircraft guns threw aloft a tremendous barrage and one of the attacking craft fell from formation and trailed smoke as it disappeared from view.

Appearing over Fort McKinley, the assailants were driven off by heavy ground fire, and dropped no bombs there.

The second alarm was sounded just after 1 p. m. and the all-clear came at 1:48. The third was heard around 3 p. m., but no enemy plane appeared over the city and the all-clear was signalled half an hour later.

DEC 25 1941

While the second alarm was in progress, a big fleet of American tanks sped away from the city toward one of the fighting fronts. Civilians ran from their shelters to cheer the departing columns.

While the dual Japanese thrust—from the Lingayen area some 125 miles northwest of Manila and from Atimonan 75 miles southeast of the city—took the outward form of a pincer movement some observers expressed the opinion that the only immediately dangerous drive was from Lingayen. Any substantial Japanese progress from Atimonan, they said, could be halted by dynamiting the bridges and mountain road which the invader must take, in operations similar to those which had halted the initial Japanese push from Legaspi in extreme Southern Luzon.

In two communiques during the day, however, General MacArthur's headquarters made it plain that the defenders were hard beset.

"Forty transports are off the coast at Atimonan," said one. "Fighting is very heavy. Troops of the United States armed forces of the Far East are behaving very well but are greatly outnumbered.

"There is very heavy fighting in the North. Our troops there are behaving admirably against great odds."

Said the second, and afternoon, communique:

"Very heavy fighting continues on the north and south fronts. In both areas our troops are resisting stubbornly. The enemy continues to land reinforcements.

"In order to spare Manila from any possible air or ground attacks consideration is being given by the military authorities to declaring Manila an open city during this war, as was done in the case of Paris, Brussels, Athens, Rome and other capitals."

How many of the 40 transports off Atimonan actually had been able to accomplish their landing mission was not known; telephoned reports from that area spoke of several transport loads having been landed under heavy covering fire from the sea.

Before the invader had struck there, he had attempted an attack on the southwest Luzon coast near Batangas, but had been hurled back into the sea there.

(In Washington the War Department's communique for Wednesday morning stated that several enemy transports had appeared off Batangas. It substantially repeated the information from General MacArthur—Great enemy pressure, a stubborn defense by American troops inferior only in numbers.)

Enemy Lands in Strength 75 Miles South of Manila--City Is Bombed Repeatedly.

DEC 25 1941

Manila, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—Gen. Douglas MacArthur and his staff are taking the field at once in personal command of the fight against Japanese invasion spearheads, the army headquarters announced.

The Philippine defense forces were said to be outnumbered and hard pressed north and south of the capital. The Japanese were striking from their foothold along the Gulf of Lingayen, some 120 miles north of Manila, and from a beach head won by a new landing in force at the little fishing village of Atimonan, on the east coast of Luzon seventy-five miles south of Manila.

Large forces of United States tanks roared between cheering crowds lining the streets of Manila and headed toward the battlefields.

Manila had four air raid alarms during the day, and after the fourth, a nine-minute alarm which started at 5:21 P. M. (3:21 A. M., New York time) one of the biggest fires here since the beginning of the war flared up in the Fort McKinley area.

U. S. Fighters Take to Air.

Twenty United States fighter planes went into the air at the first sign of the raid and pursued the Japanese bombers to the south.

A communique issued from United States Army Headquarters at 4 P. M. said that American and Filipino troops were resisting stubbornly on both fronts, but added ominously: "The enemy continues to land re-enforcements."

The official bulletin, which described fighting in both sectors as "very heavy," failed to say whether the invaders were making any progress toward Manila.

"Forty transports are off the coast at Atimonan," the communique declared. "Fighting is very heavy. United States armed forces of the Far East troops are behaving very well but are greatly outnumbered. There is very heavy fighting in the north. Our troops there are behaving admirably against great odds."

Covered by Heavy Fire.

Word from Atimonan by telephone said several transport loads of Japanese landed under cover of heavy fire from the sea.

DEC 25 1941

Observers here expressed the view, however, that the only dangerous Japanese landing so far was that along the Gulf of Lingayen northwest of Manila.

They said that the Japanese push from Legaspi on extreme southern Luzon had been stopped by blowing up bridges across deep ravines, and that the Japanese had made no advance from Aparri, in extreme northern Luzon, where the landing was intended apparently only to establish an air base. Any Japanese thrust from Atimonan, these spokesmen declared, could be stopped just as the Legaspi push was, by dynamiting vital bridges and blowing out sections of the road through the mountains.

As the new overland threat to Manila developed, Army Headquarters announced that military authorities were considering declaring the capital an open city to spare it from any possible air or ground attacks. The announcement recalled that similar declarations were made with respect to Paris, Brussels, Athens, Rome and other capitals earlier in the war.

Manila Water Front Attacked.

Disclosure that such a step was under consideration followed by several hours a mid-morning raid on the Manila port area by nine Japanese bombers—the first on that section since the beginning of hostilities. Great clouds of black smoke rolled up from the water front as the Japanese planes swept away over Fort McKinley in a rain of steel from anti-aircraft guns. One of the raiders was officially reported downed and several others were believed destroyed.

The all clear was sounded in Manila after fifteen minutes. Considerable damage apparently was done to buildings along the water front.

Shortly after 1 P. M. there was a second alarm. Eleven silver-painted Japanese planes flew in from the south half an hour later and the all clear was sounded at 1:48 P. M.

A third air raid alarm sounded shortly after 3 P. M. No enemy planes appeared over the city. The all clear came half an hour later.

An army spokesmen said that before landing at Atimonan the Japanese had made an attack on the southwest coast of the island near Batangas but had been driven off.

Observers here interpreted the new Japanese thrust as an attempt to force Gen. Douglas MacArthur to split his forces and thus weaken resistance on the vital northern front.

According to last reports, the defenders there were holding a line north of Damortic, 120 miles from Manila, against the persistent hammering of strong Japanese forces which began landing from a fleet of eighty transports in the Gulf of Lingayen Sunday.

Attack at Many Points.

An army spokesman said that the Japanese Air Force was attacking at many points, apparently in an attempt to blast the American lines of communication. He disclosed that in one assault Japanese bombers had damaged the steel bridge at Vilasis, thirty miles south of Damortis on the main highway to Manila, but said that the damage already was being repaired.

The bridge, longest in the Philippines, is the first reported hit by the Japanese in repeated bombing attacks on the many spans which dot the major Luzon highways.

The landing at Atimonan is the sixth attempted by the Japanese on the island of Luzon since the war began December 7. Places at which they have established beach heads include Legaspi, on the southeasternmost tip of Luzon 250 miles from Manila; Vigan, on the west coast 210 miles north of the capital; and Aparri on the extreme north coast.

Atimonan, situated on Lopez Bay on the narrow neck of land connecting the main portion of Luzon with the southern bulge, is a town af about 13,000, known chiefly as a fishing center.

150 Miles Overland.

Though it is only seventy-five miles air line from Manila, an invading army would have to travel approximately 150 miles to reach the capital, skirting around a large inland lake—Laguna de Bay. The lone highway from Atimonan to Manila winds through rugged mountains stretching across the isthmus northwest of the town. A railway leading to Manila, which passes within a dozen miles of Atimonan, follows a similar circuitous route through extremely rugged country which lends itself well to defense.

While there are no known military objectives in the vicinity of Atimonan, the place was regarded in pre-war strategy as a possible invasion point and therefore precautions against an overland push to Manila probably have been taken.

While the Japanese forces which landed at Atimonan were described officially as heavy, an army spokesman declined to estimate their numerical strength. He said, however, that several transports had been sighted yesterday off Batangas Province on the Luzon southwest coast and it was possible that these were the vessels from which the invaders landed after an overnight journey around the tip of the island.

Silent on Davao.

Silent on Davao Situation.

The morning communique was silent concerning the situation at Davao on Mindanao Island, south of Luzon, where the Japanese also have landed in force.

Press reports quoted refugees from Mindanao, however, as saying seven Japanese troopships had been sunk in Davao harbor and that the defense forces were giving a good account of themselves in land fighting.

(An official announcement from Batavia, Netherlands Indies, said yesterday that Dutch naval bombers had fired a 10,000-ton tanker at Davao. The Dutch also reported last night that one of their submarines had sunk three big Japanese transports and a tanker west of Borneo, where the Japanese also have landed troops.)

A Filipino refugee who made his way to Manila from Legaspi said he had seen about 5,000 Japanese soldiers there and about 300 at Naga, the provincial capital.

He said he had been forced to help unload machine guns and munitions from a Japanese troopship for two days.

'Open City' Makes Manila Neutral

DEC 25 1941

(By The Associated Press)

If Manila is declared an open city as expected, that capital would be neutralized under international law, with the occupants refraining from military operations and the enemy enjoined from attacking it.

The main guarantee behind the declaration is that the open city contains no legitimate military objectives.

The general rule as enacted by the Hague Convention of Jurists declares: "Aerial (and other) bombardment is legitimate only when directed at a military objective, that is to say, an object of which the destruction or injury would constitute a distinct military advantage to the belligerent."

The purpose of the open city declaration is to avoid destruction and civilian casualties. The open city thus goes intact to the winner of the battle for it, which must be waged outside the city itself.

Paris was saved by this means after the Germans bombed it systemically only, and other cities in Europe fell to the Nazis more or less intact. Rotterdam was reported to have been declared open before the Germans destroyed a great part of it in a mass bombing attack described later as an object lesson in dive-bombing.

Belgrade was declared an open city but the Germans bombed it terrifically, declaring it contained prime military objectives.

The Germans meticulously avoided bombing Athens proper before Greece fell, always keeping their bombs on the objectives outside, particularly the nearby port of Paraeus, which was wrecked.

Maj. Emmett O'Donnell, Flying Bomber, Gets 4 Jap Planes

DEC 25 1941

Attacked by Swarm of Fighters, He Keeps to Course and Scores Bomb Hits on 2 Transports

By RUSSELL BRINES,
Associated Press War Correspondent.

MANILA, Dec. 24.—The story behind a terse official announcement crediting Maj. Emmett O'Donnell, jr., with the destruction of four Japanese airplanes was disclosed today as new tales of heroic deeds by American aviators filtered in from outlying airdromes.

Maj. O'Donnell, whose home is in New York City, was piloting a big bomber on a flight against Japanese naval units off Legaspi, it was learned, when he was attacked suddenly by a swarm of fighter planes.

In the face of heavy odds, Maj. O'Donnell kept on his course, maneuvering his plane so skillfully that four of the speedy Japanese fighters racing in for the kill were picked off by his crew—an unusual feat for a bomber.

Maj. O'Donnell then pressed home his attack on the Japanese sea forces despite heavy anti-aircraft fire and scored bomb hits on two transports before turning his bullet-riddled plane for home, with one of his crew dead and seven wounded.

Although both tires on his landing wheels were flat, Maj. O'Donnell succeeded in landing safely at his base.

(For another exploit before the war began, Maj. O'Donnell was one of 75 awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross, the War Department announced today. He led a circuitous, zig-zag flight from Hawaii to the Philippines that brought heavy aerial reinforcements to Gen. Douglas MacArthur's forces. Those who took part were cited by President Roosevelt for "heroism and extraordinary achievement.")

Another Flyer Downed 2 Bombers.

Two more tales of devotion to duty were disclosed in details of the first stunning attack on Iba December 8.

First Lt. Frederick C. Roberts, jr., of Easton, Pa., was sent aloft to intercept a fleet of Japanese bombers in this attack and downed two of the planes.

He was forced down when his plane ran out of gasoline. Making his way back to his airdrome, which was still under heavy attack, he organized stunned survivors of the bombing, commandeered transportation and superintended the removal of wounded to Manila.

Second Lt. James E. Alsobrook of Magnolia, Ark., assisted Lt. Roberts in the rescue work under constant bombing and machine-gun fire.

Marched Them 25 Miles.

When the makeshift ambulances had departed, Lt. Alsobrook organized the remaining able-bodied men into a unit and marched them 25 miles to another post, where they formally reported for duty.

First Lt. Walter L. Coss of New Brighton, Pa., was aloft on reconnaissance when he encountered 17 Japanese pursuit planes which riddled his ship with bullets.

Lt. Coss was forced to bail out and landed in unfamiliar territory, where he spent considerable time gathering military information which he telephoned to headquarters before returning afoot to his air base.

Maj. O'Donnell's Success Had Been Predicted

NEW YORK, Dec. 24 (AP).—Thirteen years ago, the Howitzer, United States Military Academy cadet year book, noted the athletic prowess of graduating Emmett O'Donnell, jr., of Brooklyn and said:

"During the next 30 years he will be as important a factor in the machine of war."

News of the flyer's valor was no surprise to his wife and his mother.

"He always was and he always will be brave and courageous," his mother said, and she added:

"Thank God he's safe."

Maj. O'Donnell is the father of two sons.

Wake Occupied, Japs Claim

DEC 25 1941

Tokyo, Dec. 24 (Official Radio Recorded by AP)—Japanese reports said today that Wake Island was occupied completely at 1 A. M. yesterday by Japanese naval forces defying blazing American defense guns, raging seas and a violent gale to carry out a night assault.

In the Philippines, these reports acknowledged, the Japanese were locked in a fierce struggle, but they declared successes at all points "and absolute supremacy of sea, air and land" indicated the Philippines' "inevitable" capture.

A Japanese naval communique said twenty American planes were destroyed by Japanese aircraft in attacks on the islands Sunday and Monday.

Three of the planes, said to be of "large type," were shot down in air combats and the remainder were destroyed on the ground, the communique declared.

Four Planes Lost

The army section of imperial headquarters gave this account of yesterday's heavy raid on Rangoon, capital of British Burma:

"The army air force which mass-raided Rangoon airdrome on December 23 engaged more than ten Spitfires, and Glosters appear also to have been included. The result was that Japanese fighters shot down ten British planes, while bombers accounted for the remainder. Japanese aircraft further destroyed four bombers and two fighters on the ground. Four Japanese planes are missing."

Warships Sunk, Claim

An announcement credited to a Japanese army air base in South China said seventeen British aircraft had been destroyed on the ground, three war vessels sunk and three more heavily damaged in the fighting in and around Hongkong and Kowloon up to December 23.

It added that several British air bases and anti-aircraft gun emplacements and other military facilities had been demolished.

400 Marines Lose Epic Battle To Hold Wake

DEC 25 1941

Navy Pays Tribute to Band of 'Leathernecks' Cut Off After Sinking 4 Warships

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24 (AP).—The Navy wrote a reluctant "finis" today to the Marines' gallant defense of Wake Island, in an account of how fewer than 400 fighting "leathernecks" held out against overwhelming odds for fourteen days and destroyed four Japanese warships before surrendering the tiny mid-Pacific outpost.

The Navy conceded that radio communications with the Wake garrison had been severed and that "the capture of the island is probable." Later it gave out details as to the number of the men and the meager arms at their disposal which presumably would have been kept a military secret unless all hope of further resistance had been abandoned.

The Navy's admission ended a brilliant chapter in the Marine Corps' already glorious history. The island's heroic defenders consisted of thirteen Marine Corps officers, 365 Marines, one naval medical officer and six enlisted men of the Navy Medical Corps, all under the command of a thirty-eight-year-old resident of the nation's capital, Major James P. S. Devereux.

Cut Off From Outside Aid

With a pitifully small amount of equipment, including only twelve fighter planes and six five-inch guns to start with, the "leathernecks" beat off wave after wave of enemy attacks from sea and air. Cut off from outside aid, they repulsed four separate attacks in the first forty-eight hours of the siege which started Dec. 9, but lost most of their planes in those actions.

They sank a Japanese light cruiser and one destroyer by air attack, however, in those first engagements.

In the closing hours of the siege, during which terse Navy announcements that "the Marines at Wake continue to resist" had excited the admiration of the entire country, the defenders had been so badly battered, the Navy said, that only one three-inch battery of four guns remained effective when the Japanese launched their final drive to force a landing.

DEC 25 1941

The garrison was battered day and night by heavy enemy attacks, which apparently caused many casualties and destroyed one after another the defenders' meager stock of weapons, but the marines managed to put two more enemy destroyers out of action.

The Japanese apparently succeeded in landing soon after that, however, and from then on there was no word from the little garrison.

As the Navy told the story, Wake's defenders were in "serious trouble" by Dec. 21.

"Seventeen heavy Japanese bombers attacked the island and were beaten off after heavy damage," the Navy said. "The three-inch batteries were struck, the power plant was damaged, and the Diesel oil building and its equipment was destroyed. Only one three-inch battery of four guns was now effective.

"The following day the Wake defenders reported that they had sustained still another heavy attack by air, but that several enemy ships and a transport were moving in. This landing attempt was in great force, but two enemy destroyers were put out of action by the marines before the invaders could effect a landing.

"For many hours the issue was in doubt. On Dec. 23, Tokio claimed that Wake Island was completely occupied by Japanese forces and the Navy Department was forced to admit that all communications with Wake had ceased."

Located approximately 2,000 miles west of Honolulu, Wake Island was one of a chain of small naval air bases designed for the use of the Navy's long-range patrol planes. It also was used as a stopping point for trans-Pacific clipper planes.

Log of Epic Defense

The log of the epic defense of Wake, as told in Navy Department communiques, follows:

Dec. 11—"The Marine garrison on Wake Island has been subjected to four separate attacks in the last forty-eight hours by enemy aircraft and one by light naval units. Despite the loss of part of the defending planes and the damage to material and personnel, the defending garrison succeeded in sinking one light cruiser and one destroyer of the enemy forces, by air action. The resumption of the attack and a probable landing attempt is expected. The Marine garrison is continuing to resist. The above report is based on information received up until noon, Dec. 11."

Dec. 12—"The resistance of Wake and Midway continues."

Dec. 13—"Wake and Midway continue to resist."

Dec. 14—"There have been two additional bombing attacks on Wake Island. The first was light but the second was undertaken in great force. Two enemy bombers were shot down. Damage was inconsequential. The Marines on Wake Island continue to resist."

Dec. 15—"Midway and Wake Islands continue to resist."

Dec. 16—"Wake Island has sustained two additional bombing attacks. The first occurred in the afternoon and the second in the evening. The first attack was light, the second heavy. Wake and Midway are countering the blows of the enemy."

Dec. 19—"There have been two additional air attacks by the enemy on Wake Island. The first occurred on the night of the 17th-18th and was comparatively light. The second was in greater force and occurred in the forenoon of the 19th. Wake Island continues to counter these blows."

Dec. 21—"Wake Island has sustained two additional attacks by enemy aircraft."

Dec. 23—"Wake Island sustained another strong air attack in the forenoon of the 22d. Several enemy planes were shot down. An enemy force effected a landing on Wake the morning of the 23d."

Dec. 24—"Radio communication with Wake has been severed and the capture of the island is probable. Two enemy destroyers were lost in the final landing operations."

378 Marines With a Doctor and Six Aids Held the Island 14 Days.

DEC 25 1941

SANK FOUR JAP WARSHIPS

Attackers Lost Two Destroyers in Final Assault on Atoll.

Washington, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—Fewer than 400 marines with twelve fighter planes and a small quantity of weapons held Wake Island for fourteen days against heavy Japanese attacks, the Navy Department said today after conceding that communication was broken and that Wake probably had been lost to the enemy.

The heroic Garrison, commanded by 38-year-old Major James P. S. Devereux, consisted of thirteen marine officers, 365 marines, one naval medical officer and six naval medical ratings, the announcement said.

In addition to the twelve planes with which the beleaguered garrison sank one Japanese light cruiser and three destroyers, the marines on the tiny Pacific outpost had six 5-inch guns, twelve 3-inch anti-aircraft guns, eighteen 50-caliber and thirty 30-caliber anti-aircraft weapons, plus the usual light weapons, said the navy. They also had six searchlights on the island.

Apparently cut off from all outside aid as soon as Japan struck at Pearl Harbor, the garrison at Wake withstood thirteen raids from December 9 to December 23, inclusive. On the final day, however, the Japanese launched another heavy attack in which they effected a landing on the island.

Word of the first attack on the island was made public by the navy on December 11 when it announced that the garrison had withstood four separate attacks on the low coral atoll by Japanese aircraft in the preceding forty-eight hours and one by light naval units. It was in that period that Marine Corps flyers sank the Japanese cruiser and the first destroyer.

Marines Upheld Record.

From then on official naval accounts of the siege came in a succession of terse communiques, usually not more than a line in length. The brilliant performance of the Marines, however, was given a high place in the already illustrious record of the Marine Corps.

The navy also announced today that Palmyra Island and Johnston Island, both in the mid-Pacific, had been shelled by enemy submarines with no casualties resulting. Damage at Palmyra Island was negligible, the navy said, and there was no damage to material at Johnston Island.

The communique said that the S. S. Larry Doheny was shelled by an enemy submarine in the eastern Pacific but reached port safely. Press reports of the sinking of the S. S. Montebello were confirmed, the department said.

No new developments were reported in either the Atlantic or Far Eastern theaters and the Hawaiian area was reported quiet.

BRITISH FIGHT MALAYAN DRIVE TO STANDSTILL

RAF Pounds Japanese Bases And Defends Line Against Raiders

DEC 25 1941

By C. YATES McDANIEL
Associated Press Correspondent

Singapore, Dec. 24—A staunch but ragged British line athwart the Mangrove swamps and mountains of North Malaya appeared today to have fought the Japanese advance on Singapore to a standstill.

Above the Malayan Jungle and on the flanks of this all-essential naval base the Japanese, too, were feeling the rising power of the Allied air forces.

The RAF, after a ten-day lull, was in the air in strength, pounding Japanese operational bases in the northern Malaya and defending areas between the British land line and Singapore against Japanese air assault. In formation the RAF raided Sungei Patani, twenty-five miles northeast of Penang Island, where the Japanese are trying to utilize a former British air field.

Mentions American Fighters

Official accounts of yesterday's air raid on Rangoon, Burma, disclosed that British and American fighters engaged fifty to sixty Japanese bombers outside the city and broke up their formation. Some bombers got through, hitting docks, damaging a block of buildings and causing some casualties among RAF ground staffs. Nine bombers and a fighter were destroyed and several badly damaged, however, the Allied fighters attacking the enemy on their way home.

The American fighters were not identified, but it was believed possible some were volunteers of the international air force, former United States Army pilots who have been patrolling the Burma road for China.

Flying Dutchmen, who now claim a ship a day sunk or damaged by themselves or by submarines of the Netherlands East Indies, smashed again at Japanese ships off Sarawak, leaving one transport in a sinking condition near Kuching, the capital of the British-protected Borneo State.

Official Netherlands sources said, moreover, that combined submarine and air action by the Dutch forces, culminating with the sinking of three transports and a tanker off Borneo yesterday, had wiped out with serious losses in men and material the entire supply fleet which earlier invaded the Miri oil fields of Sarawak.

The Dutch score by air and undersea attack now is thirteen Japanese ships sunk and four seriously damaged. Moreover the Dutch say they will continue to strike wherever they can relieve pressure on the British in Malaya and the United States in the Philippines.

With American Planes

Already, in American-made planes, the Dutch pilots have been at work on the Japanese off Malaya, Borneo and as far north as the Philippine Island of Mindanao, where yesterday a tanker in excess of 10,000 tons was fired and Japanese-held docks and warehouses at Davao were bombed.

On the Malayan mainland the only action reported was "some skirmishing" in the northwestern sector. Here, about 295 air miles from Singapore, the strategically important sector is flanked on the west by the coastal mangrove swamps and on the east by some of Malaya's highest peaks. In between is a narrow stretch of rolling country cut by the Perak river and the mainland to Singapore.

Rangoon reported a patrol engagement at Messiar, on the Burma-Thailand border, but said the Japanese force was "shot up" without British casualties.

British Defense Halts Japanese Malayan Drive For 2 Days

DEC 25 1941

R. A. F. Takes Offensive, Battering Nipponese Bases; 4 Planes Hit

By the Associated Press.

SINGAPORE, Dec. 24.—Britain's stiffened North Malaya defense line was declared today to have held the Japanese jungle offensive virtually to a standstill for 48 hours while British airmen battered at the Japanese bases.

The irregular battlefront was not clearly defined, but it was said here that its southernmost point was 295 miles air-line from Singapore, extending across the states of Perak, Kelantan and Northern Trangganu.

Key sector apparently was the western end of the fighting zone. Here the British were reported holding doggedly to an important line flanked on the west by coastal mangrove swamps and on the east by some of the highest mountains of Malaya.

Between the swamps and mountains is a narrow stretch of rolling country cut by the Perak River and the mainline railroad running north from Singapore.

British flyers took up the offensive yesterday after shooting down two Japanese planes and damaging two others in an air battle over Kuala Lampur, midway between Singapore and Penang.

Only a few hours later British bombers streaked to the north in formation, raiding Sungei Patani, mainland town 25 miles northeast of the island of Patang.

The Japanese occupied Sungei Patani last week in their push from Thailand into Northern Malaya and have been reported attempting to put in shape an air field there which the British had used as an advance operating base but left dismantled.

DUTCH AIRMEN SINK JAPANESE SUPPLY FLEET

Transport Among Vessels Sent to Bottom Off Borneo.

ANOTHER TROOPSHIP STRUCK

It Was in Concentration Near Capital of Sarawak, Not Yet Attacked.

DEC 25 1941

London, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—Netherlands official sources declared today that air and naval action of Dutch East Indies forces, culminating in the sinking of three Japanese transports and a tanker off Borneo, had wiped out with serious losses of men and material the entire enemy supply fleet which had attacked Miri.

Miri was one of two closely spaced Japanese landings in Sarawak, on the north coast of the island of Borneo, close to the frontier between Sarawak and British North Borneo proper.

Previous air attacks had accounted for all other ships involved in the Miri action, these sources said.

They declared that advices reaching London said that the Japanese, in retaliation, had bombed and machine-gunned small, outlying Netherlands islands, inflicting civilian casualties.

Dutch Bomb Jap Ships

BATAVIA, Netherlands Indies (A.P.).—Netherlands Indies Army bombers attacked a concentration of Japanese ships off Kuching, capital of Sarawak, today and left one transport in sinking condition, it was officially announced.

Dutch Flyers Repel Jap Air Raiders and Sink 4 More Ships

3 Transports and Tanker Sunk Off Borneo; Help Given Philippines

By the Associated Press.

BATAVIA, Dec. 24.—The Netherlands Indies Army communique said today that Dutch fighter planes intercepted Japanese bombers at an undisclosed point over the outer islands and turned the raiders off before they could drop any bombs.

Amending its report yesterday of the sinking of a Japanese tanker off Davao, the invaded Mindanao Island harbor of the Philippines, the communique said it was larger than the 10,000 tons previously estimated and that the bomb which scored a direct hit weighed half a ton.

A Batavia radio report declared Dutch forces now have sunk an average of a Japanese ship day, making a total of 16 since the outbreak of the war in the Pacific.

During the air attack on Davao, carried out in the face of heavy anti-aircraft fire and Japanese fighter resistance to implement the United States' defense of Mindanao, the communique said Dutch flyers scored direct hits on warehouses and docks along the water front.

Davao is about 600 airline miles from Manila and only about 400 from outlying islands of the Dutch archipelago. Hence it is a closer target for the Netherlands and, consequently, a potential base for any Japanese invasion attempt against the Indies.

All the Dutch planes returned safely, the communique said, except one flying boat which was forced down at sea and whose crew was picked up.

It asserted also that an enemy tanker and three transports already announced as sunk by a Dutch submarine northwest of Borneo were torpedoed on their way from Japan "and therefore had no opportunity to land their troops, war materials or supplies."

"It may be assumed," it said, "that considerable losses in men and material were inflicted on the enemy."

'Plenty of Fight Left,' London Hears—Chinese Attacks on Rear Have 'Some Effect'

HONG KONG, Dec. 24 (AP)—The British, who are maintaining contact with the enemy along the whole Hong Kong front, have won minor encounters and have set afire Japanese naval oil fuel tanks in near-by Kowloon on the mainland.

"Minor patrol encounters ended in our favor," said a communiqué issued at 3 P. M. The bulletin added:

"Our position on Mount Cameron is being maintained. Naval oil fuel tanks in enemy hands in Kowloon have been set ablaze and are still burning."

Kowloon, terminus of a rail line at the very tip of the Kowloon Peninsula, lies about a mile from the island of Hong Kong. Mount Cameron is a lofty British stronghold that has been under constant Japanese attack.

CLAIMS NAVAL FUEL TANKS OF ENEMY FIRED

Contact Said To Be Maintained With For All Along Front

Civilians Take Part In Fighting For Defense Of Colony

DEC 25 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Thursday, Dec. 25—The British garrison of Hongkong, still fighting on in supreme disregard of death and doom which has so long seemed imminent, sent out word today that it had won a series of local encounters in maintaining contact with the enemy all along the front yesterday and had set ablaze his naval fuel tanks on the Kowloon mainland.

This presumably was accomplished by artillery action.

"Our position on Mounta Cameron (a long-assaulted British stronghold) is being maintained," said Hongkong's communique of yesterday, which reached here early today.

Civilians Join In Fight

Even civilians and British administrative officers were said in reports through Hongkong's difficult but still surviving communications channels to be fighting, with what arms they could find, to hold some isolated points.

The British defense was strong not alone for its valor but because the mountainous terrain to which the imperial troops had withdrawn made Japanese mechanized attacks difficult and gave some protection against Japanese bombers.

Japanese Also Gain

While British marines and Canadians were known to have regained some positions, Japanese gains also were indicated.

The effects of the Chinese counter-thrust against the Japanese flank and rear were in doubt. The British Singapore command indicated that the Japanese were being seriously harried and that it was possible that Hongkong might thus be measurably relieved.

Other information reaching Singapore from Chungking, however, was to the effect that the Chinese operations were on a rather small scale.

Two Chinese Attacks

Chungking itself stated officially that while two Chinese attacks were under way—one north of Hongkong in the Tamsui area and the other against Pingwu on the Canton-Kowloon railway—neither could be regarded as a general offensive.

It was added, however, that the Japanese had been forced to divert some of their forces to meet the Chinese assaults.

Delayed dispatches from Chungking supplemented this with the report that 3,000 to 4,000 Japanese troops had been forced to withdraw from the Hongkong assaults to meet Chinese pressure near Shumchun on the mainland.

stands at isolated vantage points where repeated Japanese onsets were repulsed.

Fighting In Broken Terrain

Although competent observers still gave the defenders little chance of holding out unless aid could be gotten through to them, one source pointed out that their present positions probably are well suited to their desperate stand.

The British are fighting now, it was said, in broken, mountainous terrain, easier to defend against Japanese mechanized attack and affording better cover from aerial bombing and strafing.

The Japanese are reported in control of the areas of the island where most of the population lived.

Heavy Artillery Used

Reports from the island said the Japanese were keeping up their attacks with the support of heavy artillery fire which forced the British back in the Repulse Bay section.

From their positions farther in toward the center of the island the British still are counter-attacking, inflicting heavy casualties on the Japanese, word from the colony said.

In one such counter-thrust British marines were said to have won back

Reliable information reaching Singapore from Chungking, however, said the Chinese operations were on a relatively small scale and probably could not have the effect of saving the British colony.

Two Attacks By Chinese

An official statement from Chungking on operations in the Hongkong area said today the Chinese had two attacks under way, one north of the colony in the Tamsui area and the other against Pingwu on the Canton-Kowloon Railway.

A Chungking army spokesman emphasized that neither attack should be regarded as amounting to a general offensive.

He said they had succeeded in forcing the Japanese to divert some forces as reinforcements against the Chinese in these areas.

in that region Monday in an attempt to outflank the Chinese, military dispatches said today. The outcome of this maneuver was not reported.

The Chinese reports said before this action the Chinese force, attempting to divert Japanese forces from the attack on British Hongkong, had captured the town of Namling, just north of Pokut on the railway.

In Central China, the Chinese Army reported, the Japanese attacked five villages in northern Hunan province, about 100 miles north of Changsha, but were beaten off. Other small Japanese oensives in North Hunan, South Kiangsu province and along the Kiangsu-Anhwei border were reported.

Hongkong Defenders In Counter-Attacks

London, Dec. 24 (AP)—The Tokyo radio was heard tonight broadcasting an Imperial Headquarters announcement that Japanese army planes carried out a second mass raid on Rangoon late yesterday, damaging five ships in the harbor.

The broadcast declared that twenty-one out of thirty-two British planes which gave battle over the city were shot down and that only two Japanese planes failed to return.

DEC 25 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 24—Forced back to Hongkong's mountainous strongholds, British defenders of the besieged Crown colony off the China coast were reported tonight to have won local successes in counter-thrusts against the Japanese on the southern part of the island.

Reports which trickled out through crippled communication facilities declared that civilians and British administrative officers were helping the defense by holding out in armed a position the Japanese had overrun Monday night.

Conflicting Reports

There were conflicting reports of the possible lessening of pressure on Hongkong which might be expected from the Chinese offensive toward the colony's mainland outskirts across Victoria harbor from the island.

Some Chinese sources said the Chinese attack had pushed the Japanese back close to the northern border of the colony along the Canton-Kowloon railroad.

Only One American Killed At Hongkong

Chungking, China, 5.30 P. M., Dec. 24 (AP)—A telegram from Hongkong filed at noon today (11 P. M. Tuesday E. S. T.) said that no Americans had been reported killed or injured in the invaded crown colony since the death of Miss Florence Webb, of Shanghai, early in the siege.

The telegram was received by official American quarters at 1.30 P. M.

Miss Webb, the only American casualty, was killed by shell or bomb fragments on the second or third day of hostilities.

DEC 25 1941

The home of Addison E. Southard, United States Consul General, has been demolished and members of the consular staff are living in the consulate general, located in the Hongkong and Shanghai Banking Corporation building.

Shelling and bombing continues, the telegram said.

The bank building now housing the Americans is the tallest in the city and is situated near the water front opposite mainland Kowloon. It probably is the most modern structure in the Far East and is a center for American activities, housing the American Club as well as the consulate general.

Southard's private office commands a clear view of the harbor and Kowloon.

Japs Bomb Rangoon.

Rangoon, Dec. 23 (Delayed)—(A. P.).—A British communique said today that British and American fighters were despatched to intercept Japanese bombers, fifty to sixty of which, escorted by fighters, approached Rangoon from the south and east at about 10:10 o'clock. The fighters caught the raiders just before they reached the city. When attacked by the interceptors, the raiders broke formation.

A number of bombers, however, reached their objectives, which appeared to be Mingaladon and docks. Slight damage was sustained at the former, including a block of buildings and a small quantity of fuel destroyed.

The R. A. F. sustained some casualties to the ground staff.

The first volley of anti-aircraft fire crashed right into their midst and shattered one to bits. Another hurtled into the air in flames in full view of the populace. In some places Japanese pilots came down low over the street and machine-gunned pedestrians.

London, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—A British Far East communique issued in Rangoon, Burma, reporting that British and American fighters battled Japanese air raiders stirred considerable interest here.

In informed quarters it was said that there was no reason to believe that regular United States Army pilots were aiding in the air defense of Rangoon, but it was suggested that some members of the international air force, exclusively composed of former American Army flyers who resigned to patrol the Burma road for China, may have been in action.

These quarters said it was likely that the communique meant British pilots flying American-made planes, but agreed it was possible that some of the American volunteers might be fighting at Rangoon.

Ottawa Issues Report.

Ottawa, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—The Department of Canadian National Defense issued the following report today on the British-Canadian-Indian defense of Hongkong:

"A Hongkong situation report up to 5 P. M. yesterday Hongkong time (4 A. M. Eastern standard time Tuesday) states that during the previous twenty-four hours the enemy has kept up incessant attacks and local raids accompanied by intensive bombardments. Some ground lost the previous night was recaptured during the course of the morning.

DEC 25 1941

"At the time the message was dispatched information had just been received that in one sector British troops had beaten off a determined attack. As a consequence the position on the island remains materially unchanged although enemy infiltration continues.

"On the mainland there were indications of increasing Chinese pressure from the direction of Canton against the enemy's rear.

"In view of the hard fighting in progress it has not been possible for the Canadian force to report details as to casualties. There were indications, however, the report added, that the enemy was behaving well toward our wounded."

Chinese Attack in Rear.

Chungking, Dec. 23 (Delayed) (A. P.).—Chinese dispatches reported today that the Japanese had withdrawn 3,000 to 4,000 of their troops from the assault on Hongkong to attack Chinese forces threatening their rear near Sumchun, on the mainland. Both sides were said to have suffered considerable casualties in heavy fighting which ensued.

The British embassy, meanwhile, announced that it had been in touch with the Hongkong defenders at midday and said that they were fighting valiantly.

The civilian population in Hongkong is taking the situation calmly, though about 100 bombs were dropped on the island yesterday, the embassy declared.

A Chinese spokesman declared that all the troops which the Japanese were employing in their offensive in Malaya had been withdrawn from China, but said that those attacking the Philippines came from elsewhere.

KUOMINTANG ASKS FULL MOBILIZATION

Would Put Millions More Chinese Into Struggle.

DEC 25 1941

Chungking, China, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—Full mobilization of China's tremendous man power to provide millions more men to be thrown into the Pacific war was demanded in a manifesto published today by the Central Executive Committee of the Kuomintang, China's dominant political party, as it closed an eight-day session.

The manifesto vigorously indorsed the Roosevelt-Churchill Atlantic charter, to the fulfillment of which it pledged "the utmost measure of China's man power and resources."

It declared that China never would conclude a separate peace but would fight on "until the aggressor nations are disarmed, equal economic opportunity for all peoples assured and a world order based on peace is assured."

The committee, China's most powerful political organ, said the most urgent task confronting the anti-aggression Powers was immediate establishment of a unified command to co-ordinate military, economic and political measures.

China is believed to have some 4,000,000 under arms, a large proportion of them poorly equipped. About half the population of 450,000,000 lives in Japanese-held territory, but fuller mobilization in the free provinces would provide tens of millions more if they could be equipped.

JAPANESE DIET OPENS ITS REGULAR SESSION

Emperor to Speak Tomorrow—U. S. Submarines Feared

TOKYO, Dec. 24 (From Japanese broadcasts recorded by The Associated Press)—The seventy-ninth session of the Imperial Diet, the regular annual meeting, opened today with proceedings devoted to organization. Mazutami Togo, former vice speaker, was elected speaker.

The ceremonial opening, at which Emperor Hirohito is to address the two houses, is set for Friday. On Saturday the houses will adjourn for the usual New Year holidays. The real business of the session will begin in January.

Acclaims Australian Troops

Army Minister Says Nation Supports Vanguard in Malaya

CANBERRA, Dec. 24 (AP).—Army Minister Francis Forde, in a message today to Australian troops in Malaya, said:

"You men are our vanguard. Behind you stands a nation pledged to your support. The nation remembers you at this season. We shall support you and reinforce you.

"Be of good heart. We are of good heart and confident here."

WRECKED HANGARS TELL OF JAP RAID

Twisted, Charred Planes, Scarred Buildings seen at Hickam Field

DEC 25 1941

By Tom Yarbrough

By The Associated Press

Honolulu, Dec. 24. — Tattered skeletons of huge hangars at the Army's Hickam Field stood today as gaunt evidence of the surprise Japanese attack on this placid pleasure-spot, and in them lay the twisted and charred wreckage of the many once-mighty guardians of Hawaiian skies.

Army authorities allowed reporters to inspect targets of the December 7 raid for the first time yesterday. "This is no conducted tour," they pointed out. "You can see anything you want."

There was great damage, some of which reflected a knowledge on the part of the invaders as to just where to strike—and at the same time showed how quickly the Army made up its losses and was bristling with readiness for another attack.

It was at Wheeler Field where the Japanese singled out vital targets and went after them, leaving less-important objectives untouched. Most casualties at Wheeler Field occurred in the barracks, which were damaged heavily. Machine-gun bullets left their marks abundantly on many buildings and over the field—reminders of the low altitude strafing that made it a matter of life or death for men to get their planes into the air.

Warplanes Replaced

Alongside the black wreckage at Hickam Field rolled a trainload of new warplanes, replacements. All over the place — just as at other fields — were thousands of young men in khaki, putting things back into shape.

The Japanese evidently didn't have such a good knowledge about the layout at Hickam Field. Raiders had gone the line of hangars dropping their explosives but turned off before reaching the end ones, which contained many fine planes.

Officers estimated that 48 planes raided Wheeler Field in an effort to cut off Pearl Harbor's air defense. Twelve or so were shot down by six American pilots who managed to get their craft off the ground in a hail of bullets which killed three of their fellow fliers.

Naval Planes in Attack

"It's my opinion that the Jap planes came from two carriers," one officer said. "All I saw were naval planes.

"If we'd had more planes up it would have been duck soup shooting the Japanese down."

The great Schofield barracks, one of the Army's largest and finest posts, suffered least of all. The only damage there was done by a U. S. anti-aircraft shell which pierced the roof of an empty barracks building. There was some strafing, but it proved harmless. One machine-gun bullet plugged a playing card at the center of a table where four cooks were having a little game.

Several bombs made craters 12 and 15 feet in diameter outside the barracks building. One fell within 100 feet of the hospital, but did no damage.

DEC 25 1941

The baseball field was covered with bomb craters. Somebody suggested a Japanese team must have lost a game there once—"they certainly hate to lose at baseball."

The Army's answer to the raid was symbolized neatly on that baseball field. The craters had been made into machine-gun nests.

32 Survivors Tell Of 9 Days Spent In Small Lifeboat

Honolulu, Dec. 24 (AP)—Survivors of the American freighter Lahaina told today of nine terrifying days in a stormy sea, with 35 men crowded into a 20-foot lifeboat after their ship was shelled and sunk Dec. 11 by an enemy submarine 800 miles out.

As the lifeboat headed for safety two men leaped overboard, two perished aboard the small boat from exposure and a fifth died a few hours after the craft, under makeshift sail, reached a beach on Maui Island.

There they were mistaken for an enemy landing party until they could make their identity known.

Capt. Hanso Matthiesen said a submarine about 200 feet long, bearing no identifying marks, shelled his freighter first from about 2,000 yards and then again at 300 yards. About half the 25 shots fired struck the 5,646-ton Matson line vessel, setting her afire and sinking her. No torpedo was fired.

The Captain and his crew piled into the one undamaged lifeboat, taking with them the ship's compass, sail, canvas, potatoes, apples, oranges, lemons and a keg of water.

Gaunt and exhausted, 30 men and Captain Matthiesen put ashore at Spreckelsville, Maui, at dawn last Sunday.

Hillard Moore died at sea Dec. 19 and Herman Friedman of Chicago succumbed ashore. Alfred Lundquist and Censeiro Coteno jumped overboard, Captain Matthiesen said.

30 REACH LAND AFTER 9 DAYS

Arrive Safely in Hawaii—Japs Sank Ship.

By Eugene Burns

Honolulu, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—Thirty gaunt and exhausted survivors of the freighter Lahaina, sunk by a Japanese submarine in the Pacific on December 11, reached a Hawaiian beach in a twenty-foot lifeboat after nine and one-half days at sea, it became known here today. When they approached the shore at Spreckelsville, Maui Island, at dawn last Monday, they were mistaken for an enemy landing party until they made known their identity.

Two of the crew died aboard the crowded lifeboat from exposure and exhaustion and two others leaped overboard. One seaman died a few hours after the boat made land.

The 5,646-ton Matson freighter was 800 miles out of Ahukini, Kauai Island, when she was shelled and left afire and sinking. Capt. Hanso Matthiesen said that the submarine, described as about 200 feet long, fired from 2,000 yards, then again from 300 yards. He estimated that twelve of twenty-five shots fired struck the Lahaina.

Sailing by a makeshift sail and a compass salvaged from the ship, the seamen lived on potatoes, apples, oranges and lemons and a keg of drinking water taken off the freighter before she plunged to the bottom. With Capt. Matthiesen, the survivors were:

Joseph B. Murphy, S. R. Markey, Richard Hiroshima, Frank Freitas, K. R. Madison, Walter I. Johnson, Cruz Encarnacion, Douglas McMurtry, R. G. Anderson, a Mr. Suzman, George Kober, Henry J. Fern, Frank Connelly, Michael Locke, Leonard Geus, Bernard Kuckens, Nick Nanopolos, Phil Sherbourne, R. J. Cameron, Fred Shaw, Cliff Lanagan, Fred Schuster, Fred Kachenmeister Roosevelt Speight, Carl Robert Olson, Harry Anderson, Danny James, James Day and Fred Dalton.

Hillard Moore died on December 19 at sea and Herman Friedman of Chicago died ashore, both of exposure and exhaustion. Alfred Lundquist and Censeiro Coteno leaped overboard, Capt. Matthiesen said.

SUBMARINES ATTACK MORE U. S. VESSELS

McCormick Line Freighter Towed To Port After Hit By Torpedo

Navy Hears Unconfirmed Reports Of Shots At Two Other Craft

[By the Associated Press]

Long Beach, Cal., Dec. 24—An enemy submarine torpedo badly crippled the 5,696-ton freighter Absaroka with the loss of one life today and naval authorities said they had unconfirmed reports that one, or possibly two, lumber schooners also had been attacked in California waters.

American planes dropped depth charges in the vicinity of the attack on the Absaroka with undisclosed results.

The Absaroka, owned by the McCormick Line, began settling rapidly after being struck, but tugs quickly took it in tow and struggled to haul it into port.

DEC 25 1941

Rest of Crew Rescued

The casualty was identified as Joseph Ryan, 63, San Francisco. The remainder of the crew of thirty-four was rescued.

Naval authorities authorized publication of reports that a number of American planes, arriving over the Absaroka shortly after she was attacked, dropped depth bombs in an effort to knock out the submarine, presumably Japanese. Whether the attempt was successful was not revealed.

They announced that the four-masted schooner Dorothy Phillips entered a California port tonight down by the stern, but proceeding under her own power. The extent or cause of her damage had not been determined, but it was believed she may have been the schooner previously reported to the navy as having been disabled by a submarine attack near where the Absaroka incident occurred.

The navy also heard reports that another lumber schooner, the Barbara C., may have been attacked.

Says Shots Went Wide

Reports were received by the authorities that O. H. Ness, first officer of the Barbara C., said his vessel had been fired upon near the Absaroka, that the shots went wide, and that he was unable to determine whether they came from a submarine or were being fired at a near-by submersible from shore batteries.

The Barbara C. is operated by the Oliver J. Olson & Co., of San Francisco.

Crewmen of the Absaroka told vivid stories of the attack while the freighter, with a hole in its side large enough to drive an automobile through, was being towed toward shore.

His Fifth Torpedo Attack

Joseph Scott, 46, of Portland, Ore., survivor of four torpedo attacks in the first World War, said he first thought the submarine was a whale but then yelled "There's a damn Jap submarine!"

"She was coming nead-on. Then her periscope went up and she shot a torpedo. I've seen torpedoes coming at me before. They've wasted that one,' I said. And sure enough it went wide. But then came another. I could see it was going to get us.

"There was a sort of slow jar with nothing but a rumble. There wasn't any panic. In fact, I can't remember any panic in any of the torpedoings I've been through."

Donned His Best Suit

Thomas D. Watkins, 62-year-old chief cook, said he had a hunch the vessel might be torpedoed and that he donned his best suit of clothes upon leaving his bunk early today because "I didn't want to lose my good suit."

At the time of the attack he could see shore from his galley and was figuring, "Well, we got through this time."

"I was busy basting a roast when we were blasted. That galley seemed to turn upside down. Somehow, I was out on deck and I remember saying to myself, 'Thomas, be careful and don't get that Sunday suit wet.'

Says Nobody Was Excited

"I went to my lifeboat station and we got the boat overside without trouble. Nobody was very excited."

McCormick Lines said the Absaroka was struck by a torpedo at 10.40 A. M.

Accounts of shore watchers varied as to what happened to the submarine. Several persons said it was a large and imposing craft and that as it unleashed the torpedo it was speeding toward the freighter. They said there was a large water spout at the stern of the Absaroka, that she listed and that the sub turned seaward and submerged.

Think Sub Was Crippled

Other witnesses said they believed the sub had been crippled or sunk. They said the raider remained on the surface for some time after firing the torpedo, then sank.

Navy officials confirmed that the Absaroka had been attacked, but declined comment on the submarine.

A policeman, Keith Kohlhoff, said he watched from the shore as the Absaroka was attacked.

Saw No Periscope

"I thought it was a submarine that had torpedoed her," he related, "but I didn't see any periscope. It wasn't long before there was a marked list, and the crew had loosened the deck cargo and much lumber was floating free."

Said Sergt. J. E. Hegwood:

"We were looking at the lumber schooner when suddenly we saw a fountain of water spou one hundred feet into the air at the stern. The boat swung around, its stern to the sea, and its bow coming toward land with the force of the blow."

Says She Saw Submarine

Mrs. Grace Pederson, another shore watcher, said she saw a submarine.

"It had a hump in the center and the periscope projected above the water," she added, "it headed toward the ship and then swung its nose out to sea and submerged."

Twenty-four crew members of the 432-foot Absaroka were brought ashore in a Coast Guard cutter. The captain and the others remained on the Absaroka while four tugs pulled her into a harbor.

Missing Tanker Arrives In Port

Washington, Dec. 24 (AP)—The Standard Oil Company tanker Fitzsimmons, described as the last unaccounted-for American ship in dangerous Pacific waters when the war with Japan began, was said by the Navy today to have arrived safely at a West Coast port.

Its hazardous trip home ended Dec. 22.

The Navy said the Fitzsimmons was in the Sea of Okhotsk, bound for Russia with a cargo of motor gasoline, when Japan struck at Pearl Harbor Dec. 7.

The announcement said that the Navy's foresight in giving ships on Pacific routes advance orders on what routes to take in event of emergency was responsible for the fact that all but one ship in Japanese waters escaped.

"Only the President Harrison, too late in leaving Oriental waters, was lost to the enemy," the Navy said. "The President Harrison had remained in Oriental waters to the last minute in an endeavor to evacuate United States citizens before the threatened blow fell."

Crew of Oil Tanker Tells How Japanese Fired on Lifeboats

Captain Expresses Hope That Navy Will 'Get' Submarine

By the Associated Press.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 24.—The captain of an oil tanker sent to the bottom of the Pacific Ocean by a prowling enemy submarine expressed hope today that the United States Navy would "get that Jap submarine before she gets another American ship."

A submarine sank the Union oil tanker Montebello off the California coast yesterday and then fired on the lifeboats of the crew, but the Richfield oil tanker Larry Doheny fled to a cove and escaped after being fired on.

The attacks followed the sudden appearance of Axis submarines preying on Pacific Coast shipping.

Capt. Olaf Eckstrom, tall, blond Norse skepper of the Montebello, praised his crew of 40 men after they all reached shore, suffering only shock and exposure.

Captain Praises Crew.

Capt. Eckstrom had taken command of the Montebello only a few hours before it put to sea.

"When we went to sea we knew what we might have to face and we faced it," he said. "I am proud of the men under my command. God bless them. They performed like American seamen.

"I hope the Navy gets that Jap submarine before she gets another American ship."

The torpedo which hit the Montbello caused such a terrific explosion that it awakened residents on shore 6 miles away. The missile struck the only compartment of the tanker not loaded with gasoline, or the whole ship would have blown up.

The submarine then fired several shots at the sinking ship.

"We had no warning at all," said Capt. Eckstrom. "The ship sank very quickly, but we had time to take to the boats. My boat was waterlogged, and in the rough sea it was tough going."

Fire on Lifeboats.

"There was a hell of an explosion," said Bill Srez of Westville, Mass., one of the rescued seamen. "I know they fired on us from the deck. The fellows in the other boats were subjected to machine-gun fire."

But the marksmanship of the Japanese seemingly was as bad as in most of their other attacks on American shipping. Two tankers have been hit, but five escaped.

In operations extending over hundreds of miles, the invading underseas craft also were reported to have attempted a second attack on the Standard Oil tanker H. M. Storey and a third on the Texas Oil Co. tanker Idaho.

The Canadian freighter Rosebank, en route to a California port, was reported overdue more than 24 hours. The Navy said it had no information regarding the 2,410-ton vessel, whose home port is Vancouver, British Columbia.

"If We Only Had a Gun."

After shaking off an enemy submarine which missed her with two torpedoes Monday morning, the 10,763-ton H. M. Storey made port under forced draught with a tale she had again escaped two torpedoes while 5 miles off the coast and lost herself in a smoke screen of her own making.

The Idaho, 994 tons, reported that for three days and nights a submarine had lurked astern attacking her while she steered a zig-zag course.

The Idaho's captain said at one time the submarine surfaced during the night and demanded in international code to know the ship's identity, but he refused to answer and ordered full speed ahead.

The most frequent comment among disembarking sailors of both vessels was:

"If we had only had a good gun."

Summary to Date.

The Pacific Coast situation looked this way:

Sunk: Montebello, 8,272 tons. Probably sunk: Emidio, 6,912 tons; Rosebank, 2,410 tons.

Attacked: Agwiworld, 6,770 tons; Larry Doheny, 7,033 tons; H. M. Storey, 10,763 tons; Samoa, 1,172 tons and Idaho, 994 tons. All the attacked ships were reported to have made port.

Weather Talk Dangerous.

Seattle, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—A broadcast of even such a chance remark as "how hard it rained this afternoon" might give vital information to America's enemies, the army's second interceptor command pointed out in a memorandum today.

Explaining why care must be used in dissemination of weather facts which might seem matter-of-fact to the layman, the command said:

"We know that an enemy is operating off our shores. He is in possession of certain weather information, of course, because he is actually out in the same weather which will reach us later on. As every amateur knows, the movement in these latitudes is common from west to east.

Temperatures Only.

"The enemy in planning an attack is in desperate need of confirmation from shore as to whether his calculations are correct. With the information he already has, every little fact he can pick up from us is invaluable, and may furnish the clew he needs as to the best day and hour for the attack.

"Even a light remark about 'how hard it rained here this afternoon' may be the tip-off on how fast the weather 'front' has advanced.

"Therefore, radio stations have been ordered to use nothing on weather except temperature forecasts (to warn against freeze damage and icy roads) and one or two other items. The enemy may have ways of getting this information to ships offshore, but at least let's not broadcast it to him."

JAPAN CHARGES U.S. ARMY ATROCITIES

Tokyo Radio has Started Propaganda Campaign Against Americans

New York, Dec. 24.—Japan has begun an atrocity propaganda campaign against the United States. For the past two days the official Tokyo radio has broadcast despatches of the official news agency Domei, charging misconduct by United States forces in the Philippines.

The broadcasts are recorded in New York. Presumably something similar has been broadcast within Japan and to other countries.

The first atrocity story, broadcast yesterday, said:

"A military spokesman revealed for the first time shameful details of the massacre of innocent Japanese non-combatants at Davao by American troops and civilians prior to the landing of Japanese forces in the southern Philippines.

'Respect Liquidated'

"This monstrous crime has liquidated the last vestige of respect formerly held for the armed forces of the United States.

"Nevertheless, it is the intention of the Imperial forces not to involve guiltless American lives in acts of retaliation.

"The spokesman disclosed that when Japanese forces landed at Davao they discovered 17,000 Japanese, including women and children and representing virtually the entire local community, imprisoned and without food—many of them on the verge of starvation.

"By prompt action Japanese forces succeeded in liberating about 12,000. Among the rest, about 40 were mass-lynched by Americans, while many others apparently were kidnaped and missing. Bullet-riddled bodies were mangled testimony that the retreating American troops had resorted to cold-blooded machine-gunning of their helpless victims."

Say Women Are Missing

This was followed by another Domei broadcast today:

"The spokesman of the army section of Imperial Headquarters, asked whether there were further details of the ignominous imprisonment and massacre by the Americans of Japanese residents at Davao, disclosed that the only additional information available thus far was that 6,000 Japanese still are missing, most of them women.

"He said the intentions of the Americans in abducting these women, including many young girls, is quite clear and offers further evidence of the depraved condition of the American armed forces in the Philippines."

The Japanese have claimed complete occupation of the city of Davao, on the south coast of Mindanao Island, site of a large Japanese settlement before the war.

Thai Minister Defends State's Capitulation

Pramoj Appeals To Americans To Withhold Judgment On Occupation By Japan

Washington, Dec. 24 (AP)—Thailand's Minister to the United States, M. R. Seni Pramoj, appealed today to the American people not to judge hastily his country's capitulation to Japanese armed might.

At a press conference he asserted that the Thai people have not yet been proven guilty of the accusation that their capitulation was prearranged and that Thailand has entered into an alliance with Japan.

"The evidence thus far available," he said, "comes only through dispatches furnished by the perfidious Japanese."

Japan Gives Pledge On American Diplomats

Correct And Liberal Treatment Promised In Note Sent Through Swiss

Washington, Dec. 24 (AP)—The State Department tonight received indirect word that Japan had promised to accord correct and liberal treatment to American diplomats and consular officials in that country.

The information was contained in a note dated December 23 handed to the American legation in Bern by the Swiss Foreign Office, which stated that it had received the information from the Swiss legation at Tokyo.

The Swiss note said the Japanese Government notified the American Embassy at Tokyo of its intention to accord a correct and liberal treatment, on the basis of reciprocity, to the staffs of the American Embassy and consulates in Japan, Manchoukuo and China, pending their departure.

REDS THREATEN TO CUT REAR OF NAZI FORCE

DEC 25 1941

1,000 Vehicles Left On Road As Tank Unit Flees

Two Trainloads Of Ammunition Said To Have Been Seized

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Correspondent

Moscow, Dec. 24—Ov snowy roads littered with hundreds upon hundreds of German vehicles, the Red army swarmed down tonight on Orel, 200 miles below Moscow, and on the ragged remnants of Col. Gen. Heinz Guderian's Second Tank Division.

Guderian himself—accounted Germany's wizard in armored warfare—was reported to have been pulled back to Germany from the Eastern front in the German high command shakeup which has seen the Nazi commander in chief, Field Marshal alther von Brauchitsch, replaced by Adolf Hitler, and the Moscow front commander, Field Marshal Fedor von Bock, reported succeeded by Field Marshal Siegmund Wilheln List.

The Russians, now in control of the Kaluga-Tula-Orel railway and highway system above Orel, were pushing the Germans west after occupying Odoev, sixty miles north of Orel, and were threatening to cut their rear.

Orel Strategically Important

Other Red army forces pushed toward Orel, strategically important communications center midway between Moscow and Kharkov, in a steadily developing counter-offensive.

What was left of the second Nazi Tank Division had fled to Orel after leaving at least 1,000 vehicles on the roads. These Nazi armored remnants were under the command of Guderian's chief aide, it was reported.

In the area above Orel the Soviet troops were reported to have taken ninety-four populated places in two days.

At Gorbachevo, rail junction occupied yesterday, they seized two trainloads of German ammunition and material and captured a fuel depot.

Inspired By Stalin Order

This whole tide of counter-assault south of Moscow, it was revealed today by Cavalry General P. Velov, was begun by his command which, inspired by a telephone call from Joseph Stalin, attacked the Germans east of Tula without waiting for the support of tanks.

DEC 25 1941

More casualty figures were given out today by the Russians: 1,650 Germans slain in two days in one sector of the Moscow front; 3,000 killed in four days in the bitter fighting below Leningrad, where the Nazis have been rolled back to the Volkhov river.

In the Crimea the violent battle for Sevastopol went on, but dispatches said that Germans trying to break the Russian defense line on a hill dominating the Black Sea port had been thrown back to their original positions.

Behind the lines Russia, preparing for the future, began the annual registration of all men between the ages of 18 and 50.

for Germany amid a developing crisis among the German high command.

Soviet advices said Guderian left his chief aide to command his defeated panzer divisions. His departure followed Hitler's return to Berlin from his eastern headquarters, his assumption of the high command by the ouster of Field Marshal General Walther von Brauchitsch, and reports that Field Marshal Fedor von Bock had been succeeded by Field Marshal General Siegmund Wilhelm List.

Calling Men 18 To 50

(A dispatch from Kuibyshev, Russia, said annual registration of all men between the ages of 18 and 50, starting immediately, was announced today, with the goal of keeping the Nazis from establishing a defense line that might serve as a springboard for a spring offensive.

(Besides its armies already in the field, the Soviet is preparing new armies behind the lines to maintain the drive along the whole front from Finland to the Black Sea, aiming to inflict the maximum possible losses on the Germans during the winter, which is closing in with increasing severity.)

Gorbachevo Recaptured

On the front, where the story was again one of Russian successes, Soviet forces earlier had announced capture of Gorbachevo, a railway junction 150 miles south of Moscow.

At the same time fresh successes were reported farther north, where Russian troops were said to be driving the Germans back across the Volkhov river.

Gorbachevo, forty-five miles southwest of Tula, is situated on the railway linking Moscow with Kharkov, industrial center of the Donets Basin. Its recapture is an important step toward reestablishing direct communications with the Donets area.

Izvestia said the Russians entering Gorbachevo seized two trainloads of ammunition and military equipment and captured a fuel depot.

Central Russian Forces Bear Down On Orel

DEC 25 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Moscow, Dec. 24—The Russian army of the center bore down today upon Orel, the important communications center 200 miles below Moscow and midway between this capital and the key city of Kharkov in the Ukraine, in an offensive of steadily rising power.

Red forces, said military dispatches, were pushing the Germans on to the west after occupying Odoev, some sixty miles north of Orel itself, and were threatening to cut off the rear Nazi columns.

The Germans were estimated to have left 1,000 vehicles on the roads about Odoev when the remnants of Col. Gen. Heinz Guderian's second tank division fled to Orel.

Guderian Leaves Front?

Guderian himself, the highly publicized expert in tank warfare, was reported to have left the eastern front

The communique announcing the taking of Gorbachevo said that the Russians had driven on westward about twenty miles beyond the rail line, capturing Odoev and a number of other towns. The highwater mark of the German advance in the Gorbachevo sector was well east of the Moscow-Kharkov railway.

The morning Soviet communique said that one Russian unit on the western front had killed 1,650 Germans in two days. Another unit, capturing several villages, reported annihilating 800 more German soldiers. The latest gains in material included seventy carts, thirty-six guns, 330 trucks and twelve tanks.

Leningrad Force Retreats

Reports from the Leningrad front that the Russians had crossed the Volkhov river at some points indicated the right wing of the German forces which for months had been holding the Soviet Union's second city in a grip of steel, had been driven back at least fifty miles. The river, southeast of Leningrad, links Lake Ilmen with Lake Ladoga.

At the extreme southern end of the long battle front heavy fighting on the Crimean Peninsula was reported by the Moscow radio, with the Russians repelling repeated German attempts to break through to Sevastopol.

Equipment Destroyed

The radio said that between December 17-20 pilots of Russia's Black Sea air arm had destroyed seven German tanks, fifteen armored cars, sixty trucks and much other equipment, and wiped out nine infantry companies.

Izvestia's Moscow front correspondent reported that Soviet troops had recaptured ninety-four populated places on the southern sector of the Moscow front during the past two days.

SOVIET GETS NEW ARMIES

Registration of Men 18 to 50 Will Start Immediately

KUIBYSHEV, Russia, Dec. 23 (Delayed) ((AP))—The annual registration of all men between the ages of 18 and 50, starting immediately ,was announced today.

The Soviet Union is preparing new armies behind the lines to maintain the drive along the whole front from Finland to the Black Sea, aiming to inflict the maximum possible losses on the Germans during the Winter, which is closing in with increasing severity.

Stalin's Telephone Call Inspired Cossacks

Moscow, Dec. 24—(AP)—A personal telephone call from Premier Stalin inspired the Russian cavalry to make the counter-attack which hurled the Germans back south of Moscow, Major General P. Belov wrote today in Pravda.

The tide turned, Belov said, when the Germans broke through the Tula sector and reached the village of Piatnitsa, 110 miles southeast of Moscow.

A counter-attack was ordered, supported by tank forces which were delayed in reaching the front.

Then, Gen Belov wrote, came the call from Premier Stalin informing Gen. Belov's forces that they were to be granted the title of First Cavalry Guard Corps for their successes in the Ukraine and on the Moscow front.

DEC 25 1941

Gen. Belov said that his cavalry took oath to a man to drive back the Germans to "Hitler's doghouse" and sprang their fierce charge at once without waiting for the tanks.

Finns Retake Island.

Helsinki, Dec. 24 (Official Radio Recorded by A. P.).—Finnish naval forces have retaken Suursaari Island, in the Gulf of Finland, seventy miles east of Helsinki, which the Russians had maintained as a base, the Finnish command said today. The Finns took over after the Russians withdrew and destroyed a considerable part of the dwellings on the island, a communique said.

The Helsinki air alarm sounded this morning when two Russian aircraft made a surprise attack over the Porkkala district. The communique said that the few bombs dropped did no damage.

Berlin Admits New Attacks.

Berlin, Dec. 24 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A. P.).—Continued Russian attacks which at some places drove gaps in German defense lines were reported today by the German High Command. The war bulletin said that these local breaches were broken off with heavy casualties by Nazi counter-attacks, and that German thrusts elsewhere broke up massed Red Army preparations for assault.

Much German action was aerial. The communique said that Moscow was raided overnight and that German planes struck at the Russians from icy Lake Ladoga to the Black Sea.

Oil supplies were reported set afire and railways hit in attacks on the Black Sea port of Tuapse. Other Russian rail lines on the southern front were said to have been bombed.

The Germans said that Russian columns crossing the ice on Lake Ladoga were bombed heavily, day and night. Russian artillery batteries were said to have been silenced by bombs, and hits were reported on supply trains on the line north to Murmansk.

ALL WEARABLES FOR COLD NAZIS

London, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—The German radio announced today that all German tailors, dressmakers, furriers, hatters, glovemakers and underwear manufacturers have been ordered to turn their entire production into supplies for the German Army on the cold Russian front.

BRITISH POUND BENGASI GATES, CAIRO ASSERTS

Push On After Capture Of Airdromes At Benina And Barce

DEC 25 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Dec. 24—British troops fought at the gates of Bengasi tonight after capturing the big Axis airdromes of Benina and Barce, and Gen. Erwin Rommel's battered Panzer units apparently were trapped in their desperate flight toward Tripoli.

Four shattered Italian divisions were at Bengasi and their annihilation or capture was regarded as a foregone conclusion.

The high command said that British armored vanguards "appear to have cut off the retreating Germans south of Bengasi from the Italian forces remaining in that port. . . . Our forces are rapidly completing their occupation of Cirenaica."

Hammered By RAF

Other Axis columns which escaped from Cirenaica into Tripolitania, the western division of Libya, were hammered relentlessly by RAF planes operating all the way to Tripoli. Considerable casualties were inflicted and many troop-laden convoys and stores were destroyed, an RAF communique said.

In addition, the tattered Axis columns were confronted by a British patrol standing athwart the coastal road 150 miles inside Tripolitania.

[London military commentators predicted a swift British drive 400 miles across the desert to Tripoli itself, the big Axis African base, as a knockout blow to Premier Mussolini's empire.]

Hundreds Of Prisoners Taken

Hundreds of Axis prisoners and great quantities of abandoned war equipment was seized in the British onrush.

The communique announcing these successes dropped all military caution by naming the participating British units and the sectors in which they were attacking.

Benina and Barce were the last major Axis airdromes in eastern Libya.

Benina, only twelve miles east of Bengasi, was occupied by the Royal Horse Artillery, and Barce, forty miles to the northeast, was taken by a Central India Horse Regiment. These units and others then sped on to Bengasi.

Pursued By Noted Regiment

On the Antelat-Agedabia road which dips south of Bengasi toward Tripoli, the retreating Germans and Italians were pursued by one of Britain's most famous regiments, the Coldstream Guards, the Royal Armored Corps and South African armored cars also were in action there.

Near the Tripolitania border another British unit inflicted more casualties on the routed Germans and destroyed a batch of Axis trucks and gasoline wagons.

Another unit swept deep into Tripolitania to destroy a number of enemy aircraft at Magrun airport.

Far to the rear of the British near the Egyptian border small Axis garrisons still were holding out at Salum and Bardia. The British expected to deal with these pockets later, and expressed doubt whether the besieged men had enough water to last them for long.

DEC 25 1941

Supply Problem Difficult

London observers, who believed the British would sweep on to Tripoli, conceded that the question of supply was a difficult one for such an extended haul over the desert.

But their view was that the British could not await the chance of Axis reinforcements being poured into Tripoli for a counter-offensive such as General Rommel produced last spring.

Control of the Italian territory clear to the French North African border would give the British unquestioned military advantages in the Mediterranean where the Royal Navy thus far has been successful in sinking many Axis supply and troop transports bound for Libya.

The Italian high command acknowledged strong British attacks between Barce and Bengasi, and the German command said that Nazi troops had destroyed two British batteries and eight tanks in an unidentified sector.

BRITISH NEARING BENGASI CAPTURE AN AXIS AIRPORT

Benina, 12 Miles From Goal, and Barce Are Taken—Nazis Still Flee.

Cairo, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—British forces, rapidly completing their occupation of Cirenaica, have captured the important Axis airdrome at Benina, 12 miles east of Bengasi, and the stronghold of Barce, about 40 miles further east, the British announced today.

An imperial headquarters communique indicated that the army of Nazi Gen. Erwin Rommel, in headlong retreat westward, was showing signs of disintegration.

While the slower-moving main body of British forces were occupying Barce and the Benina airdrome, it said, faster, hard-hitting British armored van guards appear to have cut off retreating Germans south of Bengazi from Italian forces remaining in that port.

The war bulletin said that it still was impossible to tally Britain's accumulation of Axis prisoners and material, but that "one small, mobile column alone took 500 prisoners yesterday and among masses of enemy material abandoned yesterday were found seventeen more enemy tanks."

Coldstream Guards Take Part.

Making a rare departure from cautious custom, the communique not only named the specific units in the British drive—among them the Coldstream Guards, one of Britain's most illustrious regiments—but also told just where they were operating. Such precise information, observers commented, scarcely would be divulged to an enemy deemed capable of utilizing it.

An Axis holdout garrison at Barce had been by-passed by the British vanguards pressing to keep pace with the German and Italian flight and the communique said it now had fallen to the Central India Horse Regiment.

Indian and British troops are pressing forward toward Bengazi in this area, the bulletin added. Bengazi is the Axis last major position west of Tripoli and the British had expected Rommel to attempt a stand there.

Mobile columns which occupied the Benina Airdrome included the British Rifle Brigade and Royal Horse Artillery, headquarters disclosed.

It said columns of the Coldstream Guards, the Royal Armored Corps and South African armored cars were attacking along the forty-mile line southwestward from Antelat to Agedabia, near the coast of the Gulf of Sirte. Antelat is about seventy-five miles southeast of Bengazi.

Berlin, Dec. 24 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A. P.).—A German spokesman said today that British planes, raiding the Reich last night, dropped incendiaries and explosive bombs at several places in western Germany.

Strong Motor Attack.

Rome, Dec. 24 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A. P.).—Strong British motorized attacks on Italian troops between Barce and Bengasi were reported today by the Italian High Command.

The Rome war bulletin said the British were attacking repeatedly in that area, south of Barce, "with the intention of hindering" Italian troop movements.

The communique asserted that British attacks on Italian holdout positions at Salum, just inside the Egyptian frontier, and on the desert to the south had been repulsed.

Of the Bardia area across the border from Salum, where other Italian forces still are reported holding on, the High Command said there was "nothing special to report."

German flyers were said to have shot down three British planes and bombed British objectives.

The Italians said an Italian plane, attacked by three British planes near the Libyan-Egyptian frontier, shot down one British plane and reached its base with five members of its crew wounded.

Malta Has Two Severe Raids

Valletta, Malta, Dec. 24 (AP)—Two severe raids were made on Malta today in a sharp intensification of the air attack on this British Mediterranean island naval base just south of Italy.

Three German bombers were brought down during the two attacks and one other was declared "probably destroyed."

British Smash At Axis Bases At Tripoli Is Predicted

DEC 25 1941

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 24—A swift British sweep across the desert for an attack on Italian bases around Tripoli to smash the entry ways for Axis reinforcements to North Africa was predicted widely tonight.

Military commentators declared that although Gen. Erwin Rommel's remaining German mechanized forces would try to fight their way through British lines now athwart their route of retreat, their plight seemed desperate.

The Italian divisions attempting a stand near Bengasi were regarded here as even more surely doomed.

Escape Doomed

One source said this force—the remnant of four divisions left with little or no mobile or arsenal equipment—had no choice except a futile fight, surrender, or an attempt to escape by sea that would prove to be "another Dunkirk."

Observers said that, even if General Rommel's forces broke through to the west, they probably would find their caches of fuel and supplies destroyed by the British patrol which already has penetrated 150 miles into Tripolitania.

Difficulty Conceded

It was pointed out here that the capture of Barce and Benina gave the British possession of the last major air base in eastern Libya. This, it was said, would force German and Italian planes to risk the use of improvised fields liable to sudden capture, or cause them to withdraw to bases in Tripolitania.

The British conceded that they would face difficulties in bringing up supplies for operations into Tripolitania, but said these difficulties would be increased greatly if the Axis had time to mass large air forces around Tripoli.

Reports have been recurrent that major units of the Italian fleet have been moving out of port and that more German submarines have been sent into the Mediterranean—perhaps marshalling both sea and air forces for an attempt to bomb and torpedo a path through the British blockade for large reinforcements to Tripolitania.

'Plane Carrier' Claimed By Nazis Is Supply Ship

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Dec. 24 (Official Broadcast).—The British aircraft carrier which a German submarine reported last week to have sunk in the Atlantic was identified today by the German high command as the Unicorn.

At the same time the high command declared other undersea boats had sent 23,500 tons of British shipping—three merchant vessels and a large tanker—to the bottom of the Atlantic between Gibraltar and England.

(The Unicorn is not an aircraft carrier but a 14,000 tons fleet air arm supply and repair ship laid down in 1939 and not previously reported in action.)

(The British denied officially yesterday that any of their aircraft carriers had even been attacked, but said an auxiliary vessel had been torpedoed while "on air protection duties with a convoy.")

"The British warship which was sunk by a submarine under Comdr. Bigalk has been ascertained to be the aircraft carrier Unicorn," the German communique said. "She is one of the latest ships of this kind, finished during the war and registered in British naval lists as a flying boat carrier."

broke the peace of Christmas Eve tonight by shelling the Kentish coastal district.

Children were singing Christmas carols at some of the towns along the white cliffs of the Dover Strait when the guns across the water at Cap Gris Nez opened up full throat.

DEC 25 1941

Shells thundered across the moonlit channel during two periods of fifteen minutes each.

Buildings were shaken, but the caroling went on.

London, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—British bombers attacked the naval base and German warships at Brest and objectives at Cologne last night, the Air Ministry announced today. Other points in western Germany also were bombed, the Air Ministry said.

In Occupied France, aircraft attacked docks at Dunkirk and Calais, and, in Belgium, the port at Ostend. One bomber was reported missing. The Air and Home Security Ministries issued this communique today:

"Early last night a few enemy aircraft flew over coastal districts of England. Bombs which were dropped damaged some houses and caused a small number of casualties."

NAZIS TELL OF COAST FORTS

'Complete Base for Operations Against Britain' Finished

New York, Dec. 24—(AP)—The British radio today quoted a German propaganda broadcast as saying that intensive fortification works along the Atlantic coast of Europe had been completed after 18 months, furnishing "a complete base and support for offensive operations against Britain."

DEC 25 1941

The broadcast, recorded by CBS, quoted the Germans as saying that new naval and air bases had been created, many new batteries set up, bomb-proof shelters for submarines built and camouflaged shelters erected for land troops.

This will give the Germans not only an offensive base, but greater security against invasion of Europe, the German radio said.

Axis Craft Torpedoed Off North Spain Coast

Large Fleet Auxiliary Hit By Aircraft, London Reports, In 30-Hour Pursuit

London, Thursday, Dec. 25 (AP)—The Air Ministry announced today that Beaufort aircraft of the Coastal Command torpedoed a large enemy fleet auxiliary off the north coast of Spain yesterday.

"This tanker," the communique said, "had been continuously pursued and attacked by aircraft of the Coastal Command for over thirty hours."

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24—War Department communiqué No. 26, outlining the military situation up to 9:30 A. M., follows:

1. Philippine Theatre—During the night the enemy landed in heavy force in the vicinity of Atimonan, seventy-five miles southeast of Manila on th Island of Luzon. The Japanese troops in this region are debarking from approximately forty transports.

Several enemy transport troopships have appeared off Batangas, south of Manila, indicating the probability of an attempted landing in that region.

Heavy fighting continues in the area of Lingayen Gulf, where the enemy is exerting great pressure. American and Philippine troops, though greatly outnumbered, are stubbornly resisting attacks.

Enemy air activity has been intense during the past twenty-four hours, with several raids over Manila and the port area.

2. There is nothing to report from other areas.

War Department communiqué No. 27, outlining the situation as of 5 P. M., follows:

1. Philippine Theater—The commanding general, United States Army Forces in the Far East, reports that Japanese troops today landed in two additional areas on the Island of Luzon. One landing was accomplished near Mauban, about thirty miles north of Atimonan, where troops landed last night. The other landing was effected near Nasugbu in Batangas Province, on the west side of Luzon, 50 miles southwest of Manila. The size of these forces has not yet been determined.

Beachheads previously seized by the invaders are being rapidly enlarged as landing forces are augmented.

Heavy fighting continues near the Lingayen Gulf, where the main invasion effort is being made. Though American and Philippine troops are greatly outnumbered, they are offering stiff resistance to the Japanese forces in a series of delaying actions.

It is estimated that at least 100 enemy transports, in several convoys, are now in waters around the Philippine Islands. Each of these fleets of troopships is accompanied by strong naval and air escort.

Intense enemy air activity continues in the Manila area. Consideration is being given to the withdrawal of the Commonwealth Government and military forces from Manila. This would make it possible to declare Manila an open city and spare the civilian residents unnecessary casualties from aerial bombardment.

2. There is nothing to report from other areas.

Navy communiqué No. 17, based on reports received up to 9 A. M., follows:

Atlantic Theatre—There are no new developments to report.

Eastern Pacific—The S. S. Larry Doheny was shelled by an enemy submarine, but reached port safely. Press reports of the sinking of the S. S. Montebello are confirmed.

Central Pacific—Radio communication with Wake has been severed and the capture of the island is probable. Two enemy destroyers were lost in the final landing operations.

Palmyra Island was shelled by an enemy submarine. Damage was negligible. There were no casualties. Johnston Island was also shelled by an enemy submarine with no damage to material and no casualties resulting.

The Hawaiian area was quiet.

Far East—There are no new developments to report.

DEC 25 1941

MANILA, Dec. 24 (AP)—Headquarters of the United States armed forces in the Far East issued this communiqué at 4 P. M.

Very heavy fighting continues on the north and south fronts. In both areas our troops are resisting stubbornly. The enemy continues to land reinforcements.

In order to spare Manila from any possible air or ground attacks consideration is being given by military authorities to declaring Manila an open city during this war, as was done in the case of Paris, Brussels, Athens, Rome and other capitals.

British

SINGAPORE, Dec. 24 (AP)—A British headquarters communiqué today said:

There has been some skirmishing on the northwestern front of Malaya. Elsewhere on the peninsula there is nothing to report.

The enemy bombed Ipoh [in Perak] yesterday, causing some damage.

A number of Japanese warships and transports have been reported off the coast of Sarawak. They are being attacked by sea and air, and so far three large troop transports and one tanker have been sunk by allied forces.

Extensive routine reconnaissance is being carried out by our aircraft. During the twenty-four hours ending at 5 P. M., Dec. 23, the enemy kept up his pressure on our positions at Hong Kong, accompanied by intensive bombardments on our troops and positions.

In spite of a report from Hong Kong describing the situation as "materially unchanged," some ground in the Repulse Bay area has been given up, but in the central part of the island a party of Royal Marines recaptured a position which had been overrun Monday night.

There are indications that pressure by Chinese troops and guerrillas in the New Territories already is having some effect on Japanese efforts against Hong Kong.

HONG KONG, Dec. 24 (Reuter)—A communiqué issued at 9:45 A. M. announces:

A further Japanese advance since the last communiqué and slight enemy penetration in the direction of Mount Cameron is being firmly held. Our lines are intact.

A communiqué issued at 3 P. M. today states:

Contact has been maintained along the whole front, minor patrol encounters ending in our favor.

Our position on Mount Cameron is being maintained.

Naval oil fuel tanks are in enemy hands. Kowloon has been set ablaze and is still burning.

RANGOON, Burma, Dec. 23 (delayed) (AP)—A British communiqué said today:

British and American fighters dispatched to intercept Japanese bombers, fifty to sixty of which, escorted by fighters, approached Rangoon from the south and east at about 10:10 o'clock.

The fighters caught the raiders just before they reached the city. When attacked by the interceptors, the raiders broke formation. A number of bombers, however, reached their objectives, which appeared to be Mingaladon and docks. Slight damage was sustained at the former, including a block of buildings and a small quantity of fuel destroyed.

The R. A. F. sustained some casualties to the ground staff.

Brilliant work of the fighters resulted in the destruction of nine bombers and one fighter, with several so damaged they were unlikely to reach their base.

On their return flight the enemy again was attacked by our fighters and further loss was inflicted. Three fighters were lost in the engagement, but one pilot who escaped by parachute and was machine-gunned by the enemy, is safe.

Local anti-aircraft crews went into action for the first time and did well in their first baptism of fire.

A patrol of our troops became engaged with enemy forces at Messiar.

They succeeded in shooting them up without sustaining casualties.

Messiar is a village on the Burma-Thailand border.

Japanese planes, which did not appear to fly at a great height, could be clearly seen in the cloudless sky. The first volley of anti-aircraft fire crashed right into their midst and shattered one to bits. Another hurtled into the air in flames in full view of the populace.

In some places Japanese pilots came down low over the street and machine-gunned pedestrians.

DEC 25 1941

CAIRO, Dec. 24 (AP)—The British Middle East Command issued this communiqué today:

Our forces are rapidly completing their occupation of Cyrenaica. In the north the Central India Horse have occupied Barce and Indian and British troops are pressing on in this area toward Bengazi.

The important airport of Benina, some twelve miles east of Bengazi, has been occupied by one of our mobile columns which includes a Rifles brigade and Royal Horse Artillery. Farther south, columns of the Coldstream Guards, Royal Armored Corps and South African armored cars are attacking the retreating enemy between Antelat and Agedabia.

Columns appear to have interposed themselves between the retreating Germans in this area and Italian forces which remain in the Bengazi area.

It is still impossible to give any accurate estimate of captured material and prisoners, but one small mobile column alone took 500 prisoners yesterday and among the masses of enemy material abandoned yesterday were found seventeen more enemy tanks.

Our air forces continue their increasing attack against retreating enemy columns. In particular, on the road between Agedabia and El Agheila they destroyed and burned out many motor vehicles, including a number of petrol tank wagons, causing a number of casualties to enemy personnel.

Another of our mobile columns contributed by destroying a number of enemy aircraft on the Sidi Magrun landing ground while a patrol of the Twelfth Lancers, attacked by enemy aircraft near Antelat, shot down one.

The R. A. F. Middle East Command issued this communiqué today:

Extensive operations on the lines of the westward retreat of the enemy into Tripolitania were carried out by our aircraft Monday.

Motorized convoys laden with troops and stores successfully attacked on the Sirte-Misurata road and to the west of El Agheila. Petrol tankers and lorries were destroyed and a number of others were damaged. Considerable casualties were inflicted on enemy troops.

Bomber aircraft of the S. A. A. F. raided a landing ground at the area of Philaenorum between En Nefilia and El Agheila while fighters of the S. A. A. F. attacked enemy aircraft on the airdrome at Sidi Magrun. At the latter objective eight enemy aircraft were destroyed.

During Monday night the airdrome at Castel Benito, south of Tripoli, was again raided. Hits were obtained on dispersed aircraft hangars and administrative buildings and a number of fires broke out. One of our aircraft is missing from these and other operations.

LONDON, Dec. 24 (AP)—The Air Ministry issued this communiqué today:

Last night the naval base and German warships at Brest were again attacked by aircraft of the Bomber Command. Another force attacked objectives at Cologne and elsewhere in Western Germany.

Small forces bombed docks at Ostend, Dunkerque and Calais. One aircraft of the Bomber Command is missing from these operations. An aircraft of the Coastal Command is missing from patrol yesterday.

DEC 25 1941

Netherland

BATAVIA, Netherlands Indies, Dec. 24 (AP)—The Netherlands Indies Command issued this communiqué today:

At one point in our outer possessions enemy bombers were spotted. They were, however, driven off by our fighters before they had an opportunity to drop their bombs.

An attack by a strong formation of Japanese bombers, mentioned in an earlier communiqué, was carried out by twenty-six planes which dropped high explosive and incendiary bombs on an airdrome. These aircraft, however, were swiftly driven off by our fighters. Runways were seriously damaged by the raid.

In connection with an earlier report of an attack on Davao by planes of the Royal Netherland Navy it can now be announced that the enemy tanker which was set on fire was larger than 10,000 tons. A direct hit scored on this ship was made with a bomb weighing half a ton.

Furthermore, direct hits were scored with bombs on warehouses on the quays of Davao Harbor.

During the action Netherland aircraft were attacked by enemy fighters and heavily shelled by anti-aircraft guns. One of the flying boats sustained such damage that it had to come down on the sea. The crew was picked up by a flying boat landing close to the damaged aircraft, which sank shortly afterward. All other aircraft returned to the reporting point.

As already announced, one of our submarines during the night of Dec. 23-24 attacked one enemy tanker and three large transport ships northwest of Borneo. All these ships were still under way during the attack and therefore had no opportunity to land their troops, war materials or supplies.

It may be assumed that considerable losses in men and material were inflicted on the enemy.

While carrying out reconnaissance a naval flying boat was attacked by a number of fast Japanese warplanes. As a result the fuselage and petrol tanks of the Netherland flying boat were seriously damaged. The plane, however, managed to shake off its pursuers and carried out its mission.

In view of the fact that the fuselage was seriously damaged the boat would have filled if it had landed on the sea. Therefore, somewhere in the Northeast Indies, a landing was made close to shore. The flying boat was immediately dragged onto the beach. After temporary repairs had been made to the fuel tank the aircraft took off and returned to its base.

Russian

MOSCOW, Dec. 24 (AP)—The Soviet information bureau issued this communiqué today:

During the night of Dec. 23-24 our troops fought the enemy on all fronts.

One unit operating in one of the sectors of the southwestern front in one day's fighting captured twelve tanks, ten guns, 300 trucks, a large fuel depot and many shells and mines.

In another sector of the front our men dislodged the Germans from several villages and captured fourteen machine guns and annihilated 800 enemy men and officers.

A unit commanded by Lieutenant Ivanoff under cover of darkness approached unnoticed an enemy flank and opened machine-gun and mine-thrower fire. The Germans took to flight, abandoning seven guns, two machine guns and other armament.

DEC 25 1941

MOSCOW, Thursday, Dec. 25 (AP)—The Soviet information bureau issued the following communiqué today:

During Dec. 24 our troops fought the enemy on all fronts.

In a number of sectors of the Western, Kalinin and Southwestern fronts our troops had fierce engagements with the enemy and continued to advance, occupying a certain number of localities.

During Dec. 23 twenty German planes were destroyed. We lost four planes. On Dec. 24 nine German planes were brought down in air combat near Moscow.

German

BERLIN, Dec. 24 (from German broadcast recorded by The Associated Press)—The German High Command said today:

In the east the enemy again yesterday continued his attacks with the bloodiest losses. Some local breaches were eliminated by counter-attacks by our troops.

At other points enemy preparations for attack were frustrated by our attacks.

On the northeastern coast of the Black Sea fighter airplanes set fire to oil supplies and railways in the port of Tuapse and made several successful attacks on enemy railway transport lines in the southern section of the eastern front.

Strong detachments of our air force intervened in land fighting and inflicted heavy losses on the enemy in men and material. Soviet columns on the ice of Lake Ladoga were bombed by day and night. In the most northern region fighter planes bombed out of action enemy batteries and destroyed supply trains on the Murmansk railway.

Night attacks of our air force were directed against Moscow.

In the war against Great Britain submarines have sunk four enemy merchant ships, including a large tanker aggregating 23,500 tons.

The British warship which was sunk by a submarine under Commander Bigalk has been ascertained to be the aircraft carrier Unicorn. She is one of the latest ships of this kind, finished during the war and registered in British naval lists as a flying boat carrier.

In North Africa fighting is continuing. In the course of a determined counter-attack German troops destroyed two British batteries and eight tanks.

German fighter planes dispersed concentrations of the enemy in Northern Cyrenaica.

Two British pursuit planes were shot down over Malta and a big flying boat over the Mediterranean elsewhere.

Last night the British air force dropped high explosive and incendiary bombs at places in Western Germany and the occupied regions of the west. Damage is insignificant. The enemy lost two bombers.

Finnish

DEC 25 1941

HELSINKI, Finland, Dec. 24 (from Finnish broadcast recorded by The Associated Press)—The Finnish High Command issued this communiqué today:

Karelian Isthmus—Slow harrassing fire and repulse of a few enemy patrols.

Svir River Front—Patrol activity.

Eastern Front—Sparse harrassing fire. Several enemy patrols were destroyed or repelled.

Naval Front—Suursaari Island, which the enemy had equipped as a base, has been manned by action of our naval units. On his withdrawal the enemy destroyed a considerable part of the dwelling houses on the island. The enemy had turned the island church into a stable.

Air—This morning an air alarm was sounded in Helsinki and other places as a result of a surprise attack by two enemy aircraft which took advantage of favorable weather conditions to raid the Porkkala district. The aircraft dropped a few bombs which did no damage. They bore the red star of the Soviet air force.

On the land fronts unsuitable weather has limited air activity during the past few days and on occasion caused a complete halt.

Thanks to a slight improvement in weather our aircraft yesterday made a few bombing raids on the Murmansk railway north of Maaselkaa, scoring direct hits with heavy bombs on the track. In addition our aircraft subjected enemy horse vehicle and automobile columns to fire. In an air fight in the central isthmus behind the enemy lines our fighters shot down two enemy aircraft without loss to themselves.

Italian

ROME, Dec. 24 (from Italian broadcast recorded by The Associated Press)—The Italian High Command issued this communiqué today:

In Cyrenaica fighting has recommenced in the area south of Barce. Motorized enemy units repeatedly attacked our troops with the intention of hindering their movements.

An enemy attack on the Solum front has been repulsed. In the Bardia area there is nothing special to report.

German air formations bombed military objectives on land with good results. The enemy lost three planes which were shot down by German fighters.

An Italian reconnaissance plane was attacked by three Hurricanes near Matruh and shot one of them down. Five of the crew were wounded when the plane returned to its base safely.

Rumors of Invasion Of Spain Are Nazi Ruse, London Says

Report of Marshal Petain's Resignation Also Declared To Lack Confirmation

DEC 25 1941

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 24.—A Foreign Office commentator labeled rumors of an impending German invasion of Spain a Nazi ruse today and said there was nothing to confirm either such a move or a report that Marshal Petain had resigned as French Chief of State.

His statement came amid speculation over Germany's next undertaking, spurred by Hitler's assumption of command of the Nazi armies and a Reuters report that Marshal Petain had yielded his leadership to Admiral Jean Darlan, Vice Premier, under intensified German pressure, presumably to get a French North African base or for other collaboration concessions.

The commentator said it seemed evident that the Germans themselves were spreading rumors of a Nazi campaign in the Iberian Peninsula "probably with a view to producing another of those German nerve wars with which we have become so familiar."

He declared "there is no confirmation whatever of these reports" and said that any similar crop of rumors about an immediate Nazi thrust against Turkey should be treated with similar reserve.

He put the report of Petain's replacement by Darlan in the same category, and said, moreover, that it appeared to have been denied in Vichy.

Foe's Capacity Doubted

In some quarters it was suggested that German military capacity was insufficient for an immediate new military adventure into the Iberian Peninsula, but the Germans would have good reason for starting a war of nerves.

Observers and military writers called attention to the increased tempo of air raids against Malta and speculated on the possibility that its capture might be the first attempt by the Axis in the winter campaign to wrest the control of the Mediterranean from the British and turn the tables in Libya.

DEC 25 1941

Denied By Vichy

They said the Axis could better spare planes and small forces of parachute troops for an invasion of Malta than big armies for operations elsewhere.

The Reuters report, which came from "somewhere in Europe," was denied by a Vichy news agency, which quoted authoritative sources as calling it ridiculous.

True or not, the report spread as Spain and Turkey, at opposite ends of the Mediterranean, were figuring in speculation over Germany's next move.

Advices in Bern, Switzerland, yesterday said German troops were moving through occupied France to join previously collected Nazi contingents on the Spanish border. Considerable military equipment was reported to have been piling up there over a period of months.

Subsequently, at the other end of the Mediterranean, Istanbul reports said Germans there had been advised by their embassy to be ready to close their businesses "for a short time" in January. The British took that to be part of a German "war of nerves" to keep the Turks—and others—uneasy.

Petain Reported Stalling

Behind Petain's reported resignation lay an agreement generally believed here to have been forcd from him by Reichs Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering at St. Florentin December 1. At that time Petain allegedly promised the Germans all the bases they wanted in French Africa provided these could be reached without using interned remnants of the French fleet. Since then Petain has been pictured as stalling the Germans with all sorts of excuses for failing to make good on the agreement because public opinion in French Africa was not ready for the step and because he wanted to judge the outcome of the British Libyan offensive.

DEC 25 1941

Success of that offensive, which British say may soon drive the German armies in North Africa to the Tunisian border, is believed by observers here to have caused Berlin to put extreme pressure upon France to open a back door of escape from Tripolitania through French North Africa, as well as opening an avenue of supplies to the German troops in Libya.

One Hypothesis

That the Germans may have decided to operate in French North Africa with or without French consent and that Petain resigned by way of an ineffectual protest is one hypothesis advanced here.

The story pieced together in London was that Admiral Darlan, vice-premier and strong man in the Petain regime, would step up as the real ruler of a Nazi-dominated French government. Darlan is regarded by British and Free French observers here as a willing German puppet.

Clarification of the situation was thought possible tonight, when Petain delivers a Christmas Eve radio address to war prisoners at 8 P. M. French time (2 P. M., E.S.T.).

Free French Comment

Free French headquarters said they lacked official word of any resignation by Petain, but added they had reason to believe such a step imminent.

One commentator said if it were true then "Free France faces the greatest civil crisis since the revolution."

Darlin, this source asserted, has a momentarily powerful following of political hangers-on, "but his unpopularity with the masses amounts to a detestation ominous for the future of his rule."

Turk-Nazi Pact Hinted

DEC 25 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Istanbul, Turkey, Dec. 23 (Delayed). A usually reliable official source said today that German Ambassador Franz von Papen gave President Ismet Inonu of Turkey categorical assurances yesterday that Germany was not planning an attack on Turkey.

A reported regrouping of German air strength in Greece and Italy following the sudden German retreat in Russia had given rise to fears in many quarters here that such an attack might be imminent.

Word came from other sources close to the Government that Turkish, German and Bulgarian representatives signed a treaty at Sofia today for the completion of new bridges over rivers along the Turkish-Bulgarian frontier.

Destroyed Last Spring

The bridges were destroyed last spring at the time of the German attack on Yugoslavia and Greece and the Turks, not wholly satisfied with explanations that they were wanted for purely commercial purposes, were hesitant about permitting their reconstruction.

The unofficial informant said Papen renewed German protestations of friendship for Turkey and said talk of any attack was malicious propaganda.

Night Is Darker, Petain Declares In Yule Message

Vichy, Unoccupied France, Dec. 24 (AP) — Marshal Petain told the French in tones of deep melancholy tonight that "the night grows darker over the world—peace is further off than ever."

In a Christmas Eve message addressed primarily to France's prisoners of war in Germany, the old Chief of State deplored the extension of fighting to new continents and "the every-day bereaving of thousands of families."

He said his hopes of reuniting most of the French prisoners with their families by this Christmas had been dashed, but he assured the soldiers he was working for their liberation "by showing our vanquishers of yesterday how much you seem to us to be worthy of esteem."

(The broadcast appeared to prove that rumors of Petain's resignation, under German pressure for fulfillment of his Dec. 1 agreement with Marshal Hermann Goering, were at last premature. In London, a foreign office spokesman charged Wednesday that the Nazis were pushing these rumors and others of an impending German invasion of Spain and perhaps French North Africa as a "war-of-nerves" ruse. The rumors of Petain's resignation had been circulated by the British news agency, Reuters; the reports of a German troop movement to the Spanish border came from Switzerland. The latter persisted today, the Gazeta De Lausanne hearing one unconfirmed report that the Germans had crossed the Spanish border).

PETAIN EXPECTS EXTENDED WAR

He Tells People Prisoners' Release Is Distant.

DEC 25 1941

Vichy, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—In a pessimistic Christmas message to his conquered nation, Chief of State Marshal Petain declared today that peace is farther off than ever and said that the families of France still were broken up by German detention of prisoners of war.

He said in his message, which was addressed principally to those French prisoners, that the war had been extended by the outbreak of hostilities in the Far East between Japan and the United States and Britain.

Working for Prisoners.

The Marshal told the prisoners that his hopes that they could be released and returned to their homes by this Christmas had been disappointed, but he assured his former soldiers that he was working for their liberation.

This was being done, he said, "by showing our vanquishers of yesterday how much you seem to us to be worthy of esteem."

While still hopeful of seeing the prisoners repatriated, Marshal Petain said of the world situation:

"The war has not finished. On the contrary it has taken a considerable extension, ravaging new continents and every day bereaving thousands of families. Night grows darker over the world. And the much desired peace is further off than ever."

Paper Hints Brauchitsch Declined Responsibility

DEC 25 1941

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 24—(AP)—The newspaper, National Zeitung, of Basel, suggested today that Field Marshal General Walther von Brauchitsch had relinquished the post of Commander-in-Chief of the German Armies because he did not want to take responsibility for past events or events to come.

The newspaper asserted that several other high officers of the German Army had resigned in the shape-up in which Adolf Hitler assumed the supreme command in person.

Paris Press Chides Vichy.

Berne, Switzerland, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—The German-controlled Paris press carried editorials today severely criticizing the Vichy Government as indications pointed to increased political tension between Germany and France.

The newspapers called upon the Government to "make up its mind and choose definitely one way or the other."

The Berlin correspondent of the Basler Nachrichten said that there was no definite progress in ending the tension which has prevailed since Reichsmarshal Goering met Marshal Petain, French Chief of State, December 1.

Rumors were heard in some European capitals that Marshal Petain was considering resigning but there was no outward sign in Vichy.

The Basler Nachrichten said that in Berlin the hurried return of Otto Abetz, German envoy in Paris, to the German capital was a great sensation.

The paper also said that while German-French negotiations were apparently stalled, Italy appeared prepared for considerably closer contact with France.

FRENCH PRODUCING PLANES FOR NAZIS

London, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—The Imazagine Aeroplane said today that "definite news now is available" that the French aircraft industry is producing Messerschmitts, Focke-Wulfs, Junkers, Dorniers and other German first-line planes for the German Air Force. "A total of 2,038 German machines is on order," the magazine said.

"There are many indications that the Nazis planned to transform occupied France into a war arsenal greater than Italy in particular since they recognized that the industrial capacity of greater Germany was not sufficient for a long total war."

GOEBBELS ASKS NAZIS ABROAD TO HOLD FIRM

DEC 25 1941

Broadcast Plea Adds There Will Be No German Breakdown

[By the Associated Press]

Bern, Dec. 24—Paul Joseph Goebbels, Germany's Minister of Propaganda, appealed openly tonight to Germans in countries abroad to "remain at your posts!"

". . . You pioneers," he said, "serve our Fatherland."

Acknowledging that they would have to see their films in secret and to gather in secret, he assured his invisible column of listeners that "time will not witness a German breakdown" as in 1918.

But, he admitted, the German task at home is not easy either because of the air raids in many areas.

Addressed Also To Troops

Goebbels' radio speech was addressed not only to the Germans abroad but to all soldiers and to the home front.

Asserting that the restrictions in the third Christmas of war were much more severe in Germany than ever before, he said the task requires "everyone's efforts, not only the soldiers."

It was the third time in a week that the little Minister had appealed for more war effort at home.

To the soldiers and the German column abroad, he said: "You must be strong until the victory is ours."

Voices Belief In Führer

"The Führer can rely on us," cried Goebbels. "He leads, we follow. Let us believe in our Führer and fight for him for victory and peace."

He spoke three days after Hitler had assumed complete military direction of his land armies by replacing his army commander in chief, Field Marshal Walther von Brauchitsch.

Goebbels disclosed that even Germany's Christmas candles had been sent to the Eastern front "because our soldiers need them badly."

Tin Soldiers Lacking

"Our tin soldiers," he went on, "are lacking because we need the material for better purposes."

But, he added, if Germans had no material gifts to offer "we will have to lay more stress on moral things."

At one point Goebbels said: "We Germans are not always loved . . . we are frequently prosecuted and hated abroad. . . . We are minorities suffering anti-German propaganda."

But, he added, Germans could have the consolation that their own cities had not been so thoroughly destroyed as the cities of enemy countries.

He called upon his hearers to be thankful for past victories and said this Christmas "our soldiers can sit and chat of home as long as the situation permits them to do so."

"You often live in a completely strange not to say hostile world. It is not surprising that you are not very popular outside your own country, for Germany is fighting for her vital rights.

"There is no one who tonight does not lift his eyes upward. War has taught us not only to be strong in the face of the enemy but also to be humble in the face of destiny."

Goebbels said "our gifts were very small this year" and added that even "our Christmas tree candles were sent to the front, where our soldiers needed them more."

"Our children," he said, "have no lead soldiers nor small guns because our factories had more important things to make for the front."

Typhus In Spain?

DEC 25 1941

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 24—A British radio commentator said in a broadcast heard here tonight by CBS that "there is reason to believe that Spain is in the grip of a typhus epidemic," and that it was therefore unlikely that Adolf Hitler was planning a drive through that country now.

"There are too many German soldiers down with typhus in Russia for Hitler to risk sending more troops into fresh danger of that kind," the announcer observed.

GOEBBELS FINDS OUTSIDERS HOSTILE

But Says Nazis Will Fight On to Victory.

London, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—German Propaganda Minister Paul Goebbels declared today in a radio broadcast from Berlin that Germany will hold out until victory had been won.

Addressing Germans abroad, Goebbels said:

95 FRENCH JEWS SHOT BY GERMANS

Hostages Executed Because of Attacks on Nazis.

Bern, Switzerland, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—The Paris correspondent of the Berne newspaper, La Suisse, said today that ninety-five Jews held by Nazi authorities in occupied France as hostages for attacks on Germans had beeen executed and that five others were freed on grounds that they had committed no offense.

The Germans announced on December 14 that 100 "Jewish communists and anarchists" in occupied France would be shot in retaliation for "recent attacks against the occupation troops." The Petain Government issued a communique protesting the order, which, it said, "provokes profound uneasiness among Frenchmen."

POPE SUBMITS PEACE OUTLINE IN FIVE POINTS

DEC 25 1941

He Asks End of Aggression, Minority Oppression and Monopolies.

SUGGESTS ARMS LIMITATIONS

Says There Must Be No Religious Persecutions in World of the Future.

Vatican City, Dec. 24 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A. P.).—Pope Pius XII, in his annual Christmas eve message to the world, laid down a five-point plan for future world peace, predicated upon "an adequate and progressive" limitation of armaments.

The Pontiff, broadcasting over the Vatican radio, said that in the world of the future there must be no place for:

1. Any kind of aggression.
2. Oppression of minorities.
3. Designing nations seeking a monopoly on economic wealth.
4. Total war or armaments races.
5. Persecution directed against religious sects or churches because faith "is one of the rights of mankind."

Warning of Aftermath.

Christmastide rejoicing, the Pope said, "resounds in strident contrast with the events about us whose roar over hill and dale creates a terrifying fracas, devastating land and homes . . . and throwing millions of men and their families into unhappiness, misery and death." He said that he looked with anguish not only on the horrors of the struggle, but at its wasteful cost.

While the health and strength of youth are weakened by "the present scourge," His Holiness lamented, debts are rising to undreamed-of levels and must inevitably lead to a contraction of "the forces of production in the civil and social field." The message was the Pope's customary reply to Christmas greetings from the College of Cardinals.

"The very idea of force," he said, "stifles and perverts the rule of law and offers the possibility and free opportunity to individuals and to social or political groups to violate the property and the rights of others and permits all the other destructive forces to upset and agitate the civil atmosphere until it becomes a raging tempest and you shall see the notions of good and evil or right and injustice lose their well-defined outlines, become blunted and confused and finally threaten to disappear."

DEC 25 1941

No Road Open.

Those who look to the future with the genuine good at heart may not look lightly on these things, the Pope said.

"Faced with this view of the present," he went on, "men sense a feeling of bitter disappointment which has invaded their very hearts, especially since there appears today to be no road open to agreement between the belligerent parties, whose reciprocal war aims and programs would seem to be irreconcilable."

When the causes are sought for the calamities of the present, the Pope said, "the opinion is frequently ventured that Christianity had failed in its mission," but Christianity—"that Christianity which is true and faithful"—has not failed, he declared.

However, in its stead, he said, men "have fashioned Christianity to their liking, a new idol which does not save, which is not opposed to the passions of carnal desires nor to the greed for gold and silver which fascinates, nor to the pride of life; a new religion without a soul or a soul without religion, a mask of dead Christianity without the spirit of Christ. . . ."

"There must be a progressive limitation of armaments," he said. "True respect for treaties must be observed."

Millions Are Suffering.

Pope Pius said that millions of persons were separated from their families and suffering great pain and sorrow while "harsh violence rages all over the world like a storm." The pontiff spoke of "men who have turned from Christ" and of souls without faith, with the result that "all of civilization's values are endangered."

His Holiness said that "the whole earth is awaiting the triumph of Christ."

"We are torn with anguish for your sufferings," he went on, referring to "the new order which must arise out of the war," saying that "this new order must be based on moral principles."

Freedom and Equality.

"There can be no new order without freedom and equality of rights of all people," the Pope said. "It is for the great Powers to collaborate so that no fresh evils may arise for mankind."

"It is not the first time," he said, "that people are involved in a fight for something which they think will be a new and better order and for which people have been thrown into misery which, in fact, turns out to be a stupid, vain distortion." The principles of freedom and equality of rights for all people must underlie that new day.

"Great responsibilities for the future of mankind rest on statesmen of the world," he said. "We need men of courage, vision and conscience to reconstruct the world."

The Pope outlined a program for the world when its great States organize it in the "interest of all," when there is respect for the rights of minorities, just control of its raw materials "so no nation shall suffer unfairly" and when there "is no place for oppression." Now, he said, "there is an unbridled impulse toward expansion, the idea that force creates right."

"In some countries," he declared, "the atheist, anti-Christian idea of State is spreading its tentacles. The war, far from mitigating these evils, aggravates them.

"The ruins of this war are only too evident."

DEC 25 1941

Five-point Plan of 1939.

In his Christmas Eve address of 1939, Pope Pius XII outlined the following conditions for peace:

A guaranty of independence for all nations, strong or weak.

Disarmament, mutually accepted, organic and progressive, both in the letter and spirit.

Establishment of an international body empowered to correct and revise treaties so as to avoid arbitrary, unilateral breakings and interpretations of treaty terms.

That "the real needs and just demands of nations and peoples" be dictated by a sense of acute responsibility that measures and weighs statutes according to the holy, unbreakable rules of divine law.

Pontiff Cites Principles Of Lasting Peace

Christmas Eve Message Of Pope Filled With Distress

DEC 25 1941

Denounces Godlessness

Vatican City, Dec. 24 (Official Broadcast Recorded by AP)—In a Christmas Eve message filled with distress for the world's suffering and foreboding for the future, Pope Pius XII enunciated today five principles he said all mankind must observe to "guarantee for all peoples a just and lasting peace."

His message and blessing were delivered before the College of Cardinals, gathered in their customary Christmas greeting to the Pontiff, and broadcast by radio throughout the world.

The Pope's five points for a "new order founded on moral principles" essentially made a demand for a post-war halt to offensive arming and a Bill of Rights for the little man, the little nation and the little minority.

But even before they can be realized, he said, there must be a return to the true ideals of Christianity, a breach with the prophets of "a new religion without a soul or a soul without religion, a mask of dead Christianity without the spirit of Christ."

"Within the limits of a new order founded on moral principles," Pope Pius said, "there is no room for the violation of the freedom, integrity and security of other states.

"There is no place for open or occult oppression of the cultural and linguistic characteristics of national minorities, for the hindrance or restriction of their economic resources, for the limitation or abolition of their natural fertility.

"There is no place for that cold and calculating egoism which tends to hoard the economic resources and materials destined for the use of all to such an extent that the nations less favored by nature are not permitted access to them.

"Within the limit of a new order founded on moral principles, once the dangerous sources of armed conflicts have been eliminated, there is no place for a total warfare or for a mad rush to armaments . . . It is essential to proceed with sincerity and honesty to a progressive limitation of armaments.

"There is no place for the persecution of religion and of the church . . . for faith is not only a virtue, it is also the divine gate by which all the virtues enter the temple of the soul."

The way to that new age is arduous and dangerous, the Pope said, but he declared the alternative is war and "the calamity of a World War, with the economic and social ruin and the moral dissolution and breakdown which follows in its trail, should not be permitted to envolep the human race for a third time."

The Pope lamented what he called "a Godless and anti-Christian conception of the state" in some countries which, he said, fetters the individual, depriving him almost of all independence.

He returned to this several times, saying he felt "obliged, in the name of truth, to say a word about it," and professed himself unable to explain why "in some parts of the world countless legislative dispositions bar the way to the message of the Christian faith."

The Pope said he looked with "a depressing anguish . . . as if in a dream . . . upon the terrible armed and bloody conflict which has marked this year now drawing to a close" and on the untold misery and ruin it has left.

He warned that such undreamed-of cost has mounted that those who regard the future must be anxious lest it contract the forces of constructive production.

"The very idea of force," he said "stifles and perverts the rule of law . . . permits all the destructive forces to upset and agitate the civil atmosphere until it becomes a raging tempest and you shall see the notions of good and evil, of right and justice, lose their well-defined outlines, become blunted and confused and finally threaten to disappear."

Text of Official Translation of the Pope's Christmas Eve Broadcast

By The Associated Press.

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 24 — The following is the official English translation of Pope Pius XII's Christmas Eve broadcast to the world:

DEC 25 1941

In the dawning light of the Holy Feast of the Nativity of Our Divine Saviour, an occasion anticipated always with a lively sense of pride and penetrating joy, as men again prepare to bow down and kneel in adoration before the ineffable mystery of the merciful bounty of God, who in His infinite charity wished to offer to humanity as His greatest and most august gift His only begotten son, our heart goes out to you, beloved sons and daughters in every corner of the earth, and our thoughts, while not abandoning this world, are raised above it to penetrate the heavenly realms.

The star which served as the guiding light to the cradle of the new-born Redeemer even after twenty centuries is still marvelously resplendent in the skies of Christianity.

The Gentiles raged and the nations met together against the Lord and against His guidance.

Star of Comfort and Hope

In the face of human strifes and tempests the light of that star has never faded. It is not fading now and it will never fade. To it belongs the past, present and future. That shining light has admonished us never to despair. It shines on people even when on the earth, as in an ocean raging in a storm, there is an intensification of those sinister whirlwinds which are the source and origin of widespread carnage and misery.

Its light is the light of comfort, of hope, of immovable faith of life and of certainty in the ultimate triumph of the Redeemer which will overflow as a torrent of salvation for the interior peace and glory of all those who, raised to the supernatural order of grace, will have received the power of becoming children of God because they are born of God.

We, therefore, who in these bitter times of warring upheaval are tortured by your tortures and sorrowed by your sorrows, we who live with you under the awful incubus of a scourge which is tearing at humanity for still a third year, wish to speak to you from our paternal heart on this vigil of the solemn feats of Christmas to exhort you to remain always strong in your faith and to share with you the comfort of that very real, superabundant and elevating hope and certainty which radiates from the crib of the newborn Saviour.

Humanity Rending Itself

Indeed, beloved children, if our eyes were to be no longer focused about material and carnal things they would scarcely find any reason for comfort. True, the bells ring out their joyous message of Christmas. The churches and oratories are alight, religious chants brighten men's spirits; all is festal and decorative in the sacred temples, but humanity goes on tearing itself to pieces in a war of extermination.

In the sacred ceremonies of this holy season the church echoes the beautiful antiphon "Rex pacificus magnificatus est cuix vultum desiderat universa terra" —"the King of Peace upon whose countenance all men desire to gaze has been glorified"—the first antiphon of the vespers of the Feast of the Nativity.

But this resounds in strident contrast with the events about us, whose roar over hill and dale creates a terrifying fracas, devastating lands and homes over wide areas and throwing millions of men and their families into unhappiness, misery and death.

To be sure, there are many admirable demonstrations of indomitable valor in the defense of rights and of native soil, of serenity in the sorrow of souls living through holocaustal flames for the triumph of truth and justice. But it is indeed with a depressing anguish that we recall and, as if in a dream, look upon the terrible armed and bloody conflict which has marked this year now drawing to a close, upon the unhappy lot of the wounded and of the prisoners of war, upon the corporal and spiritual sufferings, the carnage, the destruction and ruin which aerial warfare leaves in its wake in large and populous cities and in vast industrial centers.

Nations' Resources Depleted

It is with that same anguish that we look upon the depleted resources of nations and upon the millions of people who are being hurled into a state of misery and total exhaustion by this ruthless conflict and by its brutal violence.

And while the strength and health of a great part of youth which was in the process of maturing are being weakened through the privations imposed by the present scourge, the war expenditures and debts are rising to levels never dreamed of before.

Such large-scale disbursements, giving rise as they must to a contraction of the forces of production in the civil and social field, cannot but be the basis for serious anxiety on the part of those who turn their thoughts with preoccupation toward the future.

The very idea of force stifles and perverts the rule of law, offers the possibility and free opportunity to individuals and to social or political groups to violate the property and the rights of others and permits all the other destructive forces to upset and agitate the civil atmosphere until it becomes a raging tempest, and you shall see the notions of good and evil, or right and injustice, lose their well-defined outlines, become blunted and confused and finally threaten to disappear.

Those who, by virtue of the Pastoral Ministry, are enabled to penetrate the depths of men's hearts, know and see what an accumulation of sorrows and unspeakable anxieties take root in many souls and diminish therein the longing for the enjoyment of labor and life; sorrows and anxieties which suffocate men's spirits and render them silent and indolent, suspecting, and almost devoid of hope in the face of the events and requirements of the times.

No Visible Road to Accord

These are anxieties of the soul which no one may take lightly if he has at heart the genuine good of peoples and desires to promote a return in the near future to normal and ordered conditions of life and action. Faced with this view of the present, men sense a feeling of bitter disappointment which has invaded their very hearts, especially since there appears today to be no open road to agreement between the belligerent parties whose reciprocal war aims and programs would seem to be irreconcilable.

When the causes of the present calamities are examined, causes which leave mankind perplexed, the opinion is frequently ventured that Christianity has failed in its mission. Whence comes such an accusation and by whom is it made? Would it be from those Apostles who were the glory of Christ? From those heroic and zealous exponents of faith and justice? From those pastors and priests, heralds of Christianity, who in suffering persecutions and martyrdom brought about the civilization of barbarous peoples and prostrated them in devotion before the altar of Christ? Would it be that such an accusation was made by those noble men who initiated the Christian civilization, who saved the remnants of the wisdom and art of Athens and Rome, who united peoples in the name of Christ, who taught wisdom and virtue, who raised the cross above the airy pinnacle and vaults of the cathedrals, those replicas of heavenly beauty and monuments of faith and piety which still elevate their lofty and venerable towers in the midst of the ruins of Europe? Would it be they who make that accusation?

Christianity Has Not Failed

No! Christianity, whose force derives from Him who is the way, the truth and the life and who is with it and shall remain with it until the consummation of the world, has not failed in its mission but men have rebelled against that Christianity which is true and faithful to Christian [here three words were garbled] its doctrine.

In its place they have fashioned Christianity to their liking, a new idol which does not save, which is not opposed to the passions of carnal desires nor to the greed for gold and silver which fascinates, nor to the pride of life; a new religion without a soul or a soul without religion, a mask of dead Christianity without the spirit of Christ. And they have proclaimed that Christianity has failed in its mission!

Let us burrow deeply into the conscience of modern society. Let us seek out the root of the evil. Where does it thrive? Here again, of course, we do not wish to withhold the praise due to the wisdom of those rulers who either favored always or who desired and were capable of restoring to their place of honor, to the advantage of the people, the values of Christian civilization in the amicable relations between Church and State, in the safeguard of the sanctity of marriage, in the religious education of youth.

But we cannot close our eyes to the sad spectacle of the progressive dechristianization, both individual and social, which from moral laxity has developed into a general state of weakness and brought about the open denial of truth and of those influences whose function it is to illuminate our minds in the matter of good and evil and to fortify family life, private life and the public life of the State.

DEC 25 1941

Religious Anemia Grips World

A religious anemia, like a spreading contagion, has so afflicted many peoples of Europe and of the world and has created in their souls such a moral void that no spurious and pharisaical religious organization and no national or international mythology will serve to fill this emptiness.

Is it not true that for decades and centuries past men have directed their every thought, word and deed to their sworn objective of tearing from the hearts of our young and old alike their faith in God, the Creator and father of all, rewarder of good and avenger of evil? And have they not striven for the accomplishment of this goal through a process of radical change in education and instruction, opposing and oppressing by every art and means the diffusion of the spoken and printed word, and by the abuse of scientific knowledge and political power the religion and the church of Christ?

For the human spirit, overwhelmed in the confusion of this moral abyss, by its alienation from God and Christian practices, no other course remained but that of turning all its thoughts, purposes and enterprises and every evaluation of men's possessions, actions and labor and directing them to the material world, striving and sweating with might and main to spread out in space, to surpass all previous accomplishments in the attainment of riches and power, to engage in a competition of speed, to produce in greater quantity and quality everything that material advancement and progress seemed to require.

Effect of Material Striving

Hence we witnessed in the political sphere the prevalence of an unrestrained impulse toward expansion and mere political advantage, to the disregard of moral principle; in the field of economics the domination of great, gigantic enterprises and trusts; in social life, the uprooting and crowding of masses of the people in distressing and excessive concentration in the great cities and centers of industry and commerce, with all the uncertainty which is an inevitable consequence when men in large numbers change their home and residence, their country and trade, their attachments and friendships.

DEC 25 1941

It followed from all this, then, that the contact and relationship between men in their social life took on a character that was purely physical and mechanical, with a contemptuous disregard for every reasonable moderation and consideration. The rule of external compulsion, mere possession of power, overruled the norms of right and order governing human association and community life, which, emanating from God, determine the natural and supernatural relationship that should prevail in the coexistence of law and love as applied to the individual and to society.

The majesty and dignity of the particular social groups became a dead letter, degraded and suppressed by the idea that might makes right. The right to private property became, for some, a power to be used for the exploitation of the labor of their fellowmen; in others that right enkindled a spirit of jealousy, intolerance and hatred; and the organization that resulted therefrom was converted into a powerful weapon to be used in conflict by the contending parties to gain the advantage for their particular interests.

Bondage of the Individual

In some countries a godless and anti-Christian conception of the State bound the individual to itself with its vast tentacles in such a way as to almost deprive him of all independence, and this no less in his private than in his public life.

Who today can be surprised that such radical opposition to the principles of Christian teaching has finally found its outlet in so intense a clash of internal and external enmities as to lead to the extermination of human lives and the destruction of worldly goods?

The spectacle which we are now beholding with such profound sorrow is the unhappy consequence and fruit of the social condition we have described. The war, far from arresting this influence and development, promotes it, accelerates it and spreads it with increasing ruin the longer it endures, rendering the catastrophe still more general.

DEC 25 1941

From our words, directed against the materialism of the past century and of the present time, it would be wrong to deduce a condemnation of technical progress.

No, we do not condemn that which is a gift of God, who, just as He causes the bread-yielding wheat to rise from the sod of the earth, has also hidden in the bowels of the earth from the time of the world's creation treasures of fire, of metals, of precious stones to be uncovered by the hand of man for his needs, for his works and for his progress.

The church, mother of so many universities of Europe, while continuing to exalt and gather together the most fearless masters of the sciences and explorers of nature, does not fail at the same time to bear in mind that all God's gifts and the very freedom of the human will itself can be used in a way to merit praise and reward, or blame and condemnation. Thus, it has happened that the spirit and the tendency with which technical progress was often put to use have brought it about that in our time technology must expiate its error and be, as it were, its own avenger by producing instruments of destruction which destroy today what it had erected yesterday.

Sole Indicated Remedy

In the face of the enormity of the disaster which has had its origin in errors we have indicated there is no other remedy than that of a return to the altars, at the foot of which numberless generations of the faithful in former times drew down upon themselves divine blessings and moral strength for the fulfillment of their duties, a return to the faith which enlightened individuals and society as a whole, and indicated to them their respective rights and duties, a return to the wise and unshakable norms of the social order which, in affairs of national as well as international import, erect an efficacious barrier against the abuse of liberty and against the misuse of power.

But the recall of these beneficent sources must be especially loud, persistent and universal in that hour when the old order will be about to give way and cede its place to the new.

The future reconstruction will present and offer very valuable opportunities to advance the forces of good but it will also be fraught with the danger of a lapse into errors which will favor the forces of evil and there will be demanded prudent sincerity and mature reflection, not only by reason of the gigantic difficulty of the task but also because of the grave consequences which, in the case of failure, would result in both material and spiritual spheres.

There will be required broad intellects and will, strong in their purposes; men of courage and enterprise, but above and before all, there must be consciences which, in their planning, in their deliberations and in their actions, are animated, moved and sustained by a lively sense of responsibility and which do not shrink from submission to the holy laws of God.

Judgment of St. Augustine

For if, to the vigor which shapes the material order, there be not united in the moral order the highest reflection and sincere purpose, then, undoubtedly, we will see verified the judgment of St. Augustine: "They run well but they have left the track; the farther they run the greater is their error for they are going ever farther from their course."

Nor would it be the first time that men who, in the expectation of being crowned at war's end with the laurel wreath of victory, have dreamed of giving to the world a new order by pointing out new ways which in their opinion lead to well-being, prosperity and progress. Yet whenever they have yielded to the temptation of imposing their own interpretation, contrary to the dictates of reason, moderation, justice and the nobility of man, they have found themselves disheartened and stupified in the contemplation of the ruins of deluded hopes and miscarried plans.

Thus, history teaches that treaties of peace stipulated in a spirit and with conditions opposed both to the dictates of morality and to genuine political wisdom have had but a wretched and short-lived existence, and so have revealed and testified to an error of calculation. Human, indeed, but fatal nonetheless.

Cooperation for Peace

Now the destruction brought about by the present war is on so vast a scale that it is imperative that there be not added to it also the further ruin of a frustrated and deluded peace. In order to avoid so great a calamity it is fitting that in the formulation of that peace there should be assured the cooperation, with sincerity of will and energy, with the purpose of a generous participation not only of this or that party, not only of this or that people, but of all people, yea, rather of all humanity. It is a universal undertaking for the common good which requires the collaboration of all Christendom in the religious and moral aspects of the new edifice that is to be constructed.

We are, therefore, making use of our right; or better, we are fulfilling our duty as today, on this eve of the Holy Feast of Christmas, the divine dawn of hope and of peace for the world, with all the authority of our apostolic ministry, and with the fervent impulse of our heart, we direct the attention and the consideration of the entire world to the dangers which lie in wait to threaten a peace which is to be the well-prepared basis for a truly new order and which is to fulfill the expectation and desires of all peoples for a more tranquil future.

New Order of Moral Law

Such a new order, which all peoples desire to see brought into being after the trials and the ruins of this war, must be founded on that immovable and unshakable rock, the moral law which the Creator Himself has manifested by means of the natural order and which He has engraved with indelible characters in the hearts of men: that moral law whose observance must be inculcated and fostered by the public opinion of all nations and of all States with such a unanimity of voice and energy that no one may dare to call into doubt or weaken its binding force.

Like a shining beacon, this moral law must direct by the light of its principles the course of action of men and of States, and they must all follow its admonishing, salutary and profitable precepts if they do not wish to abandon to the tempest and to ultimate shipwreck every labor and every effort for the establishment of a new order.

Consequently, recapitulating and integrating what we have expounded on other occasions, we insist once again on certain fundamental conditions essential for an international order which will guarantee for all peoples a just and lasting peace and which will be a bountiful source of well-being and prosperity.

Within the limits of a new order founded on moral principles there is no room for the violation of the freedom, integrity and security of other States, no matter what may be their territorial extension or their capacity for defense.

Duty of the Powerful States

If it is inevitable that the powerful States should, by reason of their greater potentialities and their power, play leading roles in the formation of economic groups comprising not only themselves but also smaller and weaker States as well, it is, nevertheless, indispensable that in the interests of the common good they, as all others, respect the rights of those smaller States to political freedom, to economic development and to the adequate protection, in the case of conflicts between nations, of that neutrality which is theirs according to the natural, as well as international, law.

In this way, and in this way only, shall they be able to obtain a fitting share of the common good and assure the material and spiritual welfare of the peoples concerned.

Within the limits of a new order founded on moral principles, there is no place for open or occult oppression of the cultural and linguistic characteristics of national minorities, for the hindrance or restriction of their economic resources, for the limitation or abolition of their natural fertility. The more conscientiously the government of the state respects the rights of minorities, the more confidently and the more effectively can it demand from its subjects a loyal fulfillment of those civil obligations which are common to all citizens.

Resources Must Be Shared

Within the limits of a new order founded on moral principles, there is no place for that cold and calculating egoism which tends to hoard the economic resources and materials destined for the use of all to such an extent that the nations less favored by nature are not permitted access to them.

In this regard, it is for us a source of great consolation to see admitted the necessity of a participation of all in the natural riches of the earth, even on the part of those nations which in the fulfillment of this principle belong to the category of "givers" and not to that of "receivers."

It is, however, in conformity with the principles of equity that the solution to a question so vital to the world economy should be arrived at methodically and in easy stages, with the necessary guarantees, drawing useful lessons from the omissions and mistakes of the past.

If, in the future peace, this point were not to be courageously dealt with, there would remain in the relations between peoples a deep and far-reaching root, blossoming forth into bitter dissensions and burning jealousies, and which would lead eventually to new conflicts. It must, however, be noted how closely the satisfactory solution to this problem is connected with another fundamental point which we shall treat next.

DEC 25 1941

No Place for Total War

Within the limit of a new order founded on moral principles, once the more dangerous sources of armed conflicts have been eliminated, there is no place for a total warfare or for a mad rush to armaments. The calamity of a world war, with the economic and social ruin and the moral dissolution and breakdown which follow in its trail, should not be permitted to envelop the human race for a third time.

In order that mankind be preserved from such a misfortune it is essential to proceed with sincerity and honesty to a progressive limitation of armaments. The lack of equilibrium between the exaggerated armaments of the powerful States and the limited armaments of the weaker ones is a menace to harmony and peace among nations and demands that an ample and proportionate limit be placed upon production and possession of offensive weapons in proportion to the degree in which disarmament is effected.

Means must be found which will be appropriate, honorable and efficacious in order that the norm "pacts must be observed" will once again enjoy its vital and moral function in the juridical relations between States.

Such a norm has undergone many serious crises and has suffered undeniable violations in the past and has met with an incurable lack of trust among the various nations and among their respective rulers. To procure the rebirth of mutual trust, certain institutions must be established which will merit the respect of all and which will dedicate themselves to the most noble office of guaranteeing the sincere observance of treaties and of promoting, in accordance with the principles of law and equity, necessary corrections and revisions of such treaties.

Difficulties to Be Overcome

We are well aware of the tremendous difficulties to be overcome and the almost superhuman strength and good will required on all sides if the double task we have outlined is to be brought to a successful conclusion. But this work is so essential for a lasting peace that nothing should prevent responsible statesmen from undertaking it, and cooperating in it with abundant good will so that, by bearing in mind the advantages to be gained in the future, they will be able to triumph over the painful remembrances of similar efforts doomed to failure in the past and will not be daunted by the knowledge of the gigantic strength required for the accomplishment of their objective.

DEC 25 1941

Within the limits of a new order founded on moral principles, there is no place for the persecution of religion and of the Church. From a lively faith in a personal and transcendent God, there springs a sincere and unyielding moral strength which informs the whole course of life; for faith is not only a virtue, it is also the divine gate by which all the virtues enter the temple of the soul and it constitutes that strong and tenacious character which does not falter before the rigid demands of reason and justice.

This fact always holds true, but it should be even more evident when there is demanded of the statesman, as of the least of his citizens, the maximum of courage and moral strength for the reconstruction of a new Europe and a new world on the ruins accumulated by the violence of the World War and by the hatred and bitter disunity among men regarding the social question which will be presented in the post-war period in a form more acute than ever.

Faith in a Personal God

Our predecessors, and we ourselves, have set forth principles for its solution. It is, however, well to bear in mind that these principles can be followed in their entirety and bear their fullest fruit only when statesmen and peoples, employers and employes, are animated by faith in a personal God, the Legislator and Judge to whom they must one day give an account of their actions; for while unbelief which arrays itself against God, the Ruler of the universe, is the most dangerous enemy of a new order that would be just, on the other hand, every man who believes in God is numbered amongst his partisans and paladins.

Those who have faith in Christ, in His divinity, in His law, in His work of love and of brotherhood among men, will make a particularly valuable contribution to the reconstruction of the social order.

All the more priceless, therefore, will be the contribution of statesmen who show themselves ready to open the gates and smooth the path for the Church of Christ so that, free and unhindered, it may bring its supernatural influence to bear in the conclusion of a peace among nations and may cooperate with its zeal and love in the immense task of finding remedies for the evils which the war will leave in its wake.

For this reason we are unable to explain why it is that in some parts of the world countless legislative dispositions bar the way to the message of the Christian faith while free and ample scope is given to a propaganda that opposes it, youth is withdrawn from the beneficent influence of the Christian family, alienated from the church, educated in a spirit contrary to the teachings of Christ and imbued with ideas, maxims and practices which are anti-Christian, the work of the church for the care of souls and for charitable enterprises is rendered arduous and less efficacious while its moral influence on individuals and on society is disregarded and rejected.

All these forms of resolute opposition, far from being mitigated or eliminated in the course of the war, have, on the contrary, in many respects become even more marked.

Spirit of Church's Foes

That all this, and even more, should be continued in the midst of the sufferings of the present time is a sad commentary on the spirit which animates the enemies of the church in imposing upon the faithful, already bearing many heavy sacrifices, the irksome and the troublesome burden of a bitter anxiety which weighs upon their consciences.

We love, and in this we call upon God to be our witness, we love with equal affection all peoples, without any exception whatsoever, and in order to avoid even the appearance of being moved by partisanship we have maintained hitherto the greatest reserve.

But the measures directed against the church and their scope are of such a nature that we feel obliged, in the name of truth, to say a word about it, if only to eliminate the danger of unfortunate misunderstandings amongst the faithful. We behold today, beloved children, the God Man, born in a manger to restore man to the greatness from which he had fallen through his own fault and to place him once again on the throne of liberty, of justice and of honor which centuries of error and untruth had denied him.

The foundations of that throne shall be Calvary. It shall be enriched, not with gold or silver, but with the blood of Christ, the divine blood which has overflowed upon the world for twenty centuries to give a scarlet hue to the cheeks of His spouse, the church, and which, in purifying, consecrating, sanctifying and glorifying its children, takes on the brilliance of heaven.

O Christian Rome, that blood is your life. By reason of that blood, you are great and even the ancient ruins of your pagan greatness are seen in a new light and the codices of the juridical wisdom of the praetors and the Caesars are purified and consecrated. You are the mother of higher and more human justice which does honor to you, to your See, and to those who hear your voice.

You are the beacon of civilization and civilized Europe and the world owes to you all that is most sacred and most saintly, all that is most wise and most honorable.

In the exalted tradition and proud history of their peoples, you are the mother of charity. Your splendor, your monuments, your hospices, your monasteries, your convents, your heroes and your heroines, your voyages and your missions, your generations and your centuries, with their schools and universities, all bear testimony to the triumphs of your charity, that charity which embraces all, suffers all, hopes for all, becoming all things to all men, consoling and comforting all, curing all and recalling them to that liberty given them by Christ, uniting all peoples in the peace of brotherly love, that charity which brings together all men, regardless of country, language or custom, into one united family and makes of the entire world one common fatherland.

From this Rome, center, rock and teacher of Christianity, from this city called eternal by reason of its relation with the living Christ rather than because of its association with the passing glory of the Caesars; from this Rome, in our ardent and intense longing for the welfare of individual nations and of all humanity, we direct our appeal to all beseeching and exhorting that the day be not delayed in which, wherever today hostility against God and Christ is dragging men to temporal and eternal ruin, a fuller religious consciousness and new and higher objectives may prevail, and that on that day there may shine resplendently over the manger of the new order among peoples, the guiding star of Bethlehem, herald of a new order that will rouse all mankind to sing with the angels, "Glory to God in the highest," and to proclaim as the gift bestowed at last by Heaven upon the nations of the earth, "peace to men of goodwill."

Blessing to All Mankind

At the dawning of that day with what great joy will nations and rulers, freed in mind from the fear of the insidious dangers of further conflict, transform the swords, nicked and jagged from constant use against their fellowman, into plows with which to furrow the fertile breast of the earth under the sun of heavenly benediction and to wrest from it their daily bread dampened, now by the sweat of their brows but no longer bathed in blood and tears of sorrow! In expectation of that happy day, and with this longing prayer upon our lips, we send our greeting and our blessing to all our children of the entire universe.

May our benediction descend in more generous measure on those priests, religious, and lay persons who are suffering pain and anguish because of their faith. May it also descend upon those who, though not members of the visible body of the Catholic Church, are near to us in their faith in God and in Jesus Christ and share with us our views with regard to the provisions for the peace and its fundamental aims.

May it descend with a quickened heartbeat of affection upon all those who are groaning under the weight of the sadness and the cruel anguish of the present hour.

May it be a shield to the soldiers under arms, a healing remedy to the sick and wounded, a comfort to the prisoners, to those expelled from their native land, to those who are far from their homes and loved ones, to those deported to foreign lands, to the millions of wretched who, at every hour, must bear up under the gnawing pangs of hunger.

May it be a sweet balsam to all sorrow and misfortune, a support and consolation to all the suffering and needy as they wait in expectation of a friendly word that may infuse into their hearts strength, courage and the comforting sense of compassion and fraternal assistance.

Finally, may our blessing rest upon those whose hands have been extended in mercy and in a spirit of generous and inexhaustible sacrifice to provide us, above the limitations of our own, with the means which have enabled us to assuage the tears and allay the poverty of many, especially of the most wretched and abandoned victims of the war and in this way to make them realize how divine goodness and loving kindness, which have their highest and most surpassing revelation in the Infant of the Manger, who by His poverty wished to make us rich, never cease in all the vicissitudes of time and misfortunes to live and have their practical exemplification in the Church.

To all we impart, with profound paternal love and from the fullness of our heart, the Apostolic Benediction.

Emergency in India.

Calcutta, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—A state of emergency was proclaimed today in the Bengal presidency, the region of India closest to Burma, which has been subjected to heavy Japanese air assault.

Eire To Stay Neutral, DeValera Declares, Unless Under Attack

DEC 25 1941

Dublin, Thursday, Dec. 25 (AP)—Eamon DeValera, Prime Minister of Eire, told Americans in a Christmas broadcast today that his country must hew to its course of neutrality to save its unity—"unless we are attacked."

Now, he said, Eire is "united as perhaps never before in history. Unless we are attacked, any change from neutrality would destroy this unity."

He continued:

"It is our duty to Ireland to try to keep out of war. And with God's help we hope to succeed."

He assured Americans that "in the difficulties that lie ahead you have the understanding and sympathy of our people."

Should Eire be attacked, he said, "our people and our friends everywhere in the world will already have known our determination to resist and that to the utmost of our ability."

Bishop of London Sees No More Isolationism

London, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—The United States never again will be solationist, in the opinion of the Bishop of London. In a diocesan leaflet he wrote:

"When the time comes to reconstruct, America will take its full share and responsibility without question. It will be easier to deal with a defeated Japan than a Japan bought off by appeasement, he added.

SON FINDS RING IN MOTHER'S CAKE

London, Dec. 24 (A. P.).—Months ago, Mrs. A. A. Vial of Greytown, Natal, was helping to mix cakes for the troops abroad when she missed her wedding ring. A note was enclosed with each of 150 cakes which had gone out, asking the finder to return the ring.

This week she received a letter from her son, Sergt. Ronnie Vial, saying that he had found it.

First Trial Blackout Staged In Reykjavik

Icelandic Government Cooperates With U. S. And British Forces In Practice Alarm

Reykjavik, Iceland, Dec. 20 (Delayed, AP)—Shadows of Europe touched Reykjavik and the surrounding country as the Government, cooperating with United States and British armed forces, staged Iceland's first trial blackout last night.

Anti-aircraft guns fired in puny competition to the northern lights and American soldiers and marines took up defensive positions in a realistic drill.

Police spent a pleasant hour firing large firecrackers supposed to simulate bombs.

Bullitt Attends Service

BETHLEHEM, Palestine, Thursday, Dec. 25 (AP)—The Chapel of St. Catherine, adjoining the Church of the Nativity, was filled to capacity early today as the Latin Patriarch intoned the pontifical mass that precedes the ringing of Bethlehem's bells and the ceremonial unveiling of the Babe.

William C. Bullitt, United States special envoy to the Middle East, making his first pilgrimage to the shrine, was among the diplomatic and consular officials present.

Children Sing On Kentish Coast As Long-Range Artillery Projectiles Scream

Incident In Isles Epitomizes World At War On Christmas Day

UNDATED—XMAS OVERSEAS

[By the Associated Press]

London—Little groups of English school children sang Christmas carols outside darkened homes on the Kentish coast tonight as German long-range artillery sent shells screaming across the Dover Straits.

The children's voices trembled, but they sang on while the explosions echoed along the cliffs of Dover.

This incident epitomized a world at war on Christmas Day.

Festivities Reduced

The third war-time Christmas found men of many tongues and creeds fighting and dying in Asia's tropics, in Africa's deserts, and over the frozen wastes of Russia. There was no truce.

Lack of food and materials, the separation of families, the blackouts and other restrictions reduced festivities in many lands.

But the bells of Bethlehem rang out amid the crags of the Judean hills as the faithful flocked to the Church of the Nativity to offer their peace prayers.

Pilgrims Stand

Hundreds of pilgrims, among them uniformed Czechs, Polish, Greek, Yugoslav, Free French and British soldiers, stood outside the ancient shrine or crowded into the adjacent church of the Convent of St. Catherine, wheer the Latin patriarch, Msgr. Louis Barlassina, intoned the pontificial high mass accompanied by a Franciscan choir.

William C. Bullitt, special emissary of President Roosevelt, was among the diplomats in attendance.

The ceremonies were the prelude to services today in Jerusalem, where the pilgrims of many lands carry out traditional rites.

Addresses Children

The Free French leader, Gen. Charles de Gaulle, addressed a broadcast from London to the children of France.

"My dear children of France," he said, "you are hungry because the enemy eats our bread and meat. . . . You suffer because the enemy tells you that you are the sons and daughters of vanquished men.

"Well, I shall make you a promise. Dear children of France, you will soon have a visit, the visit of victory."

In Britain the people constantly were warned to be on guard against any German invasion attempt, but despite these grim admonitions railyway stations were jammed with travelers.

Many families who had fled the heavily-bombed London returned to celebrate Christmas in the capital. Shell-bruised churches were crowded.

The King and Queen and their two daughters planned to attend church somewhere in the country with an unceremonious Christmas luncheon to follow. The King then will broadcast to America.

Mrs. Winston Churchill, wife of the British Prime Minister, and her daughters sent their greetings to by transatlantic telephone and listened to his world broadcast with President Roosevelt from the White House.

TODAY IS HOLIDAY IN JAPAN, ALSO

DEC 25 1941

Only it Won't be Christmas; Nation to Mark 15 Years Under its 124th Ruler

By The Associated Press

Today is a holiday in Japan, too, but not Christmas, for pagan Japan has nothing to do with Christian festivals. It is the fifteenth anniversary of the accession of Emperor Hirohito, although the Japanese, with their penchant for doing things backward, observe it as the day the old emperor, Taisho, died, rather than as the day of the accession.

When Hirohito became emperor he chose as the name of his era Showa, usually translated "peace made manifest." For ten of the 15 years Hirohito's empire has been at war, although it was called "maintaining the peace of the Far East," first in Manchuria, then China and now throughout the Far East and all across the Pacific Ocean.

"Emperor of Peace"

When Emperor Hirohito dies he will pass into history as Showa

Tenno, or "The emperor of peace made manifest." Emperors posthumously take the names of their eras. Thus Hirohito's father, Yoshihito, became Taisho and his grandfather, Mutsuhito, became Meiji.

In the Japanese calendar today is the 25th day of the 12th month of the 16th year of Showa, the final week of 1926 counting as the first year.

Desire Victory Today

The Japanese make a great point of having their victories fall on their festivals. Thus the army and navy undoubtedly will strive to have some triumph to offer their sovereign on this day. Another day of even greater incentive comes a week hence, for New Year Day is the greatest of all Japanese holidays.

The Japanese call Hirohito the 124th ruler of "the dynasty coeval with heaven and earth," or the "line unbroken for ages eternal." The first 50 or so emperors belong to the period of mythology or protohistory, but even in historic times the continuity of the dynasty is without parallel.

It remains to be seen how it will fare in the war in which Japan's future is at stake. Some mighty dynasties have failed to survive the shock of a great war, as the Hohenzollerns, Hapsburgs and Romanoffs can testify.

give the nation and its Allies a message of Christmas cheer and confidence that the fight for a free and decent world would be won.

They spoke, the President first and then the Prime Minister, at the annual ceremony of lighting the national community Christmas tree here. Mr. Roosevelt pressed the button that set its many vari-colored lights sparkling.

Then, the Chief Executive told a throng of immediate listeners, and myriads more sitting at their radios, that the "conviction of the dignity and brotherhood of man which Christmas Day signifies" was America's strongest war weapon.

"Against enemies who preach the principles of hate and practice them," he said, "we set our faith in human love and in God's care for us and all men everywhere.

"It is in that spirit, and with particular thoughtfulness of those, our sons and brothers, who serve in our armed forces on land and sea, near and far, those who serve for us and endure for us—that we light our Christmas candles now across this continent from one coast to the other on this Christmas evening."

which lie ahead, then we observe Christmas Day—with all its memories and meanings — as we should."

Churchill said the children of the English-speaking world would not be "robbed of their inheritance, or denied the right to live in a free and decent world." It was, he said, a "strange" Christmas Eve.

Whole World at War

"Almost the whole world is locked in a deadly struggle," he said. "Armed with the most terrible weapons which science can devise, the nations advance upon each other. Ill, would it be for us this Christmastide if we were not sure that no greed for lands or wealth of any other people has led us to the field; that no vulgar ambition, no sordid lust for material gain at the expense of others has led us to the field.

"Here in the midst of war, raging and roaring over all the lands and seas, creeping nearer to our hearts and homes — here, amid all these tumults, we have tonight the peace of the spirit in each cottage home and in every generous heart.

"Therefore we may cast aside, for this night at least, the cares and dangers which beset us, and make for the children an evening of happiness in a world of storm.

"Here then, for one night only, each home throughout the English-speaking world should be a brightly-lighted island of happiness and peace. Let the children have their night of the arm of Rear Admiral John R. Beardall, his naval aide, with Churchill following close behind. Each was attired in dark business clothes, minus overcoat or hat.

A crowd, estimated at 40,000, clustered in the middle of the grounds and around the fence outside, cheered wildly and the Marine Band struck up "Hail to the Chief."

Churchill put on a pair of horn-rimmed spectacles before he began to speak and then he and the President stood silently for the most part, but chatting occasionally, while a chorus led the assembled throng in Christmas carols and the Marine Band played "God Save the King" and "The Star-Spangled Banner."

Royalty Present

Mrs. Roosevelt, likewise bareheaded, was a few feet away from the leaders of the two nations and standing beside exiled members of Norway's royal household.

Crown Prince Olav and Princess Martha were present to join in the Christmas ceremony, along with their three children, Princesses Ragnhild and Astrid and Prince Harald.

Wearing a fur coat and a black hat, Princess Martha leaned over from time to time to whisper in the ear of little Harald or to smooth his curly blond hair. But Harald fidgeted and squirmed through most of the program.

Dusk had fallen midway through the services and lights burned in the State Department and Treasury, to either side of the White House. Before he began his address, Mr Roosevelt pushed a button which set ablaze the lights on the 30-foot spruce tree at the far end of the White House grounds.

"And now, for the ninth time," the President said, "I light the living community Christmas tree of the Nation's capital."

There was a brief tinkle of chimes and then the chief executive began to speak.

Frequent Applause

Churchill followed him, using but a few gestures and being interrupted frequently by applause.

Previously, Mr. Roosevelt had a personal message to the Nation's fighting forces, expressing confidence that the year to come would see them triumphant over the country's enemies.

"In the crisis which confronts the Nation," he wrote, "our people have full faith in the steadfastness and the high devotion to duty demonstrated by the men in all ranks of our Army and Navy. You are setting an inspiring example for all the people, as you have done so often in the past.

"In sending my personal Christmas greeting to you I feel that I should add a special measure of gratitude to the admiration and affection which I have always felt, and have expressed in other years.

"I am confident that during the year which lies before us you will triumph on all fronts against the forces of evil which are arrayed against us.

Secretary of the Navy Knox saluted the Navy, saying: "Wherever our duties may take us, we are united—united in confidence in each other—united in devotion to our country's cause."

Message From Admiral

From Admiral Ernest J. King, new commander in chief of the United States fleet, came a statement saying:

"The way to victory is long. The going will be hard. We will do the best we can with what we've got. We must have more planes and ships—at once. Then it will be our turn to strike. We will win through—in time."

Early in the evening, the War Department announced additional Japanese landings on the island of Luzon and said Gen. Douglas MacArthur had reported that the removal of the Philippine Islands government and all military establishments from Manila was under consideration. This would make it possible to declare Manila an open city, in the hope of exempting it from Japanese air raids and bombardment.

Wake Island apparently had fallen, but its staunch band of Marine defenders were glorious in defeat, for in the final battle, with Japanese troops landing on their outpost, they sank two enemy destroyers.

In Africa and Russia Allied forces continued their smashing successes, and the Japanese drive toward Singapore was still stalled.

Against this background of holiday cheer, and grim fighting on huge and widely separated fronts, the war planning went on, but of course its nature and progress were carefully guarded military secrets.

The British naval, military and air force experts held early morning conferences, then went into a huddle with their American counterparts before joining in a general war council.

Sir Gerald Campbell, director general of the British Information Service here, said the British-American experts were engaged more in working out a "broad outline" of the war strategy to be followed than with details. The outline, he added, will be submitted to the full war council. It concerns "strategical and operational planning in all theaters of war."

Campbell also said the Churchill and Roosevelt broadcasts were "outwardly and audibly a measure of world-wide friendship," adding:

"While there are growing rumors of dissension in the enemy High Command, the fighters for freedom are reaching here in Washington an even closer unity of purpose."

Forces Get Yule Greeting From Roosevelt

DEC 25 1941

Washington, Dec. 24—President Roosevelt, as commander in chief of the armed forces, sent a personal Christmas message to the armed forces today, voicing his confidence that "during the year which lies before us you will triumph on all fronts against the forces of evil which are arrayed against us."

The text of the message:

"To the Army and Navy:

To the men and women of the navy, Secretary Frank Knox sent a holiday greeting which said: "Wherever our duties may take us, we are united—united in confidence in each other—united in devotion to our country's cause."

Roosevelt And Churchill Christmas Message Texts

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 24—The following are the texts of the addresses by President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill in connection with the lighting of the national community Christmas trees.

DEC 25 1941

Roosevelt

There are many men and women in America—sincere and faithful men and women—who asked themselves this Christmas:

How can we light our trees? How can we give our gifts? How can we meet and worship with love and with uplifted hearts in a world at war, a world of fighting and suffering and death?

How can we pause, even for a day, even for Christmas Day, in our urgent labor of arming a decent humanity against the enemies which beset it?

How can we put the world aside, as men and women put the world aside in peaceful years, to rejoice in the birth of Christ?

Inevitable Questions

These are natural—inevitable—questions in every part of the world which is resisting the evil thing.

Even as we ask these questions, we know the answer. There is another preparation demanded of this nation beyond and beside the preparation of weapons and materials of war. There is demanded of us also the preparation of our hearts; the arming of our hearts.

And when we make ready our hearts for the labor and the suffering and the ultimate victory which lie ahead, then we observe Christmas Day—with all its memories and all its meaning—as we should.

Looking into the days to come, I have set aside a day of prayer, and in that proclamation I have said:

"The year 1941 has brought upon our nation a war of aggression by powers dominated by arrogant rulers whose selfish purpose is to destroy free institutions. They would thereby take from the freedom-loving peoples of the earth the hard-won liberties gained over many centuries.

Calls For Courage

"The new year of 1942 calls for the courage and the resolution of old and young to help win a world struggle in order that we may preserve all we hold dear.

"We are confident in our devotion to country, in our love of freedom, in our inheritance of courage. But our strength, as the strength of all men everywhere, is of greater avail as God upholds us.

"Therefore, I . . . do hereby appoint the first day of the year 1942 as a day of prayer, of asking forgiveness for our shortcomings of the past, of consecration to the tasks of the present, of asking God's help in days to come.

"We need His guidance that this people may be humble in spirit, but strong in the conviction of the right; steadfast to endure sacrifice and brave to achieve a victory of liberty and peace."

Our strongest weapon in this war is that conviction of the dignity and brotherhood of man, which Christmas Day signifies—more than any other day or any other symbol.

Against enemies who preach the principles of hate and practice them, we set our faith in human love and in God's care for us and all men everywhere.

Joined In Great Cause

It is in that spirit and with particular thoughtfulness of those, our sons and brothers who serve in our armed forces on land and sea, near and far—those who serve for us and endure for us—that we light our Christmas candles now across this continent from one coast to the other on this Christmas evening.

We have joined with many other nations and peoples in a great cause. Millions of them have been engaged in the task of defending good with their life-blood for months and years.

One of their great leaders stands beside me. He and his people in many parts of the world are having their Christmas trees with their little children around them, just as we do here. He and his people have pointed the way in courage and sacrifice for the sake of little children everywhere.

And so I am asking my associate and old friend to say a word to the people of America, old and young, tonight — Winston Churchill, Prime Minister of Great Britain.

Churchill

DEC 25 1941

Fellow-workers in the cause of freedom:

I have the honor to add a pendant to the necklace of that Christmas good will and kindliness with which my illustrious friend, the President, has encircled the homes and families of the United States by his message of Christmas Eve, which he has just delivered.

I spend this anniversary and festival far from my country, far from my family, yet I cannot truthfully say that I feel far from home.

Whether it be by the ties of blood on my mother's side or the friendships I have developed here over many years of active life, or the commanding sentiment of comradeship in the common cause of great peoples who speak the same language, who kneel at the same altars, and who to a very large extent pursue the same ideas—whichever it may be, or all of them together, I cannot feel myself a stranger here in the center and at the summit of the United States.

I feel a sense of unity and fraternal association, which added to the kindliness of your welcome, convinces me that I have a right to sit at your fireside and share your Christmas joy.

Fellow-workers, fellow-soldiers in the cause, this is a strange Christmas Eve. Almost the whole world is locked in deadly struggle. Armed with the most terrible weapons which science has devised, the nations advance upon each other.

Ill would it be for us this Christmastide if we were not sure that no greed for the lands or wealth of any other people, no vulgar ambition, no morbid lust for material gain at the expense of others had led us to the field. Ill would be for us, if that were so.

Here in the midst of war, ranging and roaring over all the lands and seas, creeping nearer to our hearts and homes—here, amid all these tumults, we have tonight the peace of the spirit in each cottage home and in every generous heart.

Therefore we may cast aside, for this night at least, the cares and dangers which beset us, and make for the children an evening of happiness in a world of storm..

Here then, for one night only, each home throughout the English-speaking world should be a brightly lighted island of happiness and peace. Let the children have their night of fun and laughter—let the gifts of Father Christmas delight their play.

Let us grownups share to the full in their unstinted pleasures, before we turn again to the stern tasks and formidable years that lie before us, resolved that by our sacrifice and daring these same children shall not be robbed of their inheritance or denied their right to live in a free and peaceful world.

And so, in God's mercy, a happy Christmas to you all.

Churchill Eats and Sleeps Well and Thrives on Toil

Arises Early, Takes Afternoon Nap, Gets to Bed After 1 A. M.

DEC 25 1941

By Frank Eving

WASHINGTON, Dec. 24 (AP)—This man who has come amongst us—one Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill—is eating well and sleeping well and thriving on toil.

Can Be Told

This much, and a little more, can be told. (The White House doesn't deem it quite cricket officially to disclose the more personal aspects of his stay at our national mansion.)

But, because some British and American sources who ought to know have related some interesting little bits about the British Prime Minister, the following intelligence can be imparted:

He arises early from his White House bed (the room it's in can't be disclosed). At about 4 p.m. he knocks off work for an hour or two of shuteye. At night he plunges back into work, going at it until after 1 a.m.

Sign of Health

The afternoon snooze, said the British informant, was the "sign of a healthy man." "And the sign of a clear conscience?" the informant was asked. The informant smiled.

Among the White House staff he is affectionately called "PM." When anybody asks what that means, comes the reply: "The Prime Minister. You know, that chap Churchill, from England."

He has endeared himself to the White House staff with his sense of humor, his entertaining quips, and an amazing vitality and capacity for work.

He thinks the White House sends up to his room a mighty fine breakfast. He told Mrs. Roosevelt so. This morning he made quick work of a couple of poached eggs, a brace of bacon, some fruit juice, toast, a glass of warm milk and washed it down with steaming coffee well creamed.

Has Tea First

When he first arose, he banished sleep with his usual eye-opener—a cup of tea and a sliver of thin toast.

He has his stock of long, slow burning cigars always available. A British official said yesterday he didn't know whether the Prime Minister brought the stogies along or whether his host, Mr. Roosevelt, provided them. He has a fondness for Cuban cigars.

He keeps close touch with London by telephone and cable.

Some of the British press corps think he did his Christmas shopping before he left home, leaving the gifts for others to distribute.

Whether he has received any Christmas gifts from admiring Americans has not been established.

Here to Work

Holiday and social engagements are taboo. He has another mission. "It's work, he says. "Work."

He is going to work tomorrow, also. He and the President are going to work on Hitler and Mussolini and Tojo, and they are going to work on a Christmas turkey, with cranberries.

Solemn Christmas Unites Churchill And F. D. Roosevelt

Cares Of War Strategy Intrude On Season's Familiar Scenes

By WILLIAM PINKERTON

Washington, Dec. 24 (AP)—(Wide world—the cares of the world hovered tonight over the House at 1600 Pennsylvania avenue—but four Christmas trees stood joyous sentry at the door and gay wreaths brightened the windows.

Inside, two men of good will dwelt together, sharing both the practical burdens of the hour and the eternal message of the season.

Winston Churchill, the Prime Minister of a nation now seeing its third winter of war, was guest of Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of a nation faced anew with the worries of war.

There was no formality about the visit, for Churchill lives in the White House as a personal guest, and not as a visitor of State. There was none of the elaborate protocol and preparation which greeted his King and Queen in this house in 1939.

Together, the two men planned to share the simpler pleasures of all men's Christmas—the heartwarming morning service at the church, the brown, inviting turkey and its trimmings, the moment, perhaps, of happiness in the family circle.

But it was a different, more serious, Christmas for them both.

The low row of family stockings was missing tonight from the President's fireplace. For years, Christmas had been the children's day at the Roosevelts', and the stockings had waited excited morning shouts which ranged from the "oh's" of the great-grandmother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, down to the newest grandchild's squeals and the bark of the little Scotch terrier, Fala.

The President's mother has died since last the Christmas shouts rang through the White House halls. His sons are scattered at their several posts in Army and Navy service. Anna—Mrs. John Boettiger—was spending Christmas in her own family circle in Seattle. And none of the 11 grandchildren was visiting this year.

Little Diana Hopkins, now eight years old, hung her solitary stocking in her own White House room. Diana and her father, the President's close advisor, Harry Hopkins, have been living with the Roosevelts since a sad Christmas four years ago—the Christmas after Diana's mother died.

sMnb os,cogcmfwy hrdl bgkq gk

There was no gay parties on the schedule, either. Neither the annual Christmas party, at which Diana and the Roosevelt grandchildren had been hosts to toddlers, nor the brilliant affairs of college-age youth, at which in other years Mrs. Roosevelt had introduced to society her niece and namesake, Miss Eleanor Roosevelt of Boston, and Miss Joan Morgenthau, the daughter of the Secretary of the Treasury.

DEC 25 1941

For Winston Churchill, it was a strangely solemn Christmas, too. However warm his welcome at the White House, however thoughtful the famous Roosevelt hospitality, he was a man away from home on Christmas Day.

A year ago, for all the war, he had passed the day quietly with his wife and children before the fireplace of his country home called Chartwell, near Westerham, Kent.

And back in the storied island he had left so suddenly and so secretly Christmas this year was not the merry holiday of Dicken's day. Many a Christmas feat was a meager meal, pieced out at best with minor delicacies stolen from the ration allowance of working days.

DEC 25 1941

At least for him, there were wreaths, and the poinsettias, the holly and the Christmas trees—the all-white one in the formal east room of the White House, and the tree from Maine in the family sitting-room upstairs.

They are familiar symbols of the Christmas spirit in England as in America. The standard pleasures of the season—the church-going, the carol-singing, the family dinner and such—are the same in America, too, as in his homeland.

In England, the old man who brings the toys is known to many by his old name—"Father Christmas"—but the name of Santa Claus is not unknown in the British Isles.

And so, in the moments of holiday ritual and observance that break their wearying job of knitting together the fighting forces of two nations into one, Franklin D. Roosevelt and Winston Churchill might observe again the oneness of christian men in the living spirit of the season.

Churchill Speaks To Senate Friday

Washington, Dec. 24 (AP)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill of Britain will address a session of the Senate Friday.

Majority Leader Barkley (D.-Ky.) made the announcement tonight, adding that members of the House, the Supreme Court, Cabinet members and other high government officials had been invited.

Whether President Roosevelt would attend was not known, Barkley said.

It will be an informal session that the Prime Minister will address. The Chamber will meet as usual at noon, then recess while Churchill speaks.

"I think this is a rare opportunity for the members of Congress and other distinguished government officials to meet the Prime Minister and for the people of the United States to hear him," said Barkley, adding that radio broadcast arrangements would be made.

When Ramsay Macdonald was Prime Minister of Britain he addressed an informal joint session of Congress. During the last World War high officials of foreign nations frequently made similar addresses.

Norway's King Sends Message To Roosevelt

Washington, Dec. 24 (AP)—Norway's King Haakon, who went to London after the German invasion of his country, has sent to President Roosevelt a message of sympathy with the "deep resentment burning today in American hearts."

Norwegians not only hope with their American friends for a speedy victory over aggression, he said, but are proud that the United States and Norway now are not only friends but "for the first time in history also comrades in arms."

Crown Prince's Messenger

Haakon's message was carried to the United States by Crown Prince Olav, who telegraphed it to Washington when he arrived in New York from London.

President Roosevelt sent a message thanking King Haakon for his friendly message. "We are especially grateful," the President said, "for the inestimable aid in our common fight which is being given by the intrepid Norwegian seamen on whose skill and courage greatly depends the steady flow of supplies, which, in the end, under the guidance of Providence, will restore decency and personal freedom to the world."

After he exchanged holiday greetings at his press conference with newspaper men, one of them asked Mr. Hull whether he had a Christmas message for the nation. Mr. Hull replied:

"Today while we fight for our liberty, our free institutions and our very lives, we also fight to maintain the principality of peace which was established on this earth nineteen centuries ago.

"The preservation of these priceless spiritual forces alone should inspire every person to superhuman efforts aginst the present world movement of barbarism and savagery."

New Cruiser Is Called Deadly Christmas Gift From America To Axis

New York, Dec. 24 (AP)—Hailed by Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, commandant of the Third Naval District, as a Christmas present to the United States fleet and a deadly gift from America to the Axis, the trim cruiser Atlanta today joined the fleet.

As her officers and men stood sharply at attention the 6,000-ton ship was commissioned at the New York Navy Yard and her command given to Capt. Samuel P. Jenkins, Indiana-born veteran of the last war.

"This ship," Admiral Andrews declared, "may have the splendid opportunity of carrying greetings in the form of a broadside to those twin horrors of insincerity, Germany and Japan."

Responding to his mention of the "proud" name of Atlanta, Margaret Mitchell, author of "Gone With the Wind" and sponsor of the $12,000,000 ship at its September launching, said she and all Atlanta were proud of the cruiser and its men. About ten per cent. of the 750 officers and crew are from Atlanta and the ship is the third of her name.

Commander C. D. Emory was made executive officer of the craft, which is capable of about fifty miles an hour.

Admiral King Declares Planes, Ships Needed Before U. S. Can Strike

Washington, Dec. 24 (AP)—Admiral Ernest J. King, new commander in chief of the United States Fleet, declaring that the road to victory will be long and hard, emphasized in a statement today that "we must have more planes and ships—at once."

King said:

"The way to victory is long. The going will be hard. We will do the best we can with what we've got.

"We must have more planes and ships—at once. Then it will be our turn to strike. We will win through—in time."

Declaration of Independence Taken to 'Place of Security'

Washington, Dec. 24—(AP)—The Declaration of Independence, the Magna Charta, the Gutenberg Bible and certain other documents of "extraordinary value" have been removed from exhibition cases in the gallery of the Library of Congress to "places of greater security," Librarian Archibald MacLeish said today.

He said the value of the documents "requires that they be given the greatest possible protection against any danger, however remote."

England's Magna Charta was deposited for safekeeping in the Library of Congress on November 29, 1939.

Four Important Envoys Kept Informed on Talks

By LLOYD LEHRBAS

Big Food Shipment Arrives In Britain

DEC 25 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 24—Secretary of Agriculture Claude Wickard was advised today by the British food mission that 1,000,000 tons of American food shipped to Great Britain under the lend-lease program had arrived safely overseas.

The notification came in a message from Lord Woolton, Minister of Food, in which "grateful thanks" of the British people were expressed.

The food consisted principally of dairy, poultry and pork products, canned fruits and vegetables.

Wickard said the communication "adds a note of cheer to our traditionally bountiful Christmas season to know that food from our well-filled national larder is being safely delivered to our friends abroad."

Philippine Situation Uncertain But Main Goal Is in Europe

By DEWITT MACKENZIE.

The gravity of our position in the Philippines has been increased by the new Jap invasion of the coast of Luzon Island, only seventy-five miles southeast of Manila, a strategic move calculated to place the capital in a pincers movement through co-ordination with the enemy forces already ashore at Lingayen Gulf to the north of the city.

Gen. MacArthur thus is being forced to defend two fronts at once—a difficult task at most. A possible measure of the seriousness may be seen in the fact that U. S. Army headquarters in the Philippines today was considering declaring Manila on open city to spare it as much as possible not only from air attack but from ground assault.

It is a matter of vast pride and some encouragement that American and Filipino troops were reported late today to be resisting stubbornly in both sectors, although they were greatly outnumbered. However, the Japs continue to land forces and we should be foolishly optimistic if we didn't recognize that the fate of the Philippines is uncertain.

Axis in Europe Main Aim.

Lack of air and naval forces sufficient to meet this onslaught adequately, at least in its early stages, is clearly evident.

Our first and main job is to smash the Axis in Europe. Any other operations are subsidiary.

So we shouldn't thoughtlessly criticize the allied leadership for not stripping the European theater of fighting arms to meet this new emergency in the Far East. That's exactly what Hitler wants the Allies to do, so that he can recover from his Russian disaster and strike another blow elsewhere. It is precisely to maintain an even balance in the direction of the whole Allied effort that the great conference is being held in Washington.

Hitler's Next Move.

If we lose the European side of this war to Hitler we are done for; but a temporary triumph of the Japs in the Far East wouldn't beat the Allies. Nippon could be taken care of in due course and there is no possible doubt that it will be smashed.

Evidence accumulates that Herr Hitler is plotting further trouble for the Allies, but his objective remains obscure. Even the far-seeing British Premier Churchill has said in Washington that while he expects a new offensive he doesn't know where.

Some signs point to a possible resurrection of Hitler's plan of reaching new African bases through Spain. This presumably would involve French colonies and the French Navy. Some color is lent to this idea by the report that Marshal Petain, French Chief of State, is about to resign because of German pressure for concessions which he doesn't want to make. However, that report hasn't been confirmed.

Germany has far less striking power than it had when it embarked on its disastrous campaign against the Muscovites. There have been huge casualties among the Nazi shock troops, representing the best which the Fatherland could produce and can't immediately replace.

Dress Rehearsal in China.

There seems little reason to doubt now that for the Japanese Army and Navy the "China incident," longest war of our times, a vast tragedy for nearly half a billion people, was largely a grand scale dress rehearsal for the real war to come.

It was comparable, in the eyes of imperial headquarters, the all-powerful control center in Tokio, to the practice session which the Spanish Civil War provided for the German air force and Mussolini's legions.

The Chinese, fighting with unwavering courage and unflagging tenacity but almost entirely without modern weapons, provided an almost ideal type of opposition against which to season some 2,000,000 conscripts, train their officers in tactics and the supply and maneuver problems of huge bodies of troops and experiment with new weapons.

and labor than anything the United States has undertaken up to the current all-out war production effort.

Japan was at war in China those four years and the huge appropriations were justified to the people on that score. But for some time experts in Washington and London have believed that the appropriations were too lavish to be explained wholly by the "China incident."

The conflict which began at Marco Polo Bridge the night of July 7, 1937, has been a very inexpensive war except for the first few months. Since Shanghai fell in November, 1937, the Japanese Army has had to expend little but small arms ammunition.

There has been no call for artillery barrages of World War I intensity, little need for huge armored forces, no great expenditure of bombs and very little loss of aircraft. Soldiers' pay was a trifle and the Japanese armies to a great extent lived off the conquered land.

The Chinese had little to fight with except infantry masses and largely outmoded weapons. Their friends were sympathetic but very far away and engrossed with their own anxieties. Not until last week, when the American volunteer group swung into action over Kunming has foreign aid become strikingly manifest on the battlefields of China.

Navy Kept Close to Home.

Against China the Japanese Navy had little to do. The big battlewagons were not needed and they kept close to their home bases, saving precious oil and shells for their 16-inch guns.

Thus Japan had to spend only a small portion of the 65,000,000,000 yen on the "China incident." Perhaps 20 per cent of the total—a generous estimate—went for the normal civilian needs of government; perhaps as much more was actually shot away in China. The remaining 60 per cent went in preparing for the real war to come.

Perhaps the army was not always sure whether that would be on the steppes of Siberia or in the jungles of Malaya and the Philippines where it is fighting today. But the navy knew where its share was going: into battleships and airplane carriers and submarines and planes to lash at Pearl Harbor and Singapore, cut the fare-flung supply lines of the American and British forces and stand against the mighty battle fleets of the Anglo-Saxon powers if it ever came to that final reckoning.

That the Japanese Army failed to cover itself with glory in the hills of Shansi and the valleys of the Middle Yangtze probably did not worry its commanders too much. It was good for training. It enabled them to run the flower of Japan's youth through a huge processing machine that turned out some 2,000,000 veterans, perhaps more, produced experienced company and field officers and scores of divisional, corps and army commanders.

Served as a Smoke Screen.

Also it afforded a smokescreen for two moves which have proved of prime importance in setting the stage for the all-or-nothing gamble on which the militarists launched their people. These were the seizures of Hainan Island and French Indo-China.

Hainan was taken from the Chinese nearly three years ago. Frequently since then there have come half-believed reports of great military depots and training centers on that island so strategically situated within a few days' steaming or a few hours bomber flight from all the prized archipelagoes of the South China Sea.

Moreover Hainan was almost unknown to the white man; after the Japanese seizure it was still more shut off from his knowledge. There the Japanese were able to train parachute troops, tank crews, special landing detachments and prepare whole divisions for warfare in tropical jungle conditions such as those of the Malay Jeninsula.

The "peaceful" conquest of Indo-China was another invaluable by-product of the China War although Adolf Hitler's destruction of France provided the opportunity. But the war against China gave the Japanese the excuse of demanding bases in Northern Indo-China from which to bomb the Burma road. From this they advanced to demanding and obtaining the right to concentrate an army there for the ostensible purpose of meeting a Chinese invasion from Yunnan Province. Then they acquired for the navy Camranh Bay, from which Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto's airplane carriers operated to destroy the Prince of Wales and the Repulse.

In Indo-China the stage was set for the drive on Singapore, key to mastery of the South Seas.

Japan Launched War Program Against U. S. Years Before Joining Hitler and the Axis (Glenn Babb, who here pictures for Wide World News the scope of Japan's preparations for war, draws on his long experience as a correspondent in the Orient for this explanation of how Nippon concealed her intentions.

By GLENN BABB,
Wide World News.

DEC 25 1941

NEW YORK, Dec. 24—The first fortnight of the war has demonstrated convincingly, stunningly that Japan's decision to take on the combined sea power of the United States and Britain was no overnight impulse.

The sneak-punch at Pearl Harbor and the smash at Britain's Far Eastern bastions were part of a program long antedating Adolf Hitler's rise to power and Japan's alliance with the Axis.

The Japanese Army and Navy had been preparing for the day—which turned out to be December 7, 1941—for a generation. Their purpose, to drive the white man from Asia, had long been cherished. The last five years provided almost unparalleled opportunity to prepare with all the resources of a great power.

Hitler and Mussolini in Europe held the attention of the Occident. War in China provided the pretext for a military program which as we now have discovered went far beyond the necessities of that particular war.

Long before Hitler crashed through Europe to open up undreamed-of opportunities, the Japanese warlords had made up their minds that untimately they must fight America and Britain for the mastery of the Far Eastern half of the world. The navy chafed for 15 years against the treaties which, the admirals professed to believe, kept them from matching American seapower. The army began its revolt against the established order in 1931 by driving into Manchuria.

By the end of 1936 the admirals had torpedoed the naval truce. Six months later the army plunged into China. Thereby war conditions, a war psychology and a wartime spending scale were imposed on the Japanese people—some 70,000,000 of the most patriotic, docile and industrious people in the world.

Spending Reaches New Scale.

In the four years 1938 to 1941 inclusive, the Japanese government's budgets totaled 65,000,000,000 yen, a stupendous sum for Japan. Translated into dollars at the pre-freezing rate of 23.4 cents, this makes only $15,000,000,000, but this is misleading. In many respects a yen buys as much in the Orient as a dollar in the United States, especially in labor and other services. In proportion to Japan's wealth and annual income these figures represent a greater relative outpouring of wealth

Avers Spaniards Expect Arrival Of German Units

Tells Of Tremendous Difficulties Nazis Will Encounter

By LYNN HEINZERLING

New York, Dec. 24—(Wide World)—Spain is now officially non-belligerent on the Pacific, the European and the Atlantic war fronts, but a good many Spaniards are looking behind that phrase for the German divisions they expect to see on Spanish soil.

When I left Spain six weeks ago, they were not asking whether the Germans were coming into Spain, but rather when and how many of them.

The man who knows the answers—Generalissimo Francisco Franco—isn't a talking man. He probably can launch more ships and dedicate more monuments without saying anything about the future of his country than any head of state in Europe.

He is constantly in the newspapers of Spain and yet so far removed from the press that an interview with him is just the dream of the few newspaper men left in Madrid. He just doesn't talk publicly about the one question bothering all Spaniards.

There can be no doubt that the German High Command has laid its usual plans for moving through Spain, down to the last railroad spike. There also can be no doubt that the Germans realize exactly what tremendous difficulties they would encounter.

Well-informed Germans have said they expect a German move through the Iberian Peninsula toward Africa to be accompanied by another thrust around the eastern end of the Mediterranean and Northern Africa for the Axis.

DEC 25 1941

Spaniards generally do not trouble themselves much with German strategy. They worry rather about what would happen to their country, still suffering cruelly from the civil war.

They worry about the food supply, from which many now are getting only the slenderest pickings, about their inadequate transportation system with many of its bridges still gone, other war damages still unrepaired. They wonder what would happen to their army, which is divided on the question of co-operation with the Axis.

The Spanish Civil War took so much rolling stock off Spanish railroad tracks that it sometimes takes a week to get a seat on one of the two daily trains between Madrid and Barcelona, Spain's two largest cities. Platforms are always packed with travelers.

There would be the further difficulty of the difference in gauge between Spanish and French railroad systems. Fleets of trucks would be needed to carry troops and material through Spain—and fleets of trucks require barrels of fuel not available in Spain.

Even before the United States put an embargo on shipment of fuel to Spain, gasoline was strictly rationed, automobiles of high horsepower were outlawed and the rickety Madrid taxi system was streamlined down to practical non-existence.

DEC 25 1941

Most military observers believe German entry into Spain would mean a simultaneous march into Portugal to secure Portugal's Atlantic ports. There would be a siege of Gibraltar and the British say their new defenses there would make it long and costly. Other military men disagree.

What a German Army would do to the stocks of food and the already inflated prices is something the average Spaniard hates to contemplate.

One can eat well in Spain if he has plenty of money, but food is the greatest worry to the Spaniard. I have seen barefoot boys dive under the sidewalk cafe table and pick up a few spilled almonds. I have seen youngsters eating a banana peel. I have seen Spaniards become faint on the street from hunger and slump down on the sidewalk.

If any proof were needed to convince the world that Spain is hungry, the recent government decrees providing the death penalty for "black market" operations in food should provide it.

At the fashionable hotels in Madrid an ample meal can be obtained for $3 to $5. The bread will be made of a variety of grains, with very little wheat, and there will be no meat five days a week. But fish, chicken and other fowl have been plentiful.

The principal cause of undernourishment in Spain is that prices have jumped so high and wages are so low that the masses of the people simply can not afford to buy even enough of the most ordinary staples for the table.

Just how many troops Hitler would choose to send into Spain—if he went—is an open question depending on the type of campaign planned for Africa, the degree of Spanish co-operation and the final disposition of the French fleet. Many military men agree that a minimum of eight divisions or about 150,000 men would be needed.

Just how determined any opposition to the passage of German troops through Spain would be is difficult to ascertain. Politically, through the statements of Foreign Minister Serrano Suner and through the tone of the official Spanish press, Spain is hitched to the Axis bandwagon.

DEC 25 1941

But there is some dissension about this course in high circles, and officials of the government occasionally talk about it to their friends. A popular rumor in Madrid almost every fortnight is the one that Serrano Suner is about to take up a diplomatic post somewhere and conservative Army forces are to take a stronger hand in the foreign policy of the government. But he outlives all the rumors.

It is unlikely that the people of Spain, worn out by their own civil war and weary of the present privations, could offer any serious opposition, whatever their personal views. They probably would hope that the Germans would improve their own dreary lot walking on view in Europe for years.

Sitting on all this uncertainty and questioning, Franco has successfully played a waiting game. He is almost inaccessible and United States Ambassador Alexander Weddell waited six months once this year before he succeeded in winning an audience with him.

One of Three

Dr. Antonio de Oliveira Salazar, Portuguese leader and ruler of a large part of the remaining neutral Atlantic coastline in Europe, has held off trouble for more than two years and maintained his government as one of three independent states in Europe.

He has done it from a seclusion deeper than that of Spain's Franco, and with few of the gaudy trappings which usually accompany a one-man government.

With all the stresses and strains put on his government by diplomatic pressure experts of the warring powers, Salazar has managed to steer straight down the middle and maintain his country as an oasis of peace amid death and misery.

If the Germans do move into Portugal to secure her ports for a move into Africa, it is difficult to see how there could be little more than token resistance from the Portuguese army. What Salazar would do is obscured in the deep silence he maintains, but it would be dictated by Salazar and not by one of the belligerents.

Possibilities Listed

The possibilities, of course, would be to throw in the country's lot with the Axis and thus strengthen a growing European front, accept the fate of France or move into the Azores and establish his government there, throwing his lot with the Allies.

Salazar already has shifted a large part of the nation's armed forces to the Azores "to guard the islands against invasion from any source." The exact figures on troops sent there are military secrets, but sailings have been frequent in recent months.

The occupation of Portuguese Timor by Allied forces is the first setback to Salazar's objective of keeping Portugal and her colonies on the sidelines in the war. The government's reaction will be an important clue to the course Portugal will follow in the future.

The increasing seriousness of Portugal's position has served to remove much of the phoney "glamor" with which Lisbon has invested earlier in the war. The city was packed then with a heavy-spending set of expatriates, one-time court followers and society figures forced out of other countries.

"Last Refuge"

Many of them turned to Lisbon when their favorite casinos in other countries were closed and hoped to settle down in the gay and exc'ting atmosphere of the "last refuge." That is ended now. Lisbon is the last stop on the way out of Europe and there isn't so much tarrying at the roulette wheels.

DEC 25 1941

There are still hundreds of refugees in Portugal. Some of them are resigned to sitting out the war there. Others hope they will somehow get the visas, the money and the transportation to reach the other side of the Atlantic.

Agents and spies of the various belligerents are active there, but they are taken for granted now and cause little excitement. That is, unless they become involved in something spectacular, like the German agent who was arrested for bathing in the wrong kind of swimming attire. When police went to his hotel to take him to court, he jumped out his second floor window and escaped. That ended his activities in Portugal and he is now back in Germany.

The Portuguese press, while controlled, is permitted to express itself about as it wishes on the various belligerents.

"Orgy of Colossal"

This was shown recently when the director of one of the papers visited a German architectural exhibit in Lisbon and expressed the opinion in his newspaper the following morning that the new German architecture was an "orgy of the colossal." The chairs in the fuehrer's chancellory waiting room, he wrote, were "large enough for two persons and it would take a crane to move them."

The British howled with joy over this slap at their enemies, but a few days later President Carmona evened the score for the Germans by paying a visit to the exposition and being photographed with the German embassy staff.

Reporter Tells Of Islands Coup By Free French

Captors of St. Pierre and Miquelon Left Eastern Canadian Port Monday

DEC 26 1941

Free French Chiefs Report Residents of St. Pierre And Miquelon Voted 98 Pct. In Plebiscite to Support Allies

By the Associated Press

ST. PIERRE, Dec. 25—The population of the tiny French islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon voted 98 per cent in favor of Free French rule today in a plebiscite held by Vice Admiral Emile Muselier, commander of the Free French naval forces, after he had suddenly and peacefully occupied the islands on Christmas Eve.

Only ten votes were cast in favor of remaining under the Vichy regime of Marshal Petain, the Free French forces announced.

(Before results of the plebiscite were announced, the State Department in Washington had called seizure of the islands by the Free French as "arbitrary" and took steps toward restoration of the "status quo." At the same time, London described the seizure as a "complete surprise," and at Ottawa government spokesmen stated flatly Canada was not informed of the Free French plans. Canada's external affairs officials consulted with Washington in an effort to untangle the surprise problem.)

Four Ships Make Seizure

It was disclosed that four corvettes which carried out the occupation under Admiral Emile Muselier, commander of Free French naval forces, steamed to the islands 15 miles off Newfoundland after leaving an eastern Canadian port Monday ostensibly on maneuvers.

They maneuvered until dark on Monday night, then suddenly slipped away from accompanying ships and came here on their easily-accomplished mission.

Jean le Bret, a reporter for the Montreal newspaper Le Jour, told the following story of the occupation through the services of the Free French Information Service here:

"Under the orders of Vice Admiral Muselier, commander-in-chief of the naval forces of Free France, who was on a tour of inspection of French ships participating in the battle of the Atlantic, a detachment of the French naval forces appeared Monday at noon at an eastern Canadian port for maneuvers on the high seas.

DEC 26 1941

Take Mysterious Route

"As a passenger on a corvette, I spent all the afternoon watching the maneuvers of reconnaissance, firing and co-operation of naval units.

"That evening, at the signal of the admiral, four ships formed in line and disappeared into the darkness.

"During the whole day Tuesday these four ships followed their mysterious route.

"The routine on board continued as usual. The life of these intrepid chasers of submarines was certainly interesting, but one sensed that something strange and sensational was being prepared from the exchange of signals and messages from gunports.

"This impression became stronger that night when all on board became more alert.

"Sometime before dawn the flotilla stopped. In the obscurity and silence the men began to organize for action.

"I mounted the bridge; the sea was calm; the false dawn was at hand.

"To starboard one could see the white of the snow on the abrupt cliffs of St. Pierre.

"To port one could see in the shadows, still confused, little Miquelon.

DEC 26 1941

All Crews at Post

"All the crews were at their posts. The admiral gave the order: 'Execute the mission given you.'

"We understood.

"Slowly and silently the ships made a new formation. It was a beautiful spectacle in the dawn.

"Soon the entrance to the little port of St. Pierre, 'Le Barachois,' appeared on the horizon.

"A motorboat bound for Miquelon was seen, and as the corvette at the head of our column advanced into the harbor, the pilot boat came out and placed itself at the disposition of the French ensign.

"Raising the cross of Lorraine, the two first corvettes steamed toward the quays of Douane and La Roncierre.

"Another stopped at the head of the bridge at the coal quay, and the last acted as a rear guard.

"At the same time, all the landing detachments debarked with their arms and set out on their different missions.

"A morning crowd ashore was taken by surprise, but was happy and enthusiastic.

"Quickly all strategic points were occupied.

"The quays, the police station, the telephone, telegraph and radio offices and the government buildings, were occupied without any resistance and without the least incident. The success was decisive and complete.

"Some minutes later, the administrator of the islands, M. de Bournat, whom the pseudo-government of Vichy had invested with dictatorial powers, gave in to the coup of the corvettes.

"The St. Pierre crowd, which still was gathering on the quays, saluted his arrival with a shout of 'Vive de Gaulle,' which came simultaneously from all throats like a cry of deliverance.

"It was a moving moment.

"Before mounting the bridge of the first corvette the governor shouted at his former charges: 'Vive Petain.'

"Under direction of Admiral Muselier, who organized the brilliant strategy of the occupation of these isles, the transfer was achieved rapidly with the general good wishes of the populace. Only a few suspects were kept under surveillance.

Proclamation Posted

"Before nightfall the following proclamation was posted on all the walls of the city:

"'People of St. Pierre and Miquelon:

"'In conformance with the orders of General de Gaulle I have come to permit you to participate freely in a plebiscite which you have wanted for a long time.

"'You will have to choose between the cause of Free France and collaboration with the powers which have humiliated and martyred our country.

DEC 26 1941

"'I have no doubt that the oldest of our overseas territories will range itself at the sides of Great Britain, the United States, Canada and the other Allies and will manifest en masse its fidelity to the traditions of honor and liberty which France always has held in high esteem.

"'Vive La France. Vivent Les Allies.

"'St. Pierre, Dec. 24, 1941.

"Vice-Admiral Muselier, Commissioner of National Marine and Merchant Marine, commander in chief of the naval forces of Free France, member of the Council for Defense of the Empire.'

"While the Mayor's office was revising the active list of voters, the population joyfully went to the mass of the Nativity.

"Christmas day dawned radiantly this morning.

"After high mass, a detachment of the Free French paraded with their equipment from the flotilla and placed a wreath at the monument of the soldiers of St. Pierre who had died for their country.

"There the admiral made a short speech before an immense crowd which was very grave and quiet.

"Then the electors brought the ballot boxes to exercise their recovered rights as citizens of France.

"The occasion was solemnly historic.

"It was the first time since the capitulation (of France to Germany) that they had been allowed to express independently their choice of government.

"Each voter sensed that the gesture he made would have a universal repercussion in the battle of the democracies against totalitarian tyranny.

"The polls closed at 4 p. m. At 5:30 the count of the votes gave Free France 98 per cent of all ballots cast.

"There were only ten votes for collaboration with the Axis powers.

"It was the voice of France that responded to the world, clearly, strongly and without any doubt.

"The joy of the population, spontaneous and vibrant, greeted the announcement by Admiral Muselier of the result.

"The crowds were still under my windows this evening at the moment I was finishing this dispatch.

"During the night, which turned cold and rainy, the enthusiastic young people marched and cried 'Vive De Gaulle, vive la France!'"

Plebiscite to Be Held on Seized Isles

LONDON, Dec. 25 (AP).—The Free French Government announced today its naval forces occupied St. Pierre and Miquelon because the population of the barren islands wanted it to.

A plebiscite was ordered for today to prove the population's preference for the forces of Gen. Charles de Gaulle over the Vichy regime of Marshal Petain, it was announced.

De Gaule himself, despite Britain's official manifestation of "complete surprise" and despite Washington's view of the seizure as an "arbitrary" action contrary to prior agreements, telegraphed congratulations to Admiral Muselier.

The French headquarters announcement said:

"In answer to the wishes of the population, Vice-Admiral Emile Muselier, commander of the Free French naval forces, took possession of St. Pierre and Miquelon in the name of the Free French Committee.

"He immediately organized a plebiscite which will take place today."

Elaborating on the earlier announcement, a free French spokesman tonight issued this statement:

"Admiral Muselier went to St. Pierre and Miquelon because he was absolutely certain that populations of these islands desired to resume the fight by the side of the Allies for liberation of France and for the cause of liberty in the world.

"The fact that he has succeeded in taking control of these islands without any incident proves that he was acting solely with the will of the interested populations."

L[redacted]—Gen. Charles de Gaulle today telegraphed congratulations to Admiral Muselier.

He said: "Please convey to the populatio nof St. Pierre, so precious and loyal to France, the great happiness with which the nation experiences at this liberation."

U. S. Repudiates Seizure By Free French Of Two Islands

DEC 26 1941

Invasion Of Bases Off Newfoundland Planned Without Knowledge Of British-American Allies; "Blunder," Says Washington

Washington, Dec. 25 (AP)—Seizure by Free French forces of the little French Islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon, near Newfoundland, today aroused the State Department, which called the action "arbitrary" and took steps toward restoration of the "status quo."

The seizure came at a time when the United States was doing everything possible to keep Vichy France from veering toward fuller collaboration with Hitler, and thus it was considered a monkey wrench thrown into the international works.

Both Canada and the United States disclaimed advance knowledge of the coup. British authorities in London said it was a "complete surprise" to them and a French Embassy spokesman here denounced it as a blunder "worse than Dakar" (thhe Free-French attempt to seize Dakar in 1940).

The State Department issued the following statement:

"Our preliminary reports show that the action taken by three so-called Free-French ships at St. Pierre and Miquelon was an arbitrary action contrary to the agreement of all parties concerned, and certainly without the prior knowledge or consent in any sense of the United States government.

"This government has inquired of the Canadian government as to the steps that government is prepared to take to restore the status quo of these islands."

State Department officials declined to amplify this announcement or to explain the character of the agreement violated.

Last Monday, however, Secretary of State Hull indicated that an agreement had been reached with French authorities of Martinique for collaboration with the United States in maintaining the status quo of French islands in theh Western Atlantic.

This agreement was the result of conversations at Martinique between Rear Adm. Frederick J. Horne, United State Navy, and Adm. Georges Robert, French high commissioner there under whose jurisdiction not only Martinique but St. Pierre and Miquelon are governed.

In French circles the accord was described as a "gentlemen's agreement" securing these possessions against any infringement of their sovereignty.

The attitude consistently maintained by the United States government has been that it has no desire to infringe on the sovereignty of French possessions in the Western Hemisphere but cannot permit them to fall into Axis hands.

The Horne-Robert conversations were understood to have clarified thi ssituation and laid the groundwork fo rimproved relations with Vichy, France. Now, however, the seizure of St. Pierre and Miquelon by Free-French (De-Gaullist) forces opposed to Marshal Petain has injected a new element into the complicated picture.

In Ottowa a government spokesman stated flatly that the Canadian government was not informed in advance of the Free-French plans, that Canada "took no part in the occupation" and that no preparations for it were made on Canadian soil.

A spokesman for the French embassy here agreed that there was no indication the coup was prepared on Canadian soil, but said it appeared to have been prepared on nearby Newfoundland—which is not a part of Canada but is a British Crown colony.

This spokesman pointed out that the seizure of the islands came only a few days after widespread circulation of rumors that Marshal Petain had resigned and that his successor was about to turn the French fleet over to Germany. These rumors coincided, he said, with new attacks on Petain in the German-controlled press of Occupied France, following Marshal Petain's declaration of neutrality in the war between the United States and the Axis.

In such a delicate situation, he explained, with Marshal Petain obviously working to maintain French neutrality, the sudden seizure of French territory in the Western Atlantic was a diplomatic blunder of the first magnitude, "worse than Dakar."

It was considered significant here that the Canadian statement disclaiming any part in the seizure added that "it is not expected to have any effect on Canadian-Vichy relations."

Ever since the rupture of diplomatic relations between France and Britain in 1940, Canada's continued maintenance of diplomatic relations with Vichy France has created a delicate problem for the Ottawa government. Critics of the government frequently have demanded that Vichy's minister be expelled and that a policy of out-and-out support of the Free-French movement be followed.

The government's answer has been that the Vichy legation in Ottawa provided a useful indirect contact between the Petain regime and Britain and other members of the British Commonwealth. Because of the traditional bonds of sympathy between French Canada and the French people it has also seemed desirble to avoid an open break with Petain so long as possible.

Free French Take St. Pierre and Miquelon Islands

DEC 26 1941

Immediate Plebiscite Called in Territory Off Newfoundland

By the Associated Press.

LONDON Dec. 25.—Warship-landed forces of the Free French have taken over the tiny fishing islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon off the southern coast of Newfoundland and have called the population to a plebiscite today on allegiance to Free French as opposed to Vichy.

The occupation was carried out yesterday. An announcement at Free French headquarters here said Vice Admiral Emile Muselier, commander of the Free French forces, took possession of the islands in the name of the Free French Committee "in answer to the wishes of the population."

It was revealed that Muselier left England for Canada some weeks ago to prepare the operation. It was not announced how many or what ships took part.

No Axis Threat to Islands.

Free French officials stressed that there had been no threat to the islands by the Axis and declared that the occupation was dictated only by the desire of the inhabitants.

Gen. Charles de Gaulle, leader of the Free French, messaged Admiral Muselier "my most sincere congratulations for the way in which you rallied this island to our cause with discipline and dignity."

The Free French headquarters announcement said:

"In answer to the wishes of the population, Vice Admiral Emile Muselier, commander of the Free French naval forces, took possession of St. Pierre and Miquelon in the name of the Free French Committee.

"He immediately organized a plebiscite which will take place today."

De Gaulle's telegram to Admiral Muselier said: "Please convey to the population of St. Pierre, so precious and so loyal to France, the great happiness which the nation experiences at its liberation.

"St. Pierre is valiantly taking up again with us and our brave allies struggle for liberation of our country and the liberty of the world.

"To you personally in my name and that of the French National Committee my most sincere congratulations for the way in which you rallied this island to our cause with discipline and dignity.

"Long live France."

Authoritative British quarters withheld comment on the Free French action. The opinion prevailed in political circles, however, that the occupation was prompted by strategic considerations and did not necessarily betoken any general change of attitude by the anti-Axis powers toward Vichy or her other colonies.

Some quarters believed the islands had been regarded as dangerous particularly as possible avenues of information which might reach the Axis. This danger, it was said, seemed enhanced by the proximity of the islands to sea and air routes across the North Atlantic to Britain.

St. Pierre and Miquelon, the largest islands of two tiny groups lying 15 miles off the southern coast of Newfoundland, are French New World outposts having a total area of only 93 square miles and a total population of about 5,000.

They are under command of Admiral Georges Robert, French proconsul for Western Hemisphere colonies, who, with headquarters on the Caribbean island of Martinique, on December 18 was disclosed to have reached an agreement with the United States providing that all French colonies in the Western Hemisphere would maintain their neutral status.

DEC 26 1941

The status of St. Pierre and Miquelon has been a subject of discussion ever since Canada went to war, lying as they do definitely within Canadian defense waters. Canada unofficially has taken the position that the islands have little military value. An Ottawa spokesman said last May 15 that regardless of what happens in France, the islands lie within Canada's defense area and that it was difficult to see how they could be of any practical use to the enemy, regardless of who had nominal control of them.

The islands are mostly barren rock and are unsuited to agriculture. The chief industry is cod fishing.

Last August 26 Canada decided to open a consulate at St. Pierre, capital of the group, so as "to keep more closely in touch with developments in the islands."

Ottawa And Washington Considering Problem

Ottawa, Dec. 25 (AP)—Canada's External Affairs officials were in consultation with the United States Government tonight to untangle the surprise problem laid at their doors by the sudden Free French seizure of the Vichy French islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon off Newfoundland.

Prime Minister W. L. Mackenzie King said before leaving for Washington this evening on a previously scheduled trip that Canada had known nothing in advance about the Free French plans to take over the islands.

He said, however, that so far as Canada was concerned there was no prior agreement involving the dominion regarding maintenance of the status quo of the islands.

Canada "Taken By Surprise"

C. C. Ebert, acting Canadian consul at the islands, notified Ottawa of the seizure a few hours before Free French headquarters in London announced it.

"We were taken completely by surprise," an External Affairs Department spokesman said. "Although Admiral Muselier was in Ottawa recently, we never were told that the Free French planned taking such action."

Transfer Without Incident

Vice-Admiral Emile Muselier, commander of the Free French naval forces, headed the ships which entered the islands yesterday, Ebert reported the transfer was without incident.

Since the fall of France the two tiny islands off Newfoundland's south coast had been ruled by an administrator under Vichy authority. Canada kept in touch with the islands through Ebert.

Canada has facilitated providing export permits to enable the population to obtain supplies in the Dominion. The islands themselves, only ninety-three square miles, mostly barren rock, produce virtually nothing, and the population of 5,000 lives on its cod fishing industry. It is the headquarters for the French cod fleets operating off the Newfoundland banks.

Leakage To U-Boats Doubted

From time to time uneasiness had been expressed that supplies going to St. Pierre were finding their way to German submarines, but official circles here expressed the opinion that there was no such leakage.

DEC 26 1941

When the question was raised in Commons, the Government assured that a careful watch was being kept over the islands, which lie only fifteen miles off the Newfoundland coast.

Invaders Pushing Toward Summer Capital Of Philippines—Many Americans Trapped In Speedy Advance

Manila, Dec. 26-(12:30 P.M.--10:30 P.M. Thursday E.S.T.)-Manila was proclaimed an open city today, but a U.S. Army spokesman stressed that this action to protect civilian lives and property will not affect the conduct of the war, which "will continue as vigorously or more vigorously than at present."

" The situation in general is better than heretofore," the spokesman said, "as our troops are becoming hardened to combat."

A communique from headquarters of the United States Armed Forces of the Far East said:

"Action on the northern lines is confined to artillery duelling..On the southeastern front from Atimonan to Mauban (on Lamon Bay) enemy pressure is increasing. The enemy air force is very active."

(By The Associated Press)

Manila, Dec. 25 — Japanese tank units striking 35 miles inland from the Gulf of Lingayen were reported tonight near the Philippine summer capital of Baguio, while a second spearhead advancing 25 miles from the coast reached Binaloan, only 110 miles from Manila.

DEC 26 1941

A front line dispatch filed at 6 p. m. (4 a. m. E.S.T.) said the outnumbered American and Filipino troops fought desperately against the invaders, but acknowledged that the Japanese may already have seized Baguio in the province of that name.

Japanese forces driving southward from Aparri on the northern tip of Luzon Island were said to have reached Tuguegarao, 50 miles inland.

American troops succeeded in withdrawing from Baguio, and it was planned to declare the summer capital an open, unfortified city. Civilian officials in Baguio were ready to negotiate with the Japanese units.

Many Americans, including women and children who had intended to flee to Manila, were reported trapped by the swift Japanese drive on Baguio. Military authorities consider the city worthless except as an air base because it is surrounded by steep mountains with few roads.

Landed There Last Monday

The Japanese had landed in the Damortis-Santo Tomas area on the gulf last Monday, where they were immediately engaged by United States artillery and tanks.

Army headquarters has given no details of the fighting. Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commander in chief, was in the field directing operations.

An army spokesman announced earlier that the defenders "more than held their own on all fronts," but made no attempts to minimize the seriousness of the situation.

Sink Transport, Minesweeper

Japanese reinforcements were landing steadily, he said.

Admiral Thomas C. Hart, commander in chief of the Asiatic fleet, meanwhile announced that incomplete reports showed that United States submarines had sunk a large Japanese transport and a minesweeper.

"Also I have reports of two that are probable (sinkings)," the admiral said. "One is a large seaplane tender. I believe this tender was a man-of-war. The other probably is another transport."

United States submarine crews reported two other successful attacks, last week.

DEC 26 1941

Most Direct Threat

The Japanese thrust at Binaloan apparently was the most direct menace to Manila. This city is on a main highway winding through valleys toward the capital.

Other Japanese landings have been effected at Legaspi and at Atimonan, some 200 miles to the southeast, at Davao, on Mindanao Island, 600 miles distant, and at other points. Communications with Davao, which the Japanese claim to have captured have been disrupted for some time.

[Washington announced yesterday that Japanese invaders also landed at Nasugbu, only fifteen miles below the entrance to Manila Bay, and fifty miles southwest of Manila. Another landing was effected near Mauban, twenty miles up the Lamon Bay above Atimonan.

[Tokyo claimed that the Legaspi unit had driven fifty miles northward to occupy the town of Naga, and also announced the landing of additional troops on Lamon Bay.]

Alarm But No Bombs

The wail of air-raid sirens came amid the Christmas pealing of church bells here this morning, but no bombs were dropped and anti-aircraft batteries were silent. This led to the belief that both sides already considered Manila an open city, but it was officially stated that no final decision had been reached on the matter.

Defense heads are considering a declaration to that effect in order to spare the civilians from further aerial attacks. It would necessitate stripping the capital of all military defenses.

Meanwhile a traveler from Batangas Province said he saw a United States destroyer rout two Japanese destroyers in a brief offshore battle Saturday 60 miles south of here.

Capt. J. M. Calleja, master of the 506-ton inter-island steamer Governor Wright, registered a formal protest that Japanese planes machine-gunned the passengers of his ship Dec. 12 when they took to row boats after a bomb hit the Governor Wright.

The attack occurred at the port of Sorsogon in Southeastern Luzon.

2 More Nipponese Ships Credited To American Subs

DEC 26 1941

By the Associated Press.

MANILA, Dec. 25.—Defenders of the Philippines are "more than holding their own on all fronts" and United States submarines have accounted for two and possibly four more Japanese naval craft, Army and Navy spokesmen said today.

A spokesman for the United States armed forces of the Far East announced a brightening outlook for land forces of the Philippines at 4:25 p.m. (2:25 a.m. E. S. T.), saying that from all reports being received they were giving better than they received from the reinforced invasion legions of Japan.

(Japanese imperial headquarters in Tokio declared that additional reinforcements had been landed at Lamon Bay, southeast of Manila, and claimed further gains had been made by forces landed earlier elsewhere on Luzon Island.)

Admiral Thomas C. Hart, commander in chief of the Asiatic Fleet, told in an interview of the victories at sea, a followup to two submarine successes reported last week.

A large Japanese transport and a minesweeper are known to have been destroyed, he said, and another transport and a seaplane tender were regarded as probably sunk.

"I have not had too complete reports from my submarines since I last talked with newsmen," the admiral said. "I do not hear too often, but I do when they hit and I have reports of one large Japanese transport being sunk and one mine sweeper.

Japs Reinforced

"Also I have reports of two that are probable. One is a large seaplane tender. I believe this tender was a man-of-war. The other probably is another transport."

An army spokesman said that "the enemy continues to be reinforced," but declared that while fighting continued on all fronts there had been no material change in the situation.

The report he gave at 11.05 A. M. today follows:

"Fighting continues on all fronts.

"There has been no material change in the situation.

"The enemy continues to be reinforced.

"No air activities have been reported."

A short time later, he added:

"I am surprised at how quietit has been overnight."

DEC 26 1941

Japs Held, He Hints

The implications of his report were that while the Japanese continued to land more forces, they were being held to the same positions that they had occupied yesterday.

United States and Filipino troops skirmished overnight with advance guards of the invaders without a decisive action, the spokesman said.

Japs Reinforce Troops

In the land fighting, however, a United States Army spokesman told of fresh Japanese reinforcements and there was evidence that belligerents already regard Manila as an open city.

"Fighting continues on all fronts,' the Army spokesman said. "There has been no material change in the situation. The enemy continues to be reinforced."

United States and Filipino troops skirmished overnight with advance guards of the invaders without a decisive action, the spokesman said.

While it was officially reported that no decision had been made on a proposal to declare Manila an open city and silence its defenses voluntarily to spare civilians and their property from further attacks, an uneventful cruise of three formations of Japanese bombers above the capital and Manila Bay fortifications for an hour today was regarded by observers as of significance.

The planes neither dropped bombs nor drew anti-aircraft fire from the ground batteries that had hurled shells into the air at every previous approach of enemy squadrons.

The scream of air-raid sirens mingled with the tolling of Christmas church bells in a second alarm this morning, but the all-clear sounded half an hour later with no enemy planes sighted over the city.

Main Threat at Lingayen

The main threat against the outnumbered American and Filipino forces still appeared to be in the Lingayen sector, 125 miles northeast of Manila, with a landing in force at Atimonan, 75 miles southeast of the capital, as a pincer diversion.

(A War Department communique last night, however, reported two new Japanese invasions, one at Nasugbu, about 15 miles below the entrance to Manila Bay and only 50 miles southwest of the capital. The other was said to be near Mauban, 20 miles up the Lamon Bay coast above Atimonan.)

Gen. Douglas MacArthur, commander in chief of the United States armed forces of the Far East, was in the field himself to chart strategy and seek to relieve handicaps of the defense.

"It was a very quiet night," said a Manila communique, "but there still was Japanese pressure from both north and south. Practically the only activity overnight was small skirmishes by patrols."

Japanese troops, however, were landed in such numbers there was no doubt that the battle for this capital itself was under way.

Manila had an air raid warning at 1:40 a.m. (11:40 a.m., E. S. T., Wednesday), but the United States Army spokesman said this nocturnal follow-up to four alerts yesterday was believed to have been a false alarm.

There was no word here overnight concerning the battle of Davao, where the Japanese seek a Mindanao Island base for prosecution of their attacks on Borneo, about 500 miles to the west across the Sulu Sea.

The absence of a report from Davao, 600 miles south of Manila, was attributed here to Japanese aerial activity against radio and wire communication systems.

A traveler from Batangas, 60 miles due south of Manila, said he saw a United States destroyer rout two Japanese destroyers in a brief offshore battle Saturday.

DEC 26 1941

The Japanese warships, which field after an exchange of shots, apparently were on reconnaissance of the Verde Island passage.

Capt. J. M. Calleja, master of the 506-ton interisland vessel Gov. Wright, filed a protest with customs agents against a Japanese aerial attack December 12 at the port of Sorsogon, on Southeastern Luzon.

One bomb struck the Gov. Wright forward, he said, and passengers and crew members attempting to escape by lifeboats were machine-gunned. The captain said 51 other bombs were dropped in a two-hour period without another hit.

Plane Sinks Jap Sub Off Pacific Coast

Three Hits Scored By American Bomber On Underseas Boat

2 Enemy Ships Sunk

DEC 26 1941

By RICHARD L. TURNER

Washington, Dec. 25 (AP) — An enemy submarine sunk off California, the destruction of at least two and probably four Japanese warships by American submarines in the Far East, and "local successes" on the Philippine Front, brightened a war-gloomy Christmas today in the capital.

These cheering accomplishments, however, were set against a foreboding background. Bad news, even the eventual loss of the Philippine Archipelago, the intimations were, was distinctly possible. The defending forces were badly outnumbered and the Japs were striking at Manila from several directions at once.

At the White House—except for an interval given over to church attendance—the day was devoted to war planning, and a continuation of President Roosevelt's conversations with Prime Minister Churchill.

From the War Department came the story of the destruction of an enemy submarine just off the California Coast, presumably the one, or one of those, which have recently been harassing American shipping there.

"An American bomber from General Dewitt's Western defense command successfully attacked an enemy submarine off the California Coast," the communique said. "Soon after the submarine was sighted it made an emergency dive. A bomb was dropped and the submarine emerged, and then sank. Two more bombs were dropped, apparently scoring direct hits, and filling the air with debris."

Such details were omitted in the announcement of American submarine successes in the Far East. The headquarters of Admiral Thomas C. Hart, Commander-in-Chief of the Asiatic fleet, merely let it be known that a large Japanese troop transport and a mine sweeper had been downed certainly, and that a large seaplane tender and another transport had probably been sunk.

The War Department also told of fierce fighting on Luzon Island. Together with "local successes" for the American and Filipino forces under Gen. Douglas MacArthur, it said the islands' defenders were hitting back at the Japs with counter-attacks.

"Intense fighting continues on all important fronts on Luzon Island," the announcement said. "American and Philippine troops launched counter-attacks which met with local successes, particularly in the vicinity of Atimonan, southeast of Manila.

"Enemy aerial activity continues heavy, with attacks on various towns in central Luzon."

The State Department also came into the news. The occupation by the Free French of the French islands of St. Pierre and Miquelon near Newfoundland aroused it to protest that it was an "arbitrary action contrary to the agreement of all parties concerned."

"This government has inquired of the Canadian government as to the steps that government is prepared to take to restore the status quo of these islands," the department said.

The capital looked forward meanwhile to an informal address which Prime Minister Churchill is to deliver tomorrow in the Senate about 12:30 p. m. It is to be broadcast.

He and the President, with Mrs. Roosevelt, and most of the commanding officers of both the British and American fighting forces attended an interdenominational church service at mid-morning and heard prayers and a sermon in which a world at war on Christmas Day was the dominant theme.

The Rev. Zebarney Phillips, chaplain of the Senate and dean of the Washington Episcopal Cathedral, said Christmas meant the ability to "love and die if need be to save one's friends.

"Those nations which cling to democracy," he said, "are challenged today as never before."

Poorly Clothed Youths Driven Forward By "Do Or Die" Spirit, American Reporter Says—Their Small Guns Often Fail To Kill

Editor's note: The following dispatch — reporting the fierce fighting for Manila, detailing the condition and temper of the Japanese invaders and giving the first elaborate account of what was happening last Monday General MacArthur tersely announced 80 enemy troopships were sighted off Lingayen Bay—is by a seasoned foreign correspondent who knows the Japanese thoroughly from long experience in Tokyo and elsewhere in the Far East.

Correspondent Clark Lee was on his way home from Shanghai to America for his triennial furlough several weeks ago when the crisis in the Pacific turned grave. He was at Manila, and was asked by the Associated Press to stay there to await developments.

Lee was born in Oakland, Calif., did his first newspapering as Rutgers correspondent for the New York World while in college, entered the (AP) service in 1929 and worked in Newark, New York, Mexico City, Honolulu and all over the Orient.

By CLARK LEE

On The Lingayen Front North Of Manila, Dec. 25 (AP)—The Japanese Army rushing toward Manila from the Lingayen gulf area is an ill-uniformed, untrained mass of young boys between 15 and 18 years old, equipped with small-caliber guns and driven forward by desperate determination to advance.

Hundreds of them already have died under the fire of American and Filipino artillery, machine-guns and rifles, but they keep coming, and up until tonight had been only partly checked.

The United States armed forces in the Far East, holding the Lingayen area, have rallied and are putting up a determined defense in many sections.

Young Filipino troops, after their baptism of fire, are being welded into an army of tough fighters.

The United States forces have more than held their own gorund. I have spent four days in and around the fighting front, including a two-day hike over mountain trails after the Japanese cut the main road southward, forcing me to abandon and burn my automobile.

The Lingayen battle started last Monday at 2 a. m. with an artillery duel between Japanese warships and American shore guns.

At the same time a force estimated at 500 Japanese advancing southward from Vigan clashed with American armored car units at San Fernando in La Union province.

The Japanese, who were riding bicycles, were apparently unaware of the presence of Americans in the vicinity.

This fight continued until after dawn Monday, and according to the American field commander almost every Japanese was wiped out, although many climbed trees to continue shooting until they themselves were shot down like birds.

At sundown Sunday there were a few Japanese transports and warships along the East Coast of Lingayen Gulf.

56 Transports

The American shore forces awoke at dawn Monday to find 56 Japanese ships, most of them small transports of about 1,500 tons each, plus a few destroyers and cruisers, anchored along the West Coast from Baguen to Damortis.

The ships were in line extending about 25 miles and were anchored about three-quarters of a mile offshore.

The gulf coast in this area is sandy and shallow, with mountains four or five miles back from the shoreline.

The American artillery immediately opened fire and sank several transports.

One gunner named Johnny Jones laid two shells from a 75 gun into a transport right at the waterline, causing it to sink slowly.

Low-flying Japanese planes bombed and gunned the American positions, which are not in continuous lines but scattered at various strategic points along shore. The Japanese warships at that time withheld their fire.

About 7 a. m. the Japanes troops started coming ashore in small flat-bottomed motorboats with curved bows, many were sunk by gunfire.

Ignoring the American fire, they swarmed on the beaches and advanced in files toward the American positions, splitting up in twos, tandem fashion.

An American officer commanding one of the beach defenses described the Japanese advance in this fashion:

"There was no hysterical exaltation.

"They didn't charge, but crouched forward just a little bit, lifting their knees high in a sort of imitation goose-step.

Came On To Die

"They kept coming forward in pairs, one directly behind the other. They were coming on to die, and many of them did.

"Many times one of our heavy machine-gun or rifle bullets killed two men at once.

"When hit they just threw up their hands and fell backward as if accepting an inevitable fate.

"Some wore poor quality khaki; others wore half uniforms and half civilian clothing.

"Some wore sweaters and some fatigue clothes.

"Each had a small gold star painted on his helmet above the forehead.

"They carried .25 caliber rifles and about a quarter of them had .25 caliber sub-machine-guns."

Unless they strike a vital spot, these .25 bullets will not kill a man. I have talked to many U.S.A.F.F.E. men who had been wounded three and four times with these bullets and still were walking about.

One Filipino member of an armored car unit was hit directly in the back of the head and 10 times in the back with Japanese machine-gun bullets but was not critically wounded.

Maj. Joseph Ganahl of the United States Army was hit by a bomb fragment, a trench-mortar fragment and a bullet but continued to direct his troops.

As the Japanese kept landing in ever-larger numbers, the U.S.A.F.F.E. drew back according to a previous pan, fighting delaying actions.

I met American defense officers Monday night at a point overlooking Lingayen Gulf, lighted by burning gasoline which they had set afaire to prevent it falling into Japanese hands.

It was possible to count 36 Japanese ships offshore.

These officers said that prior to the landing the Japanese had bombed and strafed the Americans "for days" without damage.

The Americans said one particular flier in a Messerschmitt plane used to fly low and wave at them, and that when he came over Sunday and did a few acrobatics they thought something was up. Sure enough, they said, "this morning he came back with planes of every description, and today we have been shot at and bombed by every kind of plane and gun."

Carry Machine Guns

They said nearly every one of the Japanese in the landing parties had a small-caliber miniature machine gun.

"The Japanese are using smokeless powder ,which makes it difficult to detect their firing until they are very close," an American officer said. "However, they seldom have come close enough for bayonet action."

On some other fronts along Lingayen Gulf the battle went better for the Americans. The Japanese were unable to blast their way ashore at Lingayen City on the southern shore and had to withdraw.

During Monday morning Filipino troops supported by American tanks checked Japanese infantry and tanks advancing inland from Damortis.

The Japanese tanks were light ones and no match for the American equipment.

Late Monday afternoon, however, the Japanese renewed their attack under protection of warship gunfire and air attack, and their tanks broke through the American lines, forcing the unit to withdraw.

The defenders had to leave clothing and food but said they saved their guns and ammunition.

Part of the Japanese forces turned southward, and by Wednesday night, when I left the foremost area, they had reached Pozorrubio and Binalonan on the main highway to Manila.

Other Japanese units which broke through at Bauang and Damortis have been pressing since Monday night up to the roads leading to the mountain gold-mining center of Baguio, 35 miles northeast of Lingayen. Some small units probably already are there.

The mines have been flooded and oil supplies destroyed, so work there will be impossible for many months.

The American forces at Baguio already had succeeded in a withdrawal and it was planned to declare it an open cimty. Many Americans, including some women and children who had planned to go to Manila but were surprised by the speed of the Japanese drive were trapped at Baguio.

The city is strategically worthless except as a problematical air base because it is surrounded by steep and roadless mountains.

There is considered to be no chance of the Japanese at Baguio joining those advancing southward from Aparri, who last were reported a few miles south of Tuguegarao.

HONGKONG YIELDS TO JAP INVADERS

DEC 26 1941

No Further Resistance Possible, says London Announcing Surrender

Lack Of Water Big Factor. Military And Civilian Casualties Heavy

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 25—The last-ditch defense of Hongkong has broken under relentless assault by land, sea and air and the crown colony which for a century has been a British bastion off the southeast China coast has fallen to the Japanese.

"So ends a great fight against overwhelming odds," the British Colonial Office declared tonight, sadly announcing the surrender.

No further resistance, it said, was possible.

DEC 26 1941

Casualties Heavy

Without estimating the figures, the Foreign Office asserted that "military and civilian casualties were heavy. . . ."

The announcement said the lack of water was one of the great handicaps of the British Tommies, the Canadians and the Indian sikhs who fought step by step back across the mainland section of the colony and then held out desperately and with little hope in the fortified mountain fastnesses of the island.

As the Japanese wrested away one after another of the Hongkong settlements and smashed water mains by shelling and bombardment, water supplies of the hard-pressed garrison dwindled until, the announcement said, "two days ago there remained but one day's supply."

Public Prepared For Loss

The British public had been prepared for days for word that the back-to-sea defense had crumbled.

The word which came finally in the gray of Christmas twilight said:

"The Governor of Hongkong regrets that he has been advised by the military and naval commanders that no further effective resistance can be made and he is taking action in accordance with that advice.

"It will be remembered that the Japanese effected landings in strength at several points on the island on December 18. To many it seemed that the end must be near; yet for seven days under relentless artillery fire not only from the mainland but from heights on the island the garrison fought on, refusing three demands to surrender.

Anxiety Over Water Supply

30.24 — 13757

30.24 - 13757

"The water supply soon gave cause for anxiety. Important reservoirs fell into Japanese hands. Water mains were destroyed by bombardment. The public works department struggled bravely to effect a remedy but the enemy destroyed the pipes again and again.

"Two days ago there remained but one day's supply. Military and civilian casualties were heavy, but under the inspiring leadership of (Governor) Sir Mark Young the morale of all was admirable.

"So ends a great fight against overwhelming odds. The courage and determination of the Royal Navy and troops from Britain, Canada and India as well as local volunteer units, including many Chinese, will long be remembered."

The Japanese imperial headquarters at Tokyo reported that the Hongkong garrison surrendered at 5:30 p. m. Tokyo time (3:50 a. m., E.S.T.) and said Japanese troops were ordered to cease firing at 7:30 p. m., (5:30 a. m., E.S.T.).

A Tokyo broadcast said Sir Mark Young later conferred with Japanese Army officials at Kowloon on terms. The nature of these was not disclosed.

The Japanese gave no estimates of British casualties. They had said earlier that 20,000 British troops were defending Hongkong Island.

JAPANESE EXULT OVER HONGKONG

DEC 26 1941

Conquest Hailed As "Glowing Christmas Present" To The Empire

Further Gains Claimed In Attacks On Philippine Islands And Malaya

[By the Associated Press]

Tokyo, Dec. 25 (Official Broadcast Recorded by AP)—Hongkong, century-old British crown colony on the China coast, was in Japanese hands tonight after a nineteen-day onset against the colony and eleven days of attack on its island stronghold.

Exultant Japanese radio broadcasts of the imperial headquarters announcement described the conquest as "a glowing Christmas present to the Japanese nation" and said that thus, in effect, the British "retreated more than 1,000 miles" to their next outpost at Malayan Singapore.

The Official Announcement

The army and navy made their announcement in a brief communique which said:

The enemy at Hongkong, no longer able to withstand our continuous attacks, surrendered at 5.30 P. M. (3.50 A. M., E.S.T.) December 25. Consequently imperial troops were ordered to cease firing at 7.30 P. M. (5.30 A. M., E.S.T.).

Domei reported that two British non-combatants brought the Japanese a message from Sir Mark Young, British Governor of the colony, five hours before the actual surrender. In that message, Domei said, the Governor said he was not yet willing to give up resistance. He had rejected earlier Japanese ultimatums.

Sir Mark Confers On Terms

After the surrender Domei said, Sir Mark went to the peninsular hotel at Kowloon, across Victoria harbor from Hongkong Island, for a conference on terms with Japanese army officials.

Word of the surrender was flashed to the Japanese in radio broadcasts heralded by a fanfare of martial music, and by newspaper extras issued late in the holiday night.

[Pagan Japan does not celebrate the Christian festival of Christmas, but December 25 was observed as the fifteenth anniversary of the accession of Emperor Hirohito.]

As To Philippines And Malaya

No details of the final blows at the British defense forces were made public. The last Japanese announcement before word of the surrender said British forces were being beaten back into the mountains.

The Japanese, meanwhile, claimed further gains for their forces in the attacks both on the Philippines and Malaya.

An army communique said the Japanese had landed additional reinforcements in the Lamon Bay area southeast of Manila. Troops landed at Legaspi were said to have pushed fifty miles north, capturing Naga.

"Foothold" In Tuguegarao Area

Troops which made the first landing at Aparri, northernmost port of Luzon, have "established a firm foothold in the Tuguegarao section," the army reported.

The city of Tuguegarao is fifty miles south of Aparri.

The army said the port of Davao had been occupied completely by Japanese troops landed on the island of Mindanao.

Thrust Into Malaya

Japanese troops thrusting south into British Malaya were said to have occupied the west coast island of Penang, from which the British withdrew, and positions on the south bank of the Krian river.

Along the east coast of Malaya Japanese forces were said to have occupied Kuala Krai south of Kota Bharu.

Hongkong's Fall Claimed By Tokyo

Colony Governor Meets With Foes, Tokio Declares

By the Associated Press.

TOKIO, Dec. 25 (Official Broadcast).—Imperial headquarters announced tonight that the British crown colony of Hong Kong had fallen and within the hour the news, heralded by a fanfare of martial music, was flashed to the Japanese people by radio as a "Christmas present" from their armed forces.

The announcement was brief: "The enemy at Hong Kong, no longer able to withstand our continuous attacks, surrendered at 5:50 p.m. (3:50 a.m., E. S. T.), December 25. Consequently imperial troops were ordered to cease firing at 7:30 p.m. (5:30 a.m., E. S. T.)"

(In London, a military commentator said that while there has been no confirmation of Japanese reports that Hong Kong had fallen "the position has been precarious and we must be prepared to accept the possibility of it falling.")

Governor Meets Japanese.

Domei reported a short time later that high representatives of the Japanese Army and Sir Mark Young, British Governor of Hong Kong, were meeting at the Peninsular Hotel at Kowloon, across Victoria Harbor from Hong Kong Island.

Domei said that five hours before the surrender two British non-combatants brought the Japanese a message from the British Governor declaring he would not yet give up resistance.

A Domei broadcast of the surrender described Hong Kong as "a glowing Christmas present to the Japanese nation" and said the capture "could have been achieved in much shorter order had it not been for the stubborn disregard by the British garrison for repeated Japanese advices to abondon resistance in the interests of the safety of residents of the island."

Although the hour was late on a holiday night newspapers rushed out extras which have been reserved for the biggest war news.

(The day is not celebrated as Christmas in pagan Japan, but rather as the 15th anniversary of the accession of Emperor Hirohito. Actually the day is the anniversary of the death of the old Emperor, Taisho, rather than the actual accession.)

Exploitation Declared Ended.

Domei declared that the fall of Hong Kong "marks the banishment of the last vestige of British imperialism on Chinese soil and brings to an end century-long exploitation."

The last Japanese reports of the fight for Hong Kong, just before word of the surrender, said the Japanese occupation was proceeding rapidly with the last British garrison forces bottled up in fortifications of Stanley Peninsula and the western district of the island.

These reports said the Japanese had captured Tytam Reservoir and were shelling the British on Mount Davis and Brick Hill.

The mainland frontier of the British crown colony of Hong Kong on the southeast coast of China was attacked by the Japanese on the fateful December 7 when the armed forces of the empire of the rising sun struck simultaneously at the United States and Britain.

For only the few first days of the fight were hopes harbored that the colony's costly defenses could hold out indefinitely without support.

The sinking of the British battleship Prince of Wales and the battle cruiser Repulse off Malaya, which cost Britain her heaviest naval units known to be in Far East waters, prevented any naval stroke to save the colony.

Chinese Try Two Sorties.

The Chinese Armies of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek attempted two sorties toward Canton, striking at the rear of the Japanese lines and forcing diversion of some troops, but a Chinese spokesman said these attacks were not in the strength of a general offensive and probably could not save the British colony.

In the first week of fighting the British were forced to withdraw under artillery fire, aerial bombardment and tank attack, from their foothold on the mainland.

The Japanese claimed the capture of Kowloon, big mainland community of the colony across Victoria Harbor from Hong Kong Island, December 14.

At once the fight for the island began, with Japanese landings made across the narrow water barrier under cover of heavy bombardment.

London newspapers summed up the situation at once as critical and prepared the British public for eventual word that the colony Britain had held for a century had been lost.

They said the island's strongest defenses and biggest guns were fixed to beat off attack by sea and had not been intended to withstand heavy assault from the mainland.

British, Canadian and Indian defense troops—their number estimated by the Japanese at more than 20,000—were pushed back slowly to strongholds on heights rising 1,700 feet, back from the beaches.

Stubborness Praised.

Japanese broadcasts praised the stubbornness of the British garrison's defense, and the defenders, who twice rejected ultimatums to surrender, claimed a heavy toll of the attacking forces.

Crippled communications made their contact with the outside world slow and interrupted. The last word from them came in communiques dated Tuesday and Wednesday.

The first said fighting was continuing with undiminished fury, with the enemy attacking continuously and making a slight penetration into the Mount Cameron area.

The second said the Japanese had made no further important advances and that the lines at Mount Cameron were being maintained.

Britain took over Hong Kong Island in the Opium War from 1839-1842 and the mainland district was ceded later by China.

Hong Kong Island, slightly larger than New York City, had a normal population of 1,000,000 persons—approximately 20,000 of them European and American residents.

New Landing on Luzon Claimed by Japanese

TOKIO, Dec. 25 (Official Broadcast).—Japanese troops have made a new landing on the east coast of the island of Luzon and "the situation is developing rapidly in favor of the Japanese," the naval section of imperial headquarters said in a communique today.

It asserted that at the same time the forces which landed on the west coast of Luzon from Lingayen Gulf continued their advance toward the south—where Manila lies.

No details on where the east coast landing was effected were given.

Domei, in a review of recent developments in the war, asserted that the hardest fighting in the Philippines was going on along the Lingayen Gulf coast north of Manila, and claimed that new landings confirmed "Japan's complete superiority on sea, in the air and on land."

The fall of the Philippines, it contended, is inevitable.

The news agency asserted that five United States tankers so far have been sunk, counting the latest successes of Japanese submarines off the California coast.

Barefoot Warriors Rally Against Invaders Of Sarawak's Capital

British And Dutch Slash At Nipponese Flotillas Off Kuching And Miri

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 25—The Singapore radio reported tonight that American volunteer flyers, fighting for the Chinese, had driven off sixty-one Japanese planes attempting to bomb Chungking.

By C. YATES McDANIEL
Associated Press Correspondent

Singapore, Dec. 25—Hardy, barefooted Sarawak troops, descendants of Borneo head-hunters, were reported rallying tonight against Japanese invasion forces which landed yesterday at Kuching, the capital of the oil-rich "white rajah" kingdom of Sarawak, North Borneo.

Communications with Kuching were blanked out, leaving in doubt the fate of the capital, which lies directly across the South China Sea, 475 miles from Singapore.

British, Dutch Aid Defense

Aiding in the defense of the tiny but strategically important domain, ruled by Sir Charles Vyner Brooke, British warplanes and presumably Dutch submarines were reported slashing at Japanese invasion flotillas off Kuching in the south and Miri in the north.

A British communique said RAF bombers in an attack on Japanese shipping anchored off Kuching scored a direct hit on a merchant ship and at least six "near misses" against other vessels.

Dutch Sink Jap Destroyer

Simultaneously the official Netherlands East Indies news agency Aneta reported that a Dutch submarine torpedoed and sank a Japanese destroyer of the 2,100-ton Amagiri class. The news agency said the sinking occurred in Indies waters, which might include the general Sarawak zone. Sarawak adjoins Dutch (Southern) Borneo.

British Far East headquarters said Allied forces already had sunk three large enemy transports, as well as a tanker, and that sea and air units were continuing to attack Japanese warships and troop transports off the mountainous, jungle-covered Sarawak coast.

Attention Centers On Singapore

Meanwhile, with the reported fall of Hongkong, Britain's No. 2 bastion in the Far East, attention here centered on the defense of British troops holding a line 300 miles north of Singapore against Japanese invasion forces.

Latest official reports indicated that the Japanese drive southward down the Malayan Peninsula had been stemmed, with British troops now standing fast in the steaming "green hell" jungle fastnesses.

"The situation remains unchanged," Far East headquarters said.

"There has been some dive-bombing activity by enemy planes. The bombing was very haphazard, causing little damage and few casualties."

Observers here considered it likely that the capture of Hongkong would signal an intensified Japanese offensive against Singapore.

Japanese Execute Fresh Landings In Sarawak

British Planes Hit One Merchantman in Raid on Ships at Kuching

DEC 26 1941

By the Associated Press.

SINGAPORE, Dec. 25.—Japanese forces executed landings yesterday at Kuching, Sarawak, on the island of Borneo, a British communique reported today.

It said that direct communication with Kuching was cut off late yesterday.

The situation on the Northwestern Malaya front was reported unchanged.

British aircraft in attacks yesterday on Japanese shipping anchored off Kuching were announced to have scored one direct hit on the stern of a merchantman and at least six near misses against other vessels.

Text of Communique.

The text of the communique follows:

"On the northwestern front (of Malaya) the situation remains unchanged. There has been some dive-bombing activity by enemy planes. The bombing was very haphazard, causing little damage and few casualties.

"There is nothing to report from Western Malaya.

"Yesterday our aircraft attacked Japanese shipping anchored off Kuching. They scored one direct hit on the stern of a merchant vessel and at least six near misses against other vessels.

"Reports received from Kuching yesterday afternoon indicated that enemy landings were taking place. There has been no direct communication with Kuching since late yesterday."

600 Miles From Singapore.

Kuching, on the southwestern coast of Sarawak, is about 600 miles due east of Singapore across the China Sea. It is the capital of oil-rich Sarawak.

The Japanese were already reported to have made landings at Miri in the northern tip of Sarawak, which is the British-protected domain of the "white rajah," Sir Charles Vyner Brooke.

Dutch bombers first attacked Japanese warships in this area December 18, setting fire to a cruiser, and returned the next day to bomb Japanese troops who made two landings near Miri.

Taraka was machine-gunned by a naval plane equipped with four engines and armed with guns. Two workmen were killed and one soldier slightly injured.

Invaders Driven Off

"Before the enemy had an opportunity to drop his bombs he was driven off by our fighters.

"One fighter was seriously damaged by enemy guns, while another fighter was slightly damaged.

"On December 23 an enemy plane dropped three bombs on Perrai, setting the village ablaze. Four people lost their lives. The same plane attacked another locality without causing any damage."

Wake Reports Differ

New York, Dec. 25 (AP)—The Tokyo radio said tonight that Wake Island had been defended by "3,000 American officers and men." A little later the Berlin radio said the captured island had been defended by "300 American marines," quoting "Japanese quarters."

The United States has announced that 385 marines and navy men were on Wake.

CBS heard the conflicting Axis reports.

Nippon Destroyer Sunk By Sub, Dutch Say

DEC 26 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Batavia, Netherlands East Indies, Dec. 25—A Japanese destroyer of the 2,100-ton Amagiri class was torpedoed and sunk last night by a Dutch submarine, which escaped depth bombs of another destroyer to report its success, Aneta, official Netherlands East Indies news agency, announced tonight.

Aneta said that the Netherlands East Indies naval commander was informed that the attack took place in Netherlands East Indies water, but the position was not otherwise identified.

Japanese destroyers of the Amagiri class carry crews of 200.

Sub Sunk By Mine

Earlier, the Dutch East Indies high command issued this communique:

"A few days ago a submarine of the Dutch navy, returning from an important successful expedition, ran onto a mine and went down.

"As far as is known all members of the crew lost their lives except one.

"Over the South China Sea naval planes engaged in aerial combat with an enemy plane which managed to escape in the clouds. The Dutch flying boat received several hits.

"During an enemy attack on one of our airdromes in the outer possessions some of the bombers were slightly damaged. Yesterday the airfield of

Wake Siege Outlasts The Alamo

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25.—(AP)—A foreign flag flies over Wake today, but a bright new page was entered in the annals of the United States Marines—the story of a siege that outlasted the Alamo.

Hours after conceding Wednesday that capture of the sun-drenched Pacific atoll was "probable," the Navy told exactly how few were Wake's defenders and how pitiably they were armed — and not until then did full appreciation of the gallant defense dawn upon the nation.

Further, it was learned reliably that the 378 officers and leathernecks had repulsed not one but three previous landing attempts in the 15-day siege before they were overwhelmed by vastly superior Japanese naval strength on a fourth landing effort, that of Dec. 23.

Twelve fighter planes, six five-inch guns, 12 three-inch guns and some smaller weapons were the backbone of the defense—these and the indomitable courage which has made the name of the United States Marines one to frighten any foe since the days of John Paul Jones.

On the final day of siege, after almost daily bomber assaults and heavy casualties, most of the Marines' planes were gone and all the five-inchers were out of action, along with every other piece of ordnance save one battery of the three-inch weapons. Then word was flashed that the Japanese were ashore; "for many hours" the outcome was in doubt—finally communication ceased.

The brown-skinned men paid dearly for Wake Island. They had lost three destroyers, one light cruiser, "several" warplanes and an unknown number of lives.

The information that three previous landing attempts had been made was not given in the Navy's communiques, but came from an informed source. The first apparently was at the outset of the siege. A Navy communique told of four aerial assults within 48 hours starting Dec. 9 and said a landing attempt was expected. The unexpected fury of the resistance apparently caused the Japanese to withdraw until they had amassed overwhelmingly superior strength.

The two-week struggle by a sleepless band of marines, fighting on an exposed coral atoll without even the cover of a tree, gave lustre to the name of the commander, Maj. James P. S. Devereux of Washington, D. C., and his men.

The 15-day siege was two days longer than that of the Alamo, which is believed to have begun on Feb. 23, 1836, and ended on March 6, when 4,000 Mexicans under Gen. Santa Ana assaulted the fortress and killed every one of the 183 defenders.

U. S. Called Stronger Than Ever in Hawaii

DEC 26 1941

By TOM YARBROUGH.

Pearl Harbor, T. H., Dec. 25 (AP).—An admiral in command of a combatant force of United States warships said today that "the lesson of the Dec. 7 attack has been taken to heart."

"We now are well up to strength in all our units," he added, "and the men want only one thing—to get at the enemy."

The admiral received reporters aboard his flagship, which was only slightly damaged in Japan's sudden aerial assault against Oahu Island.

Harbor Hard at Work.

BUSY HARBOR.

His voice was almost drowned out by the whining saws and pounding hammers of the busy harbor. There wasn't a sign of Christmas anywhere. It was like any other Sunday morning at this naval base—any other except one.

Dimly visible in the distance the forms of two sunken ships stuck out of the water. Closer by were the charred destroyers Cassin and Downes.

The Admiral summed up the reaction of the men:

"We know that somebody's done us a dirty trick and we want to get back at them. Our one desire is to get up and sock 'em for that treacherous attack. Nearly everybody wants to be a machine-gunner.

READY TO FIGHT.

"My ships all are ready to fight," he said, and added that damage to cruisers was only "incidental."

"We have already received more men from the mainland than were lost in the attack—we're better off today than we have been in some time," the admiral declared.

He said the raid "brought home the necessity of taking utmost precautions," explaining that when "men drill now they know more about what it means—more than just going through motions."

The Admiral refused to discuss naval strategy but asserted flatly: "It is going to be a long war—must be, with the enemy as far away as Japan."

'The Voice Of Doom'

DEC 26 1941

Honolulu, Dec. 25 (AP)—Attackers of Hawaii on December 7 carried propaganda leaflets urging Japanese to "listen to the voice of doom—open your eyes, blind fools," the navy disclosed today.

Along with this warning in Japanese was, in English, "You damned go to the devil." The papers also carried drawings of a warship exploding, a fish spitting destruction and a caricature of President Roosevelt.

The pamphlets were found in planes shot down. Evidently none had been distributed.

The Japanese carried strange provisions for landing. The planes were stocked with well-aged whisky, concentrated foodstuffs, cider, soda pop, candy, chocolate paste impregnated with whisky, hardtack, tooth powder and chopsticks.

sand kept handy to douse incendiaries.

Many persons had opened their gifts early. Mrs. John Bays, wife of Admiral Claude Bloch's aide, had opened hers during the heaviest Japanese raid that fatal Sunday because "there won't be another Christmas Day for years."

It was a sharp contrast from last year, this blacked-out Christmas eve. Then, large crowds gathered in front of Iolani Palace to see a pageant of the birth of Christ. Parties were everywhere, and there was caroling and great gayety. But that was before the people here had realized how long are the tentacles of war.

Many men were spending Christmas Day digging bomb shelters.

Navy Planes Hit Back After Californians See Sub Attack U. S. Ship

Two Other Vessels Have Brushes With Enemy Craft, Another Safe

(Pictures on Page A-4.)

By the Associated Press.

LONG BEACH, Calif., Dec. 25.—Striking once again almost to the western shoreline of the United States, a submarine has torpedoed an American freighter, causing one death, and there were reports of two other possible attacks.

Rising just off the California coast yesterday, the submarine sent one torpedo wild, but with a second shot cut a hole 20 feet wide in the 5,696-ton lumber freighter Absaroka.

Joseph Ryan, 63, of San Francisco, was crushed in a fall of lumber on the McCormick Line vessel. Hundreds of persons, watching from the shore and from small fishing craft, saw the submarine submerge as American airplanes roared to the scene. Great spurts of water were seen and the Navy said depth bombs

Honolulu's Christmas Eve Dry As Army Bans All Hard Liquor

By the Associated Press.

HONOLULU, Dec. 25.—For the first time in modern history Honolulu spent a Christmas eve blacked out by war.

It was even without the old wassail bowl, because authorities enforced martial law against all hard liquor.

With the lightning Japanese thrust at these placid islands on December 7 still a vivid memory, service men were not allowed to leave their posts and stations. Honolulu remained on the alert, not to be caught off-guard again.

Instead of fir and spruce trees, which must be imported from the mainland, Honoluluans improvised Christmas decorations of hibiscus and ironwood stuck into buckets of were dropped.

Part of the Absaroka's cargo was jettisoned. Tugs towed the badly listing freighter to a port. Authorities said she would have sunk except for the load of lumber, which floated her.

Meanwhile, the Navy announced that two other ships had been in some kind of trouble and that a third, previously listed as missing and probably sunk, had arrived safely at a port.

The four-masted schooner Dorothy Phillips was disclosed as entering a California port last night under her own power despite a list to the stern. The nature of the damage was not announced, but the Navy earlier had received a report that a schooner had been disabled by a submarine not far from the Absaroka torpedoing.

The Navy also heard a report that another lumber schooner, the Barbara C., was fired on near the Absaroka. The ship's officers reportedly were uncertain whether the shots, which went wide, were from a submarine or were being fired at a submarine by shore batteries.

The safe arrival was the Canadian freighter Rosebank, two days overdue with a cargo of newsprint.

Another Ship Escapes.

Capt. Thomas Hill, skipper of the Standard Oil tanker H. M. Storey which was attacked by a submarine Monday, disclosed on safe arrival in port that the Storey had been attacked twice, but escaped damage.

Thirty-three men escaped from the Absaroka into lifeboats and were rescued by Coast Guard and inshore patrol boats which rushed to the scene. Several survivors were injured, none seriously.

Said Seaman Herbert Tephen, 20, of Portland, Oreg.:

"I was in the forecastle when the torpedo struck. There was a terrific impact and the ship seemed to spin around.

"I heard a dull, booming sound and as I raced to the deck and fell the noise was horrifying, with the lumber load on the after deck spewed into the air in every direction."

"We Weren't Even Afraid."

Joseph Scott, 46, also of Portland, said it was his fifth torpedoing experience—the others were during the first World War—and his "easiest."

"Why, mate," he grinned, "we were in plain sight of land, there were rescue boats on the way, we weren't in any danger and we weren't even afraid."

He added:

"In those other torpedoings there was always a bang or a blast. But this one was a sort of slow jar, with nothing but a rumble, because she hit us well below the water line. There wasn't any panic."

This is the list of attacks along the California coast prior to yesterday's:

December 18—S. S. Samoa dodges submarine torpedo and five shells, escapes.

December 20—Oil tanker Emidio shelled, torpedoed and "probably sunk"; five missing, 31 rescued.

December 23—Tanker Agwiworld shelled, escapes.

December 22—Tanker H. M. Storey escapes torpedo fire under smoke screen.

December 23—Tanker Montebello torpedoed, shelled and sunk; crew of 36 saved. Tanker Larry Doheny dodges torpedoes and shells, escapes; tanker Idaho escapes after sighting submarine.

Wounded And Evacuees Reach San Francisco From Hawaii

Convoy Of Passenger Ships, Planes Droning Overhead, Brings In Hundreds From Islands

DEC 26 1941

[By the Associated Press]

San Francisco, Dec. 25—Convoyed passenger vessels sailed through the Golden Gate today with hundreds of evacuees and casualties from the Hawaiian Islands, while planes droned above them.

The convoyed ships, wearing war paint, slipped unheralded into docks. The disembarking of wounded began immediately.

Passengers, including women and children, wore lifebelts at all times during the last three days of the trip.

Although there was no announcement that the convoy would arrive, there was a rush to the water front by persons whose sons were in the battle of Pearl Harbor and whose families and relatives had been caught by the sudden outbreak of hostilities.

Ambulances moved away through the barricades while mothers stood in a steady drizzle of rain, watching with hopeful eyes as the passenger emerged.

The evacuees soon dispersed to the city's hotels, the homes of friends and to the many stations established for them.

The Army Nursing Service broadcast an urgent appeal for trained nurses. Ambulances moved toward Letterman Hospital, at the Presidio, with the army wounded. The navy wounded were taken to Mare Island.

Every means was used to keep morale high during the voyage. Motion pictures were shown on alternate nights, and they were especially enjoyed by the wounded. Games were played and carols were sung on Christmas Eve. A few gifts, prepared weeks ago, were distributed.

Grim Humor

There was an instance of grim humor. One sailor, with his right leg amputated above the ankle, saw a friend whose left leg had been similarly amputated. He sent a note which said:

"How about a dance?"

Mrs. Leslie Levesque, 49, whose husband died in Hawaii shortly before the Pearl Harbor attack, said there were forty-seven children on her ship.

"We had a Christmas party, but it was pretty sad," she related. "There were a number of widows and orphans aboard. I was alone in my home at Hickam Field that Sunday the Japs came over. At first I thought they were navy planes. Then Pearl Harbor blew up. My God, I don't know what happened next."

Fighting Officer

Then there was the story of a fighting little navy officer who ordered his men to throw potatoes at the Japanese during the attack on Hawaii.

"Our skipper was a little hero," a sailor related. "You could look right over his head. But he certainly was full of fight.

"We had only a 3-inch gun where we were, but he wouldn't let anybody else fire it. He peppered away at the Japs as they came over.

"All of a sudden, a bomb hit near by and blew our skipper into the water. Our executive officer had to abandon ship.

"We were just going down the gangway when our skipper bobbed out of the water and hollered: 'Hey, where are you fellows going?'

"We told him we were abandoning ship.

"'The hell you are!' he shouted. 'Get back to your stations!'

Back To His Gun

"So we went back, and he climbed aboard and went back to his gun.

"Then he saw some idle men and called a messenger. He told him to go down and bring up a big sack of potatoes. The messenger didn't catch on, and the skipper yelled at him:

"'I mean potatoes. I got to keep the men occupied at a time like this. Let 'em throw potatoes at the Japs!'"

Nazi Resistance Grows Stronger

Despite Counter Blows, Reds Claim Further Progress

DEC 26 1941

By HENRY C. CASSIDY

Moscow, Dec. 25 (AP)—Stiffening German resistance to the Russian counter-offensives on the Moscow, Leningrad and Ukraine Fronts was acknowledged in front line dispatches tonight, while in the Far Southern Crimean theater a fierce battle raged as the Germans strove to batter their way through the last defenses of besieged Sevastopol.

However, the regular midnight communique said Red Army soldiers on the western, Kalinin, and southwestern fronts "continued to advance, occupying a number of villages."

By Russian count, at least 20,000 Germans—or about half the Nazi forces on the Sevastopol front—were killed in a furious six-day battle which the Russians said failed to crack their stubborn resistance before the big Black Sea naval base.

In desperate attempts to reinforce the depleted German ranks, Soviet dispatches said, the German 170th Infantry Division was rushed to the front but in eight successive assaults this crack unit was reported repulsed.

Elsewhere, the Russians acknowledged that the retreating Germans had recoiled with counter-attacks which, though strong, failed to halt the Soviet advances and incurred only new, heavy losses, particularly on the north and south flanks of the Moscow defense arc.

In a fresh flurry of aerial warfare, nine German planes, including one new Messerschmitt 115, were reported shot down on the approaches to Moscow on Christmas Eve.

With the German menace to Moscow receding, 30 Americans and Britons who had returned to the capital, celebrated Christmas as guests of the United States Embassy staff members who remained at the Spaso, the embassy residence, when the Moscow diplomatic corps withdrew to Kuibyshev.

The Russians reported that Red Army troops were pressing forward from Tula, 110 miles south of Moscow, and from Kalinin, 95 miles northwest.

A German battalion which attempted to check the Soviet march in the Tula region by organizing a circular defense was decalred to have been wiped out, with the Nazis leaving 300 dead on the battlefield.

Advices from the front said Russian troops had found an order of the day issued by Gen. Heinz Guderian, Hitler's ace tank Commander, exhorting the Germans to maintain discipline and saying: "I know I can rely on you."

Red Army gains were also reported in the center of the Moscow Front, where a battle has been raging in the Mozhaisk and Maloyaroslavets sectors, respectively 57 and 65 miles west of Moscow. One Russian unit was said to have killed 600 German soldiers in a single day's fighting.

"German soldiers taken prisoner during the last few days testify to the great losses sustained by the German Armies and to further deterioration of the German fighting spirit," a communique said.

As Napoleon's legions fled from Moscow in the winter snows of 1812, so the Russians declared Hitler's battered invasion forces were falling back from hard-won sector after sector.

Red Star, the Army newspaper, published its own Christmas card, portraying Santa Claus handing Hitler a calendar with the date Dec. 22. The caption said:

"Congratulations, Herr Fuehrer! Today is just six months since the start of your six-week march on Moscow."

50 Towns Recaptured In Kalinin Sector, Russians Declare

German Fighting Spirit Deteriorating, Soviet Bureau Announces

DEC 26 1941

By the Associated Press

MOSCOW, Dec. 25—Red Army troops have regained 50 villages in the Kalinin sector of the Russian western front and newly captured prisoners testify to "further deterioration of the German fighting spirit," the Soviet Information Bureau said today.

In one day of fighting from Kalinin, a communique said, Russian forces captured 10 German tanks, 18 guns, 68 trucks, 25 machine guns and a large ammunition dump.

Soviet troops were reported also to have "dislodged the Germans from several inhabited points" and killed 300 officers and men in a fierce engagement on the southern front which also yielded weapons as booty.

The army newspaper Red Star said Soviet fighters, anti-aircraft batteries and barrage balloons had netted 852 planes around Moscow since German airmen started bombing the capital July 22, one month after Adolf Hitler started his drive to the east.

The record for a day was set October 29, when 47 raiders were destroyed at the approaches of Moscow, Red Star said.

A lull in aerial activity now was said to be due both to winter conditions and heavy German aircraft losses.

Nazis Claim Destroyer

Berlin, Dec. 25 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A.P.)—The German high command declared today that a British destroyer had been sunk off Libya as sharp fighting continued in the battle for North Africa.

Violent fighting continues along the entire Soviet front, the communique said. Twenty-one Soviet tanks were reported destroyed at one point by German planes.

Text Of Communique

The communique said:

"Violent fighting continues along the entire front.

"On one point of the front an air squadron destroyed twenty-one Soviet tanks.

"Fighting and bomber formations operating in central and northern sectors raided troop concentrations and dispersed columns of every kind.

"East of Tikhvin numerous enemy transport columns were heavily damaged.

DEC 26 1941

"Long-range guns of the German Navy shelled an enemy convoy sailing for Dover last night.

54 Planes Claimed In Week

"In North Africa operations continued according to plan. German fighter formations attacked in Cirenaica concentrations of British armored cars and also scored direct hits on British planes which were taking off.

"A U-boat sank an enemy destroyer off the Libyan coast.

"German bombers raided the island of Malta during the day and scored bomb hits on harbor facilities of Valetta.

"During the period between December 17-23 we shot down fifty-four British planes, nineteen of which were shot down in the Mediterranean and in North Africa. We lost sixteen during the same period."

BRITISH TAKE BENGASI, CHASE FOE WESTWARD

Libyan Seaport In Ruins, Axis Forces Fleeing Into Tripolitania

English Cleaning Up Last Pockets Of Resistance In Cirenaica

By EDWARD KENNEDY
Associated Press Correspondent

Cairo, Dec. 25—British troops have taken over the ruins of Bengasi, capital of Cirenaica and second largest town in the Fascist North African empire, and air and land forces are hammering on in relentless pursuit of Axis forces fleeing westward into Tripolitania, a communique announced officially today.

Capture of the seaport, with its strategic control of the military road and short railway lines into Libya, gave the British control of all of Cirenaica except for some pockets of enemy resistance still being cleaned up.

Tank Wreckage Litters Route

Military observers estimated that most of the tanks of Gen. Erwin Rommel's Libyan force had been wiped out. The wreckage of the Nazi leader's equipment was strewn all along the route of retreat. Some machines were captured intact, including many which had been left in repair shops at Derna.

The question now uppermost here is whether the British will drive on to Tripoli before the Germans get reinforcements there. Mostly Italian infantry opposes the British path now, it was said.

Town Pictured As Wreck

Bengasi, first captured February 7, 1941, by the British but lost two months later to an Axis counter-drive, was a wreck when the first Royal Dragoons entered it yesterday.

[A military commentator in London said it appeared that Bengasi had been evacuated by the Italians and fell without opposition since a single regiment apparently entered alone. He said the devastation might have been caused by the Italians blowing up buildings before leaving or possibly from repeated RAF raids on the town.]

Occupation of the harbor brought the British advance 340 miles by road from the Egyptian frontier and 250 miles from Tobruk.

Through rain and mud British mobile columns by-passed the town to press after the main Axis forces.

Remnants "Being Dealt With"

(Observers in London said the retreating Germans appeared to have been separated into a number of relatively small contingents while the whole of the Italian force seemed to have been cut off from all possible retreat.

(Some of the Germans, it was conceded by commentators, possibly got past the main British force which raced across the desert to intercept them before they could swing westward from Agedabia toward Tripolitania.)

The British communique said "small bodies of enemy troops, believed almost entirely Italian, still remain in the area northeast of Bengasi and are being dealt with."

Despite the weather, the R.A.F. and the S.A.A.F. pounded at airdromes and motorized convoys racing toward Tripolitania. As troops took over former Axis airdromes they found the wrecks of planes caught by the R.A.F. before they could leave the ground. Troop carriers and gasoline trucks were also special targets for the air force.

British Take Bengasi, Vital Axis Supply Port In Africa

DEC 26 1941

[By the Associated Press]

Cairo, Dec. 25—British troops have occupied the devastated sea coast town of Bengasi, virtually completing their cleanup of the eastern section of Libya, while other columns press on westward against retreating Axis forces.

The city, captured once before by each side, is the most important center between Tobruk and Tripoli and is 250 miles west of Tobruk. Its capture yesterday marked an advance of 340 miles by road from the Egyptian frontier or an air distance of 300 miles from the starting point of the British offensive.

RAF Harasses Retreat

Observers said all of Cirenaica could be considered in British hands, although some pockets of enemy resistance were still being cleaned up.

Meanwhile, the RAF announced that its planes continued attacks on Axis motorized convoys retreating westward into Tripolitania.

"Town Devastated"

Today's communique said:

"Our troops yesterday occupied Bengasi. Royal Dragoons were the first to enter the town. They report the town devastated.

"Despite bad weather and heavy going after the rain our strong mobile columns are still striking at the retreating enemy everywhere in the area between Bengasi and Agedabia and even farther west, inflicting casualties, taking prisoners and capturing or destroying quantities of enemy transport and material.

"Troop Columns Bombed"

"Small bodies of enemy troops, believed almost entirely Italian still remain in the area northeast of Bengasi and are being dealt with.

"In the frontier area we eliminated yet another of isolated enemy posts near Bardia.

"Our air forces yesterday maintained their very effective attack against enemy columns of troops and motor vehicles, destroying a large number of vehicles, including petrol tankers and troop carriers.

"When our ground forces occupied Benina Airdrome yesterday a large number of enemy aircraft, which had been destroyed on the ground by our air forces, were found."

Major Axis Supply Port

The occupation of Bengasi is a major milestone in Britain's second westward advance across the North African desert.

Besides being a key point on the Italian-built military road which crosses the whole Libyan coast from Tunisia to Egypt, it is the hub of a fan of short railways into the interior, city No. 2 in the Fascist North African empire and the Axis' chief supply port east of Tripoli.

Bombed Almost Daily

The Cirenaican provincial capital, ranking only behind the colonial capital of Tripoli, has been an almost daily target of British airmen trying to strangle the Axis' water-borne supply routes.

Bengasi was accessible only to small boats before Libya fell to Italy as a prize in the Italian-Turkish war of 1911-12, but at a cost of millions of dollars the Italians opened its outer harbor to big sea-going vessels and its inner harbor to smaller merchantmen.

The British first took Bengasi February 7, 1941, on the sixty-first day of their original offensive, and made it a naval base for central Mediterranean operations. They held it less than two months, however, before the Axis counter-offensive drove them back eastward to the Egyptian border.

Axis Convoys Bombed

An RAF communique said:

"During yesterday, aircraft of the RAF and SAAF continued their attacks on enemy motorized convoys retreating westward into Tripolitania. Many vehicles were destroyed or damaged and casualties were again inflicted on enemy personnel.

"In a low-flying attack on the airdrome at El Agheila one JU-52 was set on fire while at En Nofilia another JP-52 and a JU-87 on the ground were destroyed. Other enemy aircraft were severely damaged.

Rome Claims British Halted

Rome, Dec. 25 (Official Broadcast Recorded by A. P.)—British forces led by armored car and tank formations were declared by the Italian high command today to have been repulsed in an attempt to "overrun the region of Bengasi."

"Local counter-attacks of the German airforce scored visible successes," the Italian communique said, "resulting in the destruction of armored cars and guns of the enemy. Numerous prisoners were taken."

Repeated attacks against the Libyan-Egyptian frontier posts of Salum and Bardia were declared to have been repulsed with heavy losses to the British.

New Malta Raid Reported

"German air formations have raided and successfully bombed military targets and harbor facilities on Malta," the communique also said. "Escorting fighters shot down two Hurricanes."

The high command said that "in the central Mediterranean, British sailors from the cruiser Neptune, mentioned December 19, were rescued. They were found near our shores, brought in by the tide."

(Italians claimed December 19 that five British cruisers had been torpedoed by Axis planes in the Mediterranean.)

Lone German Plane Appears Over England

London, Dec. 25 (AP)—A single German plane appeared over the East Coast tonight and dropped a shower of incendiaries which caused neither casualties nor damage.

BERLIN, Dec. 25 (From German broadcast recorded by The Associated Press) — The German steamer Benno was sunk yesterday afternoon by British bombers in Spanish territorial waters. Six bombs hit the ship. The ship was sunk off Vivero, Northwestern Spain.

The German news agency, D. N. B., compared the attack with British destroyer action against the German prison ship Altmark in Norwegian waters on Feb. 16, 1940. [That action, before the German invasion of Norway, consisted of chasing the Altmark into a fjord and releasing British prisoners.]

German news agency reports from Madrid said the attack caused the greatest indignation in Spanish naval quarters as well as among the general public. It is pointed out in Spain that this was the second time in recent days that British bombers had "violated Spanish neutrality by attacking ships in Spanish territorial waters."

RELAYS OF PLANES SANK NAZI TANKER

30-Hour Pursuit Of Ship, Possibly Sub Tender, Proves Effective

[By the Associated Press]

London, Dec. 25—The story of a thirty-hour pursuit of a German tanker, possibly a submarine tender, with its eventual sinking off Spain under attack by relays of various types of British aircraft, was told in an Air Ministry communique this afternoon.

The sinking of the ship off Spain's north coast yesterday was first announced early today.

German news agency dispatches, identifying the sunken craft as the steamer Benno, declared she was sunk in Spanish territorial waters off Vivero, northwestern Spain, and said the incident "caused greatest indignation in Spanish naval quarters as well as among the general public," alleging it involved a violation of Spanish neutrality.

[The German dispatches compared the attack with British destroyer action against the German prison ship Altmark in Norwegian waters, February 16, 1940, before the German invasion of Norway, and said this was the second case within recent days that British bombers have "violated Spanish neutrality by attacking ships in Spanish territorial waters."]

Attacks With Bombs

"The tanker was first sighted out in the Atlantic at breakfast time on Tuesday by a Sunderland from a Royal Australian Air Force squadron," said today's British communique.

"The Sunderland attacked with bombs. One member of the Sunderland's crew reported that as the flying boat went into the attack he noticed a suspicious swirl in the water which might have been caused by a U-boat submerging after refueling from the tanker.

"The pursuit was continued by other long-range aircraft of the coastal command, including Catalinas. One Catalina encountered a Heinkel seaplane which apparently had been sent to escort the tanker, but fought off its attack.

Picked Up Again

"Early Wednesday morning a Whitley picked up the tanker again. It was steaming at reduced speed. The Whitley attacked. As the explosions subsided the tanker was seen to be slowing up still further, and a trail of oil which has marked its course throughout the night suddenly was extended.

"It was obviously in considerable difficulties. The chase then was taken up by a Beaufort from a squadron which had frequently taken a toll of enemy shipping during recent weeks. The pilot found the tanker in the afternoon and hit it with his torpedo."

Arrested Under Defense Laws To Avert Religious Clash

London, Dec. 25 (AP)—A Reuters dispatch from Bhagalpur, India, said today that 320 Hindu leaders, including Dr. Syamprosad Mookerjee, Finance Minister of the Bengal Government, had been arrested under the defense laws.

Dr. Mookerjee and many of the others were taken into custody en route to a Hindu conference which had been banned because it coincided with a Moslem festival and disturbances were feared, the dispatch said.

Vessel Held As It Prepares To Sail For Spain, Which, It Is Said, May Soon Join Axis

Havana, Dec. 25 (AP)—The Spanish cargo ship Rita Garcia, released only yesterday from Navy Department custody, was again in Government hands today coincident with European speculation that Spain might shortly be drawn into the war on the side of the Axis.

The ship was first boarded by sailors seeking illicit cargo. They found none and the vessel was released. It was prepared again to sail for Spain when its sailing orders were withdrawn under a Government charge that it carried an excessive load.

King George Voices Confidence Sacrifices Will Bring Victory

Sends Season's Greetings To Empire, Services And the Suffering

DEC 26 1941

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, Dec. 25.—King George VI in a brief Christmas message sent his "remembrance and sincere good wishes for you and for yours" to the people of the empire.

He singled out for greetings those in the services and "those who are suffering."

The King spoke from the study of the house in the country where he spent the holiday with Queen Elizabeth and the two princesses, Elizabeth and Margaret Rose.

The mother and daughters listened to a radio in an adjoining room while the King, speaking slowly and deliberately, broadcast from the solitude of his study, using the same golden microphone used in similar broadcasts in the past.

It was the King's third Christmas Day message. He spoke for 10 minutes.

A dinner of turkey and Christmas pudding was served before the King went to the broadcasting room.

Text of Message.

The following is the text of King George's message:

"I am glad to think millions of people in all parts of the world are listening to me now. From my own home, with the Queen and my children beside me, I send to all a Christmas greeting.

"Christmas is a festival of the home. It is right that we should remember those who, this year, must spend it away from home.

"I am thinking, as I speak, of the men who have come from afar, standing ready to defend the old homeland—of men who in every part of the world are serving the empire and its cause with such valor and devotion by sea, land and in the air.

"I am thinking of all those women and girls as well as men who at the call of duty have left their homes to join the services or to work in factory, hospital or field.

"To each one of you, whatever your duty may be, I send you my remembrance and my sincere good wishes for you and for yours.

"I do not forget what others have done and are doing so bravely and so well in the civil defense. My heart also is with those who are suffering—the wounded, bereaved, anxious and prisoners of war. I think you know how deeply the Queen and I feel for them. May God give them comfort, courage and hope.

Greater Sacrifices Likely.

"All these separations are part of the hard sacrifice which this war demands. It may well be that it will call for even greater sacrifices. If this is to be, let us face them cheerfully together. I think of you, my peoples, as one great family. For that is how we are learning to live. We all belong to each other. We all need each other. It is in serving each other and in sacrificing for our common good that we are finding our true life.

"In that spirit we shall win the war. And in that same spirit we shall win for the world after the war true lasting peace.

"The greatness of any nation is in the spirit of its people. So it always has been since history began. So it shall be with us.

"The range of the tremendous conflict is ever widening. It now extends to the Pacific Ocean. Truly, it is a stern and solemn time. But as the war widens, so surely our conviction deepens of the greatness of our cause.

"We who belong to the present generation must bear the brunt of the struggle, and I would say to the coming generation of boys and girls of today—the men and women tomorrow:

"Train yourselves, body, mind and spirit, so as to be ready for whatever part you may be called on to play and for the tasks which will await you as citizens of the empire when the war is over.

"We must all, older and younger, resolve that, having been intrusted with so great a cause, then at whatever cost, God helping us, we will not falter or fail. Make yourselves ready in your home and school to give and to offer your very best.

Look to God for Strength.

"We are coming to the end of another hard-fought year.

"During these months our people have been through many trials and, in the true humility which goes hand in hand with valor, have learnt once again to look for strength to God alone. So I bid you all, be strong and of good courage.

"Go forward into this coming year with good heart. Lift up your hearts with thankfulness for deliverance from dangers in the past. Lift up your hearts in confident hope that strength will be given us to overcome whatever perils may lie ahead until victory is won.

"If skies before us are still dark and threatening there are stars to guide us on our way. Never did heroism shine more brightly than it does now, nor fortitude, nor sacrifice, nor sympathy, nor neighborly kindness.

"And with them, the brightest of all stars is our faith in God. These stars will we follow with His help until light shall shine and darkness shall collapse.

"May God bless you every one!

Peace on Earth Remains Hope in War-Torn World

First Christmas of Second Universal Conflict Finds Christian Natons Joining Leaders In Prayers for Victory of Faithful

". . . Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace, good will toward men . . ."

That ideal, born on the first Christmas, prevailed yesterday through a battle fog that has engulfed most of the civilized world but which left many an island of sober or joyous celebration of a hope that can never grow old.

Christmas Day, 1941, was the first Christmas of the second World War but it also was the fifth wartime Christmas for Christian Chinese and the third for Europe's war-tortured millions.

In Washington President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill interrupted their strategy conferences to attend devotional service and heard the pastor express the hope that the world would return to the love of God so that Christmas in the future would not be wrapped in flames and hatred.

From England in a broadcast to his empire came the slow, deliberate words of the King George VI sending good wishes from the study of his country house. He called his peoples "one great family who all need each other." He called this a "stern and solemn time. But as the war widens, so surely our conviction deepens of the geratness of our cause."

Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands, too, broadcast to her people whose homeland is occupied by the Germans but whose colonies in the East Indies are fighting the Japanese. Her message praised the Dutch for their struggle against "the evil powers which would like to poison them with their rotteness and vices and would like nothing better than to rob them of their pure, clean consciences."

In one way or another the Christmas theme found it's way into news from all parts of the world.

A Japanese broadcast called the surrender of Hong Kong "a glowing Christmas present to the Japanese nation"—although Christmas means nothing to non-Christian Japan.

In Cairo troops behind the lines had Christmas dinners with plum puddings and the chiming of Manila's church bells was overcast by the drone of Japanese warplanes.

The spirit of blessed peace persisted at Jerusalem, shrine for Christendom, although truckloads of war materials bounced along roads once trod by Jesus and his disciples. Part of the land of milk and honey was on rations and lighted temples were banned by the blackout.

In Bethlehem military sentries guarded the Church of the Nativity.

Story Of Third Christmas Day Observance Of Present War

DEC 26 1941

[By the Associated Press]

War's bloody hand lay heavy this Christmas Day upon a tortured world.

Only a memory were such Christmases as the first of this war, when Adolf Hitler could fraternize with his troops in the fortifications he had built on the Western Front.

Or the second of this war, when the deadly rain of bombs on Great Britain and Germany was halted under a Christmas truce.

This is the story of the third Christmas of this war:

DEC 26 1941

BETHLEHEM — Today was predominately a soldier's Christmas.

Christian worshipers drawn to the shrine of Christ's birth mostly were uniformed men—and women.

Bethlehem's bells pealed as of yore—but a sign of the war was the guard kept over the Church of the Nativity by sentries of Britain's famous household cavalry.

Moscow — The Soviet information bureau distributed Christmas cards bearing the title "Tannenbaum, Tannenbaum" and showing a dead German soldier under a lighted, snow-laden Christmas tree.

The Red army organ, Red Star, published its own Christmas card.

It portrayed Santa Claus giving Adolf Hitler a calendar opened at the date December 22. It said:

"Congratulations, Herr Führer! Today is just six months since the start of your six-week march on Moscow."

WASHINGTON—Christmas as a day of work is accented at the White House, in the first war Christmas there in twenty-four years, following Christmas Eve ceremonies in which both President Roosevelt and British Prime Minister Churchill spoke.

The President said: ". . . When we make ready our hearts for the labor and the suffering and the ultimate victory which lie ahead, then we observe Christmas Day—with all its memories and meanings—as we should."

CAIRO—In unusually cold desert weather, British imperials continued their pursuit of broken remnants of Axis forces in Libya.

Beer and other luxuries were flown to some units for Christmas celebrations. Behind-the-lines formations had full Christmas dinners—including plum puddings—in some cases gleaned from captured war booty.

CALLANDER, ONT.—It's a French yuletide for the 7-year-old Dionne quintuplets—which means that most of Pere Noel's big surprises will come New Year's morning.

For today's big Christmas dinner with the family, Cecile expressed one wish: to pick a bone.

"It isn't proper," she said, "but it tastes better that way."

MANILA — The wartime blackout snuffed gay Christmas lights.

Because of the war, gift packages for Americans failed to arrive from home.

The shipping shortage also prevented the transportation of Christmas trees, and fighting to the north halted the shipment of pines from the Baguio district.

LONDON—King George VI, prior to his usual Christmas broadcast, set the pattern for following the tradition of Christmas-at-home by spending the holiday in the country with Queen Elizabeth and their daughters, Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose.

JERUSALEM—William C. Bullitt, President Roosevelt's special representative in the Near East marked down Christmas in the Holy Land as a memorable experience.

Reminiscing, he recalled another unusual Christmas spent years ago in a desert with his daughter.

"Our Christmas tree was a small shrub," he said, "and the only trimmings were three dead lizards."

SINGAPORE—Churches echoed to the ring of tramping feet today as soldiers trooped in for special Christmas services, placing their tin hats on the floor.

Chinese, Indians, Malays and others of the polyglot peoples of the Malayas joined in holiday celebrations.

But a principal attraction at Asiatic festivities—firecrackers—has been banned for the duration of the war.

REYKJAVIK, ICELAND—The folks back home didn't forget the United States forces in Iceland. It took more than a week to unload and distribute the Christmas mail. Soldiers decorated their huts with bright paper and sprigs of imitation holly.

DUBLIN, [illegible] (AP)—Eire's American - born prime minister, Eamon de Valera, in a Christmas broadcast to the United States, reiterated that his country must hew to its course of neutrality to save its unity "unless" we are attacked."

PRESIDENT, GUEST JOIN IN WORSHIP

DEC 26 1941

Attend Religious Service Together; Then Churchill Treated to American Dinner

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25 (AP) — President Roosevelt introduced his distinguished guest, Prime Minister Churchill, to a typical American Christmas dinner tonight.

They ate turkey, chestnut dressing with giblet gravy and cranberry jelly, topped off with plum pudding and coffee.

Very appropriately for two "sea-dogs"—the President was assistant secretary of the Navy in World War I and ships are his hobby, and Churchill was formerly first lord of the Admiralty—the menu included beans.

Their table-mates included Mrs. Roosevelt, Crown Prince Olav and Crown Princess Martha of Norway; Lord Halifax, the British ambassador, and Lady Halifax; Lord Beaverbrook, Britain's minister of supply; Admiral of the Fleet Sir Dudley Pound, and other top-ranking British and American military and naval names—a brilliant gathering.

Attend Service

In the forenoon the President and Churchill, Mrs. Roosevelt, Lord Beaverbrook, and others attended Christmas services at the Foundry Methodist Church. The services were sponsored by the Washington Federation of Churches.

Sitting in the fourth row on the right side of the middle aisle, President Roosevelt put on his pinch-nose eye-glasses and Churchill his horn rimmed specs and together they read the Christmas litany and sang out:

O hear us when we cry to thee,
For those in peril on the sea.

The President wore a black business suit, white shirt and dark four-in-hand tie. Mrs. Roosevelt, who is in mourning for the President's mother, Mrs. Sara Roosevelt, and her brother, Hall Roosevelt, was in black relieved by a silver fox scarf and four strands of pearls.

Premier Is Grave

The Prime Minister had on striped trousers and a short black coat. His bow tie was black and white polka dot. As though it were an afterthought he had stuffed a white handkerchief into the left breast pocket of his jacket. He was grave, with chin firm-set.

In the congregation were Vice-President Wallace and Mrs. Wallace. Beside them were their daughter, Jean, and a tall slim lad in a private's uniform, their son, Robert, who was born during the last World War.

There were a number of other uniforms among the worshipers and these included Gen. George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff; Lieut.-Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the air force; Admiral Harold R. Stark, chief of naval operations.

Each pastor whose church is a member of the Washington federation was allotted a number of tickets to pass out among his congregation for this historic Christmas Day service in which both the Star Spangled Banner and the Union Jack were beside the altar.

In Memory of Mother

The Easter lilies on the altar were in memory of the President's mother, who with a step very firm for her 86 years attended services with her son last Christmas. One of the stained glass windows portrayed the manger scene and a lighted halo outlined the babes' head.

The congregation heard the gray-haired chaplain of the United States Senate, the Rev. Ze Barney Phillips, dean of the Washington Episcopal Cathedral, who reached the sermon say:

"Those nations which cling to democracy are challenged today as never before." He said that Christmas meant the ability to "love and to die if need be to save one's friends."

For the first time since there was a child in the Roosevelt family, Mr. Roosevelt woke up Christmas morning without a child prodding him to "wake up and see what Santa brought." It was a family custom to hang Christmas stockings on his mantle.

Bone for Dog

There was only one sock there this morning. Mrs. Roosevelt had put it there and wrote on the label "for Fala." In it was a rubber bone. After all the one that the President's scottie keeps in his master's office is getting quite tooth-worn.

The Roosevelts' four sons are in active service and none could get home. Their daughter, Mrs. Anna Boettiger, is with her husband and children in Seattle. None of the 11 grandchildren are here. But there was the usual family Christmas tree and Mrs. Roosevelt and the President found time to open their presents.

In years past it has been the custom to put in long-distance telephone calls linking up missing members of the family so they could wish mother and dad and each other "Merry Christmas." This year's call was placed to Jimmy and John and their wives on the West Coast, to Anna, and to Elliott's wife, Ruth, in Fort Worth. A call was made to the Philadelphia hospital to find out how Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., and her second child are doing.

U.S.-Australian Radio and Wire Link Is Opened

Roosevelt Tells Prime Minister Curtin of Value of Direct Communication

WASHINGTON, Dec. 25 (AP).—President Roosevelt and Prime Minister John Curtin of Australia formally opened the first direct radio-telegraph link between the two nations tonight with an exchange of messages pointing out the value of such communication to common defense in this world-wide war.

Mr. Roosevelt told Mr. Curtin that "in my opinion this new link will serve not only to facilitate the more rapid exchange of communications between the United States and Australia but to serve notice on the Axis powers that the free peoples of the world are leaving nothing undone effectively to guarantee through spiritual and physical unification an ultimate victory which lies ahead of us."

Extending his greetings to the Australian people, Mr. Roosevelt also said:

"Mr. Churchill, who is staying with me, joins in these greetings and we give you our assurance that we consider the safety of your great commonwealth as a definite essential in every plan of defense and in every plan of offensive action against our common foes."

Prime Minister Curtin said that "in bringing this service into operation my government recognizes the necessity for applying efficient scientific methods of linking our two countries for common defense in the Pacific, also for trade and intercourse and for mutual understanding."

The new 7,420-mile circuit between San Francisco and Sydney was opened by R. C. A. Communications, Inc. Formerly all telegraphic communications between the two countries were handled by way of British or Canadian routes.

Raid Alarms Wail At Naval Bases In Chicago Vicinity

Sirens Sounded After Report Of Unidentified Planes Flying West Across Lake Michigan

[By the Associated Press]

Chicago, Dec. 25—Sirens sang out at all naval training bases in the Chicago area today, sounding the first air-raid alarm heard here since the war began.

The warning wails interrupted Christmas celebrations at the Great Lakes Training Station, the naval reserve aviation base in suburban Glenview and the Navy Service School and the Naval Reserve Armory here.

"Navy planes were sent up to carry out defense assignments if necessary," a navy announcement said.

8 Unidentified Planes

"The warning found the base alert and ready for any eventuality. All naval personnel carried out their duties and stood by during the alert."

The alarm was sounded, the navy announcement said, at 1 P. M., "following a warning from a responsible source that eight to twelve unidentified planes were coming from the northeast and were heading west across Lake Michigan.

"There was no word of flights in the air at the time and in view of the mysterious circumstances surrounding the strange planes the alarm was given."

No Alarm In Chicago

No civilian alarm was sounded in Chicago or at Fort Sheridan, the army post near Great Lakes. The navy's all-clear signal was given at 2.10 P. M.

The alert came as a big Christmas show was being held at Great Lakes. Hundreds of sailors attending were sent to air-raid shelters under a prearranged plan. The recruits sang carols while they waited for the "all clear." When it was heard, they returned to their celebrations.

The navy announcement did not furnish any identification of the strange planes.

Independent Air Force Sought By McCarran

[By the Associated Press]

Washington, Dec. 25—Senator Pat McCarran (Dem., Nev.) announced today that he would seek Congressional creation of a separate air force early in 1942.

War developments to date in the Pacific, he contended, had demonstrated the need for such a realignment in the armed forces.

McCarran said he had obtained assurances from Chairman Robert R. Reynolds (Dem., N. C.) that the Senate Military Affairs Committee would begin hearings soon on his bill to set up a separate, unified air command.

Would Have Been Alert

"The events of recent days proved that if we had had a unified air force we would not have suffered the disaster that befell us at Pearl Harbor," McCarran told reporters.

"If it had been under separate command, the air forces doubtless would have been on the alert," the Nevada Senator argued. "It would have provided an umbrella of protection for the fleet.

"A separate, distinct and unified air force would do away with the natural jealousies which emanate from departments which now are impairing our defenses. The air arm has proven itself to be coimportant with the other arms of defense."

To Be Assigned By President

McCarran's bill would establish a new Department of Aviation, which would take over the present Army Air Corps and the Naval Flying Corps, except for commissioned officers.

The President would be authorized to assign the air force to operate with either army or navy forces, or independently, as strategic considerations might dictate. When an air force unit was assigned to either the land or sea forces, it would be under the command of the designated army or navy commander.

In addition, the President could assign army or navy units to the air force for special tasks.

REALIZE SITUATION, WARNING BY BIDDLE

Neither Over Nor Underestimate Job Ahead, Attorney General Says

Madame Litvinoff Speaks

U. S. Must Guard Unity Against Subtle Axis Propaganda, He Adds

[By the Associated Press]

New York, Dec. 25—Francis Biddle, Attorney General, told the nation today neither to "overestimate our capacities to do the job that lies ahead, nor underestimate the evil strength of our adversaries."

Biddle spoke from Washington on a broadcast "Victory Roll Call" of spokesmen for nations fighting the Axis. The program was broadcast throughout the world by short wave.

Plea To Guard Unity

Calling upon Americans to guard their unity "against the subtle attacks that Hitlerism will surely continue to make against it," Biddle said:

"We can look to the one thing we have in common—one thing that unites us all—the one thing that saved the British at Dunkerque, that turned back Goering over London, that keeps the millions resisting all over the continent of Europe—we have that one thing that threatens Hitlerism itself at its very foundation—the one thing that will win the war—we have a love of freedom that is beyond the love of life—and that unites us here and all around the world this Christmas Day."

The only woman speaker, Madame Ivy Litvinoff, wife of the Soviet Ambassador, praised the role played by women in the war and said that the fight for democracy was as important to them as to men.

Others On Program

"Woman has much at stake," she declared, "for the victory of Naziism would fling us back into the dark ages, depriving us of the hard-won rights which modern man under democracy is so proud to share with us. And when the cause of freedom triumphs, we women, not without blood and sweat and tears, will have earned our share in it."

Other program participants included Dr. Lin Yutang, author, for China; Charles Boyer, actor, for Free France; Raymond Massey, actor, for Canada; Edmund Gwenn, actor, for England; Leading Aircraftsman Alex McWilliam, for Australia; Dr. Nicholas Slotemaker de Beruine, for the Netherlands, and Enrique S. de Lozada, former charge d'affaires of the Bolivian legation in Washington, for Latin America.

Lieut. Robert Montgomery, screen star now serving with the United States Navy, acted as narrator.

JAPAN'S AIR FORCE FAR FROM INFERIOR

Observer Who Saw Action In China Warns Against Underestimate

Enemy Has Good Planes, Plenty Of Carriers And Excellent Flyers

One of the best-informed American civilians on Japanese air power is Charles Healy Day, who for six years managed an aircraft factory for the Cantonese and Nationalist Chinese governments. Bombed and machine-gunned by the Japanese, he had a first-hand opportunity to observe Japanese tactics and to appraise the quality of the island empire's warplanes. In this article, he tells why, in his opinion, America must not underestimate the Japanese in the air.

(World-Wide)

By CHARLES HEALY DAY

[Special Dispatch to The Sun]

30.24— 13763 30.24-13763

New York, Dec. 25—If I were to be asked how American air power compares with that of Japan, I would reply that the Japanese have planes which, in quality, are at least nearly as good as ours. Some may be better.

I would say also that the Japanese currently have more flyers than we do—an advantage to them which, I am sure, we are rapidly going to overcome.

I fear that they have a large number of modern airplanes and the factory facilities to replace their losses in the air.

DEC 26 1941

Complacency Assailed

For a long time I have tried to keep my homeland from underestimating Japanese military power. Our complacency about what we are facing is one of our greatest enemies.

Consistently we have underrated the Japanese in the air.

There is no doubt in my mind about the ultimate result of this war with Japan. We are going to win. But I believe we are going to get bad news before we get the good news.

The Japanese have fine flyers for both their pursuits and their bombers. They have good planes. They have good engines. In all my time in China I never heard of a Japanese military pilot having to land on account of engine failure.

Good Planes Back In 1937

When the war with China began in 1937, the Japanese had pursuits which would outclimb two to one the standard Chinese pursuit. The Japanese have vastly improved their pursuit planes since then.

The Chinese intelligence service informed me that Japanese heavy, twin-engine bombers, used in large number against China, could fly 250 miles an hour. Before I left China I examined a carrier-based Japanese pursuit which had been captured by the Chinese. I was told it was capable of 315 miles an hour, which is very fast for a carrier-type fighter.

I first became acquainted with Japanese aviation in 1937. I had gone to Shiuchow, in Kwangtung province, as engineer-in-chief for the Cantonese Government in 1934. When the war began I was requested by Mme. Chiang Kai-shek, then secretary general of the Chinese Air Force, to continue my work for the Nationalist Government.

First Air Raid

We moved the factory into the interior of China.
